FLOUR—Flour continues to move in a way that means good business for all concerned. Since the opening of navigation there has been a good steady business. Trade with Newfoundland is now well under way and good shipments are being made daily to the United Kingdom and other points throughout the world. Royal Household has been advanced to $4.60, but otherwise the prices do not show any change.

GRAIN—Grain generally is moving very well. Peas are perhaps as good as any other grain as far as demand goes. They are now up to 78½c. Oats, while not in great demand, are firm. Corn is very quiet in most quarters.

FEED—Bran has experienced its annual "Spring drop" and is now obtainable from $18 to $18.50, for either Ontario or Manitoba. Some millers are asking a little higher but they state their intention of coming down to the present prices any day. Bran is naturally slow at these prices since the grass has begun to grow. Mr. Heath, of Rodewell & Heath, tea brokers, Colombo, Ceylon, was in Toronto last week. He was on his usual biennial trip to America. Mr. Heath is one of the best informed men in the tea business anywhere, and his visit is always a pleasure for the tea houses on this continent.

Fred Grasely, for some years chief clerk in James Vair's big grocery, Barrie, Ont., has gone on the road. He will represent McLaughlin & Co., of Owen Sound, on the north shore route. No one who knows him doubts Mr. Grasely's success, but they just all hope it will be so great as to surprise even himself.

SHREDDED WHEAT TALK

By AN UP-TO-DATE GROCER

Shredded Whole Wheat is the one staple cereal food better known than all the others.

You can grind up any old thing and call it a "breakfast food," but you can't make Shredded Whole Wheat that way.

It keeps better than any other cereal. It is not "treated" or "flavored" with anything and hence does not deteriorate.

It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve, requiring only a slight warming in the oven to restore crispness.

It is economical. Contains more nutriment than meat or eggs and costs much less.

The Shredding process makes it the most easily digested of all the cereal foods.

It is good for any meal any day in any season in any climate.

It has larger culinary uses than any other cereal food. Hundreds of dainty and palatable dishes may be made with it.

It is the purest and cleanest cereal food, made in the cleanest and finest industrial building in the world.

CANADA IN TRINIDAD MARKETS.

In their March 30 review of the Trinidad markets, the latest mail advices here, Gordon, Grant & Co., of Port of Spain, say :

"New York millers seem now to recognize that Canadian and other flours are becoming serious competitors, and in consequence have recently materially reduced their quotations. Canadian milling, particularly, is working its way into public favor, and if keeping quality is improved the demand for it is sure to increase."

Canada last year imported 2,431,692 cocoanuts, equal to more than two-thirds of the Trinidad crop, and got them nearly all from the West Indies. Gordon, Grant & Co. say : "A good demand still continues, but there is little of the fruit available, the bulk of the year's output being already under contract for shipment to America."

But a comparatively small proportion of Canada's supply of cocoa and its products comes from the West Indies—$62,620 out of $744,637. Gordon, Grant & Co. say of the Trinidad cocoa crop and outlook :

"Deliveries still continue very meagre and the almost entire absence of rain in most districts, besides having the effect of withering the young fruit, delays the ripening of the larger pods and makes crop prospects generally disappointing. Under most favorable weather conditions from now onwards, important supplies cannot be forthcoming for months to come, and the extent of next regular picking is likely to fall short of what appearances indicated earlier in the season. Quotations for any little lots offering are firmly maintained at $11 to $11.25 for ordinary to good red grades, and up to $11.75 for fine estate descriptions. Exports during the fortnight amount to 3,850 bags, of which 1,114 went to the U.S., and from 1st October to date, shipments total 126,143 bags, as compared with 95,020 bags for the corresponding period of last year."

DANGER FROM FIRE.

The ripening rooms for fruit at Bonsecours market, Montreal, were discussed at a meeting of the market committee of the Montreal council this week. The chief of the fire department and the city building inspector claimed that these rooms, twenty-nine in number, presented a danger through fire. In these rooms fruit is placed to ripen, the process being aided by the use of gas, wherein lies the danger. It was recommended that cement floors and asbestos walls be used if these rooms are to be allowed. Steps will be taken to see what can be done in this direction.

WILL HAVE A GOOD EXHIBIT.

It is the intention of Bode's Gum Co. to make their exhibit at the pure food show to be held in Montreal this month one of the finest ever seen in Canada and every effort is being made to bring about this end.

FIGURES FOR RUSSIAN TRADE.

Russia in 1903 was the third largest contributor to the world's supply of foodstuffs, following the United States with the British Empire an easy first. But as a seller of grain and grain products, Russia stood pre-eminently first.

Russia's trade returns were not included in the report of the Department of Trade and Commerce for 1905, but they have since come in and will be published in the next monthly report of the department. The figures are for 1902 and 1903, and evidence a very large increase in trade both in imports and exports, over 16 per cent. in the latter and about 14 per cent. in the former.

Russia imported in 1903 goods to the value of $351,060,050. The principal articles in the order of value were: Raw cotton, tea, metal manufactures, agricultural machinery, wool, coal, India rubber and gutta percha, fish, raw silk, woolen yarn, chemicals, and plants and seeds.

The exports were larger by $164,547,135, the amount being $515,607,187. Chief of these was breadstuffs aggregating $247,312,785, including 152,969,400 bushels of wheat at 73 1-2 cents a bushel; flax, $41,081,550; eggs, $26,310,835; oil and petroleum, $27,133,805; wood of all sorts, $34,148,620; sugar, $12,966.155; butter, $16,501,115.

Russia's principal customer for both selling and buying is Germany; Great Britain comes next and Holland third.

These returns show Russia before the war and the political upheaval. The returns for 1904, 1905 and 1906 will be still more interesting.

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

The general condition of trade has shown little change since our last review. The present time is one of between seasons. Citrus fruits are now drawing near a close, but are still in good supply, with prices well maintained. Oranges have, this season, had an exceptionally good run; quality has been uniformly good, and prices right for encouraging trade.

Montreal has kept steadily ahead right through. Strawberries are arriving in fair quantities and commanding good prices.

Receipts of California citrus fruits on the New York market was of fair quantity during the past week. The total sales were 175 cars, of which 168 were mixed oranges, navels and bloods; one car was grape fruit and six were lemons. A good portion of this week's receipts of navels showed age and decay. The market has been very weak on poor stock, but firm on good, sound fruit. Friday's sale showed considerable improvement, and there were some advances recorded.

The apple season has, of course, closed, but a limited quantity is seen on market. Many of the export buyers are taking their usual trip to the European Continent, previous to opening of the new season.

It is very doubtful whether many people in Canada whose attention has not been specially called to the subject are aware of the value and possibilities of development in the trade in apples, and also of the fact that any negligence, much less suspicion of fraud, on the part of exporters, is almost certain to result in the loss of several millions a year, falling chiefly on the farmers of the Dominion of Canada.

Many portions of Canada are peculiarly adapted to the growth of apples of very superior quality, and yet it is a fact that to-day many thousands of farmers hardly make out of their orchards enough to pay the cost of picking and packing the fruit, whereas under proper management they might easily be put in possession of an income of from two to five hundred dollars each. We do not now speak of fruit farmers, but of the products of the ordinary orchards of fairly good size, such as exist to-day in many portions of Canada, and especially of Ontario and Nova Scotia.

It is hardly too much to say that Canada is capable of producing an almost unlimited quantity of the best apples in the world, or at least apples that would certainly stand in the very front rank. In 1904 our export of apples amounted to not less than four and a half millions of dollars, which might easily be doubled or trebled. Here is a trade which ought to amount to eight or ten millions a year.

CANADIAN APPLES IN LONDON, ENGLAND.

The Nova Scotia apple season is now near its close, and in a few weeks the shipments from the Antipodes will be in possession of the market.

"As the Canadian season is on the wane, I obtained from a leading London, England, importer, his views on the results obtained. As regards the Ontario apples, he said, the earlier varieties were in many cases badly packed. Where they were tightly packed they realized very fair prices. The later varieties, such as Baldwins, Spys, Greenings and Ben Davis, have, on the whole, obtained high prices. Of course, as usual, the great bulk of the Ontario apples have been sent to Liverpool, and London appears to be handicapped by the apples not being delivered in such a good condition here as they get them in Liverpool. In some varieties the prices in London have been equal, if not higher, than those in Liverpool, but in the other sorts, especially for the late apples like the Golden Russet, Liverpool has ruled higher than London. This is to be attributed, I think, to the fact that the Liverpool consignments have arrived in a better condition than those coming direct to London. There has been a noticeable improvement in the quality and condition of the Kings arriving from Ontario this season. It has rather decidedly been on the increase to ship No. 3 variety (single X). In a season like the one we have just finished, when there has been a great shortage of home grown fruit, it may possibly pay the shippers to send the No. 3 variety. It is a question as to whether in a moderately cheap season it will pay them to send common grade apples such as these.

To Prevent Bruising.

"As regards the packing, there has been a greater use this season of the corrugated pulp heads in the barrels. This is the finest thing which could possibly be used to prevent the bruising of the fruit, especially for the soft varieties. Taking the Nova Scotia apples altogether these have been rather disappointing, not so much as regards price as quality. This, of course, has more particularly affected the trade here, for London is by far the largest receiver of Nova Scotia fruit. The Gravensteins started off very badly, and I should say they were the worst quality of this variety seen in London. It appears almost as if this variety were deteriorating. The Ribstons were mostly fair, but a great number of them showed signs of spot. The Kings, as a rule, were very good indeed. I am glad to notice that sun scald is not so prevalent, for there was very little of it to be seen this year. Greenings have been very unsatisfactory, many of them having been held too late. Manns have not been satisfactory and we consider this a dangerous apple. It sometimes turns black, and when in this condition it is almost unsalable. We consider the Stark a far more preferable apple.

A Departure.

"There is now a movement in progress for cultivating some of the sorts which are successfully grown in England.

"There have been a few good samples of Wellingtons arriving, but many of these were kept too late. The apple should be sent in not later than Christmas. The Baldwins have been of a medium quality whilst Ben Davis have been very inferior indeed. The Ontario Ben Davis is far ahead of those from Nova Scotia."—Acadian Orchardist.

VEGETABLES—Business is continuing very good. Dealers are receiving large shipments every day and these are quickly cleared out. Canadian vegetables are now beginning to come on the market in greater quantities, and, of course, this will help to make prices a little more reasonable than they now are. Florida celery is cheaper and cucumbers are also down a little on account of increased arrivals.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS— The fruit trade, which basked in last week's sunshine, this week is a little chilled and not quite so active. Strawberries and pines are however, coming forward in carload lots, so that consumption must be pretty general. The fruit this year is of fine quality. Car lots of berries are arriving daily and auctions are held every morning. The orange market is slightly firmer for Californias as the season is nearing a close. The first auction of a fruit cargo this season in Montreal was held yesterday on arrival of the S.S. Bellona with direct importations from Messina with Messina, Maiori and Sorrento lemons, Cantania, Sorrento, bloods and oval oranges.

VEGETABLES—As the season advances and production increases, prices tend inevitably downward. This week has brought lower prices for new potatoes, new carrots, celery, asparagus and tomatoes. The Canadian asparagus is in and is quickly displacing the imported. Texas onions, grown from Bermuda seed, are on the market and constitute the only addition to the list besides the Canadian asparagus. Vegetables are moving freely into consumption. White old potatoes are marked 15c. higher and new cabbage is up.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

THE COMMERCIAL VALUE OF THE PEANUT.

The peanut, arachis hypogcea, also called groundnut, pinder, gouber and by the French, pistache de terre, is of doubtful nativity, being generally cultivated in tropical countries, but is supposed to be indigenous to Western Africa.

The Way the Fruit Forms.

The plant is a trailing, diffusedly branched annual. After the flower falls away the forming pod is forced into the ground by the elongation of the rigid deflex stalk to which it is attached, but this stalk is not perceptible at flowering time, but appears later, and curves in such a manner as to push the young pod quite below the surface of the ground. If by accident this is prevented the fruit ceases to grow, but when covered with earth it rapidly enlarges and forms a thick-shelled pod, with toughly-netted surface an inch or more long, often contracted between the seeds, of which it generally contains two and sometimes three.

Principal Places Grown.

This nut is of great commercial importance; immense quantities are produced on the western coast of Africa to supply the European demand. It is largely cultivated in South America and in our southern states, from Virginia southward, it is an important crop.

The Way of Cultivation.

For its cultivation here good corn land is required, not reddish, as that would stain the shells and diminish the price. The furrows should be three feet apart, and two seeds, deprived of their shells, dropped at intervals of eighteen inches and covered to the depth of an inch and a half. The crop should be cultivated until the pod begins to form, when it can be left alone. The harvesting is done after the first frost; the vines are dug up with pronged hoes and left for a couple of days to dry, they are then stacked or taken to a shed to cure. Two weeks later the pods are picked from the vines, rejecting the "pops," as the empty pods are called, and cleaned for market. The picking is slow work, experts being able to handle only three bushels a day. Machinery is now used with fair success. The pods are cleaned by being fanned by a mill, and as the price somewhat depends upon their appearance, they are often placed in a revolving cylinder, where they are polished by mutual attrition, and the very white pods are made so by the use of sulphur fumes.

A Good Crop.

A good crop will yield about a hundred bushels to the acre. It is more profitable than cotton or tobacco. There are two varieties of peanuts, the Virginia brand being larger than the North Carolina or Africa.

Peanut Oil.

The chief use of the nut is for the oil it gives, yielding from forty-two to fifty per cent. It is colorless, bland, fixed and resembles that obtained from the olive; non-drying, changing slowly by exposure to the atmosphere, and remaining fluid at thirty-two degrees Fahrenheit. The best is obtained by cold pressure, but an inferior quality is secured in large quantities by heating the nuts before pressing. The principal consumption of the oil is in making soap. The nuts are frequently used in the manufacture of chocolate, and large quantities are eaten roasted.

Rich in Food Properties.

Analysis by Dr. Muter shows that the residue after the expression of the oil far exceeds peas as an article of food, and is even richer than lentils in flesh-forming constituents, while it contains more fat and phosphoric acid than either of them. On these grounds its adoption as a food is urged, it being superior in richness of all important constituents to any other vegetable product of a similar nature. Although in its raw condition it has a harsh odor, this entirely passes away in cooking. It can be made into a porridge by boiling in water and eaten with milk, but makes an excellent custard and is very palatable in similar dishes; it can also be used as a beverage, as a substitute for cocoa.

The Salted Peanut.

The salted peanut is now a fashionable substitute for the salted almond, and it is claimed that it is more delicate in flavor and much more delicious. It is prepared by taking the green, unparched nuts and gently crushing the shell to avoid breaking the kernels; they are then blanched by pouring boiling water over them or by parboiling them in a pan on the fire; then treated to a dressing of butter and placed in the oven until they are nicely browned, then taken out and salted.

Sundry Facts.

Almost fabulous amounts of the goubers are shipped from Africa to France.

They are grown in northern gardens as a curiosity, affording amusement to those watching the singular habit of the plant pushing the pod under the ground to ripen; but they will not come to maturity in a temperate climate.

THE EVOLUTION OF A. F. MacLAREN I. C. CO.

With a capital stock increased from $100,000 to $400,000, the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Limited, will take over the business of the A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Limited, with the same officers and staff, and conducting business at the same points as before. The uniform excellence of this firm's products has made their progress and expansion so rapid that this change has been necessary in order to keep pace with the business. The increased capital has been largely furnished by the former shareholders, and the men whose energy and enterprise have placed the company in the position of one of the most progressive of its kind in Canada, will continue in control. In the new premises at 69 Front street east, Toronto, greater facilities will be afforded for meeting the increasing demand for MacLaren's Imperial Cheese, the merit of which has caused it to be known the world over as one of the most nourishing as well as the daintiest and most economical food obtainable.

DRIED FRUIT HARMED.

A Vocaville, Cal., firm writes: "It will be of interest to you to know that considerably more than one-half of the stocks of dried fruits on this coast were destroyed in the fire of San Francisco. The only warehouse remaining is Rosenberg's. Nearly all the packers and jobbers had concentrated their stocks in San Francisco with a view to making assorted carloads. Of course there are some prunes outside of the city, and also some few lots of peaches, but every grocery jobbing house and commission house lost every pound. We are receiving orders from Seattle, Portland, Sacramento and San Francisco for all lines of dried fruits for immediate necessities. Everything has advanced in price."

Did You Ever Light a Cigar and Find That it Really Wasn't Lit?

You blamed it on the match and the failure of your lips to "get in" the timely draw. But the real culprit was the tricky cigar. It wasn't made right. The leaves were either rolled too tight or too loose, and as the flame couldn't induce the air to come through in proper quantity, it (the flame) refused to act. Simple, isn't it?

Did You Ever Have a Cigar Trade and Find That You Really Didn't Have It?

You attributed the paucity of business to want of "push" on the part of your clerks, the store's situation, etc. But the real preventer of sales was the brand of cigars you handled. If PEBBLE and PHARAOH cigars had been in that same store of yours, with those same clerks, your sales would have been Big. Why? Because the man who makes the Pebble and Pharaoh puts his heart and his money into the work, and when the match has been applied, his light shines before men. Payne's employees would just as soon cheat themselves as cheat their task. They move in an atmosphere of honesty—feed on it.

The Pebble cigar sells at 5c., the Pharaoh at 10c., though both of them are worth a good deal more. On the 5c. and 10c. basis you get highest profit. An order for 1,000 assorted will prove this.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

GIVE MORE ATTENTION TO TOBACCO.

Grocers should at least pay more attention to their tobacco department. There are many reasons why, outside of the money-making element which is a powerful factor. Tobacco is a very sensitive plant and even in its manufactured form will impart and attract peculiar odors readily. As a rule what sort of a department does the average grocer make? He has a few boxes of plug tobacco, chewing and smoking, and these are set up on a counter shelf with the lids of the boxes removed and the sides also partially taken off, making it handy to remove the plugs as they are required. Probably in the next department of his shelves there may be candies and all kinds of little grocers' sundries like gum and novelties usually classed in the luxury column of purchases. Butter and cheese are very often not far away, and these commodities are also very sensitive, and then bread and flour, also sugar and other of the innumerable eatables that stock a grocery shop.

A Show Case for Cigars.

The stock of cigars is usually very limited and as a rule (not always, by any means) are thrown carelessly into an old-time show case that might have been fashionable when Julius Caesar was on earth. The cigars are permitted to get dry and some fine evening when some young man takes an expensive notion, or there may be a function of some kind such as a political or other banquet, the grocer is called upon to serve cigars and he is absolutely unable to cope with the best chance he had for months of making what is called a "hit" in the community.

The moral attached to this is to be up-to-date. Your neighbor, the barber, will outdo you in the tobacco business. as sure as fate if you drift the slightest bit. Ask some of the enterprising tobacco manufacturers to make you a gift of a nice zinc lined show case and see that it is used for tobacco purposes only. Numbers of tobacco manufacturers are giving such things to druggists and they would be glad to give them to grocers if they could be assured of some concentrated effort on the part of the grocers to make a push on the lines that should attract.

Give Accessories a Good Show.

It would be wise also to have cigar cutters in the shop; get some small boxes of matches made with your name on them and give them out to your plug smokers if there are not many cigar men coming along.

Be alive and get in some novelties in the way of smokers' sets, tobacco jars, pipe racks, nice cigar holders and trays for smokers' tables, etc. Lay out to have some fine rubber pouches and some novel match boxes, all of which will go a long way towards stamping you as a leading grocer and one who looks well after the up-to-date.

A UNIFORM STAMP WANTED.

Tobacco growers have started an agitation to secure reform in the regulations of the Inland Revenue Department, claiming the present system is cumbersome and occasions expensive operation. The growers are demanding a uniform stamp for tobacco. Under the present regulations there exist three different classes of tobacco, foreign, combination and Canadian, each of which is required to be manufactured under a separate license, and distinguished by different colored stamps—black for foreign, pink for combination, and green for Canadian.—London Free Press.

EXPERIMENTAL STATIONS IN VIEW.

The Ontario Government has finally decided to establish two experimental stations in the western section of the province.

South Essex is to have a vegetable and tobacco experimental farm, and E. Adams, of Leamington, and N. Peterson are spoken of as the superintendents.

North Essex is to be provided with a fruit experimental station. L. Wigle, ex-M.P., South Essex, and H. S. Clements, M.P., West Kent, state that this will be a popular move on the part of the Government and that, when the proper time arrives, there will be a most vigorous effort to have a higher duty placed on tobacco.

The Canadian product, properly cured, is said by western men to be as good as any grown in the United States.

The "Sunny Isle" of Ceylon Was once the "Granary" of India It is now the "Tea-ry" of the World.

The Reason Why—

It's always well to know the reason why. It's the grocer who knows that leads in the race for success.

The grocer who does not know, and does not care to know, will surely go to the wall.

The Reason Why—

Ceylon Tea leads in popular favor, and has outdistanced all others, is simply "quality," always "uniform quality."

The "Sunny Isle" produces a specially fragrant tea, the like of which was before unknown. It just suits the discriminating palate and securely holds it.

The wise and discerning grocer who aspires to tea success has only one choice. He must buy only Ceylon Tea.

Ceylon Tea (Green and Black) the World's Premier Tea.

If, indeed, it be true that—

"An honest tale speeds best being plainly told" then the following bit of "Pure Candor" should make a rapid impression

No mystery surrounds the instant and universal acceptance by critical connoisseurs of "SALADA" Natural Green Tea of Ceylon wherever it has been offered.

Here is its simple story in a nutshell.

In it we offer an actually pure, untampered with, Natural Green Tea of exquisite flavor and unadulterated strength, that renders it more economical and healthful in use than the Japan Teas it is so rapidly displacing all over the continent . . . It is of a light color in infusion with a peculiarly delicate taste and "bouquet."

The rapidly growing list of enterprising dealers all over the land who are now handling "SALADA" Green Tea is evidence that they recognize as inevitable its dominating influence over the Japan Tea sales of the future, and they do not propose being left behind in catering to the public demand for something so infinitely better than the old-time Japans that they have hitherto been handling.

We paek and sell "SALADA" Natural Green Teas in Sealed Packets only—same form, style and prices as the celebrated Black and Mixed Teas of "Salada" brand.

These good qualities are:—absolute cleanliness,

The Salt that Saves Money and Time for You

"Time is money"—save time then, and you save money too. Waste no time and you waste no money. Is it really worth while to spend useless energy in an endeavor to push inferior articles of trade? We think not.

Windsor Salt is the standard because so often used for comparison—you hear "as pure as Windsor Salt" used everywhere to-day. You don't have to argue with a customer over its merits—its quality is too well known. It's pure white, dry, crystalline. It is nothing but salt.

You lose more than we do by not stocking up with it—lose time, lose money, lose trade.

SIX MONTHS IN "2 IN 1"

[COPY] HAMILTON, Ont., December 15th, 1905.
The F. F. Dalley Co. Limited,
Gentlemen,

I write to state the following:—On account of the effect of your "2 in 1" Shoe Polish being criticized, and the charge made that it injures the leather, I made this test as follows:— I mixed the contents of a box of "2 in 1" Shoe Polish, bought at a retail store from regular stock, with four ounces of water, and into this mixture put a kid glove, and left the said glove in the mixture in a bottle from June 15th until December 15th, a full six months. I then took the glove out, washed it and examined it. The fine leather of the glove was not affected in the least. It is as pliable and soft as it was when new, and is not altered in condition, nor were the stitches affected in any way. This test, I consider, proves that "2 in 1" does not injure the finest leather.

I hereby state these facts are correct and true.

[Signed.] J. M. WILLIAMS,
Consulting Chemist.

P.S.—The above letter was unsolicited. The firm knew nothing about it until after Dec. 22nd. The glove can be seen at our office.

The Man Behind the Counter is the one we recognize. We want the co-operation of the retail clerks throughout the country in extending and increasing the sale of the great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap
Fairbank's Sanitary Soap

We are willing and anxious to acknowledge the service they can render us by rewarding them in direct proportion to the interest they display in pushing these goods. Our method of rewarding is "The Fairbank Plan," which is a system of couponing our specialties in such a manner that the coupons can be easily removed when the goods are sold, and giving for these coupons useful articles, the best that money can buy. Our whole aim is to give the clerks the best value we can secure.

The products embraced in "The Fairbank Plan" are easily sold because they are the best value and give the greatest satisfaction to the consumer. They increase the trade of the store and "The Fairbank Plan" rewards the dealer or his clerks for selling them.

Send for a copy of "The Fairbank Plan" illustrated premium list. It will pay you.

MAKING IT EASY FOR THE DEALER

We make it easy for you to sell "MONTSERRAT" because we make "MONTSERRAT" the best Lime Juice in Canada.

All the natural, piquant flavor—the very soul of the lime—is retained in this perfect juice.

We keep up the quality—and that keeps up the sales.

Insist on your wholesaler sending you

MONTSERRAT LIME JUICE

A WARNING

A grocer who purchased a chest of tea of a Maritime Province wholesaler not long ago complained that the flavor was not so good as he had been getting in the past. Upon investigation it was found that the chest in question had been allowed to stand upon a box of partly decayed lemons. This was the secret of the loss of flavor. To obtain the best results and hold trade, tea should be kept as nearly air-tight as possible and separate from any goods that may impart to it a foreign flavor.

Packet vs. Bulk Teas

The above clipping from the "Maritime Merchant," May 3rd, '06, demonstrates very effectively the advantage of having tea put up in lead packages, which go to the consumer without being opened.

I sell nearly as large a quantity of bulk tea as package, and my experience is that we have a dozen complaints from bulk teas to one that we have from packages. Just the same care is taken with both, so there must be good reasons for the very great difference in the percentage of complaints.

The paragraph above explains—Bulk teas are subject to damage by numerous articles that they come in contact with in a grocery store. Samples that are returned to us, frequently smell of oil, fish, fruit, onions, cheese, and numerous other things. Nothing is more susceptible than tea to these foreign odors, and there is no other article handled in a grocery store that is in greater need of protection by some air-tight package. As I handle teas both ways I can speak on the subject without prejudice, and were it not for the fact that many brands of miserable, low-grade teas in packages have been foisted on the trade at high prices, there would not exist to-day any prejudice against package teas. It would be quite the contrary.

I have never sold any bulk tea which gave as general satisfaction as Red Rose Tea in packages, and I know that it is quite impossible for any other firm to do so. Not because the teas to start with may not be as good, but simply because in very numerous cases they are damaged in some such way as the chest of tea referred to in the paragraph quoted above.

If you wish to build up a tea trade, select a package tea which you know is honest value. It is because of this value that Red Rose Tea has gained such a reputation for quality.

The Quakers are Coming

We are hard at work down in Bloomfield putting in additional new machinery to keep up our capacity to the demand for Quaker Brand canned fruits and vegetables. As usual, we will be ready when the time comes and be in a position to fill your orders with the finest line of goods put up on the Canadian market. All the years we have been putting up the Quaker Brand we have made quality our aim. We use only first-class vegetables, our own special process, and, as a result, Quaker Brand has become famous as the standard of quality from the Atlantic to the Pacific. You take no chances when you buy the Quaker Brand. You know you are getting the best on the market, a brand that will hold your customers and increase your bank account. The Quaker Corn, Tomatoes, Peas and Beans stand for sterling honest quality.

Place your orders early for Quaker Brand. It spells success to your canned goods department.

The Bloomfield Packing Co.

BLOOMFIELD, MAY 16th, 1906.

1906 PACK

Our 1906 pack Fruits, Vegetables and Meats will be, as usual, of the very best quality.

Our factories are now being overhauled, and the newest machinery is being installed where necessary.

We have now over thirty of the most modern-equipped factories in the world.

Our factories being situated in the midst of the Fruit and Vegetable Farms of Canada, ensures goods being packed when at their best.

Our processors have had over a quarter of a century's experience in canning and preserving.

Quality and Cleanliness is the policy rigidly enforced at each of our thirty factories.

Our 1906 pack will be the best ever packed anywhere. We guarantee the quality of all our goods.

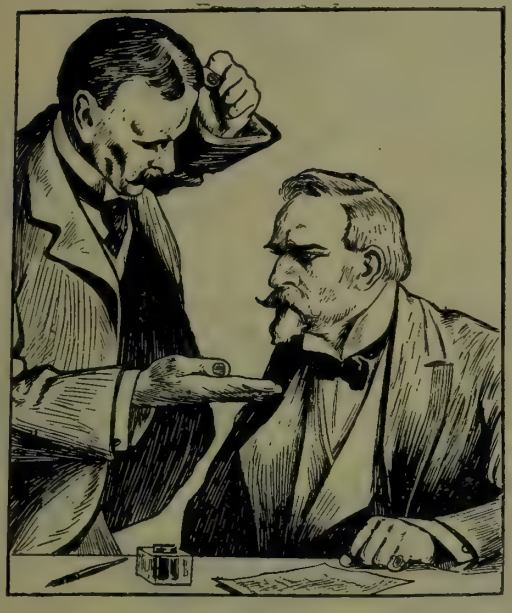
Remember the brands, viz.: "Canada First," "Auto," "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe," "Lynnvalley," "Maple Leaf," "Kent," "Lion," "Thistle," "Grand River," "Jubilee," "White Rose," "Deer," "Globe," etc.

If you want pleased customers stick to our brands exclusively.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

STRICTLY HIGH-GRADE

If Essex canned goods were no better than the average, we would say less about them, but because they measure up to a higher standard we can afford to be very emphatic regarding quality. Essex county is one of the very best agricultural sections in Canada, with advantages in growing such crops as Corn, Tomatoes and Fruits seldom equalled in this country. The factory is thoroughly new and up-to-date, equipped with every facility for doing things right, and equal to an enormously big output of



—"Essex" Tomatoes
—"Essex" Corn
—"Essex" Beans
—"Essex" Jams
—"Essex" Fruits
—"Essex" Marmalade

In the competition of the canned goods business, we cling tightly to the word "Quality," preferring to be always best, rather than second-rate, and in reaching out for a share of your trade, we offer such satisfaction as will give our goods a distinct preference with your customers. You run no possible risk in getting the best, particularly when they cost no more, and all we ask is that you give the "Essex" brand a trial.

Farmer Brand Canned Goods

THE BEST TO EAT

THE BEST TO SELL

Our Staple lines for this season will consist of Peas, Corn, Tomatoes, Pumpkins and Apples, with limited quantities of Beans and Berries.

As our shareholders are all farmers, and the pick of the growers in this Garden of Bay of Quinte district, Prince Edward County—justly celebrated for the luscious flavor of its fruits and the fine quality of its vegetables—you can rely on our statement that the goods we pack under our "FARMER BRAND" are unsurpassed for quality and flavor. An Eastern merchant in our office a few weeks ago remarked: "Your Tomatoes are finer than any others I have ever tasted." It is everywhere conceded, wherever our goods are used, that their natural flavor is unequalled by any other brand. Our motto is "Quality, regardless of Price."

We can claim a distinction which, we think, no other factory in Ontario can claim---that our 1905 pack is entirely sold.

Our factory is thoroughly equipped with latest machinery, and is, in every respect, up-to-date, the sanitary arrangements being perfect. We use none but pure spring water for our syrups and brines and all canning processes.

Our labels are tastefully got up, which make our goods a very attractive package for the retailer's window display. We will be pleased to mail samples on application.

We can guarantee that our Peas, and, in fact, all our goods, will be absolutely 1906 pack.

A Few Facts About a Good Line

It is of the first importance in offering a package tea to know that the goods are right. In mother's favorite "Melagama" you need have no hesitation in pressing the sale upon a customer. We are one of the oldest if not the oldest tea firm in the Dominion and we confess that what we do not know about the tea trade is not worth knowing. In "Melagama" we have put our best, we back it up by extensive advertising and last but not least there is more profit in it than most packet teas. Study the prices, send for samples and then send along your order.

CANADA'S TRADE ENVOYS

COMMERCIAL AGENTS ABROAD

Canada has fifteen commercial agents abroad. Ten of these, four in England, two in Australasia, one in each of France, South Africa, Japan and Mexico, are of the first class and are employed solely in that capacity at salaries of three thousand dollars a year. Five, four in the West Indies and one in Scandinavia, are of the second class and are all commission agents and for a remuneration of $250 to $500, and the honor of it, act as Canada's trade representatives to foster the Dominion's commercial interests when they conveniently can.

F. C. T. O'Hara,

Canada's lust of foreign conquest is all in the world of trade and these are her envoys to the marts of commerce. At the greatest emporium of trade and the heart of empire a gentleman, not of the Department of Trade and Commerce but attached to the office of the Canadian High Commissioner at London, does duty as a commercial agent, and he should be transferred to the department to which his duties rightfully belong. The intent of this article is to tell something of the agents themselves and a little about the Dominion's trade with the countries where agents are stationed.

Canadians are not more interested than they should be in this governmental effort towards trade extension. The expenditure last year was $50,000; this year it will be $60,000, and it should be $100,000. The United States are waking up to the commercial importance of their representatives abroad. A national convention to deal with consular reform was recently held in Washington and a bill has been put through Congress to provide some improvements. At that convention of 200 delegates, representing nearly every important board of trade, chamber of commerce, and other commercial organization in the country, this resolution was passed:

"If the enterprise, the initiative, the ability and the resources of our people were supplemented by that assistance in foreign markets which can be given by a body of thoroughly efficient consular representatives, it is unquestionable that it would facilitate in no small measure the efforts of the United States to achieve that pre-eminence in foreign trade which they have in other directions."

In the Scheme of Development.

President Roosevelt told the convention that the Government had to rely upon them and such as they to make the people "appreciate that the consular service should be in essence a part of the general scheme of business development of the country." He also asked the delegates to bear in mind "that the dearest kind of public servant is a servant who is paid so cheaply that he must render cheap service." Salaries in the American consular service last year ranged from $2,000 to $12,000, and the total cost, $1,332,535, was returned to the treasury in fees, except $144,152.

The German war lord is keen as a Yankee after trade and an agitation is on in the fatherland for consular reform.

To increase the export trade of Canada is the business of the commercial agents. It has nearly doubled in the past ten years and at the present rate of industrial progress in the Dominion should double again in the coming ten. The agents are instructed to study the needs of the locality in which they have been established, especially in regard to those commodities Canada can supply. They have to report direct to the Department of Trade and Commerce at least once a month and as much oftener as they have anything interesting to tell of any of the myriad matters that affect trade. Then there is a branch of the work designated "trade inquiries." Take two samples:

488. Whole Salmon — A Manchester wholesale fish firm will be glad to receive prices of whole salmon from Canadian exporters.

494. Flax Seed—An East Coast firm of oil crushers desire correspondence with Canadian exporters of all classes of flax seed.

This is Getting On.

These inquiries are forwarded by the agents to Ottawa and published in the next Weekly Report. In 1903 there were 144 responses by Canadian firms to such inquiries. This year they are arriving at a rate that will make the year's total 8,800.

At the City Trade Branch of the Canadian High Commissioner's office, London, there is a sample room for Canadian products. There should be such a sample room at every important agency and Canadian producers might be allowed to rent space.

It is not pretended that the service is full grown. Canadian trade is without an official representative in China's four-hundred-million market, and the Chinese are just taking down their shutters. Glasgow, the second largest city in the Empire, is without an indwelling advocate of Canadian trade. There are many other opportunities lying fallow scattered along the trade routes of the world. The West Indian service needs something more than the casual observations of a number of gentlemen each with a large business of his own on his hands. A special traveling representative might serve the ends of trade expansion there. A man at New York to look after Canadian shipments at that port would be a decided advantage.

The Man in Charge.

The superintendent of commercial agencies is F. C. T. O'Hara, and to him, in no small degree, is due the credit for the preliminary success of this governmental effort at trade extension. He was a newspaperman and to that training a good deal of his alertness and capacity is attributable. Born at Chatham, Ont., and not yet 36 years of age, Francis Charles Trench O'Hara is the son of the late Robert O'Hara, master in chancery at Chatham, and grandson of Col. Walter O'Hara, a Peninsular veteran, knighted by the Portuguese Government and afterwards adjutant-general for Canada.

After a collegiate institute training Mr. O'Hara served the Bank of Commerce at Chatham, Blenheim, Brantford, Windsor and Walkerville, resigning in 1891 to accept a newspaper position in Baltimore, Md. He continued there nearly five years on the World and Herald, passing the various degrees, reporter, state editor, assistant city editor and assistant night editor.

During his work on the Herald he had several interesting newspaper experiences, among them as correspondent during a big coal strike in Western Maryland when the state had several thousand troops in the field for several weeks.

P. B. Ball.
Commercial Agent, Birmingham, Eng.

On another occasion during a big sham fight in Patasco Harbor he was the only newspaperman on the U. S. cruiser "Philadelphia," when, during the action, the magazine compartment took fire. During the court of inquiry afterward it was learned that the ship was very nearly blown to atoms. Mr. O'Hara sent to a Canadian newspaper a somewhat famous interview with Cardinal Gibbons on the Manitoba school question, prior to the elections of 1896, which was extensively copied by the press of Canada.

Upon his return to Canada Mr. O'Hara published "Snapshots from Boy Life," which had an extensive sale a few years ago. In July, 1896, he was appointed private secretary to Sir Richard Cartwright, and was afterwards made chief clerk of the Department of Trade and Commerce, and in July, 1904, superintendent of commercial agencies.

It was Mr. O'Hara who recommended and took full charge of the Weekly Report, in place of the monthly, in February, 1904. By reason of these reports being laid before the Canadian public fresh from the foreign sources he has increased the number of trade inquiry addresses requested by Canadian firms from a monthly average of 12 in 1903 to an average of 739 during the past three months. The total number in 1903 was 151 and in 1904 after the Weekly Report was established 1,164 were furnished upon request. In 1905 the figures were 2,985, and for 1906 at the present rate the number will be over 8,800.

ENGLAND.

Birmingham, Leeds, Manchester and Bristol are the four cities in England at which a Canadian commercial agent is located. The work in London is undertaken by the city trade branch of the office of the High Commissioner for Canada.

The officer in charge of this London branch is Harrison Watson, a Montrealer, forty-two years old. He is a son of the late Chas. S. Watson, for many years managing director of the Montreal Rolling Mills Co., and after completing his studies in Montreal, England, France and Germany, entered a large wholesale millinery house in Paris. Before long he returned to Canada and varied his experience by a brief association with the wholesale grocery and tea trade. Entering the employ of the Rolling Mills Co., he became secretary-treasurer and traveled considerably for the firm in Canada and the States.

Happening to be in London when the England and Imperial Institute was inaugurated in 1893, Mr. Watson was selected to take charge of the Canadian section. When the Imperial Government moved the commercial intelligence branch of the department of the board of trade to the city to be in closer touch with the business community, the Canadian High Commissioner located the city trade branch of his office in the same building. Mr. Watson was located there, but continues his connection with the Canadian department of the Institute. It is also proposed to maintain a small sample room for Canadian products at the city office. The board of trade department receives a good many enquiries about Canada, and the Imperial and colonial officials work in conjunction in such matters.

J. B. Jackson,
Commercial Agent, Leeds, Eng.

Mr. Watson has for some years acted as London correspondent of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and was one of its delegates to the last London congress of the chambers of commerce of the Empire.

Specializing in Trade.

London has a population of 6,000,000, but beyond its limits is an outer ring of population aggregating many millions more. In addition to the consumptive demand of London's millions the port is an emporium of the world's products on a scale never before approached and not now anywhere else nearly equalled. After a dozen years' experience there Mr. Watson, when asked recently by a Canadian Grocer representative for some views on the London trade situation and Canada's possibilities there, said:

"The vast extent of the market tends to specialize trade even more than is the case in other cities of the United Kingdom, and even some of the largest wholesale houses handling particular lines do not actually import goods, but prefer to obtain supplies through the brokers, commission agents and merchants who make a specialty of importing.

"Again, owing to its system of specializing, individual firms often limit their operations to a few lines of goods in a particular trade. They consequently handle very large quantities of these goods, and persons selling to them must be satisfied to receive a comparatively small rate of profit on a large turnover.

"In manufactured and partly manufactured goods in particular London is not a profitable market to any Canadian manufacturer or shipper who does not possess facilities for a large output and is not fully equipped for handling export trade. The various trades are very conservative, and buyers are very insistent that goods shall be of the exact type for which a demand exists. In this respect they frequently insist upon points which sometimes appear whimsical and fanciful. The Canadian firm, however, which wished to supply goods to this market must strictly adhere to the instructions given or run the risk of shipments being rejected.

Send Over the Men.

"Should prospects in any line be at all favorable my advice has always been that the Canadian business men should send over someone to personally examine into the matter, as in nine cases out of ten this is the only satisfactory way of establishing a connection, even where business has been inaugurated by correspondence.

"I am also of opinion that it is desirable for the Canadian manufacturer or shipper to entrust his interests to one or more reliable and responsible houses possessing the necessary connection rather than to endeavor to conduct business through the medium of correspondence with a number of firms scattered all over the United Kingdom.

"The chief complaints that one hears about many lines of Canadian trade are carelessness of finish and irregularity of shipments.

"During the last few years United Kingdom houses have devoted much more attention to Canadian trade, and this office daily receives applications from British firms wishing to develop trade in Canada. I think this is partly due to the working of the preferential tariff, the existence of which has become more generally known.

"In this connection I notice a much larger number of British houses sending out representatives to visit the Dominion in order to personally enquire into the possibilities of trade.

"Visits from Canadian shippers and manufacturers' agents appear also to be more frequent, and there is no doubt that personal intervention is most valuable in such matters. I judge that the cream of business is secured by this means."

A World Centre.

P. B. Ball is the Canadian commercial agent at Birmingham, one of the greatest manufacturing centres not alone of England but of the world. He is a business man with 40 years' experience. He began in Guelph, Ontario, in 1865, serving his apprenticeship in a large dry goods store, and went thence to the wholesale trade in Toronto. For some years he was European buyer for Gordon, McKay & Co. Then in 1878 he went into business for himself as a commission agent. He studied methods in the States, and for a time located at Boston as a manufacturers' agent. He returned to Canada in 1891 and opened again a commission business, remaining in that until his appointment in 1903.

Asked by a representative of the Canadian Grocer for a suggestion to Canadian shippers, Mr. Ball said:

"Canadians should be much more thorough both with regard to packing and particulars. Take the fruit trade for instance. I do not think it is as thoroughly done as it should be.

"I believe a good deal more money could be made out of fruit if direct shipments were made instead of having goods shipped to the large shipping ports and auctioned there. The cost of shipment if sent on a through bill of lading would be considerably less.

"Sufficient care is not taken in the classification of fruit, although the Government Fruit Inspection Act has added greatly to the value of shipments.

Live up to the Brand.

"When a shipper has once established a brand, he should live up to that brand. In many cases this is done, and I know that buyers here, if they see a certain brand they do not even ask for them to be opened up, as they know they are all right, and such brands usually command 3s. to 4s. a barrel more than an unknown brand. I have seen myself this season a man pay 3s. per barrel more for a well established brand than he did for a brand he did not know, and which might be good, or might be bad.

"Canadians should come and look over the market oftener. A few people do it, but not anything like the number that should.

"Canadian honey should command a much higher price in this market than it does, but the reason for this is that there is no absolute certainty of shipments. No direct effort seems to have been made to establish a regular trade.

"One fault to be found with our people is that they will not answer correspondence promptly, which in some cases amounts to positive rudeness.

"Our people are very young in the export trade except in a few specialized businesses such as agricultural machinery, but I should advise anyone doing business in Great Britain to come across the water and study the market and trading conditions. A man should certainly be able to make his expenses at any rate the first trip. There are many articles that I feel certain Canada could export if she can only space the time from her home trade."

Mr. Ball stated that through communication with his office at least 75 firms had sent representatives to Canada to look up business and fully 250 had appointed agents in the Dominion.

Among Makers of Woolens.

At Leeds, another of the great manufacturing centres of Great Britain, notable primarily and historically for its woolens, the Canadian Government has located Mr. J. B. Jackson, K.C. Like so many other educated Canadians, Mr. Jackson taught school for a spell. That was from 1872 to 1876. Graduating from Toronto University in 1881 he was called to the Ontario bar three years later and practiced law in Ingersoll until his appointment as commercial agent in 1903. To better fit him for his position he took a course of reading on textile fabrics selected by one of the professors of the Textile College in Leeds. Having been brought up on a farm Mr. Jackson knows something of the production at first hand of Canada's agricultural exports, and as a resident of Ingersoll for thirty years he was in close touch with the dairy and bacon industries.

Mr. Jackson's district includes Yorkshire, Durham, Northumberland and Cumberland, a great manufacturing area with millions of toilers and an enormous aggregate appetite for such foodstuffs as Canada has to sell. Other large cities in it besides Leeds are Sheffield, Bradford, Hull, Newcastle, Huddersfield and Halifax. Hull is the third port in the kingdom and the distributing point on the east coast for the imported foodstuffs, having direct lines of steamers to Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Russia, Holland, Germany, United States and Australia.

Proud and Jealous Port.

Mr. Jackson, in an interview recently with a Canadian Grocer representative, lamented the lack of direct communication between Hull and Canada. "The business men of Hull," said he, "are clamoring for Manitoba wheat, Canadian cheese, butter and eggs, but they cannot get them direct, and they are too proud and jealous of their position as third port in the kingdom to buy through Manchester or Liverpool, besides railway rates in the past to the interior cities have been excessive. Australia realizes the possibility of this field, and has inaugurated a direct line of steamers to Hull, and yesterday the "Poot Caroline," the first boat of the service, was unloading in Hull Australian wool and food products.

"In this district the name 'Canadian' is a magic word," continued Mr. Jackson, "and everything else being equal 'Canadian' goods are preferred. To show how Canadian trade is broadening out, two years ago it was almost impossible to buy Canadian food products in Leeds, at least advertised and sold as Canadian. These goods were then 'American,' and there seemed to be no great distinction even amongst the educated classes between Montreal, Toronto and Chicago, they were all American. Now I can buy in any of the retail shops in any of the cities above mentioned Canadian beef, mutton, bacon, ham, butter, cheese, apples and turkeys sold and advertised as Canadian. Indeed, Canadian products are so much in demand that American and Russian are often sold as Canadian. Canadians should use registered brands, and I am of the opinion that the best solution of the difficulty is a Canadian Government brand for all food products, registered in both Canada and Great Britain."

A Man from Brockville.

Manchester, though only 31 miles from Liverpool, has, with Salford, a population of 800,000, and being one of the principal manufacturing cities of the world, it seems the right place for one of Canada's commercial agents. The gentleman located there is P. B. McNamara, who hailed from Brockville, Ont., where in 1874 he entered the dry goods business with his brother. Three years later the partnership was dissolved and Mr. McNamara continued in business alone until his appointment to Manchester in November, 1903. During his thirty years in business Mr. McNamara had a good deal of experience with the customs and excise departments. For three years he was engaged as side interests in the manufacture of explosives and for two years in manufacturing logwood.

Fruit Expert at Bristol.

The latest appointment to the commercial agency service in England was that of W. A. MacKinnon, who was commissioned to Bristol in July, 1904. Besides its shipbuilding industries, Bristol is noted for its glass works, potteries, soap works, tanneries, tobacco factories, chocolate factories and chemical factories. Its imports and exports totaled in 1900 $63,500,000.

A graduate with honors of the University of Toronto in 1897 and called to the Ontario bar in 1901, Mr. MacKinnon continued to devote himself to the fruit industry, having been engaged every fruit season from 1890 on on his father's farm in Grimsby, the fruit garden of Ontario. In 1899 he was given charge, under Prof. Robertson, of the trial shipments in cold storage of tender fruits from Grimsby to England. The next year he took charge of the food products section of Canada's exhibit at the Paris Exhibition and the year following became chief of the fruit division of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, enforcing the Fruit Marks Act and having charge of the work of a practical and educational nature by the inspectors throughout the Dominion. The year 1902 he spent visiting the fruit markets of Great Britain and studying their requirements in regard to varieties, grading, packing and packages. The results of his researches were published by the Department of Agriculture. Mr. MacKinnon is now 31 years of age.

Canada's Share of British Trade.

The question in regard to trade with Great Britain is "What kind of a dent are we making in this market of all nations?" This is partially answered by the following figures showing the exports to the United Kingdom of our principal natural products other than mineral and the United Kingdom's total importations of the articles named:

	From Canada.	Total importations
Animals living	$11,795 485	$ 52,709,495
Breadstuffs	18,735,896	318,097,895
Fish	2,314,143	16,259,344
Fruits	2,705,012	20,000,000
Paper	941 314	23,660,000
Provisions	42,800,611	378,384,761

AUSTRALASIA.

Australasia is divided into two districts for Canadian commercial agency purposes. One district comprises New South Wales, Queensland and New Zealand, with headquarters at Sydney; the other comprises Victoria, South Australia, Western Australia and Tasmania, with headquarters at Melbourne.

The agent at Sydney is J. S. Larke, a gentleman of wide experience, gathered by a varied and intimate association with the educational, publishing, manufacturing and agricultural interests in Ontario. He abandoned high school teaching in Ottawa to become a newspaper editor and publisher in Ontario county and later returned to the Dominion capital a stove manufacturer. He organized the South Ontario Farmers' Association, one of the forerunners of the farmers' institutes now a potent factor in Ontario's agricultural development. Mr. Larke was an original director of the Ontario Loan and Savings Co., and for years took an active interest in municipal affairs, being reeve of the town of Oshawa and chairman of its board of education. At the time of his appointment as commercial agent to Sydney he was commissioner for Canada at the Columbia Exposition, Chicago.

New Zealander by Adoption.

D. H. Ross, commercial agent at Melbourne, is a Nova Scotian, but has been engaged in business in Australia and New Zealand for many years. After three and a half years in the wholesale dry goods trade in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Mr. Ross accepted a position with an Auckland, New Zealand, firm doing a large export business with the islands of the south Pacific, and he did a good deal of traveling for them. The firm retired from business in 1889 and Mr. Ross began on his own account to trade in ship and steamer supplies. He continued at that ten years and in addition started a fish cannery and whaling station. Mr. Ross disposed of these interests in 1897 and joined an agency firm in Brisbane, Queensland, which gradually developed into a wholesale drug concern with a branch at Sydney. It was from this business he resigned to become Canada's commercial representative in Melbourne.

C. E. Sontum,
Commercial Agent, Christiania.

During the fiscal year of 1904-05 the Canadian Government's support of the steamship service between Canada and Autralia amounted to $194,666.

Trade Half Round the World.

The principal articles of export from Canada to Australasia last year were: cotton goods, $179,243; canned salmon, $262,904; agricultural implements, $812,390; paper, $549,680; lumber, $259,349. Only in salmon and paper was a record made. The principal commodities coming this way were: wool, $64,441; tin, $32,081; butter, $20,661; hides, $17,851; furs, $14,550; wood and manufactures of, $12,950. Australia took $25,475 worth of Canadian wheat flour last year, but the inter-antipodal trade in foodstuffs is very small. Three years ago the export of flour to Australia and New Zealand amounted to $587,607. Five years of Canada's trade with Australasia are represented in the following table:

	Imports.	Exports.
1901.....	$164,416	$2,311,405
1902.....	157,237	2,940,247
1903.....	140,435	3,392,399
1904.....	121,423	3,215,583
1905.....	212,746	2,734,856

FRANCE.

A. Poindron, Canada's drummer for trade in France, is a gentleman with a good deal of railway and transportation experience in France. From 1881 to 1888 he was with the Western Railway (taking the English of it), latterly as assistant to the Paris superintendent. For the following three years he was chief of the central service in Paris and secretary-treasurer of a Senegal railway subsidized by the French Government. In 1891 he became managing director in Paris of two tramway companies, one in St. Maur and the other in Bordeaux. The former became amalgamated with another undertaking and the latter was wound up for lack of capital. Thereupon Mr. Poindron was appointed to report upon the prospects and traffic possibilities of a projected railway in Indo-China. In 1897 he became a manufacturers' agent in Montreal and agent in America for the Franco-Canadian steamship line. He was appointed commercial agent in Paris in 1902.

Where Society Figures.

Canada buys from France about five times as much as she sells to her, and the proportion of imports to the total trade is increasing, being 77 per cent. in 1901 and 82 per cent. last year. The total of trade between Canada and France last year was $8,712,977, a very small part of Canada's dealings with the world at large, over $470,000.000, but a very important factor in the social and domestic life of Canadians, particularly the feminine element. More than half our purchases from France last year were made up as follows:

Silks	$ 670,000
Woolen Dress Goods	1,213,897
Gloves	257,509
Ribbons	225,439
Laces	149,984
Buttons	36,996

Hats and Bonnets	47,396
Jewelry	29,062
Furs	199,727
Perfumery	77,689
Castile Soap	58,592
China	77,434
Precious Stones and Imitations	494,426
Wines and Spirits	979,522

The other principal articles of importation were hides and skins, $494,891; cotton and manufactures of it, $100,137; drugs, dyes and chemicals, $231,012; fancy goods other than laces, $184,763; fruits, mostly nuts, $193,301; metals and manufactures thereof, $154,256; optical instruments, $120,106; tobacco and accessories, $84,554; mineral and aerated waters, $52,781; leather and the manufactures thereof, $52,335; glass and manufactures of, $80,595; brooms and brushes, $80,302; carriages, principally automobiles, $40,050; macaroni and vermicelli, $23,480; books, $88,874.

What We Sell to France.

Canada sold to France last year but a little over a million and a half dollars worth of goods, which was $86,000 less than the year previous, but a fair increase over the two years before that. The largest item was fish, $607,953. Then came metals and manufactures of, $448,516; breadstuffs, $211,115; wood and manufactures of, $130,915; canned vegetables, $51,984. A beginning was made with provisions last year and shipments amounted to $15,140. The principal foodstuff sent to France was beans, $105,611, and the next in order of value, oats, $90,323.

The total trade with France in 1901 was $7,084,736; imports, 5,503,405; exports, $1,581,331; and last year, $8,712,977; imports, $7,201,679; exports, $1,511,298. A falling off in our sales of $70,033 in four years is not encouraging. The increase in our purchases is even larger than at first appears. Because of crop fluctuations Canada bought raw sugar largely from France in 1901, the total imports being $786,618. The year following that sum increased to $1,304,615. For two years none of that raw sugar has been imported from France, so that the real increase in other importations from 1901 to 1905 was not $1,698,274 as it appears, but $2,484,892.

JAPAN.

Japan, Canada's Pacific neighbor, could not be very well overlooked in the matter of trade agencies, and Alex. MacLean was sent there two years ago. Mr. MacLean is a man of wide experience. Early in life he had five years' mercantile training. He was many years in the newspaper business, and for fourteen years was contractor for the parliamentary and departmental printing at Ottawa. Prior to his appointment he was engaged as a paving contractor in Ottawa. The Canadian Government assists the steamship line from Vancouver to China and Japan to the extent of $73,000 a year.

Tea the Big Item.

Canada's total trade with Japan has not yet reached the $2,500,000 mark. Tea is far and away the most important article of commerce between the two countries, and the commodity that does most to liquidate our account for the leaf is fish, the salmon of the west coast.

It was in 1899 that Canada made its record in the purchase of Japan tea. Then the bill totaled 11,695,302 lbs., $1,529,196. Last year it was 6,287,630 lbs., $869,501; but in 1903, the war

Chas M. Kittson,

year, it was down to 4,355,024 lbs., $673,213.

Despite a half million falling off in the tea trade since 1899, the total business between Canada and Japan was larger last year than ever before. Besides a noticeable revival of the tea trade, Canada's sales to her Pacific neighbor rose from $112,308 in 1900 to $510,925 last year. The largest figures in last year's exports to Japan were: fish, $244,706; cotton and manufactures thereof, $67,613; wheat flour, $62,007; lumber, $52,187; metals and mineral and manufactures thereof, $41,482; fertilizers, $16,545. In 1904 the purchase by Japan of wheat flour jumped from practically nothing to $140,815. Another war mark on the 1903 invoice was condensed milk and cream, $18,183.

Provision Trade Increasing.

The provision trade with Japan, though not large, is increasing. The export of butter in 1901 amounted to $717, and rose gradually to $6,496 last year. The Japanese consumption of Canadian cheese, however, last year, $759, was the smallest since 1900.

The largest sums in Canada's bill of purchases from Japan last year were: tea, $869,495; silk and manufactures of, $487,846; rice, $116,980; earthenware and china, $74,707; carpets, mats, rugs, $41,978; flax, hemp and jute, $35,972; cement (trade begun in 1903), $27,083; articles for the use of fisheries, largely tin cans, $21,225; drugs and dyes, $15,477; brooms and brushes, $23,294; nuts, $18,776; other fruits, $10,188; hats and caps, $18,350. Among the silk manufactures were $88,131 worth of handkerchiefs.

MEXICO.

A. W. Donly, Canada's trade ambassador in Mexico, began his business career in the Federal bank at Simcoe, and after two years became deputy registrar of his native county of Norfolk. After a couple of years at Victoria College, he taught in the Woodstock Collegiate Institute, and a year later went to Mexico and engaged in the book business. The year 1902 found him manager in Mexico for F. P. Hoeck & Co., and in 1903 he became auditor of the railroad watch and time inspection service for the railways of Mexico. He continued at that until appointed commercial agent in 1905. He is 40 years of age.

Canada's trade with Mexico is a small and variable quantity. The record was made in 1903 with a total of $262,609: imports, $125,575; exports, $137,034.

Among imports fruits, and among exports cotton manufactures, spirits and lumber are the only articles that show any degree of trade stability. Our purchases of fruits from Mexico increased steadily since 1900, and last year totaled $18,468.

Mexico buys no breadstuffs from Canada, nor any provisions. The purchases of wood and manufactures thereof, including lumber, last year amounted to $29,388, and that was the largest single item of export. Then came cotton and manufactures thereof, $21,576; next coal, $18,143, the first of that commodity since 1901, when the amount was $27,184. The purchase of spirits totaled $14,507, and of metals and manufactures thereof, principally sewing machines, $8,155.

SCANDINAVIA.

C. E. Sontum, commercial agent for Norway, Sweden and Denmark, is a Norwegian with eight years' valuable business experience in Canada and United States. He was born in Christiania forty-one years ago. When eighteen years of age he came to America, and having no friends took what work he could get. But he got on, and six years later he came to Canada as the representative of B. T. Babbitt, the millionaire manufacturer of soap and baking powder. He was the firm's general agent here, and in that capacity visited every town and village in Ontario and Quebec. After a year of that he went to Europe to represent the firm there and took on also some Canadian business for firms he had become acquainted with during his sojourn in the Dominion.

The next year he opened an office for himself in Christiania as an import and export agent.

It was in 1893 he was appointed commercial agent for Canada. He was in Canada at the time, having been sent to America in the capacity of commercial commissioner by the Norwegian Government. He was intrusted with the same duties the next year. Since opening his office in Christiania Mr. Sontum has handled all kinds of Canadian products, and he has been engaged by Hiram Walker & Sons and the Dominion Radiator Co. to introduce their goods in northern Europe.

A Growing Business.

During the past five years our trade with both Denmark and Scandinavia has greatly increased. Our exports to Denmark have increased nearly fourfold, and in Norway and Sweden nearly sevenfold. The article that bulks largest in value on Canada's bill of lading to Denmark is breadstuffs, last year reaching $83,367, and the next is canned lobsters, $38,302. So to Norway and Sweden, breadstuffs last year aggregated $136,362; canned lobsters, $66,774; metals and minerals and their products, $24,739; ships, $25,600; coal, $36,764. For some years we have bought of Denmark more rennet than any other one article. Last year the value was $6,898, nearly half the total imports. Canada's principal importation from Norway and Sweden is metals. Last year the total value was $60,040. The next item in importance is fish products, $14,680.

The falling off in the trade with Scandinavia in 1905 compared with 1904 was due to the fact that in 1904 an abnormal quantity of metal ore was brought here and of coal was sent there. These two items considerably more than account for the shrinkage.

SOUTH AFRICA.

C. M. Kittson is Canada's trade representative in South Africa, and is one of the younger members of the commercial agency service. He began his business career with Gault Bros. Co., Montreal, in 1890, and served them four years. For a year he was bookkeeper for Law, Young & Co., then transferred his services to the C.P.R. and a year later to the G.T.R. After two years he entered the employ of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. as bookkeeper for three years, then as branch manager at Toronto, and finally as general agent in South Africa. During a visit home last year he was appointed to his present position. Mr. Kittson is well known to South African importing firms from the Cape to the Zambesi.

Canada has the Big End.

The balance of trade between Canada and British Africa leans far to the side of the Dominion. Last year Canada sold to the African colonies eighty-eight times as much in value as it purchased from them. These are the figures: exports, $1,883,362; imports, $21,372. In 1902 the difference was many times greater: exports, $3,842,070; imports, $15,806. But that was a war year, when South Africa was not doing much business. It was hay that swelled the sales that year, $2,095,201. Subtract that sum from the total and the volume of trade was a good average with an encouraging increase.

What we bought from Africa last year requires only three classifications: hides, $10,862; wool, $7,458; all other articles, $3,052. The trade in hides is variable. In 1901 we took $27,212 worth, and the year before last $50,920 worth. Of wool five years ago we bought to the extent of $60,841.

Took a Lot of Flour.

By far the largest item in our invoice of sales last year was wheat flour, $903,000, and the interesting part of it is that this demand for Canadian flour which the war created has gone on increasing. The war started a small demand for Canadian oatmeal that has held and increased. Last year the sales totaled $7,700. The grand total of breadstuffs was $1,067,884. The figures for provisions were $116,052, but the year before they were $410,058; in 1903, $179,394; in 1902, $25,347. Another important article of export to Africa is condensed milk and cream, reaching last year the sum of $103,298. Other figures in the export list last year were metals and manufactures thereof, principally agricultural implements, $164,894; wood and manufactures thereof, $171,741; fruits, $23,887; leather and manufactures of it, $33,863; coal, $31,731. The commodities, the shipment of which to Africa last year made a record, were: oatmeal, wheat flour, clothing ($1,682), fruits, leather, agricultural implements and machinery.

The Canadian Government subsidizes a monthly steamship service from Montreal or St. John to Cape Town and two other ports at the rate of $146,000 a year.

WEST INDIES.

There are in the West Indies four paid representatives of Canada's commercial and industrial interests, all appointed in 1892, each a prominent merchant in his own island. They are G. Eustace Burke, Kingston, Jamaica; R. Bryson, St. John, Antigua; S. L. Horsford, St. Kitts; Edgar Tripp, Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Mr. Burke is a gentleman of 45, a native of Jamaica, and for twenty years has been head of a firm of liquor and provision merchants and commission agents. Four years ago he was unanimously elected by the city council mayor of Kingston.

Mr. Horsford is and has been for years a member of the General Legislative Council of the Leeward Islands, a member of the local Legislative Council of St. Kits-Nevis and a member of the Executive Council of that presidency. He, too, is a general and commission merchant and estates and shipping agent. In that capacity he has done business in St. Kitts thirty-one years, and prior to that in Antigua. For twenty years he has had a branch business in Nevis. Through business and his official relations Mr. Horsford has had exceptional facilities for acquiring an intimate knowledge of trade and opportunities for trade in the Islands.

Succeeded His Partner.

Mr. Bryson, of St. Johns, Antigua, is another estate and shipping agent and general commission merchant, managing director of Geo. W. Bennett, Bryson & Co., Ltd. He succeeded his partner, the late Hon. H. D. Bennett, as Canadian commercial agent upon the latter's demise. His firm are agents for the Pickford & Black SS. Co., which brings him into close touch with Canada's West Indian trade.

Edgar Tripp, of Trinidad, the fourth member of the quartette, is also in the shipping and commission business. He is an Englishman, son of a London solicitor, and was destined for the bar, but early forsook legal for mercantile pursuits, and has been engaged in his present business since 1872, becoming a partner in 1875. Since 1886, with short intervals, Mr. Tripp has been on the committee of the Trinidad Chamber of Commerce. In 1890 he made a tour through Canada for his colony to report on the prospects for trade with the West Indies; was in Caracas semi-officially in 1901 and represented the Trinidad Chamber of Commerce at congresses of chambers of commerce of the Empire in London, 1896 and 1900, and Montreal, 1903, and at the congress in Philadelphia in 1899.

Sugar the Factor.

Canada's trade with the West Indies increased from $3,205,845 in 1901 to $9,041,187 in 1905. This increase was due largely to Canada's increased consumption of West Indian raw sugar and molasses. In 1901 our imports from the West Indies aggregated $1,280,798, and last year $6,077,013, an increase in four years of $4,796,220. During the same time our imports of sugar and molasses increased $4,747,775, from $999,464 to $5,747,239, leaving for the four year period an increase in other commodities of $48,445.

Canada's sales to the West Indies during this period increased 54 per cent. from $1,925,047 to $2,964,174. It has been a steady growth, but last year the increase was most marked, being $784,400 over the previous year's total. It was due to phenomenal increases in the exports of flour and fish. Up to 1904 there had been a gradual increase in our sales of flour to the West Indies, reaching that year 49,007 barrels, valued at $204,201. Last year they took 131,812 barrels, valued at $642,707. The increase in the consumption of Canadian fish in the Indies was considerable, but not so marked. In 1904 the total value was $829,029, and that was over $100,000 less than for several years. In 1905 the total rose to $1,016,888, an increase for the year of $187,759.

No class of exports to the West Indies has shown a steadier or more gratifying increase than provisions, as shown by these figures for five years: 1901, $86,227; 1902, $100,784; 1903, $179,381; 1904, $196,448; 1905, 225,166. Last year's shipments were made up as follows: butter, $136,038; cheese, $48,681; bacon and hams, $11,303; pork, $15,458; other provisions, $13,686.

Taking last year's figures, the principal articles Canada buys from and sells to the West Indies are these:

Imports—Sugar, $5,039,208; molasses, $705,383; hides, $68,078; cocoa beans and products, $62,591; cocoa nuts, $46,043; oranges, lemons and limes, $47,386; bananas, $21,297; spices, $9,973; rum, $11,108; salt, $8,807.

Exports—Breadstuffs, $927,721 (including wheat flour, $642,707; other flour, $26,905; beans, $54,768; oats, $135,312; peas, $48,647; other breadstuffs, $19,245); fish (mostly cod and herring), $1,016,888; living animals (mostly cattle and horses), $31,040; books, $5,285; coal, $82,559; drugs, dyes and chemicals, $63,132; cordage rope and twine, $27,865; fruits, $15,173; hay, $21,810; leather and manufactures thereof, $35,809; paper, $16,336; provisions, $225,166; potatoes, $72,094; wood and manufactures of, $313,102 (including lumber, $202,410; shingles, $29,807); spirits and wines, $10,525; soap, $17,883; settlers' effects, $1,766.

A JOURNALIST-CONSUL.

It is a wise policy on the part of any Government to recruit its consular forces from the ranks of the journalists. The news-getting instinct and the years of training of the newspaperman stand him in good stead when he is called on to investigate conditions in a foreign country for his home Government.

An outstanding example of a newspaper editor, who is ably fulfilling the duties of a consul in the Province of Ontario, is Mr. George Nicholas Ifft, U.S. consul at Chatham. Mr. Ifft is proprietor and editor of the Pocatello (Idaho) Tribune, which he purchased about twelve years ago. He received his appointment at Chatham in May, 1905, and entered on the duties of his office last September. Though only located in this country a few months, he has already prepared some admirable reports for his Government, which show the results of painstaking research.

Mr. Ifft is a native of Western Pennsylvania, where he was born forty years ago on a farm.

No sooner had Consul Ifft settled at Chatham than he set to work to compile a series of reports on Canadian trade and allied subjects. That his work has met with the approval of his Government is abundantly evidenced by the frequency with which his reports are quoted not only in the Daily Consular and Trade Reports, issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, but by the daily and trade newspapers in both the United States and Canada. In the past six months he has discussed a great many questions, including the Canadian forestry policy, the beet sugar industry, American immigration, American capital in Canada, etc. Even to a Canadian, much of Consul Ifft's information is new, which illustrates the thoroughness with which he has made his investigations.

THE PORT OF MONTREAL

Its Continual Growth—Some of the Most Important Improvements Recently Made Neeessary by the Ever-Increasing Trade of the Dominion, and Montreal in Particular—Something About the Exports and Imports Through the Port

Wonderful indeed is the change undergone by the port of Montreal since that day in 1642, nearly three hundred years ago, when the French explorer, Maisonneuve, first stepped from his boat onto the forest island now known as Montreal. Little did he dream that at the place where he touched shore in his small boat there would one day be anchored large ocean greyhounds, vessels which yearly bring into the country thousands of dollars worth of freight—yes, millions of dollars worth—and sailing out of port carry with them to all parts of the world the products of one of the finest producing countries of the world. But such has come to pass, and where a few hundred years ago Maisonneuve's boat was drawn up on the shore of the mighty St. Lawrence, to-day are moored ships of monster size from all parts of the world.

But to come down to a more recent date, to speak of a period within the memory of those still living, what a transformation has taken place! One who had seen the harbor in 1850, revisiting Montreal's port to-day, would not recognize it. But the change has been gradual—the work of time. Every year that goes by leaves remembrance in the shape of some new project completed. Even this year many improvements are under way.

New piers are being erected, old ones are being raised to high level, low level docks are being repaired, embankments, formerly but the rough shore of the river, are being transformed into suitable low-level docks. And these are only a few of the improvements being made. Each year the city of Montreal and her trade are growing, and with this growth comes the demand for increased wharfage, so that where a hundred years ago there was only a very small waterfront, there is now in the neighborhood of seven miles of wharves under the control of the Montreal Harbor Commissioners.

The Harbor Commissioners.

This body was instituted away back in 1830, to take over the general management of the harbor. The number of its membership has been augmented from time to time as it has been found necessary. Originally it consisted of three members, but this has been gradually increased until at present the board consists of eleven members, six of whom are appointed by the Governor-in-Council, and one each elected by the Montreal Board of Trade, the Chambre de Commerce du District de Montreal, the Montreal Corn Exchange Association and the Shipping Interests. The mayor of Montreal is also a member ex-officio during the tenure of his office.

The Government has loaned large sums of money to the Harbor Commissioners for the improvement of the port; improvements which were rendered necessary by the ever increasing business of Montreal and the Dominion.

There is some talk of changing the composition of the Harbor Commission, but as yet nothing has been done toward this end.

At present, as has been stated, the board has under its control seven miles of wharves. These extend from Victoria Bridge on the west to Longue Pointe Church on the east. Those piers lying between Windmill Point and Victoria Pier (opposite the C.P.R. Viger Station), both inclusive, are high level, as is also Tarte Pier, opposite the St. Lawrence Sugar Refinery in Maisonneuve. The rest of the wharves, which include one wharf at the Locomotive & Machine Company's works, Longue Pointe, and one opposite the church, also in Longue Pointe, are low level.

Splendid Railway Connection.

A very important work which has just been completed is the building of an embankment running from the end of the wharves in Maisonneuve to below the House of Industry in Longue Pointe, in order that the Great Northern Railway may have direct connection by rail with the harbor. It might here be stated that the wharves are well equipped with railroad tracks to facilitate the handling of merchandise. These tracks are all under the control of the Harbor Commissioners, who allow running rights on them to such railway companies as they may see fit. Up to the present time, the C.P.R. and the G.T.R. are the only companies possessing such rights, but this season and hereafter the G.N.R. will also be able to run their cars direct from their main line to the harbor by means of rails laid along the embankment recently completed. It is easy to see the benefit realized by merchants in being able to have their merchandise loaded directly from the ship in which it arrives in Canada to a waiting car on the wharf, as in this way the goods are handled much more expeditiously than they could otherwise be, besides which the handling is thus rendered much less expensive.

The new G. T. Grain Elevator

Two Great Grain Elevators.

In 1902, owing to the necessity for some means to properly handle the grain trade, the commissioners commenced the erection of a large elevator capable of holding 1,000,000 bushels of grain. This was completed and put into operation in August, 1904, since which time it has given the greatest satisfaction. The Grand Trunk Railway recently built a large grain elevator. This also holds 1,000,000 bushels, and no doubt will be found of the greatest use this and succeeding seasons. The first elevator mentioned, which is known as the "Harbor Commissioners' No. 1," is situated at the foot of St. Sulpice street. The G.T.R. elevator is situated between Windmill Point and the canal basin. There are also several coal-handling plants by which coal can be transferred from vessels directly into cars.

The Permanent Wharf Sheds.

The building of permanent steel wharf sheds is being rapidly proceeded with, and by the end of this season it is expected that seven two-storey sheds will have been completed. The balance, also seven in number, will, it is hoped, be finished next season's end. Long has the building of these sheds been under contemplation, but at last they are being constructed, much to the satisfaction of every merchant who has any interest in the shipping trade, for the need of proper sheds has been a long-standing want.

The dredging of the ship channel is going forward apace and within two years, it is expected, the work will be completed. When finished the channel will have a uniform depth of thirty feet.

These are a few of the most important improvements on foot and which have been made. Other and less important improvements and repairs are always under way. For instance, at present the wharves in the vicinity of the busier high level piers have been laid with granite blocks. It is the intention of the commissioners to lay the whole of the docks between McGill street and Victoria Pier in this manner. Victoria Pier, used by the R. & O. Navigation Company for river boats, and the Laurier Pier in Maisonneuve, used for the lumber trade, are laid in scoria blocks. It is apparent that Montreal is destined to become one of the greatest ports in the world in the way of equipment for the convenience of the shipping trade and in means for facilitating the proper handling of merchandise.

"Made in Canada" Abroad.

Canadians have every reason to feel proud of the place their country occupies in the commercial world. Her exports, taken generally, show tremendous increases every year, and the same may be said of her imports. In each particular line, with a few exceptions, the volume of trade has increased each year. The export trade of Montreal, which at one time was confined almost solely to Great Britain and the United States, is branching out all over the world, and as our Canadian products are received in foreign countries in ever increasing quantities, it must be conceded that there is quality in the goods. The three words, "Made in Canada," are beginning to have a meaning abroad which cannot help but be most beneficial to Canadian merchants.

In looking over the volume of the export trade, it will be seen that the United Kingdom still imports from Canada in greater quantity than any other country in the world. The United States is also a splendid customer of Canada. Business is developing, however, with South Africa, Belgium, Holland, Mexico, and other countries. It is pleasing to note the efforts of the Government to develop trade with Italy. Newfoundland. Australia and the West Indies are also taking a part of Canada's exports, and are contributing their share of our imports.

Perhaps, in order to give a more comprehensive view of the export trade of Montreal, it might be well to take the past season, 1905, and give some idea of the trade of that year, comparing it with the business of former seasons.

During the season of 1905 no less than 833 ocean-going vessels entered and cleared the port of Montreal. This means thirty-seven more vessels than entered port in 1904, while the customs collections showed an increase of $675,827 over the previous year.

The Butter Trade.

Never has the outlook for excellent butter trade been so bright as it is at present. The quality of the butter made by Canadian farmers is becoming better and better, and consequently the demand for it in foreign markets is increasing steadily. The United Kingdom takes greater quantities of Canadian butter than any other country. In the markets there, the quality of our butter, which has been constantly improving, has attracted much attention, and sales have increased in consequence. Denmark, Ireland and Canada compete strongly for supremacy. At present Denmark holds first place, but it is expected that before very long Canadian butter will wrest this position from the Danes. The number of packages of butter shipped in 1905 showed an increase of 83,000 over 1904, and an increase of 23,500 over 1903. The value of the butter shipped was $7,397,492, an increase of over two millions over the value of the shipments in 1904, and in the neighborhood of three and a third millions increase over 1903. These figures speak volumes for the growth of the export butter trade. Ten years ago the value of the butter exported was $1,800,000, while about five years ago the exports were approximately $3,000,000. As has been stated, the principal demand is from the United Kingdom, England particularly, but the business with Japan and the East is rapidly increasing. The South African trade is also being developed. Butter is received at Montreal for export from all parts of Canada, arriving in special refrigerator cars. Although Bristol held first place as importer of Canadian butter for three years, last year London was first, then Liverpool, Bristol, Glasgow, Manchester, South Africa, Leith, Mexico and Cuba. There has been a great increase in London's importations in 1905, they being nearly 95,000 packages over 1904. To suit English importers the greater part of the Canadian butter for export is put up in 56 lb. tubs, not in tubs containing 70 lbs., as formerly.

Trade in Cheese is Growing.

The last ten years have brought with them a tremendous increase in the export cheese trade of the Dominion. This trade is almost entirely through the port of Montreal. In 1896 the value of the cheese shipped from Canada was $11,605,000, and the returns for last year show that the amount realized was $18,029,358, which is certainly a great increase. In 1905 the number of boxes of cheese exported showed an increase of over 6,000 over 1904, the number of boxes exported being 2,121,101. Here again we find the Old Country our chief market. London imports in the largest quantities, then come Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, Belfast. While the imports of some of the ports show a falling off occasionally, new markets are constantly springing up which in the end tax the Canadian exporters to the utmost to supply. For instance, the imports of Canadian cheese to Cardiff last year showed a most astonishing falling off, but this was completely offset by the increased imports of Hull, (a new market for Canadian cheese), Cuba, Mexico and South Africa. Indeed London and other large markets in the Mother Country showed greatly increased imports, which, however, can only be regarded natural in view of the ever increasing volume of Canadian export trade.

For the last four years the export

egg trade has been falling off. Egg merchants are inclined to hold their eggs as much as possible for the Canadian market. The prices ruling here, particularly last year, have been such as warranted as little export business as possible. In many cases losses have been sustained by dealers who made contracts with importers on the other side, on account of these high prices which prevailed in Canada.

Montreal Leads America.

A fact which is perhaps not generally known, and one which should be of pride to Canadians, is that Montreal leads the export centres of America in the volume of its export dairy trade. This may seem astonishing, but it is none the less true. The amount of cheese exported from New York, which comes after Montreal, for a period of eleven months ending November, 1905, was 12,889,860 lbs. The export of cheese from Montreal for a period of seven months, in 1905, was 169,688,080 lbs. The amount of butter exported from New York during the same eleven month period in 1905, was 12,296,500 lbs., while Montreal's exports for the same seven-month period as before mentioned totalled 34,406,940 lbs. If ever figures spoke for themselves these certainly do so. It will be noticed also that the periods covered by New York and Montreal, respectively, show a difference of four months in favor of New York.

Canada's Grain in Europe.

Montreal is a great grain exporting centre. During the shipping season one sees vessel after vessel loaded and sent to its destination in some other part of the world. In the neighborhood of 21,000,000 bushels of grain were shipped from Canada last year. This is an increase of over eight millions over 1904. Wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed, peas and buckwheat are the chief lines in demand on foreign markets. The United Kingdom and Belgium are our chief foreign grain markets. Belgium, or Antwerp to be exact, imports large quantities of every line mentioned with the exception of peas. Holland takes wheat and corn in fairly large quantities. Germany, France, Mexico and South Africa all import more or less Canadian grain in the course of the season. Italy also imports considerable Canadian wheat.

Live Stock Trade Flourishing.

The live stock trade is flourishing and every year increased business is noted. Last year there was an increase of considerably over five thousand head in the number of cattle exported. In all 118,296 head were shipped, chiefly to Liverpool, London and Glasgow.

Sheep, too, occupied a prominent place in this line of trade last season, no less than 21,036 head being shipped to various points, particularly Liverpool and London.

Shipments of Lumber and Hay.

The lumber trade with foreign countries, although showing in 1905 an increase over the previous year, was in volume considerably below the years 1902 and 1903. There was shipped through Montreal in all 157,031,256 feet of lumber. The hay trade, like the lumber business, shows variations. Last year the shipments amounted to 504,000 bales, which is a decrease of 35,000 bales compared with 1904, and of 87,000 bales compared with 1902, while it is an increase of 44,000 over 1903. There was also used for cattle feed during the season 18,000 bales, which must be taken into consideration when making up these figures. Liverpool may be called the chief import centre for Canadian hay, although London and Glasgow are not far behind.

Other Lines Exported.

One could go on indefinitely reciting Canada's exports which pass through the port of Montreal, but space does not permit, nor doubtless has the average reader any desire to go into the matter in detail, yet there are a few other lines which occupy important places in our export trade which it would be only fair to mention. For instance there is flour. The trade last year was not so good owing to the scarcity of wheat. Towards the end of the season, however, there was marked improvement. It is only just, also, to mention our Canadian apples. Towards the latter part of the shipping season if one were to visit the harbor of Montreal, he would see immense piles of barrels all full of the choicest Canadian apples, being loaded onto vessels going to Great Britain, France, South Africa, Germany, Belgium, Mexico, Holland, and numerous other countries.

Canned goods are becoming what might be called a staple export line. While a few years ago England was practically the only country importing our canned goods, to-day we are shipping them to nearly every country in Europe, to Mexico, South Africa, and other countries all over the world.

From what has been said in the foregoing, the reader will recognize the place Montreal holds among the export centres of America. The volume of trade transacted through the port of Montreal in 1905 is most encouraging. The imports are no less so. Indeed it is stated on good authority that one-third of the exports and imports of the Dominion pass through the port of Montreal.

It is extremely doubtful if Montreal is ever going to be displaced as a shipping centre—it certainly will not in this generation. With the dredging of the channel increased trade is bound to come to Montreal, and with increased trade the port will grow, and this will aid in the growth of the Dominion, which shows what an important part the port of Montreal plays in the affairs of Canada.

"ROASTING" THE CREDIT MAN.

Here are some of the latest sparks from the "old man's wire." The head of the house has just grabbed the telephone transmitter—and this is what happened:

Hello! Get me the credit department. Mr. Jacobs? Yes, I want to know about the Cadillac failure. Not so bad as reported, eh? You mean to convey a wavering hope that we've got one chance in forty of getting our money—or part of it. That's encouraging. But, say—

Eh, how's that? Unjust? Hit a man when he's down? Well, maybe I am hitting you when you're down, but I'm doing it so as to make you get up and take hold again like a man, instead of getting panicky as you are.

Fact is, I wasn't going to speak about the Cadillac loss at all. What I am kicking about is not as much the loss of that eleven hundred as your loss of nerve over it, which has made you turn down that new grain supply company of Oxtail Crossing.

Eh? No basis for credit? Who says so? What did you really find out about those fellows? Do you know that the K. T. has made a secret shipping contract with four big ranches, and that Oxtail Crossing is the shipping point?

And did anybody tell you that young Haffen, of whom the commercial agency says "was railway brakeman," is stepson of old man Wright of the K. T., and that he really steered the whole shipping job?

Eh? You can't be expected to know all of this? You are expected to know it. And if you hadn't let that Cadillac loss scare you into fits, you'd have learned it just as I did. I have inside information? Don't you think it—I'm no clairvoyant. This information didn't come to me by spirit rappings or wireless. The whole story was told me by a plain man—a man who called on you two days ago. He was just bursting to tell you about it. But you froze him stiff. Who? The best customer on the books—Jim Crothers of Martinville. Yes, I know. Martinville is a long way from Oxtail Crossing, but if you'll dig up your reports, you'll find that Jim Crothers' wife's brother is a big rancher in Texas and he's located near Oxtail. That's the answer.

Jim came to see me after he called on you Thursday. Had his coat collar turned up, and his ears looked white, like they'd been frost-bitten. I asked him what the trouble was.

"Br-r-r-r," says he, "I just got a frost. That credit man of yours—." Then he told me the whole story. No, Jacobs, I'm not roasting. I'm showing you that you turned down the best account of your life because your sources of information, which are the basis of your credit—the tools you work with—are not as sharp as they should be. Your system of reports accurate? Yes, you've bragged about that often. If it's true, there must be something wrong with the man who runs the system, for you didn't let it tell you Jim Crothers' brother-in-law lived at Oxtail Crossing.

You've a reputation for tact, but your tact balked at Jim because he smells so strong of the stables. And finally, you let one blunder in the Cadillac matter lead you into a worse blunder on this account.

Get a better credit man? I'd like to, Jacobs, but I can't. That job's for you. It's up to you to get me a better credit man by making a better credit man of Mr. James Q. Jacobs, the present incumbent. Think that over. Good-bye!

HE TOOK BROOMS.

Two old fellows in New Hampshire were the sharpest things in the way of bargaining. Cy Pettingill made brooms for a living and Ezra Hoskins kept a store. One day Cy came in with a load of brooms and the dickering began.

Cy was a man who could see a bargain through a six-inch plank on a dark night, and Ezra could hear a dollar bill rattle in a bag of feathers a mile off. Well, they began, and their conversation was something like this:

"Ezra, I want to sell you these brooms."

"All right, Cy, I'll take them."

Cy said: "I don't want any store bargains, I want cash for them."

They talked and gadded a while, and then Ezra said: "I'll tell you what I'll do, Cy. I'll give you half cash and half trade."

Cy took a fresh chew of tobacco, pulled a straw out of one of the brooms and said:

"That'll be all right, Ezra."

After he had put the brooms in the store, Ezra said: "Here is your money, Cy, now what do you want in trade?"

Cy looked around for a spell, cocked his eye up to the ceiling, stuck his cud in his cheek and said:

"Well, if it's all the same to you, Ezra, I'll take brooms."

It is curious to learn that the pugnacity of the lobster kept in tanks is due to its want of sight, the strong light blinding it, and thus it seizes upon anything that comes near it. It cannot see its food, and is guided entirely by its "feelers," or antennae and antennules, with which it whips the water.

GOOD ADVERTISING

SEASONABLE CHATS BETWEEN SEASONS

Many retail grocers never advertise either in newspapers or by circular. They perhaps could not tell you just why they do not, but from "sounding" one or two grocers I am convinced that an incorrect view of the value of space is the cause for much of the silence.

Don't Despise the Small Ad.

A grocer kind of reasons to himself that if he cannot afford to advertise on a large scale he cannot afford to advertise on a small scale. One way costs too much, the other way, he thinks, shows his hand.

Now, you cannot pick up a paper — daily, weekly or monthly—but you are greeted with the inch and the page ads. Each man has his reasons for his choice; each looks for results, each believes he is doing a good work for his business.

Every grocer ought to run an ad of some kind. If you do not care to use more than an inch space, have that space filled with some newsy remarks about special prices, seasonable arrivals, or have it contain a snappy phrase — changed each issue.

Never sit down and believe you can hold your trade without effort, that other grocers' advertising cannot harm you, that your custom is a sure thing. In one of the largest cities in America there dwells a wholesale grocer who lost a big soap trade because a new concern delved into publicity and went for old methods at a lively clip. That was quite a number of years ago, yet the ex-soap wholesaler still says he cannot see how it happened. While he is talking about the past, his travelers, right now in the present, are having a harder task each trip to persuade their "regulars" to repeat coffee orders. The regulars want to try an advertised line, want to know if another wholesaler can do better for them. So you can see yourself that in "Old Method's" case soap history will soon be repeating itself in the form of "Good-bye, coffee custom!"

Publicity safeguards your trade and pilots in newcomers. Be a publicity grocer.

"Write for Catalogue."

It is a mistake to imagine that because a manufacturer asks you in his advertisement in the trade newspaper to "write for catalogue," that doing such will obligate you to buy.

The manufacturer is naturally anxious that you should see his catalogue; but there are also good reasons from your standpoint why you should see it.

In the catalogue of to-day there is necessarily much information. The manufacturer knows that to appeal to his readers he must state facts a-plenty, apart altogether from personal talking points. Many of these facts make useful knowledge for the merchant; for instance, from a booklet on "Light" the following is culled:

"Many valuable displays are nightly thrown out of commission just as they are beginning to be most effective, while others are not operated at all during the evening hours, because of the high current cost involved with a low efficiency lamp."

A little statement like this comes in handy for the merchant who lights up his window by electricity. It shows that if the light diminishes in power, or runs up too big a bill, there's something wrong and it can be remedied, with consequent saving of dollars.

Then sometimes in catalogues, on such as glassware, for instance, a brief history of the industry is given, and pointers on how to distinguish goods that at first glance appear to be the same — hints any person might thankfully accept.

By all means gather in the catalogues and booklets—they cost you nothing. When the manufacturer says through his trade paper, "ask for catalogue," depend upon it he has something to tell you in it.

Keep Your Eye on Farmers' Trade.

The town retailer with a large farming trade is to be envied. While the farmer doesn't usually spend as much as the city patron, he is not half the trouble to wait on, because he never "shops," delivers his own goods, and generally pays spot cash.

The mail order man recognizes that the farmer is a good asset, consequently he sends "literature" to him. Such "literature" cannot affect your business, except on a few lines, but the trouble is if you do not advertise the farmer is apt to grow into the way of trying the stores that do advertise, because the literature "gets him going." This means that you must not stand still, you must adopt the best means for advertising.

The weekly is the farmer's delight and in the weekly paper your ad should always appear. If you live in a place that cannot boast a paper you had better issue a store paper yourself once a fortnight.

The farmer doesn't want any fuss. But he wants attention and value for his money. Every successful grocer gives both these.

Coming Out on Top.

Most people imagine that when the big city house gets into the town man's territory the latter is going to feel a "pinch."

In many cases—perhaps the majority—this really happens. Yet a general merchant in Ontario, writing us the other day in regard to advertising criticism, referred to a recent triumph of his over a big 'un as if there were no need to clap him (the merchant) on the back.

Part of the letter read as follows: "Kindly ask your critic not to mention ——— (a seed house) name in connection with the seeds. ——— (one of the biggest department stores in the world) are flooding the country with circulars advertising 15 packages for 25c., so we had to head them off here by going one better."

"Going one better"—that's the stuff successful merchants are made of, afraid of no mail order Goliath, fit for any emergency, defender of trade while there's a round of ammunition, and withal a-w-a-k-e.

It pays a merchant once and awhile to lose a little profit and deal a big blow. If your customers see you are not going to permit any inroads on your territory by outsiders they will think more of you, and this "thinking more of you" will be manifested by fidelity of custom.

Any person who ponders for a moment must see that there is a large element of risk attached to "long distance" orders.

In the case of seeds, for instance, people may be sold vetch for sweet pea (as has been done) and where does the reimbursement come in? On the other hand, when people buy their specialties from the man who the year round has given them satisfaction on general lines, they place the onus upon him of maintaining the standard and he is right there in turn to answer.

Hit out in the newspapers with the anti-mail order argument whenever you feel you are being rubbed against.

Pointers on Expensive Circulars.

Occasionally circulars printed on high grade paper come in for review. The cost of such paper is just about double the cost of ordinary stock, and while the ordinary stock is not to be recommended, there is always the happy medium.

A grocer says to himself: "I am going to send out an extra nice announcement." A calendered paper is selected and the circular run off. But on close examination this grocer discovers that his circular doesn't look much better than the one previously printed—on ordinary stock, too. Why?

In the small printing offices type faces get battered quicker, and are put up with longer, than in city shops. Also the art of "dressing on" is not so highly developed. Consequently a "shiny" stock simply serves to show up the imperfections.

If the pressman tries to get around the difficulty by running lots of ink he may "bring up" the old letters, but the good letters "smear."

If you want "right results" from a small office choose a "novelty" paper. Nearly every printer has some in stock. The manufacturer or dealer furnishes him with samples.

Regarding Mottoes.

A good motto is an advertising force. It appeals to the buyer. It makes you and your business known. It acts as a stimulus for the whole staff.

But the motto used must be a striking one. It must, to a certain extent, be original. It must stand for more than mere words.

Of course, by motto is not meant a limited phrase solely. It might be expanded into a set of principles to be placed at the head of all your newspaper advertisements and on booklets, etc.

In this connection the principles of the Bee Hive Store, Lacombe, Alta. (Horne & Spice) are well worth noting:

"The essence of the Bee Hive way is to serve our customers as we would be served ourselves.

"To show that no one need haggle or shop. That the price we quote to one customer is the only price we have—the same to all.

"In a nutshell—so to serve our customers that, in all ways, the Bee Hive way shall be to them a synonym for the square deal."

Never allow hackneyed expressions like "If we please you, tell others; if we don't, tell us," "The house of quality," "The honest store," that almost two-thirds of the merchants use now and then—never allow such expressions to usurp the place of a motto in your advertisements.

The easiest way to get a suitable phrase is to partly make one—in your leisure scan some of the masterpieces (particularly blank verse) and from these you ought to secure suggestions.

To obtain a set of principles worthy of a permanent place in your advertisements you must sit down and write, then pigeon-hole what you write, then re-write it, and then show it to somebody else—not a competitor, though.

By that time you ought to have evolved an impressive bit of reading, the kind that makes the people say "I like the cut of that fellow. I like the way he says things."

ADVERTISING CRITICISMS

THE EXPERT'S OPINION ON SOME RECENT ADS.

When an advertisement is well displayed, has the necessary balance, and a finished border effect, it appeals quickly and effectually.

When an advertisement is well written, with arguments clear, diction pertinent and statements tenable, it convinces surely and conclusively.

Just such an advertisement is that of F. & J. Morley. The compositor used good taste in his border selection and good judgment in his setting.

The talk on tea is terse yet ample. The reasoning is continuous but not over bold. The conclusion plain, but proper.

The Morleys chose a nice sized space. In keeping the advertisement down to a single theme they made its effectiveness greater. In making that single theme a line likely to suffer by package goods they manifested business sagacity.

Sanderson & Co.'s advertisement is rather unique. Grocers seldom devote much attention to jam, though there is no adequate reason why they should not.

The "jam" advertisement here shown is characterized by its artlessness more than anything else. Statements are made with few adjectives—each item is its own argument.

The prices are brought out well, and considering the size of the advertisement, it was important that they should be.

In the Daily News, St. John's, Nfld., J. J. St. John runs some attractive advertising. The typography is not particularly striking, but the matter is excellent. Here is the way J. J. St. John talks:

"It's so easy to get good groceries, and at low cost! Have you ever thought of it? You have, but you decided it was a pretty tough proposition. Well, we are prepared to show you that it's "dead easy." Buying and selling is our business, and we'd like you to give us a chance to show you that it is to your advantage to buy from us."

Then in bold face letters come seasonable items and prices. J. J. St. John's "open" style is a taking style. It should be cultivated by those grocers who are inclined to "hold themselves back."

Toye & Benedict, of Nelson, B.C., have taken up the "one line" advertisement scheme and are running some creditable specimen in the Daily News.

The advertisement under review is on sausage made from young corn-fed pigs and put up in packages.

There is first-rate display in this advertisement, and the price is well brought out.

Joy, also of Nelson, devotes fifty-five lines, single column, to "bread." He takes occasion to lay great stress on the particular brand of flour that he knows will make the best bread. Mr. Joy has his advertisement set so that no one will make any mistake about the name of the flour.

"Kirk's Grocery" appears at the bottom of a solid advertisement in the Yarmouth Light. Seeds are given chief attention, and a special note is made on molasses. Kirk's announcements are unadorned, but they are assuredly direct.

In large type "Market Square Grocery" and "E. T. Marsh" are quickly seen in the Trenton Courier. Mr. Marsh is rather generous with space, but no doubt he gets "full publicity" for his generosity. He makes brief mention of flour and feed, tea and eggs, and his talk is over.

This method is sufficiently effective when there is little opposition, but if another grocer is on your trail you have got to get into the "reason why" class.

When the Hespeler Herald is opened one of the first things to meet the eye is G. M. Henry's advertisement. In a recent issue of the Herald Mr. Henry had an especially pleasing advertisement on taffy. Sounds rather silly, doesn't it? But Mr. Henry made the talk interesting and undoubtedly got many orders. He doesn't believe a grocer is tied down.

Mr. Henry's advertisement is an admirable example of the "white space" triumph. The compositor evidently was given just the right number of words and he did just the right thing with them.

Cowansville, Que., has a very liberal advertiser in E. Goyette. The style of the advertisements is not particularly impressive, as far as lay-out is concerned. But the first thing that strikes the reader is the abundant sincerity of this grocer. His desire seems to be to tell "the truth and nothing but the truth," and no attempt is made to garnish the truth. It is unfortunate that so many "spelling" errors occur in the advertisement under review. In display lines especially, errors are costly. Mr. Goyette should see proofs.

Anderson & Beattie, Hespeler, have a fine advertising style. I can do nothing better than quote a recent advertisement of theirs headed "Groceries":

"There are groceries and groceries—good groceries, medium groceries and mighty poor groceries.

"We handle only the best groceries, and we endeavor to hand them over our counters at about the medium groceries' price. That's a commendable endeavor, isn't it?

"We would like to have a chance to prove that we are the king-pins in the grocery trade in this town. Will you give us the opportunity?"

This is a vein of writing rarely evinced by retail grocers. It is really an outgrowth of the manufacturers' ponderous appeals.

Not an item is mentioned, not a price is given, not a single name appears, but the ways of Anderson & Beattie (the all-important thing) are dwelt on—to an apt conclusion.

This advertisement is a model; it illustrates what I have many times said: "In the retail end the man is a more vital factor than his goods. Other grocers sell just what he sells."

It would be well for grocers in general to occasionally vary their present advertising style by substituting "the man

TAKING ADVANTAGE OF OPPORTUNITIES.

A crash of glass, a scurry of feet, then a confused roar of angry and excited voices. Some small boy had hurled a rock through a large glass window and then taken to his nimble heels. He was around the corner and lost in a crowd in a few seconds. Who could identify him?

Curiosity.

A crowd gathered in front of the store and in a few seconds the proprietor, red and puffing, appeared. The bystanders pressed closer, eager to hear what he would say. They could see that he was angry, but their motive was not sympathy so much as curiosity. They expected to see wildly waving hands, denunciations of the small boy, of the crowd around, of the town and the police force. They were disappointed.

The man called to a blue-coated officer hurrying up, informed him of the facts, turned and examined the broken glass, gave some instructions to an employee who had followed him out, and started back into his store.

Ingenuity.

An acquaintance touched him on the arm. "Pretty mad, ain't you?" he queried.

"Too late now; it would do no good," responded the merchant with a rather forced smile.

"Must have had your window insured," suggested the acquaintance, with a leer.

The merchant flushed, but answered calmly: "My friend, I will have to pay for the window unless the boy is discovered and his parents pay. I expect to have to suffer not only for the inconvenience, but for the cost of the glass. It would only make me ridiculous to gesticulate and yell and curse everything and everybody, and it would not do any good. Isn't this a better way?" and he pointed to the window, where now a clerk was placing a newly painted window sign which read, "We know you are eager to get to our $1.29 bargain waists, but you will be waited on sooner if you come in through the door."

The Laugh.

The crowd laughed merrily as they read the sign, but it was not at the expected impotent rage and the fury of the merchant wasted on the air. It was at his ready cleverness and skill at turning annoyance and disaster into benefit to himself. The smile of the merchant was less forced during the day as he saw the people gather about the broken window, and beheld many of them enter the store, examine the bargains and buy at that and other counters. He had established his ability in the minds of the many. Later some of them even went so far as to say that he hired the boy to break the window. The man had a right to be hot about the damage done to his window. He was hot, no doubt, but he kept his head level and endeavored to turn his trouble to account. There is reason for his success.

THINGS THE GROCER SHOULD KNOW

BERMUDA ARROWROOT—ITS MANUFACTURE*

W. T. James, a wholesale merchant of the city of Hamilton, Bermuda, is now the only manufacturer of Bermuda arrowroot. Somewhat past the meridian of life he is a fine example of the successful Bermudian business man. Big, genial, hospitable and progressive, he has made his own way and is now one of the most prominent men in the community, carrying on a large importing, exporting and distributing business and, at the same time, ably filling the position of president of the Bank of Bermuda and devoting much of his time to the city of which he is mayor.

The Factory Itself.

The arrowroot factory is in the rear of his fine residence, Bellevue, in the parish of Paget, about one mile and a half from Hamilton. Built upon the side of a hill facing the sea, it has three different floors running down the incline.

Washing the Root.

The green root or "stick" is received from the farmers on the middle floor, weighed, and there peeled by hand—women, boys and girls being employed in this work. It is then thrown into large cement vats and well washed twice, a long handled kind of wooden hoe, called a rubber, being used to move it about and cleanse it thoroughly.

The Process Itself.

The next process is the grinding; this is done by a specially made mill, a large circular metal drum with holes punched through from the inside, making its outer surface like an enormous kitchen grater. As this drum revolves the "stick" is caught between it and a movable plate that presses it against the grater, and thus torn into pulp, which is carried to the lower floor where the "starch" is separated from the fibre. This work is also done by hand, and several men are engaged in it. Oblong wooden sieves, about four feet long by two feet wide, and six inches deep are, in that case, used. The upper one, which collects most of the fibre, has a brass wire bottom eighty meshes to the inch, and when the starch has been rubbed through this with the aid of a constant stream of water from a hose held by the operator, it falls into the second sieve, which has one hundred meshes to the inch. This and the third sieve, with one hundred and thirty meshes to the inch, collect any remaining particles of fibre, and the product washed through is pure arrowroot in the paste form.

The Cleansing Process.

After a final washing in a tight bottomed tray to further whiten the product, it is allowed to stand for some time, the clear water is then poured off, and the wet arrowroot taken to the upper floor where, after being placed in a very fine heavy canvas bag, it is put into a large screw-press worked by two able-bodied men, and seventy per cent. of the water forced out of it.

Finishing for Market.

The drying of the resulting "cake" is the next process, and as it is all important that the finished product be absolutely clean, great care is taken in this operation. Wooden trays about the same size as the sieves, but much shallower, are used for this purpose. In each of these about ten pounds of cake is distributed: they are then laid on large movable racks holding three tiers of trays, which may be run outside the building when the weather permits. It is in this part of the process that the "sparrow hawk" whose portrait is shown in accompanying illustration makes himself useful. The English sparrow abounds in Bermuda, and as he has a great liking for arrowroot, it takes the eye of a hawk and considerable physical energy to keep him away from his coveted meal. As the arrowroot dries it is broken up by hand, and when this process is completed it is finally put through a mill that breaks it into course powder and is then packed for shipment.

Room to Increase Output.

The annual output is not as large as that of a popular food product should be, and Mr. James is well aware that it could be greatly increased. Most of it is sold in England, the balance in Canada.

The Good Reasons.

For several reasons Bermuda arrowroot is considered superior to that produced elsewhere. In the first place, only pure rainwater is used in its manufacture, and the finished product is therefore free from irritating mineral matter. Secondly, dust being practically absent owing to the generally moist condition of the atmosphere and soil, a perfectly clean article can be produced; and lastly, quality being the maker's first consideration, the greatest care is taken in each stage of its manufacture.

Offal Good for Feed.

About sixteen per cent. of the gross weight of the "stick" is saved in the form of pure arrowroot, fifty per cent. is fibre—most of which is returned to the soil for manure—but that saved from the two fine sieves is fed to pigs or ducks.

Origin of the Name.

Upon inquiring as to the origin of the name arrowroot, I find a difference of opinion exists. One writer claims it was so called because in former times the natives of the West Indies found a poultice of the crushed root was an antidote for the poison then used upon arrow heads, but this idea seems very far fetched. The elongated conical shape of the root tips, as seen in good specimens, and the fact that where the soil permits it shoots straight down sometimes to a depth of thirty inches are, I think, much more plausible reasons for giving it that name.

Always Secures the Prize.

Mr. Jones, the factory manager, is a middle-aged Bermudian who has been identified with the making of arrowroot from boyhood. He takes great pride in his business, and when competition has been keen, always managed to secure the prize for quality at the local agricultural exhibitions.

BLENDING COFFEES.

Nearly all high-grade roasted coffees that are marketed to-day are blends, and no branch of the business requires so much knowledge and skill as scientific blending.

The three requisites of a perfect coffee are strength, flavor and aroma, and to secure these attributes goods should be specially selected with a view to their combination. Very rarely are these properties found in one straight lot, except in finest Corinchie Javas, but their cost is so high that they cannot be used by the average buyer. Usually it requires three coffees to supply these elements and each should have the maximum of the characteristic sought. To obtain this, however, is no easy task, for actual drinking value does not depend upon price, name or reputation. Those concerns who wish to find such goods must not only have the very necessary faculty of cultivated taste, but must carefully test in the cup a great many coffees in order to find a very few which are up to the standard.

A "Sparrow Hawk" on duty.

Strength.

Strength is the important element of the ideal blend, and the coffee supplying this should be used in largest proportion, say about 40 per cent. Comparatively few growths will answer, and it is better to use one which is free from any marked characteristic in flavor. Javas, of course, are the best basis, but like all coffees for a particular purpose, the right kind must be used. Old Bucaramangas are the next best for such use, and high altitude Mexicans also are suitable when they are two or three years old. In this connection we might say that the finest cup quality is never obtained in new crop coffees.

Flavor.

After strength comes flavor, and this is best supplied by a bright acid coffee, preferably one having full body as well. Goods for this purpose are nearly always in good supply, as rightly selected Mexicans, Bogotas, Costa Ricas or Guatemalas—if genuine Cobans—will answer.

Aroma.

Blue Mountain Jamaicas are undoubtedly the most valuable for adding aroma but their supply is so limited that they can only be obtained about one-third of the year. Genuine Oaxaca Mexicans are a satisfactory substitute, and, next to Jamaicas, are the most aromatic coffees grown.

The above is applicable only to high grade blends. Santos, not even the best grades should ever be incorporated in these, for at best this growth is merely a filler. Santos is, of course, the principal grade used in cheaper blends, and in about equal proportion with natural Coatepec Mexican a heavy drinking cheap blend is obtained, this latter coffee having great strength, and therefore carries the Santos.

HOW PINEAPPLES GROW.

Pineapples do not grow on trees. Imagine a plant four feet in extreme height from the ground to the tip of the leaves. A single stalk at the surface, but dividing at once into sword-like blades, or leaves, fifteen in number, from the centre of which appears a stiff, upright stem, at the top of which is the fruit. This stem is short and the crown of the fruit when fully grown is a foot or more below the points of the leaves.

At the end of a year and a half from planting each plant produces a single fruit, even as a cabbage plant produces a single head. But the pineapple does not die after fruiting once. Down on the stem below the fruit and among the long, narrow leaves a sucker appears. If allowed to remain this will soon become the head of the plant and within another year it will yield another fruit.

This process may go on for a term of years. In the meantime, however, other suckers will make their appearance. These are broken off and when stuck into the ground they put out roots and become other plants. Thus a single pineapple plant may produce a dozen or more others while it is yielding fruit from year to year.

There are as many good varieties of pineapples as of other apples. All of them are good, but some are better than others. To ascertain the best variety and then to environ and cultivate it so as to ascertain the highest grade of fruit is the ambition of the high-grade pineapple growers of Florida.

SOME VARIETIES IN RAISINS.

A few years ago raisins, or "Valencias," to use the term by which they are more generally known, were unknown in many departments of trade in which they now figure prominently, and it is difficult to predict how far their use may be extended. The great difficulty in adapting them for confectionery and such like purposes is in the extraction of the seeds. The raisins rapidly go candied when the seeds are taken out, but there are seedless varieties on the market now, and these may be made to subserve the purposes of the confectioner.

Insignificant as these goods may appear as a commercial article yet it is true that certain districts in Spain depend almost entirely on the trade in this fruit, for the support of their laboring populations and for the revenue of their landed proprietors.

Three Varieties.

The three varieties of raisins that are in most frequent demand are known as the Valencia, the Malaga and the Almeria raisins. These names are derived from three districts in Spain, where, as has been remarked, raisins are almost the only industry prevailing.

Where Valencias Flourish.

The Valencia variety are grown chiefly in the district around Cape San Antonio in the Province of Valencia, Spain. They are not grown as is often supposed in the neighborhood of the city of Valencia, which district is unsuitable for the culture, being too far north and in which the orange industry takes the first place.

Denia, a seaport town in the south of the Valencia province, is the chief outlet for the consignments of Valencia raisins which find their way to England and to the countries of North America in great quantities.

The system of production employed in each of the three districts is very nearly the same. The Valencia variety is somewhat less sticky than other kinds, because after they are gathered they are dipped in a solution of boiling lime called in Spanish "leija," which causes the saccharine matter to exude to some extent.

The Valencian industry employs many laborers, though their number is small when the area under this culture is taken into consideration.

The Malaga Raisin.

The district of Malaga, from which the second variety of raisins is named, is situated further south, in one of the divisions of the famous Spanish province of Andalusia, the warmest country of Europe.

The raisin district extends along the coast of the Mediterranean about fourteen miles on either side of the town of Malaga. This district is shut away from the inland country by the long range of the Sierra Nevada (Snowy Mountains), a rugged and steep line which attains great heights in some places. Between the Sierras and the sea cliffs there are a number of smaller heights which afford the best land and situations for the industry of raisin growing. Though so highly favored in position, travelers say that this region is apparently barren and is most forbidding in its appearance.

The raisin industry, with some fishing, forms the staple industry throughout the district. There are raisin vineyards on every hillside, and they do not appear very much different from ordinary vineyards except that the vines are pruned nearer the ground.

The Malaga raisins, like those of Valencia, are carefully prepared by the peasantry and a great improvement in the methods of packing has lately taken place. The whole country is more or less connected with the industry and though the profits made by the growers strike an Englishman as being small, both they and the landowners declare themselves quite satisfied with the state of things. It should be added that, largely owing to English and American intervention the methods of preparation and packing now adopted in the Malaga district leave nothing to be desired in the important matter of cleanliness.

The Almeria District.

The Almeria district is very like, both in its physical and industrial features, that of Malaga. The Almeria raisins are also carefully prepared and well packed, and the parties concerned seem to think that their industry is a very satisfactory one. The English market receives the largest consignments of Spanish raisins, but the trade with Canada and the United States is greatly increasing. The Almeria district suffers considerably on account of the imperfection of railroad facilities; indeed, it is only quite recently that the town of Almeria, though for years an important fruit port, has possessed a railway station.

MAKING OF MOLASSES.

Quite a lot of interest has been aroused lately in regard to Barbadoes molasses, particularly as to the difference between what has been known for years as "choice," and what has been put on the market within the last two or three years as "fancy" molasses, or "syrup." To really understand the difference one has to know something of the process of sugar-making. After the canes have been crushed the juice can be brought to be sugar either by what is known as the "open kettle" process or the "vacuum-pan" process.

The former process is considered antiquated, but is still used to a large extent in Barbadoes, Antigua, and some of the other West India Islands, and consists of boiling in open pans, provided with steam coils, the heat being continued until crystals of sugar begin to form, or until the density indicates sufficient cooking. When the density of about 30 degrees Baume has been reached, the liquid is termed a "syrup," and when, after further boiling, this syrup is cooked to a stiff mass, it is termed a "masse cuite" — a French term for "cooked mass." This "masse cuite" is then put into hogsheads with holes perforated in the bottoms through which the sugar drains, and this draining is what is commonly known as Muscovado molasses, or what has been known to the trade as "choice grocery molasses."

What has of recent years been sold as a "fancy" molasses is really not molasses at all, but inverted sugar, and is obtained by the addition of a small quantity of hydro-chloric acid to the syrup in process of boiling and when it has reached a density of about 35 degrees Baume. The addition of this acid produces a chemical action called "inversion," which prevents the syrup from forming a sugar.

There is no process known to chemists which can alter the condition of the sugar after it has been inverted, or bring it back to what it would ordinarily have been—"sucrose," or sugar.

THE WILD LIQUORICE PLANT.

The liquorice plant grows wild in many parts of Turkey in Asia and Asia Minor. The Mesopotamian liquorice trade is greatly increasing and is becoming more lucrative.

The greatest height attained by the wild liquorice plant is ten feet, but the average is about four or five feet. The branches are much esteemed as firewood at Bagdad and other places. They are remarkable for keeping dry during humid weather. In the northern parts of Asia Minor, liquorice grows wild in great profusion and excellence, and there can be no doubt that if the trade was taken up with energy, as it should be, there might be an increasing and profitable trade.

The soil in that part of the world is especially suitable to the liquorice plant. At the present time there are about 5,000 Arabs who earn their living by digging up the liquorice roots and carrying them to the huts where they are dried.

At Basrah there are large factories where the roots are prepared by hydraulic power and then exported to Europe or America.

IDEAS FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS

STICK EVERLASTINGLY AT IT.

Lord Roberts, in a recent speech, declared that one of the best qualities that a person—man or woman—could have was that of "sticking to" whatever they took in hand. I find it a quality that is considerably lacking. Whether we are growing worse or not in the "sticking" property I do not know, but the majority of people are peculiarly deficient in adhesiveness. I have a young woman friend who has during the last two years studied in turn to be a nurse, a sanitary inspector, a governess, and a dressmaker. She is still undecided, and is still as unqualified for any one of the occupations as she is for others. My male acquaintances have many of them hovered between learning something of a dozen occupations. They have tried each just enough to get disgusted with it and to imagine that something else must be much better.

I receive numerous letters from correspondents who are manifestly immensely wearied of even "sticking" to the United States. They would like to try Canada, Japan, South Africa—anywhere. They seem perfectly incredulous when it is pointed out to them that the particular occupations they are engaged in are such as offer starvation prospects in those parts of the world. Anything for a change. Some of the writers admit to having already tried one or two continents. Can I suggest anywhere where there are good prospects for them? They are perfectly willing to change their calling, if necessary, to adapt themselves to the place.

Distracted by Success Stories.

This kind of people, I notice, have a knack of inclosing cuttings from newspapers, recording the wonderful success of some one in the occupation they are thinking of adopting.

"You will see by the inclosed cutting," writes a young woman, who states that she is a waitress in a tea shop, "what money some actresses make. Mrs. Brown Potter, it appears, has made $20,000 a year. Do not think I am foolish enough to imagine I could earn that, but there must be many much lower but still substantial salaries, when the heads are paid like that. What do you think of the stage as a profession for girls?"

A big publisher told me that the appearance in a newspaper of the huge sums made by Marie Corelli, Miss Braddon, and other authors, inundated him with letters, the writers of which wished to know what they might expect to receive if they wrote a novel. The statement that Rufus Isaacs, the great K.C., received a fee of a thousand guineas with his brief in a certain case, and a wonderful "refresher" each day that the trial lasted, made so many people write to the editor of a legal weekly as to what they might expect to earn if they became barristers, that for three weeks he ran a standing announcement:

"To correspondents wishing to know what is the average income of a barrister: The average income of most barristers from the pursuit of their calling is nothing a year."

Fever for Change Ruinous.

The report of some person doing better than ourselves causes us to prick up our ears in a marvelous fashion. It has just the same kind of effect as the stories of enormous treasure to be found on the Spanish main had in inducing young fellows to go to sea in the olden times, or the romances of the gold discoveries in various parts of the world have in our days. The imagined discovery that there are better things to be done than they are doing is positive distraction to thousands.

This restlessness and fever of change is not confined merely to occupation. The head of a big students' commercial college was deploring to me the other day the varying moods of the scholars.

"For a month they go in for German; then something hurls them off to French. They have no sooner got over the novelty of that than they have discovered that to get on in life they need something quite different," he groaned.

"Usually, having learned nothing to the point of its being useful, they declare that nothing is of any good. These are the students who say that, having acquired modern languages and a dozen other qualifications, they found them perfectly useless."

These people are to be found in thousands. They have not the gift of "sticking to it." More or less, we most of us lack this gift, and to the lack of it is to be ascribed an enormous amount of failure in life. It is a perfectly true saying that "It's dogged as does it!"

"I have known more people succeed through what we might almost call sheer obstinacy—grim tenacity of purpose—than through any other quality," said Carnegie.

Stick to it for Years.

Just think how some people "stick to" things. It took Edison seven years of work—seven years of battling with constant and inexplicable failure—before he perfected one invention. "And now it seems so simple," he says. Mr. Thomas, the sculptor, worked ten hours a day for three years on the wonderful statue of "Lycidas," which all London has lately been going to see.

"Even in learning how to ride a bicycle," remarked Archbishop Benson, "people will pass through three stages. First, the enthusiastic stage, when they expect to get on and ride like the wind. Secondly, the disgusted stage, when they are sure they will never ride at all. Thirdly, the triumphant stage, when it is done!"

The three stages apply to most things people take up.

"You resolve to do a certain thing," said Prof. Blackie, "because it offers you certain advantages. It is the advantages you think of, and not the doing of the thing. That's a mistake, when carried too far, and it is carried too far when you are in such a hurry to grasp the advantages that doing the thing becomes too tedious for you!"

Rush of Work Don't Pay.

There was a case some time ago where a painter had been commissioned by a millionaire to paint his portrait. In order that the picture should be an exceptionally good one, he offered to pay a remarkably big price for it. The portrait was so bad that the millionaire refused to take it. The fact was that the artist was in such a hurry to get that unusual sum of money that his greed would not allow him to take his time over it. He "rushed" the work and failed.

It is the desire for the success we want which makes us often too impatient to gain it. Moltke said that in war the greatest fault of many generals was eagerness to do things too fast. Just remember how the Japanese sat down round Port Arthur and waited—waited till the time was ripe.

Staying Power Only Counts.

When I see young fellows immensely enthusiastic over some new study they have taken up to better their position, I wonder what, in the words of Lord Rosebery, their "staying power" will prove. All persons concerned with horses know that in a race it is not the horse that is most impatient and dashing at the start that holds its own. Human enthusiasts in that way, too, are apt to prove disappointing performers. They picture triumphs that do not arrive, and even moderate success appears a failure so ghastly as to damp all their energy.

"Progress in life wants taking coolly," said Lord Beaconsfield. "Attaining success is often something like catching a train. You will see one man walking at a good pace that he can keep up till he gets there. Another runs till he cannot progress at all. Vast numbers of people are always getting pumped out!"

It was a shrewd observation. "Spurts" in life are of little good, though we are apt to believe that other people do a great deal with them. They seem to us to get what they want so easily.

Reap Rewards in Few Days.

Whistler, the artist, once was asked how long it took him to paint a certain picture, for which he had received some thousands of dollars. He replied that he had painted it in about five days.

"Do you charge that huge sum for only five days' work " asked his examiner.

"And for the thirty years or so of labor in learning how to paint such a picture," he answered.

There is nothing more delusive than the ease which people have acquired by prodigious labor of which one sees nothing.

In a case in the courts the other day a tradesman admitted that in a shop he had opened he had taken in money that brought him in a profit of close on $200 a day.

"So you just fit up your shop, take down the shutters, and open the door, and the public rush in to make your fortune," remarked the counsel examining him.

"Ah! But I had been in business forty years before," replied the witness, "and upon getting that stock together I had spent three years' hard work!"

The barrister's client had opened a shop in opposition just across the street, and could not make out why it did not answer. The trick of success seemed so easy. But having taken down his shutters and opened his door, he found the public did not patronize him.

Attacks of Mental Indigestion.

I heard one of the cleverest women of our time say that there was no work which had to be performed day by day that was not felt by the worker at times to be drudgery. It is. I have myself heard men engaged in what the public regards as rounds of perfectly ideal work complain at times bitterly of the drudgery of their lives. But they did not allow the feeling to become habitual. It was just a temporary attack of mental and moral indigestion.

The best workers are liable to these passing disturbances. The bad worker loses his head in them and tries to dodge them. That becomes drudgery, too, in time, when it has been repeated sufficiently often. Then he sits down and finds his drudgery in daily lamentation and protestation that nothing is any good.

The only way when one gets an attack of this kind is to set this truth and "stick to it," and politely but firmly ignore all invitations to "go in for something else" with "no drudgery attached to it."

NEVER REST CONTENT.

(By Arthur Brisbane.)

In life to-day there is altogether too much content. It has many less pleasant names, such as self-satisfaction, complacency, even vanity—for vanity is only an aggravated form of self-content. It is a clog to progress, an obstacle to success, something that every man must conquer if he is going to help himself, and incidentally be of service to others.

We know that a great many moralists and teachers assert owlishly that content is the only thing worth having, and that the spirit of unrest and worry which we see everywhere about us fills early graves and recruits sanitariums and asylums. But had man always been content with his lot, had not a longing for something better been divinely planted in his soul, we should still be eating raw flesh and living in caves.

Seen from the Start.

The boy who goes into the world to earn his living learns very soon that it is impossible to be contented and successful at the same time. If he is satisfied with the way things have been done before him, satisfied with the little beginner's wages that are paid him, he stays a beginner all his life. He never gets more pay because he is never worth more, he is never given better work to do because he is satisfied to know nothing besides the task that is set him.

Happily there is a little discontent in most men—in the greatest men discontent is the chief characteristic. Stephenson, not content with traveling in a slow coach, went to work to invent a better means of locomotion, and the steam railway was the result. The men who came after him were not satisfied with what Stephenson had done.

Where the Public Benefits.

And still the discontent with present railroad methods is working constantly to make trains safer, to force the men who own the railroads—who are very well content with things as they are—to do still more for the people who travel, and sacrifice some of their profits to the public good.

Every political movement that has given people more freedom has been the result of discontent. The rulers have always been satisfied. But every year or two the discontent of the people has been organized and progress toward better things has gone steadily on.

What is true of the whole people is true of single men and women. The dissatisfied, restless man, neither content with himself nor his surroundings, struggles with difficulties through his whole life for the sake of improvement.

To Be Independent.

Not pleased with himself, he tries to learn more, to do more, to add to his earning capacity, that he may some day be independent of the poverty that is sure to be the lot of the man who boasts that all his days are spent in serene content.

For the man of high principles there can be no content in his life. If his own affairs are in good condition, if he prospers beyond his dreams, and has put his family beyond the reach of want, he can see on every hand conditions that he must do his best to improve before he has any right to be satisfied.

Plenty To Be Done.

You cannot leave your house without seeing something that ought not to be. A child who cannot be educated because there is no seat for it in school, a horse that is beaten because it is not strong enough to do its work, a gray-haired old woman, forced to scrub floors to earn food for the children of the children she has borne.

Do such things fill you with content?

Be sure that if you are contented now, you will not be contented by-and-by.

Every day of content now will cost you long weeks of discontent when you are no longer able to do the things you ought to do, and the peace of mind that you hope for in old age will be in exact proportion to your present discontent, and to what you do at its promptings towards making the world better for yourself, your family, and for all those less fortunate than you.—New York American.

BUSINESS MANAGEMENT

By Howard R. Wellington.

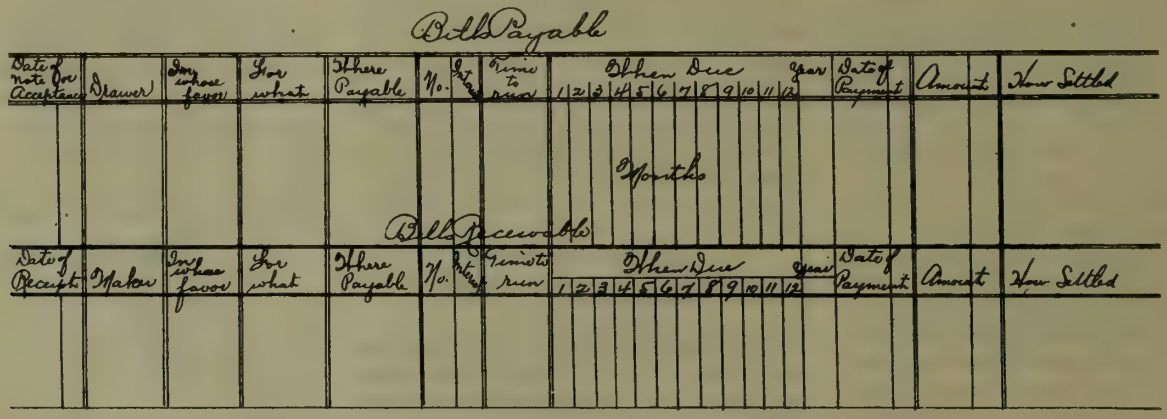
RETAIL MERCHANT'S ACCOUNTS AND RECORDS.

It might be well to introduce here the different books to be used in recording the transactions of a comparatively small business—the journal, cash book, ledger (as shown in last issue), and, if found necessary, the bill book. The various methods of recording sales will be taken up in a later issue.

The Journal.

This book, sometimes termed "the day book," is abandoned by the majority now-a-days so far as recording daily transactions of cash or sales, etc., is concerned, the cash book and sales records being used for posting direct to the ledger. However, when opening a set of books the journal is used, or in making entries which, by their nature could not properly be made through the other mediums, the journal is a necessity. Entries adjusting differences in accounts, writing off bad debts, closing entries, etc., should all be made through the medium of the journal.



The Ledger.

The ledger is used for the final summing up of all business transactions, where all information as to balances at the debit or credit of accounts may be ascertained.

Debit.

When there is a balance at the debit of an account it must be one of two things—an asset to the business or a loss. Anything of value to the business, such as real estate, cash on hand, merchandise on hand, accounts owing to the dealer, is an asset. Any other balance at the debit of an account must be in the nature of an expense, and is therefore a loss. Debit what is received.

Credit.

When there is a balance at the credit of an account it must be either a liability or a gain. If the balance represents a personal account owed by the dealer, or an acceptance made by him, it is a liability; if other than an amount owed it must be a gain. Credit what is given.

In a retail business it is very desirable to have, in addition to the date of sale and the amount, a full description of the goods in the ledger, in order that these particulars may be readily obtained for customers when rendering statements. As this method necessitates writing the various lines sold three times—first when the salesman takes the order, secondly when the lines are posted in the ledger, and thirdly when the monthly statement is sent out—systems have been devised whereby one additonal writing only will be necessary by using a loose-leaf ledger with a monthly invoice or statement form in duplicate inserted opposite each ledger account. The lines sold are entered from the original sales slip to this invoice form, and the total of each sale posted to the ledger opposite. The original is sent to the customer as a statement and invoice combined, and the duplicate remains for reference in the ledger. (Illustrations will appear in a subsequent issue.)

The Bill Book.

In a business where accounts are settled by note mostly, it would be advisable to have a bills receivable and bills payable account in a separate book ruled specially for that purpose, the bills receivable in one end of the book and the bills payable in the other.

At the end of a period the total of bills payable book may be posted to the credit of a bills payable account in ledger, and the total of bills receivable posted to the debit of bills receivable account in the ledger, if desired, or the amounts taken from the bill book itself for the trial balance.

This form combines the cash and bank accounts. When cash is received from a customer, he is credited with the amount received, the cash being entered in "cash receipts" column, and cash discount (if any) is entered in column headed "cash discount." When a deposit is made in the bank the amount is entered in the "bank deposit" column on the debit side, and in the "cash paid" column on the credit side. When cash is paid out the creditor or expense account is charged, the amount being entered in the "cash paid" column or "expense" column, as the case may be, the total of the latter column being posted to the ledger at the end of each month instead of posting each entry separately. When a cheque is made on the bank, or a bill accepted payable at the bank, the amount is entered in the "bank cheques" column. At the end of the month the amount on hand and in the bank may be readily ascertained by adding the cash and bank columns on the receipt side and deducting the total of the cash and bank columns on the payment side.

THE ADVANTAGE OF SYSTEM IN BUSINESS.

Systems in business have been used from time immemorial as aids to right progression. Joseph, of old, averted a famine through a system of storing grain, and since his time every one has acknowledged that where any sort of work can be reduced to a system it is all the better for it to be so. It is not always a fact that systems are admired. The young head is much more inclined to advance in business by enthusiasm and personal effort. As he gets older he perceives that some things, at any rate, are best tackled by system, and from that point he gradually comes to include more and more in the system category.

Extremes to be Avoided.

It is to be feared that this admittance has its reverse side; older heads sometimes come, by sheer habit, to include everything in system methods, to the exclusion of individual enterprise and new ideas. It is unfortunate when this is so, because it generally means that activity is deadened until some change is made in the personality. On the whole, however, more danger results from neglect of system than from its over-adoption, and if a warning is needed at all it is to the effect that a famine in success may be averted by a judicious dependence upon system. Systems are, however, treacherous things, almost as treacherous as figures themselves. A system sometimes begins to percolate on a man's ideas until he no longer recognizes anything out of the usual groove, and he becomes an automaton in his methods. However much it may benefit his bookkeeping and his stocktaking, no amount of argument will make it plain that such an effect is an advantage for his business success. The individual who is proprietor of a business has to remember that, at a pinch, he can obtain assistance for his systematic work, but he cannot obtain a new supply of energy and enthusiasm. These must not be allowed to rust for any system at all, otherwise the neglect may come to be dearly paid for.

Two Sides to a Business.

The most advantageous way of utilizing system without the risk of much loss of initiative power, is probably to recognize from the first that trade consists of two parts; that which can be systematized, such as bookkeeping, stocktaking, prices, and buying work, and that which can decidedly not be systematized, such as selection of neighborhood, specialty of goods, personal participation, and other features of initiative work. Within the sphere of the one, system must be supreme; any laxity of adoption quickly tells its tale in unpleasant leakages, inexplicable losses, and all sorts of errors and confusion. Within the other sphere, inventiveness must be supreme, and any attempt to supplant it by automatic aggrandizement and bulk increase ends in confusion.

To take an example, a turnover, provided it is of a healthy nature at all, will of itself increase from month to month according to the expansion of the needs; but it is a very unambitious method of courting success, by waiting for it to come to your very doors. The probability is your neighbor will not — which means a confession of comparative failure. On the other hand, to neglect in any way the systematic checking and utilization of the figurative part of the business is obviously to court danger. It is safer for an individual to be too systematic rather than unsystematic, but it should be recognized that to be either extreme is not necessary.

Initiation must have a place in any concern, and initiation from its very nature is not system; it is above system, it must not be trammelled by system. No one yet, it may be said, made a fortune by systematically planning to make it; the system may have secured success when it has come, and may do, moreover, the inestimable service of preventing any serious slipping back, but the real penetrative power has been the fertility of ideas and enthusiasm of enterprise.

System and Inventiveness.

Let it be believed, therefore, that system must only be used within its sphere, but that within that sphere it is supreme; and inventiveness has only to be used within its province, and likewise within that province it is supreme. Admittedly the two spheres are not easily adjusted; at one time it appears that it is all system which is required, at another that nothing but inventiveness will help matters. The point with each one is to attempt to realize the boundary between the two, and not to neglect or misuse the one at the expense of the other, and it is a point worth trying.

A SIMPLE METHOD OF FIGURING PROFITS.

A business writer has added another article to the list of those recently published on the subject of how to figure a profit in the retail business, and as a practical method of figuring he suggests the following methods:

Subtract the cost from the selling price, the difference, of course, being the profit. Divide the latter (decimally) by the selling price, and the result will be the true profit, thus: Cost, $5; selling price, $8; profit, $3, and $8 is contained in $3 .375 times, showing the profit in this instance to be 37 1-2 per cent.

Below will be found a table that may be helpful to the man in a hurry.

To make a profit of 16 2-3 per cent., add 20 per cent. to cost.

To make a profit of 20 per cent., add 25 per cent. to cost.

To make a profit of 25 per cent., add 33 1-3 per cent. to cost.

To make a profit of 33 1-3 per cent., add 50 per cent. to cost.

To make a profit of 50 per cent., add 100 per cent. to cost.

FROM CITY WAIF TO GOVERNOR.

By the resignation of John Green Brady as governor of Alaska there retires from official life a man whose career should be an inspiration to every boy. Ex-Governor Brady was a waif on the streets of New York, a product of the old Five Points of fifty years ago. The Children's Aid Society picked him up at the age of eight and sent him west, where he found a home and friends among strangers. After years of work he got through Yale and Union Theological Seminary, and following an unsuccessful attempt to found a colony of slum boys in Texas, he went as a missionary to Alaska with Dr. Sheldon Jackson nineteen years ago. His tremendous energy so impressed President McKinley that in 1897 he was appointed governor of Alaska, from which position he has just retired.

CHINA, GLASSWARE AND CROCKERY

CHINA AND GLASS AN IMPORTANT FACTOR

There can be no question of the importance of the china, glass and crockery department in the grocery store. This will apply particularly to the country store; in the larger cities, perhaps, grocers are disposed to omit this department, thinking that they can give better attention to their run of staple groceries. This is undoubtedly a grave mistake. In the mind of the housewife "crockery, etc.," is closely allied to her groceries, and she instinctively first looks to her grocery store for such goods. The grocer who passes this department by is seriously curtailing his possibilities for extended profits, whether he be in city, town or village.

A set of the new Colonial Pattern.

Manufacturers, too, are giving every opportunity for the progressive grocer in this respect. Recently in going through some of the large manufacturers' and dealers' warerooms, the Canadian Grocer noticed particularly the provision which had been made to meet this class of trade.

It would not, of course, be wise for the grocer to stock too much high priced ware, as most of his sales would run on the everyday class of stock, that which the housewife is likely to require for common family pruposes. One of the important, perhaps the most important, questions is that of the time required to show and quote to the customer as she is looking over the stock. This, however, has been met by the manufacturers, and these lines can be handled with the minimum loss of time. One of our illustrations show a complete set of glassware comprising articles of most lines of its kind likely to be in demand. These are sold in sets by the dozen, and any one of the articles can be sold for 5c. retail. This style of get-up is followed in a multiplicity of goods, so that all the grocer need do is to have a few handy tables or side shelves arranged, place the goods on show, having one table for 5c. goods and another for 10c. and so on, so that the customer will know without asking the prices of the lines shown.

This idea saves the grocer an immense amount of time, not only in assorting and pricing, but also in serving customers.

Many are the novelties gotten up in attractive form, suitable for the grocer, which he could place on his shelves. A nice line which is now on the market is a small glassware lamp in extremely attractive design, and which is gotten up for night use. An illustration is given herewith. There are also numerous other lines of special attraction to the grocer, all showing good profit, and which would add a considerable income to the grocer's takings.

COLONIAL STYLES.

The vogue of having everything possible patterned after the colonial style does not stop at houses and furniture; colonial glassware too must be had. There is nothing new about these patterns that are now becoming popular, but they are certainly restful to the eye when one sees them in comparison with tableware covered all over with divers patterns and scrolls. The colonial style does not appeal to one on account of anything startling in shape or pattern, but stands in its place the essence of propriety and the embodiment of solidity. But besides the beauty of its style there is the feature that all absence of gaudy pattern necessitates that a pure, flawless glass be used in its construction. When a water pitcher is scored all over with markings and designs, it is impossible to look through the glass and see the air bubbles and flaws that detract from the appearance of the article, and also render it more susceptible to breakage. Anything in the colonial style of tableware must be of good glass, hence its returning popularity will be doubly welcome.

A set of new design.

UNDERGLAZED WARE.

Something that will be of interest to dealers in glassware and crockery is the new underglazed ware that has but recently been put upon the Canadian market. The matter of underglazing is not new of itself, as it has been practiced for years in border and rim work, and in certain colors of floral designs, but to make the designs and patterns in any color or variety of colors, is a thing that only after years of experimenting has now been successfully accomplished.

Hitherto a floral design on any article or set, if it were composed of various colors, had to be put on after the glazing was done, as only a few colors could be found that would withstand the necessary firing without change. The objection to having the colors put on after the glazing, is that with the constant washing and handling the dishes receive the patterns are in time worn off, either wholly or in part. With the new process of underglazing this is impossible. The designs are put on by transfers in a manner known only to the makers, whereby no change of any description is brought about by the final treatment of glazing.

While in ordinary households this ware is not yet extensively introduced, the manner in which it is taken up by the large users, shows that it is a welcome innovation. Another feature that will appeal to those who use this new ware is the ease with which it can be kept clean. By its smooth finish no dust or dirt can be lodged in the designs, which is often the case when patterns are raised or exposed.

NOVELTIES AND SOUVENIRS.

Some manufacturers in Toronto are showing a striking and useful novelty in the shape of the Prism Dash Lantern, a high grade, cold blast lantern, richly enameled in blue, and fitted with the new patent prismatic globe. This feature, combined with a white enamel reflector, is said to produce 50 per cent. more light than the old style. It is warranted wind proof and is an ideal lantern for carriages, steamboats, railroads, contractors, etc., while for the motor boat enthusiast, or the summer cottager, wanting something more sylish than the ordinary cold blast lantern, it just fills the bill. Lantern conditions have been such lately that the trade will no doubt readily take this new style up.

Specially Suited for Resorts.

Speaking of summer cottagers recalls the extensive display of patterns of a superior grade of ware suited for hotel and summer resort use. These lines, when desired for family use, can now be had from stock instead of sending an import order as has heretofore been done. The designs are chaste and conventional, in blue and green, and present a nice appearance on a white table cover.

A Useful Novelty.

Another novelty in the shape of a souvenir assortment shown for immediate delivery is a line of small crystal glassware, finished partly in rich ruby color, with a gold edge, and assorted in such useful articles as goblets, wines, tumblers, mugs, etc. A name may be engraved on the ruby glass commemorative of an event, or of a summer resort, making the whole effect very pleasing. While these little souvenirs will no doubt have quite a run at 25 cents, the retail price, the old reliable hand painted opal, emerald, and crystal etched ware will still be popular this year. Every piece of this latter line is hand painted, and can also be profitably sold for 25 cents.

How It Is Done.

When one thinks of a hand painted and decorated article of any size for 25 cents the first natural inquiry is, how can it be done? A visit to the painting department of any large chinaware company is about the only way one can see that it can be, and is done with a quickness and dexterity that would make the average china painter gasp. To the observer, the artists who do this work appear to simply make a few quick passes with a brush, and the pansy, rose, or whatever it may be, is there quite lifelike. From continued practice the hand and eye become so accustomed to the work that only a touch here and a stroke there is required—no retouching or going over again—except, of course, for the gilding, which completes the work and leaves the article ready for market.

These lines are sold in sets as shown, at a uniform price for the 5-cent bargain counter.

INTAGLIO WARE.

An intaglio glassware closely resembling that made in Austria, which has been so popular with many people, is now being made in the States. The appearance of these articles is striking, and one or two pieces in an assortment of oddities, or upon a dining-room plate rack, would not fail to attract admiration.

How It Is Made.

The original Austrian ware is made by cutting the design upon the outside of the piece, and afterward painting by hand the cut out part in colors representing the fruit, flowers, etc., thus delineated. The effect of this is that the fruit seen in its actual shape and color takes on a natural appearance that cannot be obtained by mere flat painting. All kinds of fruits are faithfully represented in the intaglio-ware, some of the clusters of grapes and cherries being so natural that one would almost think he could pluck the fruit from the dish. A branch from a strawberry vine, taking berries, leaves and all, makes, with the richness in color of the red berry and the green leaf, a very striking nature picture.

Real and Imitation.

The difference between the American and the Austrian intaglio-ware is that the former is made from pressed glass with the fruit shapes and designs indented in it, while the latter has the designs cut. This difference, of course, makes the Austrian product a more valuable piece, being cut glass; but the American article is a good imitation and has its value also in a collection of odd pieces that must not be too expensive. While not catalogued, these goods are carried by the Canadian jobbers, as they have found an increasing market with those who keep in touch with the creations that are constantly appearing in table and glassware lines.

A PORCELAIN REVIEW.

The average denizen of the civilized world devotes perhaps an hour and a half or two hours a day to the pleasures of the table, so that by middle life he has spent four years or so in the contemplation of plates and dishes — observing them, handling them, and passing them about.

Unlike table linen, silverware, and other things intimately associated with the daily routine, the potter's handiwork does not reveal its real character to the inattentive observer. The peculiar shapes, colors, finish, and all the features that distinguish the various makes and qualities are apparent only to those who have taken some pains to acquire special information.

The study of ceramics is a fascinating occupation, but the very magnitude of the subject deters busy men and women from attempting it.

It is a common belief that all pottery is made of clay, but the truth is that table ware fashioned from clay alone is never beautiful nor durable—never harmonizes with the fine character of modern houses and table furnishings. Porcelain is composed in part of clay, but also of other elements which impart to it the distinguishing charasteristics of density, translucence and the clear ringing quality by which it may always be identified. Porcelain has a beautiful, white, homogeneous body, is quite impervious to water and is not affected by frost.

We may say in general that porcelain is divided into two groups, one called Pate-Tendre, the soft or artificial porcelain, and the other Pate-Dure—hard or Kaolinic porcelain.

The soft porcelain is again divided into two classes: The one, A-Fritte or Pate-Tendre Francaise is composed of sand and lime, which fuse and melt at a moderately high temperature, forming a body resembling glass, the vitrification of which is incomplete. This is the china which was made at Sevres during the reign of Louis XV. It was of a rich milky appearance, and from this delicate body were made many beautiful pieces in rich color effects, now of inestimable value.

English soft porcelain is composed of clay, sand, and phosphate of lime, the latter ingredient being prepared from calcined bones, has given the name "bone china" to this particular porcelain. It is produced in England, Germany, and in the United States.

The soft porcelains are often extremely beautiful and have perhaps but one objectionable feature. The glaze, containing lead for its basis, is soft and yielding, so that all of the so-called soft porcelains become defaced in ordinary use by scratching and cutting with the knife.

Hard porcelain is produced by a much more difficult and scientific mixture of elements. The principal of these is Kaolin, a white, plastic, infusible clay. The other component parts are feldspar, a white mineral fusible only at high temperature, and quartz or flint which by itself is neither plastic nor fusible. When perfectly compounded, the hard porcelain is covered with a brilliant vitrified glaze of quartz and feldspar, so hard that a diamond will scarcely cut it; and it can never be marred or cut in ordinary use.

The famous Sevres china, formerly a soft porcelain, is now made by this process. Chinese porcelain, examples of which have been purchased at fabulous prices by collectors and museums, also belongs to this group.

The Commercial Traveler—Grave Yet Gay

A MAN OF MANY PARTS

THE MAKING OF A GOOD TRAVELER.

The salesman was born at the birth of trade, and ever since their dual creation he has been in increasing evidence.

Selling has become an art. Its practice is universal. It is one of the two fundamental elements of business. It may be said with absolute truth that there is not a wholesale, or a retail, or a manufacturing house of any kind without a greater or less number of selling representatives. The tradesman may know what he wants, and he doubtless is aware that he cannot do the maximum of business without the proper goods, and yet for some reason which has not yet been explained, the chances are that he will seldom order these goods by mail, or go after them, but will wait until some traveling salesman has called upon him and solicited his trade.

Foundation Stone of Commerce.

It would appear to be an unnatural condition of trade that makes it necessary for the buyer to be told what he should buy; but whether it be unnatural or not, it remains a fact. The selling of practically everything, except a part of that which is sold over the counter, is the direct result of solicitation, or of what is known as drumming; and this occupation of solicitor or drummer is one of the foundation stones of commercialism.

Ability to Sell, Paramount.

Probably seventy-five per cent. of the successful merchants and storekeepers began as salesmen, and nearly every prominent wholesaler was at one time a traveler. It is certainly common sense to assume that no man can successfully direct the movements of others unless he has actually done what his employes are called upon to do. True, a man may be expert at selling, and not make a good manager of salesmen or a good merchant, for some men's selling ability needs the direction of a broader and greater mind. It is also true that some salesmanagers have little actual selling capacity, and cannot successfully meet a customer.

Business, commonly speaking, consists of two parts, buying and selling; and the profit of business is in the ability to sell for more than cost, over and above the expense of selling.

The store salesman is confined to narrow limits, and unless he possesses aggressive or other exceptional ability he stands little chance of rising above the position of head of his department. The traveling salesman has a much better opportunity for advancement. His work is more difficult and requires closer attention and greater energy. If he makes a success of it, he is likely to be recognized and to be promoted. If he is particularly successful, and has built up a large clientele, it occasionally happens that he is given an opportunity to enter the firm, or he may form a business partnership with other salesmen of his capacity. As substantially all merchants and storekeepers were at one time salesmen, we must draw the conclusion that the selling department of business offers the greatest opportunities for advancement to the boy who wishes to enter a business life.

"Is That So?"

Traveling Brings Out Character.

The traveling salesman is without a home; he lives on trains and in sleepers and at hotels. He is obliged to put up with every kind of accommodation, and is exposed to sickness and to accident. Every form of temptation is presented. But there is temptation everywhere, and the boy of well-formed character, who is conscientious and faithful, can safely take to the road. Traveling may facilitate the distribution of the bad, but the bad is sure to come out, whether one remains at home or travels. The boy of loose habits, who has little stability, who is easily influenced, and who cannot be trusted, will immediately yield to temptation, and will sacrifice his morals and undermine his health. But if this boy is so weak in character that the road will ruin him, is it not logical to assume that he might just as well be ruined rapidly on the road as to stay at home and undergo a similar but slower process?

Arduous Life.

While it is true that not one salesman in a dozen amounts to anything, that is to say, rises above the lower grade of ordinary success, the same is true of almost any other trade, business or profession; for most of us are ordinary mortals, and few of us can hope to become extraordinary. Many a boy longs to become a salesman, in order that he may travel and see the world. He looks forward to the excitement and the novelty of continuous journeying. All this wears off, and very quickly, and the necessity of continually visiting the same towns soon dispels the novelty, and the boy finds that the weariness of the road is far more disagreeable than the monotony of the home-store. Selling on the road is hard work, traveling is tiresome, and a continuous hotel life is not conducive to pleasure.

Good Salesman Always Good Talker.

While a good talker does not necessarily mean a good salesman, the good salesman is almost always a good talker. Either he talks much and well or else he talks less and very well. There are some salesmen who have little to say, and who seem to possess the ability of saying much in little. But comparatively all successful salesmen are fluent talkers; in other words, they know how to represent that which they have to sell. They know how to represent the good points of their goods, so that the buyer will want to buy; and, further, they possess the power of persuasion, that power which enables them to make the buyer feel as they feel, and want to do as they want him to do. This is not mesmeric power or anything supernatural. It is simply a natural ability, born of nature and developed by experience.

Must Understand Human Nature.

The successful salesman must understand human nature. He must know how to approach a customer. He must anticipate his customer's wants, and he must be genial, meeting people easily, and he himself easy to approach. The crabbed boy, the conservative boy, the boy who is not popular with his fellows, is not likely to make a good salesman.

Well Read and Up-to-Date.

The salesman, above all, should be well posted on the common topics of the day and be able to converse intelligently upon popular subjects. A reasonable amount of talk, or general talk, is necessary for the consummation of trade, and all this talk cannot be directed to the goods themselves. A vast amount of it is of general and social import. To successfully carry on an animated and interesting conversation, a salesman must be a well-informed man, his knowledge encompassing men and things in general.

JUST AN INCIDENT.

By J. G. L.

An incident which impressed itself very strongly upon me, occurred some two or three years ago, when I was, for the first time, working the —— line of the C.P.R. On jumping off the train at B——, I found two other grip-carriers wending their way to the delapidated 'bus. We drove up and down hill for over half a mile before reaching the village hotel, and so had that opportunity for warming up to each other, which is never allowed to pass by the out-and-out drummer. In response to the regular inquiries: "What's your line?" and "Where do you go from here?" it developed that one of my companions was selling blacksmiths' supplies, and the other, wagons, while both were to touch at the same towns as I all along the line. That established a kind of fellowship among us, and we just gravitated together during the remainder of the week.

The wagon man confided that this particular district was one of the most ticklish his firm had to deal with, and he was already quaking in anticipation of meeting the worst crank of all in the town of M——, which we were due to reach on Thursday. On Tuesday and Wednesday, although he was making good sales, the thought of this supreme trial still faced him, and his talk was full of references to it.

When Thursday came, we drove over unutterable roads, from F—— to M—— and it was an inspiring sight to see my friend throw out his chest, curl his ample moustache, and pick up his catalogue case, as he sallied forth to beard the lion.

I didn't see him at the supper table, but the horseshoe man told me he was busy with his customer. As time went by and no sign of him appeared, I was beginning to fear that he would be kept over until the next day, for I already understood him well enough to know that he would fight it out to a finish.

Finally, the 'bus backed up to the door and a stentorian voice yelled "All Aboard." Half a dozen drummers hurriedly snatched their grips and sample cases, myself among the number. We began filing through the "rotunda," which, as usual was lined with deadheads and hangers-on. But, just as I reached the door, I looked back towards the stairway, and involuntarily nudged the horseshoe man in the ribs. Down the iron-clad staircase from the sitting rooms, shuffled a meek looking individual, carrying a catalogue case in one hand, and a traveling bag in the other. Behind him, in all the glory of his fur lined coat, curly moustache, and ten cent cigar, came my friend the wagon salesman, his shoulders triumphantly erect. This meek looking individual was his customer.

That tableau told the whole story. I needed not the stage whisper that greeted me as soon as the 'bus door slammed shut: "Full carload for Spring, f.o.b. factory."

IN DESPERATION.

An enterprising salesman from one of the largest cities went to a certain rural community and endeavored to sell an incubator to a farmer. His arguments did not make any impressions on the agriculturist. Finally, as a clincher in favor of his up-to-date improvement, he exclaimed:

"Look at the time it will save!"

The farmer squirted a mouthful of tobacco juice on the ground before replying, and then said with provoking calmness:

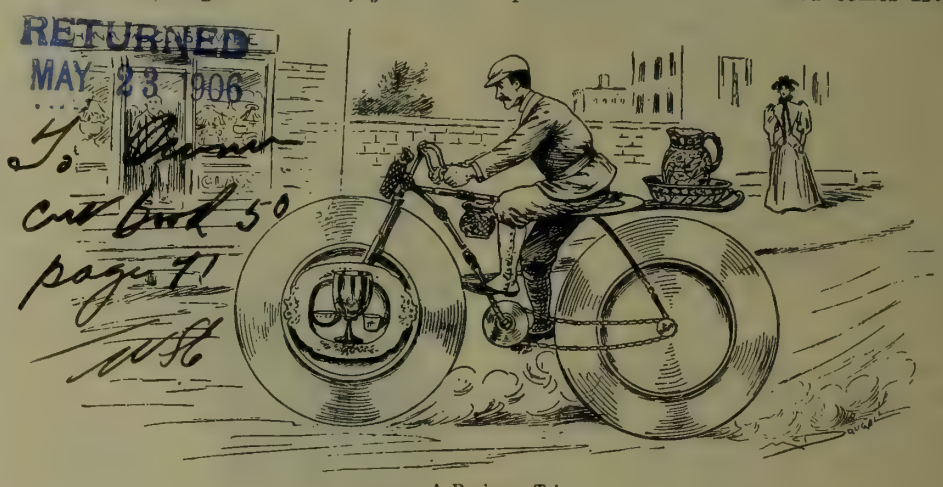
"Oh, what's time to a settin' hen?"

THE TRAVELER'S LAMENT.

"Would I like to live my life over?" said the sober-faced man. "No, sir; it's bad enough to think it over."

A CHANGE OF VENUE.

A new variation of about the oldest predicament in the world comes from Salem, in the distant State of Washington. A couple put up at one of the best hotels at Salem after a grand public ball. About three a.m. the husband awoke with the frantic pangs that might be expected to follow a grand public ball in Salem (Wash.). His wife, much alarmed, rushed downstairs on the jump into the dining room, seized a mustard cruet, and emptied the contents into her handkerchief. Flying upstairs, she entered the first door she came to. A man was lying on the bed, and with feminine deftness she applied the poultice just where it would do the most good. The man let out a howl, and yelled, "Woman, what in —— are you doing?" There was a shriek, a patter of bare feet on the hall floor, and, frightened half to death, the poor wife found her room and suffering husband. She told him her troubles, and it tickled him so much that his pangs took an instant change of venue.



A Business Trip.

THE PROGRESS OF THE GREAT WEST

IMMIGRATION AND ITS EFFECT ON CANADIAN TRADE

An examination and analysis of the official immigration returns convinces the inquirer, as nothing else can convince him, of the immense proportions of the world-wide movement of population towards western Canada and the great advances that have been made in the last ten years. It is even more convincing than to see with one's own eyes the flow of incoming population from the east through Winnipeg and from the south through Moose Jaw, for the new arrivals are soon lost to sight in the insatiable western prairies which seem to be able to absorb and support all the people who come to them in a hundred years. The newcomers are soon lost to sight and they seldom come back.

A writer in the Montreal Herald has caught the spirit of the spectacle and he gives it picturesque expression in the following:

"What strikes one as the most notable, and in many ways the most satisfactory, point about this huge immigration business is that all those thousands of people who now almost daily pass through on the way to the West seem never to be heard of again. Where they go, what they do, how they live, what becomes of them in any one way or another, we never have to ask. They go, the West swallows them, they do not come back asking help. What could be more satisfactory?"

It is just because these incoming thousands are so quickly lost to view that a study of the actual immigration returns is more convincing even than the sight of the incoming home-seekers. Reports have recently been issued by the Dominion Government giving the immigration returns up to June 30th, 1905, the close of the last fiscal year. The summary showing in comparative tables the steady increase in immigration during the last ten years is particularly interesting and instructive.

Total immigration	130,331	146,266	15,935

These figures are impressive as showing the rapid growth of the world-wide movement Canadawards, and they account for the marvelous development of the Canadian West in recent years; for it must be remembered that, almost without exception, these incoming settlers find their way to the new country west of the Great Lakes. Every able-bodied man who is not afraid of work is pretty sure to succeed and is given a hearty welcome, because it is recognized that it is immigration that "makes the great Northwest." The following doggerel verse sung to the tune of "Mr. Dooley" expresses the prevailing sentiment on the subject:

" 'Tis immigration, 'tis immigration,
America and England send their best.
'Tis immigration, 'tis immigration,
It's immigration makes the great Northwest."

But while the incoming thousands are, as was said above, lost in the great Northwest in one sense, in another and more important respect they are not lost. The result of their coming is seen in the development of the country, in the increased production of wheat and in the rapid and substantial building up of the western towns that supply the increasing population with goods. Canadian business men have not been slow to appreciate the lesson of the immigration returns and the trend of population westward. They have devoted increasing attention to the western Canada market, have established their branch houses in Winnipeg and have reaped the reward of doubled and trebled sales.

The Lesson.

But the immigration figures have a particular meaning for British and American manufacturers if they will but stop to consider. In the last fiscal year two-thirds of the Canadian immigrants were from Great Britain and the United States, the majority of these hailing from the motherland. These people come to Canada with well settled tastes and preferences for the particular brands and classes of goods to which they have been accustomed in their own countries all their lives. Naturally they are most apt to continue to buy these lines of goods if they can get them in Canadian stores, but if they are not able to buy these particular brands when they ask for them the probabilities are that their consumption will be permanently diverted to the lines which they find in their nearest stores. The British and American manufacturers have their opportunity to hold these customers who are leaving their own countries and, through them, to extend their trade in Canada in many lines that are not now sold here. Are they alive to their opportunity? If they do not hold these customers when they come to Canada they will be lost in the course of a year or two. The Canadian West affords a constituency already favorable to British and American manufactures, because the people have long been accustomed to using the very lines of goods which it is proposed should be offered them. To sell in the Canadian market is therefore not the same formidable undertaking for a British or American manufacturer as it would be to introduce his goods in a country where they are not already known. Yet, strange to say, many of these manufacturers are devoting their attention to countries where the English language is not spoken and where their goods have to be introduced, to the almost absolute neglect of the promising Canadian market where their goods are already favorably known among a considerable portion of the population. Surely it would be the part of wisdom to follow the line of the least resistance.

Increased Purchasing Power.

Moreover, it should not be forgotten that the purchasing power of these new settlers is, after the lapse of one or two years, very much greater than it ever was, or ever could be, in the countries from which they came. The immigrant, if he is wise, takes up land which he can secure free in some parts of the West from the Government by the performance of homestead duties or which he can buy from a land company. In the latter case it is a very ordinary thing for the new settler to pay for his land with his first crop. If one crop is not sufficient, the second will pay the balance and leave a surplus. Under these conditions the immigrant is almost immediately in independent financial circumstances -and his purchasing power is many times what it was before he left his own country to come to the "Last West." He is therefore a much more valuable customer in Canada than he was in his own country.

The Way to This Market.

How can this market be reached? In one way only, and that is through representation in Canada assisted by judicious and persistent use of printers' ink. It is impossible to handle the trade unless the manufacturer has representation on the spot. There are many reputable manufacturers' agents selling either to the wholesale trade exclusively or to the retail trade, and at any of the offices of the Canadian Grocer information will be given gladly as to the standing of these agents.

Carry Stock in Winnipeg.

If possible a stock should be carried in Canada, and if it is the western field to which attention is to be devoted that stock should be carried in Winnipeg. The eastern Canada firms doing the largest business in western Canada are those carrying a stock in Winnipeg.

Traveler's Story.

In this connection an actual occurrence told the writer by a commercial traveler is very much to the point. The traveler represented an eastern Canada hardware firm and he had just completed his first trip through the western provinces. He had met with fair success, but he was very anxious to have a stock in Winnipeg from which to fill his orders.

In a prosperous little town in Saskatchewan he called on a hardware dealer and introduced himself. The dealer knew of the firm from their advertisements in the trade paper, and was willing to give a trial order. The traveler went over his list from his catalogue and he noticed that as he read over the items the merchant was busy writing on a pad of paper. Thinking that the merchant was making a copy of his order the traveler explained to him that he was making a copy in triplicate and that one of the copies would be left in the store.

"Oh! that's all right," was the reply. "Go on with your list."

When the list was completed, the merchant remarked:

"I haven't given you a very large order, have I?"

"No, nothing to write home about," was the reply.

"Well, here is a larger order of goods that I must have at once and that I shall send to —— —— & Co., of Winnipeg. Your goods can't be here for three weeks or a month and I need these articles at once. This may help teach your firm to carry a stock in the West."

While the traveler had been calling out his list he had reminded his customer of goods wanted immediately, and he sold more for a rival Winnipeg firm than he sold for his own house.

FRUIT PROSPECTS IN B.C.

The possibilities of British Columbia as a fruit growing country have been known for a number of years, but it is only during the last few years that those outside of that province have begun to fully realize what progress has been made in fruit growing in the West.

In 1898 the great orchard at Vernon, belonging to Lord Aberdeen, along with other orchards only a few years old, commenced to bear fruit. When reports of these crops, which for the age of the trees were considered phenomenal, reached fruit growers in other portions of Canada, there was a disposition to doubt their authenticity, and it was only when the actual fruit was exhibited in the east that the possibilities of British Columbia as a fruit growing country were recognized.

The opening up of western mining industries, and the settlement of the prairies in the Northwest gave a stimulus to fruit growing that is largely responsible for the development which is now taking place in that branch of husbandry. The value of this industry can hardly be estimated as yet, but when one considers the reports of such men as Prof. Van. Deman, one of the foremost fruit experts on the continent; Prof. Lake, of Oregon, and Chief Fruit Inspector McNeil, Ottawa, who have classed British Columbia fruit as among the finest grown anywhere, the conclusion must be that there were no exaggerations in the earlier reports. To this must be added evidence in the form of gold medals given in London, Eng., for British Columbia fruit, in competition with fruits from all other British colonies.

During the last two years more than a million apple trees have been planted in British Columbia, and the indications are that a still larger number will be planted in 1906 and 1907. The total yield of fruit during 1904 was valued at over half a million dollars, and while the year 1905 was one of the poorest known in the production of apples, the crop was fifteen per cent. greater than that of the previous year.

The southern interior, which embraces the Boundary country, Kootenay, lower Okanagan and the Similkameen, from the results shown, would seem to be the district where the choicest fruits can be grown. Not only are apples a prolific crop here, but the smaller and more delicate fruits—peaches, plums, cherries and grapes—have been grown successfully. From Similkameen country seventy-five tons were shipped last year, including a ton of grapes and six tons of peaches.

While the climatic conditions of British Columbia are suitable both to fruit growing and from a residential point of view, the absence of insect pests and diseases in fruit would seem to make that country twice blest to the fruit grower. So far as has been recorded there have been no cases where any loss was occasioned by these causes, which is one of the best recommendations the country could have.

In the Nelson district, besides the fruit consumed at home, the shipments to outside points in 1905 were 25,000 crates of strawberries, 300 crates of currants, 300 crates of plums and similar amounts of other small fruits, the total value of which was between $60,000 and $70,000. T. Morley, secretary of the Fruit Growers' Association, estimates that in 1906 this district will ship 5,000 boxes of apples alone, with a considerable increase over last year's shipments of smaller fruits. It was this section that received the special district medal from the Royal Agricultural Society of England in an all-colonial competition.

In the country known as the Kettle River Valley, there are about 20,000 fruit trees now planted, a large number of which are at a bearing age. This district is admirably suited for apple production as well as for pears, cherries, plums and strawberries. It has an altitude of 1,700 feet above the sea level, which makes it particularly free from insects and fungous growths, that have been the bane of horticulturists in nearly all parts of America.

A BUSINESS MAN IN POLITICS

The new leader of the Liberal Party in Manitoba.

In the Manitoba Legislature the farmer and the lawyer have been the classes most numerously represented and the classes whose influence has been most felt. Hon. R. P. Roblin, the present Premier, is a farmer; his erstwhile opponent, Hon. Thos. Greenway, for many years Premier of Manitoba, is a farmer; Hon. Hugh John Macdonald, who led the Conservative party from the cold shades of Opposition to the Government benches, defeating the Greenway Government, is a successful lawyer; and Hon. C. J. Mickle, who has led the Manitoba Opposition during the last two sessions, is a member of the legal profession. The business men have scant representation in the Legislature.

Edward Brown.
Leader of Liberal Party in Manitoba.

Hon. J. T. Gordon was minister without portfolio in the Roblin Government for a short time, but he resigned because of the pressure of business. Hon. Robert Rogers might, perhaps, be classed as a business man, but, if so, he is the only man of his class in the present cabinet.

Business men, merchants, country storekeepers will be interested in the political career of Edward Brown, no matter what may be their own political opinion; and in Edward Brown they have a representative of their class of whom they have every reason to be proud.

It may be taken as axiomatic in these days when the Canadian West is at last coming into its own in the estimation of the general public, that the West offers exceptional opportunities for advancement, and to the progress of the newer Canada Mr. Brown may rightly ascribe a good part of his striking success in business; but it is not every man who succeeds as Mr. Brown has succeeded, and there are very few men who at 41 have become as wealthy as Mr. Brown and have attained to the highest gift in the bestowal of their provincial party. These results show the character and ability of the man.

Like so many others in Manitoba, Mr. Brown was born in the County of Bruce in Ontario. In truth, the two counties of Bruce and Huron were the first to people Manitoba extensively, and each has given the Manitoba Liberal party a leader. Hon. Thos. Greenway belongs to the County of Huron and Edward Brown to the County of Bruce.

In 1888 Edward Brown, in partnership with his brothers, was managing a general store in Paisley, Ont., but, fortunately for them, the Brown brothers caught the Western fever and moved West, finally locating in Portage la Prairie, where they bought the business of Geo. Craig & Co., the same firm who own a dry goods store in Winnipeg at the present time. The three Brown brothers made a strong business combination, and although unqualified success did not come to them immediately, they were sure to win out eventually. As the years went by each developed his own particular talents. Edward Brown became the financial head of the firm. James Brown devoted particular attention to the management of the retail store, and, as the interests of the firm were varied and by no means confined to the retail store business, Adam Brown took charge of the horse and live stock end of the firm's interests. But, while it was as the financier of the firm that Edward Brown made his mark and achieved his most conspicuous successes, he nevertheless kept in very close touch with the management of the retail business, and he recently assured the writer that he had always been a close reader of at least two of the MacLean trade newspapers—the Canadian Grocer and the Dry Goods Review.

From the first year of his arrival in Portage la Prairie, Edward Brown has been a conspicuous figure in the municipal life of his town, and his townsmen say that to write the municipal history of "Portage" would be to tell the story of Edward Brown's career there. For a number of years he has been mayor by acclamation, and in the municipal field he has gained the political experience which should stand him in good stead in his struggles in the wider provincial arena.

THE TEA PLANT AND TEA-LEAF

THE TEA PLANT OF JAPAN.

The accompanying print shows a section of a tea bush and also the blossom and seed pod—full size.

The tea shrub is a species of camellia bearing a single leaf blossom, and it flowers twice a year.

The print shows the mature leaves of dark color attached to the old stem and the fresh shoot with young pale leaves, which latter only are suitable for making the tea of commerce.

The favorite Tea Plant for Japan grown Teas.

The point where the young shoot joins the old wood shows where the twigs were pruned in preparation for the flush of new leaf.

The right branch shows the fresh flush ready for picking, and that at the left shows what remains of the new shoot after the picking has taken place. The left branch also shows the tendril of a vine which is most troublesome to the pickers. If a leaf of this vine is picked and prepared with the tea it is quite indistinguishable until the tea is steeped for drinking, and then a single leaf is potent enough to impart the shudders to a gallon of the best tea that ever grew. Buyers should remember this and never condemn a sample on one trial.

The leaf bud at the end of the young new shoot makes the choicest tea, but the bud of the blossom is never picked for tea. The seeds have no commercial value, though a small quantity of oil can be extracted from them.

To those who are interested in tea the print with above explanation will be found interesting.

THE TWO ACTIVE PROPERTIES IN TEA.

The philosophy of steeping tea leaves in boiling water from five to seven minutes, in the preparation of tea for the table, is said to be both sound and reasonable. As it is also easily susceptible of exposition and ought to be able to be understood by the shallowest, it would seem policy to try and impress it on the general mind. Even, therefore, at the risk of repetition, we shall tell it, putting the explanation in the simplest words, so that it shall be understandable of all.

To begin with, the tea leaf has two active leading chemical principles. These are, first, theine; second, tannin.

The Two Chemical Agents.

Of these the former, theine, is a beneficent agent, and contains just those properties which do good to the human system; in fact, it is no more or less than a mild tonic.

The second principle is tannin. And it is this second principle which holds all the qualities that are injurious for human beings in tea. At the same time, even though it does contain almost all tea disqualifications, these would not affect mankind adversely unless the drink was improperly made, and the drinking of this noxious beverage was very immoderate and kept up for a very long time.

The Danger in Tannin.

The proper preparation of tea, however, eradicates all danger of tannin. This is given elsewhere, and has been published so frequently, both in this journal and in innumerable other ones, and in endless other forms, that the recipe ought to be, if it is not universally known.

Yet to be just, let us concede concerning tannin, that the tannin when taken for a long-continued period of time, in liberal quantities by an invalid or a person possessed of a weak stomach, will, in conjunction with the acids in the stomach, form another acid which will ultimately have a deleterious effect either upon the nerves or upon the digestion.

Now, then, how to counteract—to effectually estop this possible injurious result.

It will readily be seen that the tea drinker, if given the beneficent agents of theine, and if saved from the possible injurious effects of tannin, will be obtaining just the good effects which tea ought to give, and prevented from imbibing the bugaboo harm that is said to come from excessive tea drinking.

To Get Perfect Tea.

How to obtain the theine and to escape the tannin. The process is so simple that it will make the reader smile—simply follow the instructions given for preparing tea—the one and only proper recipe in general use. Why does this give us theine and exclude the tannin? Simply because the tannin does not begin to develop until the tea has been steeping for several minutes at the very least. After ten minutes of steeping it begins to generate momentarily more freely.

It is wonderful with what foresight beneficent nature guards man, if he will but heed her unmistakable warnings.

For theine, the kindly agent which is good for man, is generated freely during the first seven minutes of the boiling of the infusion. Theine gives the delicate flavor to the tea, imparts to it its delightful aroma, its whole charm.

But tannin, the maleficent property, is bitter and disagreeable to the taste. At the end of seven minutes in the water, which has been previously boiling for five minutes before it has been poured over the tea, the theine has reached the point at which its most delectable qualities are most pronounced, while tannin has not as yet become active or apparent to the taste.

For the next three minutes there is no apparent change in these conditions.

When Deterioration Begins.

At the end of ten minutes a rapid deterioration begins. The theine momentarily weakens in taste and the delightful flavor disappears. At the same time the tannin just as rapidly takes precedence, and the bitter taste second by second becomes more pronounced. In a very few minutes more the brew becomes so vile a decoction that it is not fit drink for beast, let alone man.

The way to obviate this result is simply to obey the recipe.

Follow its instructions and you will always secure a delightful, a beneficial cup of tea.

When a man tells you he doesn't need to advertise, look out for bankruptcy proceedings. He's ripe for 'em.

THE GROWING AND HARVESTING OF COFFEE.

At the Technical Institute in London, England, lectures are given from time to time on subjects of interest to the several industries it takes under its wings of instruction. The following is a report of a lecture given by Mr. Robertson, an accepted authority on "Coffee," which will be read with interest by our readers.

Mr. Robertson said he had been for thirty-three years in the coffee trade, and he was glad to be able to put that experience at their disposal, and he trusted he would be able to give them a few tips which would help them. He had been a planter and curer and a seller of coffee, so that he knew what he was talking about. He approached the subject from the point of view that they were all grocers or all in the grocery trade, and they were trying to do business, and he would do his utmost to facilitate that.

French Coffee Approved.

He found that people went to France and drank coffee and returned lauding up the French coffee, but the quality of the raw article was unlikely to be half as good as that which they had in this country, for they would find that the duty in France was eight times as much as was paid in England. Yet the experience of most travelers was that they got better coffee in France, whether it was in a small village or large hotel, or anywhere. If he were asked where in England one could get a decent cup of coffee, he could hardly say. That was a thing which ought to be altered, and he looked on those present as a little band who would go out into the world and try and get their customers to learn what coffee was and how they should make and enjoy it. If they did that they would do a great deal of good. They heard it widely stated that the curse of this country was drink, but if they got people to drink a decent cup of coffee instead of whisky and beer, the chances were that there would be less wife-beating and less ill-treatment of children.

Various Ideas of its Origin.

The origin of coffee was to a certain extent fabulous. In Abyssinia it was said that some shepherds noticed that their goats were in the habit of eating the leaves and berries of a tree, and that they afterwards became very much exhilarated. On making the experiment the shepherds found that it had very much the same effect upon themselves, and hence the discovery of coffee. He did not vouch for that story. The derivation of the word was said to be from the Turkish "qahveh," and Arabic "qahweh," which in both instances meant wine. Another derivation might be from a town in Abyssinia, which seemed to have been the first centre of the production. It appeared that it had been brought to Arabia between A.D. 1300 and 1400, but in all probability it existed there long before. It was first brought to Europe in 1573. About the same time there was a split in the Mahommedan world owing to the more orthodox objecting to the co-religionists drinking coffee. It seemed that some used to drink twenty or thirty cups of coffee to keep them awake for prayer, and the more orthodox, considering that this was an abuse of the thing, pronounced it as an intoxicant, and a split occurred in the church which lasted 200 years.

Brought West by the Turks.

Tea, coffee and cocoa were all introduced into Europe within a few years of each other, but none of the three drugs, as they were looked upon, were much noticed until between 1640 and 1660. What they did know was that the use of coffee was greatly extended after the seige of Vienna by the Turks in 1683. A large Turkish army besieged the city, but, fortunately for Christendom, the Turks were driven out by the King of Poland. The Turks were driven back so speedily that they had to abandon their camp, and when the camp was examined an enormous amount of coffee was found, and the use of it was taught the Viennese by the renegades and the prisoners. This led to its general use in Austria, and from there it spread further north. The Turkish ambassador had presented Louis XIV., at Paris, with a certain quantity of coffee, and Louis, who was a good man of business, sold some of it, and got forty crowns a pound for it. The crown at that time was worth about 11s., so that this was a fairly good price for it. From then the use of coffee grew more and more. In 1690 the then governor of Java procured some seeds from Arab traders, and some were planted in Batavia. It was at first only looked upon as an ornamental plan, which indeed it was. The governor planted some in his garden, and took the trouble to send some seedlings all the way to Amsterdam. Most of them died, but in 1718 some seedlings were sent from Amsterdam to Martinique, and from there the growth of coffee spread all over the West Indies. It would appear, therefore, that from the plant sent to Amsterdam coffee spread all over the western part of the world, the supply from which now formed two-thirds of the world's produce.

Coffee Taxed in 1670.

In 1650 coffee was introduced into England, and coffee houses were opened in London and Oxford. The first house opened in London was founded in St. Michael's alley, Cornhill, in 1662, by a Greek, who had been a servant. The use of coffee increased so much that Charles II., who was always looking about to tax something, in 1670, put such a tax on coffee as to greatly discourage the trade, and it was said that as a result no less than 3,000 coffee shops in London had to shut up.

Chicory as a Substitute.

In the Napoleonic wars the high price of coffee led to a general use of substitutes, and the chief substitute used was chicory. There was a very high duty on coffee, and for many years there was no import duty on chicory. These legislative discouragements were really the cause of the depraved taste for chicory, for why a man should care to take chicory into his stomach he could not otherwise understand. His theory why people liked chicory now as a substitute was that the bulk of the cheap coffees they got years ago were from Rio, and it had a peculiar aroma and flavor which they called a straw flavor. It was quite distinctive from any other coffee flavor, and people having once got accustomed to it liked it. He knew a man who wanted this Rio coffee and he supplied him, the coffee costing something about 40s. When the man sent for some more coffee he could not get the same blend, but at a loss to himself he sent some Ceylon at 95s., and as the result he got the shipment back with a letter, "If you can't send me what I want don't send me this rubbish." The peculiar flavor of Rio coffee was akin to the flavor of chicory, and people having in the middle of last century got used to this flavor, found it also in chicory, and told their children of it, and he supposed it would take some generations to get rid of the taste.

The Coffee Plantation.

Mr. Robertson proceeded to describe the coffee plant by means of illustrations. He said that he had had eight years' planting and curing of coffee in Ceylon and South India where it was considered that the best class of coffee was grown. The coffee seed had great vitality and grew quickly, and in two months after being placed in the ground a plant 2 in. to 4 in. high was formed, these were planted thickly in the nurseries, and in from three to four months when they were a foot high they were used to form plantations. They were grown in straight rows. It was a surface feeder, but the tap root went right down; the holes in which the young trees were planted were about one foot cube. The planting was generally done on a rainy day, and above all things what coffee wanted was heat and moisture. That was why in a temperate country coffee could not be got to grow. The coffee tree would give a small yield the second year, and in the third year it might pay for that year's expenses. In the fifth year it was in full bearing, and they began to get from 1 1-2 lbs. to 8 lbs. per tree of clean coffee. It was an exceptional tree, however, which gave 8 lbs., for that meant about 20 lbs. of berries.

Topping the Tree.

Having touched in a most interesting way on the everyday life of the planter, and on the thousand and one things he was called upon to do, Mr. Robertson said the tree would, if left alone, grow to 18 feet to 20 feet, but to prevent this they were topped, and the height of trees ranged from 2 feet to 5 feet, according to the conditions of wind, ventilation and heat.

Gathering the Berries.

The coffee tree has about 200 enemies, the principal being leaf disease, bugs, grubs and beetles. At harvest time every person on the plantation was put to work gathering the berries, and these were put in the receiving houses and afterwards sent by water to the store. Here the berries were pulped by machinery, and the inside was washed and dried. It was then sent to the coast where it was subjected to still further heat, which allowed all the husks, etc., to be got away, and the result was perfectly clean coffee.

The Common Process.

The process he had described referred to the washed coffee, which might be termed the aristocratic coffee. The ordinary or native coffees sent from Rio, Hayti, Java, Mexico, and so on, were not prepared in this way, they were dried in the cherry. They were dried at the natives, convenience, and fully two-thirds of the world's production was dried in this way, and many people said they got a certain amount of sweetness and aroma in coffee dried in that way which was not present in green coffee. Mr. Robertson, in the course of his lecture, sent round a number of samples of various coffees for inspection.

I once was called on, said the doctor, to treat "a lobster" who had all his toes cut off through trying to stop a buzz-saw with his feet.

Pardon, said the professor, but if he had been a lobster he would have proceeded to grow another set of toes!

SHERRY WINE, ITS METHODS OF MANUFACTURE.

Commercial Agent Price, of Jerez de la Frontera, makes a report on the manufacture of sherry wine in Spain, and describes its preparation for market. He writes:

"The vintage of sherry wine occurs between the 15th of September and the last of October. After the grapes are cut they are left in the sun for two or three days, being covered at night to protect them from the dew. All bad and unripe grapes are separated from the bunches, after which the good grapes are thrown into large, square, wooden troughs, when men, barelegged and wearing heavy shoes with projecting iron nails, tramp out the grapes and the liquid runs into an adjoining vat. The residue of stems, pips, and skins are put into another trough, and after adding water are crushed with a wooden press. The pulp is used for manure and feed for hogs. The liquid obtained, called 'must,' runs into another receptacle, and is of an inferior quality.

Set to Ferment.

"When the butts and barrels are filled they are put in the cellars, each barrel having a tin funnel inserted in the bunghole to permit circulation of air. These barrels must have a vacuum of at least 4 gallons to allow the wine to ferment without overflowing. After the fermenting period of about two months the clear liquid is transferred to other barrels carefully, so as not to disturb the sediment at the bottom.

"The barrels for the ultimate reception of the wine must be of white oak, perfectly clean, and smoked with sulphur to prevent dampness. The barrels are then stored and carefully classified by experts and a name given to the wine in the different butts.

Several Kinds of Wine.

"It always happens that different kinds of wine are obtained from the same grapes grown in the same vineyard and subject to the same treatment. From the same grapes come the mellow (hechos), light (finos), and bouquet (oloroso). Some of the wines are so bad that they are sold as vinegar or burned for alcohol. Alcohol of 95 degrees must be mixed with wine at the rate of 12 pints to the butt of 85 gallons for each degree of strength desired. To properly preserve wine it should have an alcoholic strength of at least 16 degrees, and as pure wine does not possess that it must be strengthened. There are some wines preserved in their natural state, but they are very few."

PROGRESSIVE RETAILING

THE EVIL OF OVER-BUYING.

It is strange how some retail merchants get the impression that when they place a large order for goods they are performing a master stroke of business and are building up for themselves the prestige of being heavy buyers, which can be secured in no other way. It wouldn't be very difficult to find retailers who have been forced out of business through their desire to carry a large stock, much out of proportion to the needs of their community. Over-buying has probably driven as many retailers to the wall as any other one failing.

The time is past when a merchant is compelled to buy enough goods to last several months; for with the railroad facilities that exist at present it is possible to replenish stocks upon such short notice that with the exception of a very few cases a dealer can get almost anything he needs in a very few days from the time the order is placed. Treating with this subject of over-buying a cotemporary says:

"Don't be a warehouse. Run a store, if you are in the mercantile business. Don't load yourself up with a lot of things you can not sell for a year or two. Don't fill your stock rooms with goods on which you will have to pay eight per cent. interest on overdue accounts.

Redouble Your Energy.

"You are running a store to sell goods, not to house them for the manufacturer and pay interest at the same time. There may be some advantage to a big concern in buying goods in large quantity, but to the ordinary merchant it's different. The grocer in the city can perhaps make a neat speculation at times by buying in carload lots, and storing his goods. But as a general thing the dealer who buys in carload lots does so with the intention of pushing the goods out of his store with redoubled energy. He doesn't buy simply for the sake of having a lot of stuff on hand.

Buying a Great Science.

"It is better for the average merchant to buy just enough goods to carry him until he can get another shipment. 'Buying is a great science; it is as great a science, perhaps, as the science of selling. Many merchants are good buyers and poor sellers, but more are poor buyers and good sellers. It is the buying end where most failures occur.

Don't Lose Your Discounts.

"There are a good many reasons for buying in small quantities. Chief among these is that you don't put all your money on the shelf. You keep the cash in hand, available for discounts. A merchant who can simply take advantage of every discount is in a position to undersell his competitor who never can take a discount. Just as an example: say discounting terms on net dry goods are 2 per cent. off 0 days, due in 60 days; on regular dry goods, 6 per cent. off 10 days, due in 90 days. So the merchant who neglects taking his discount on net goods and lets his bill go to maturity is paying the rate of over 14 per cent. per annum, while on regular goods he pays over 20 per cent.

Don't Live in Ox Team Days.

"It is an advantage to have clean goods coming in every week. Don't buy all you think you can sell of an item. The trains run both ways every day, and a two-cent stamp will do the work. The custom of buying a six months' supply at a time is a relic of the days when the country merchants drove 100 miles with an ox team to buy their goods. It is different now. But there are dealers who persist in following the ox team method down to this day.

Meeting Competition.

"Shrewd buying is one way to meet mail order competition. This doesn't mean trying to beat down the drummer's prices, but it means buying small quantities of things and keeping the store right up-to-date and fresh stocked from one year's end to another. You will get more satisfactory results by starting the season with a month's supply of goods and adding as the trade demands."

PAY ATTENTION TO CHILDREN.

It is very poor policy on the part of the grocer to neglect paying the same attention to a child sent to his store by a housekeeper, as he would to a grown person. Nowadays this is not so noticeable, but a few years ago it was a very common mistake. Even yet many grocers do not seem to realize the harm they are doing themselves in this way. Country merchants are more to blame in this respect than are the city merchants. The latter are aware of the fact that to keep their patronage they must give the same satisfaction to the child as they would to the parent. Country storekeepers very often keep a youngster waiting from twenty minutes to half an hour. He is passed for the grown persons who happen in after his arrival, and the merchant does not seem to consider him until everybody else has been served.

Nothing is more aggravating to the average housewife than this. Very often she is in a hurry to obtain the groceries and being unable to go herself sends the child, thinking it will receive the same consideration as she herself. There being no telephone system in many small towns, as there is in the city, she must wait in patience. She cannot hurry up the grocer, but must be content to await his pleasure. The result very often is that the next time she has occasion to send the boy or girl her instructions are to go to some other store.

THE CRANKY CUSTOMER.

The cranky customer is indeed a great thorn in the flesh of the grocer. A customer that is apparently never satisfied, but who is always complaining, asking for what seems the impossible, is the despair of many grocers. In the end very often the grocer becomes disgusted and openly makes known to the customer that he no longer wants to be bothered with his or her patronage. It is generally "her." This is a mistake on the part of the storekeeper. A customer may be pretty near "the limit," but should never in any way be encouraged to patronize your competitor's store. Many grocers there are who have customers who are simply particular that all they buy is just exactly what they want. These are often classed in the same category as the "crank," which is certainly unwise on the part of the merchant.

Always strive to please your exacting customers. If they are a little more particular than others who make their purchases from you; if they are often very annoying, put up with it. It is all in the business. If you cater to them satisfactorily your reward will be not only on the patronage extended to you by them, but also in the free advertising they give you and your store. A housekeeper may be very "cranky" as they say, but if you give her satisfaction, and treat her as you should, she will advertise the fact freely to her friends.

Store Architecture, Interior Fittings and Window Display

STORE ARCHITECTURE—ITS IMPORTANCE IN ECONOMY AND EFFICIENCY

Store architecture is one of those problems with which the merchant is sooner or later confronted. A store may be started in a simple unpretentious way without consideration to either good looks, convenience or economy—merely because the need for a store exists. and that need must be met. As soon as, however, trade begins to multiply, other considerations are brought into evidence, storage for instance. Although goods may speedily change hands, it soon becomes apparent that provision must be made in keeping with the particular requirement of each description of goods, else serious unnecessary loss will accrue. Then again, it is soon evident that places must be allotted easily-get-at-able, and in accordance with the frequency or otherwise of call for sale upon the particular articles, otherwise great unnecessary cost is incurred in handling. These and many other reasons might be adduced in support of the adopting of good and efficient architectural store arrangement.

Points in Good Store Architecture.

There are given in this article illustrations of a store which has recently been erected on a corner site in one of the growing business streets of Toronto.

The owner of this store, George J. Melhuish, is an experienced grocer of many years' standing, and in adopting the arrangements shown in the illustrations. has endeavored to obliterate most of the objections with which so many ordinary stores are encumbered.

"Natural Light" an Important Feature.

Perhaps first and foremost in this regard is the question of "light." Sufficient natural light, properly subdued, is one of those features more noticeable by its absence than its presence in the general store. Light, however, is one of the most important factors to the successful store. Customers should at all times be able easily to see all the contents of the store. To accomplish this end and yet not lose the use of wall space, a row of windows have been arranged, in the accompanying plans, to give light along the top of the outer side wall, leaving the wall still available for shelving, etc., to within about two feet of the ceiling. This is without doubt an excellent arrangement, and one well worth noting.

"Air," an Aid to Health and Business.

Abundance of air is another important feature in the retail store. Who amongst us have not, at some time or other, been well-nigh sufficated by the many combinations of aromas in the old time store? No use the salesman trying to push sales in such a place; the customer orders what he wants and clears out. In the store under reveiew, however, this feature has been well studied. With a door at each end, and one at the side, a current of air can be easily circulated from end to end, and by avoiding the use of the one on the side of the wind at the time with little inconveneience. Every store, even in the depth of Winter, should be well ventilated once or twice during the day. In fact, in Winter time, by allowing a current of cold air to pass freely through the store and drive out the wasted and vitiated air, it will be possible to warm up to a better temperature with considerably less firing.

"Access" and "Egress."

A still further important feature is that of "access" and "egress." In the plans shown this has been amply provided for. An imposing front entrance for customers only gives freedom from all unnecessary contact with the passage of goods to and fro. There is also the side entrance chiefly for the use of loading up for delivery, and then there is at the back a door which can be used for taking in goods, beside which the cellar entrance can be utilized for the same purpose, and as the main storage is located in the cellar, it is probable the cellar entrance will become the chief goods entrance.

At the rear of the store a fair size room is arranged, suitable for refrigeration or such like storage purposes.

The Residential Section.

The house arrangements can, of course, be adapted to particular circumstances; in the instance illustrated, it was desired to fit up the front part of the first floor as a professional parlor. A separate front entrance was therefore arranged which makes that part particularly private, the entrance to the house proper being provided at the side entirely apart and separate from the business section.

INTERIOR TRIMMINGS FOR UTILITY AND BEAUTY.

Closely following, and equally important to that of correct architectural arrangement, is that of interior fittings. Many are the devices which have come into being of late years to aid the storekeeper in his business, computing scales, cheese and bacon cutters, cash registers, counter check books and many other useful and admirable helps. The fixtures and fittings, however, must stand pre-eminently front in importance, as upon them to a great extent depends not only the appearance, but the economical working of this store. The illustration given in this article is one taken from many which have reached the offices of The Canadian Grocer, and which would form a likely plan to fit in with the store plan shown in the previous article.

Well Displayed Stock Half Sold.

The store from which this illustration of interior fittings is taken is that of A. D. Valentine & Co., Windsor, Ont. The whole side wall makes a most excellent showing with its arrangement of shelving to carry sufficient assorted stock for any ordinary grocer. The complete arrangement of the Walker pivoted bins must commend itself to any enterprising grocer. The added attractiveness to the store, to say nothing of the immense saving in the clerk's time serving customers, must at once be evident. It becomes quite an easy matter to sell goods from a well displayed stock, the suggestiveness of the display will accomplish a great deal, and with the Walker pivoted bin the goods are displayed in the most economical manner possible.

The Necessary Refrigerator.

The refrigerator arrangement is another important feature in a store. There is no reason whatever why the refrigerator should not become one of the ornaments of the store. There are many makers of these goods who set themselves to accomplish the best possible effect with the most convenient refrigerating arrangements. The columns of the Canadian Grocer frequently contain illustrations of refrigerators which, in addition to accomplishing their intended purpose, also make quite an attraction to the store itself. With one of these installed in a well appointed place, which will display the goods as well as preserve them, the grocer's repute as a careful up-to-date storekeeper would be largely enhanced.

"Cash Only."

At the rear of our picture will be seen a small card, "We sell for cash only," which denotes the principle upon which business is conducted. It may not be possible for every grocer to follow this scheme in his particular locality, but where it can be done, it is undoubtedly the best possible method upon which to conduct a store. What, however, strikes one in this particular case is the way the owners have obliterated all show cards of manufacturers, leaving the store entirely free for their own display.

No. 6 shows upper floor with bedrooms, sitting rooms and all modern conveniences.

THE VALUE OF WINDOW TICKETS.

There isn't a merchant who will contest this proposition: "Show windows are valuable to attract trade." You display your goods and if they are attractive, you will do some business. How much more you could do with price tickets properly displayed is perhaps a question, but there is no question but what your trade would be increased, and materially.

There are many people who are backward in the matter of pricing goods. They feel some little compunctions against asking questions and then going away without buying. You will find this trait much more highly developed in the man than in the woman. The latter leans a little too much the other way.

If you have a good location, there are people passing your store every minute in the business day. The prices plainly shown talk to them as they pass, and they strike home. The average man knows little about bargains. He may think an article looks too high-priced for his pocketbook, but the actual price may be within his reach.

Use the tags and the cards with prices in plain figures throughout your entire establishment, and they will increase your sales. New goods are going on the shelves and tables. Plain marking helps the customer and it helps the salesmen.

Plain marking is taken to mean one-price, and in this day and age of sharp competition, no merchant can afford to play favoritism with his trade. One price is the surest safeguard. If you have sliding scales you run the risk, and a big one at that, of offending your good customers.

Women talk and they gossip on trade matters as well as on social. Overcharge one and let her find it out and your competitor will control her trade hereafter. Use price cards. They may be had cheap. Use home-made cards and learn to make them neat and attractive. If you are a failure at it, your print shop will gladly accept the order, or you can send to the city for samples. Tag everything. If you have not been following this practice, try it and you will find your returns for the next year better by a material percentage.

WINDOWS AN ADVERTISEMENT

A writer once remarked that out of nearly 200 stores visited in some thirty cities on a special tour of the grocery trades, comparatively few make any attempt at attractive window display. This is unfortunately pretty nearly the truth, grocers as a class appear to have much to learn on this subject. There are, however, a few grocers in most cities who give prominence to the subject, and who on certain occasions, such as special holiday seasons, make a great feature of their windows.

The window is, possibly, the retail grocer's greatest advertising medium, and it should be treated in that way. The Canadian Grocer, week by week, gives illustrations and pointers on this very subject. It is not really an expensive matter, no goods lend themselves so readily to window display, and by a simple arrangement of boxes or temporory shelving, almost any design can be arranged. For an ordinary between-season trade, such as the present moment, about the simplest thing to be done is to make a weekly display of popular staple goods, with always a special bargain line. There is given in this issue an illustration of the store window which is mentioned in our store architecture arcticle, and which carries a display of just the nature mentioned. This window is particularly well placed for an elaborate display of special goods when the season opens.

The above shows the interior of A. D. Valentine & Co.'s store, Windsor, Ont. It is an excellent arrangement of wall fixtures, suitable to go with the plan of store shown in preceding article.

PUSH EVER AHEAD.

Yes, you have been doing very well. On that last trip you sold nearly $1,000 worth of goods, and the whole month was the best you ever had as a traveler.

Splendid, but don't rest on your past laurels, old man; go ahead and make every month better than the last.

There are great big chances for fatter sales than you have ever yet made, and do not let the past achievements keep you from the greater success in the future.

And you are credited with possessing a fine voice. They have told you that they enjoyed your singing and once you sang at a concert, and the press noticed you kindly, for you were encored, and you have been living on the glories of that evening ever since.

That is a mistake; make it only as an incentive to better things, to better music, to better singing.

Many of us make what they commonly call successes when we are, after all, really failures.

The clerk in the store is a good average, and he is satisfied. One day three months ago he sold more goods in that department than any other clerk had ever done in a single day. He has been talking about and living on that day ever since. He has forgotten that there are greater sales for the greater day of the future.

A speaker who once, when the hour was in keeping with his spirit, moved his audience at will, delights to think of that one occasion of the past, forgetting all his great possibilties for the future in this, his success of a night.

Many of us are failures, not because we are without ability, but because we are too easily satisfied.

We do not have ideals that are large enough to carry us on.

When I first saw him, he had lamps on the counter of his store, and a ten line advertisement in the paper. His stock was small, but he was agreeable and his voice was bright with hope.

I met him a few years later, and electric lights were strung in the window and overhead. His stock was larger and his advertisement was quarter column by two columns deep.

I passed through his town the other day. He had moved. He had moved up street, moved into the store of a rival who had been content to live on the successes of the once were, before this new chap came to town. The advertisement is bigger and the stock is in proportion, and his voice is still hopeful, looking for still bigger and better things.

You have seen it on every side.

You have seen the people who forge ahead and distance their rivals.

They take stock and find the year a successful one. They set a higher standard for the next year, and forge ahead again.

Are you one of these fellows? Are you satisfied with your set of standards?

Are you satisfied with your standard in the home life.

Are you satisfied with your standard in books and conversation?

Are you satisfied with your standard in love and friendship?

Look them over and weight them well. and perhaps you'll take them up and plant them higher and further on.

DELICATESSEN IN THE GROCERY STORE

DELICATESSEN AS A PROFITABLE DEPARTMENT

The delicatessen idea is certainly and surely making substantial headway. The coming of the "flat" habit, the increasing favor which "light housekeeping" is receiving, and the superior economy of delicatessen supplies, all combine to give a degree of energy and interest to the "delicatessen department."

Possibilities of Increasing Trade.

Yet how few grocers have really given due consideration to this ever increasing and extremely profitable branch of trade. True, some grocers make a fair show of the ordinary plain and familiar cooked meats, but how few stop to think of the avenues of possibilities which open up with the coming in of the many delicate and economical prepared foods.

The Great Advantage to Housekeepers.

For a few cents a housekeeper can secure enough salad to supply several persons, and for very little more money can obtain slices of smoked meats, pickled meats, or fish and thus a good light meal is readily obtained. The list can be indefinitely extended and a complete absence of waste is noticeable, thus making delicatessen goods so much more economical than is commonly supposed. Skin, bones, feet, heads, shells and other useless portions of animal and fish anatomy, which one pays good money for at the butcher's, are absent from the delicatessen meat and fish, and the difference means much in money saving.

A Live Grocer.

A prominent grocer in a flourishing city recently stated that his trade had completely revolutionized of late. A few years ago he was doing a substantial family trade, and could almost calculate his exact weekly orders. Now, however, things have completely changed, the enormous advance in rents made it impossible for the majority to continue housekeeping in the way they had been doing, with the result, that a great number of the houses now contain more than one family all on the light housekeeping basis, with the inevitable increased demand for prepared foods. This particular grocer has set himself to meet this new condition, the result being that has trade has kept continually advancing although changing its particular character.

The Populace Demand it.

The delicatessen store proper, undoubtedly covers much which it is not necessary that the ordinary Canadian grocer should consider at the present time of evolution. Still, with the influx of foreign nationalities into Canada, there can be little doubt but that they will bring with them much of their fancy and appetite for these highly seasoned and prepared foods, in fact, it is the bounden duty of the Canadian to acknowledge such fact, and find in it an opportunity to show these strangers in a strange land that all will be done that can be, to make them realize that Canada is home. This can easily be done by opening up a good supply of the class of comestables with which he is familiar.

How it has Developed in the U. S.

In the U. S. the ordinary delicatessen store is growing to be more and more a place where the delicacies of the world are to be found. English, French, Dutch, Russia. Spanish, Swiss, Hungarian and American food products shoulder the toothsome products of the Fatherland in the German-American stores where the sign "Delicatessen" is seen, and the end is not yet, for with the "chop suey" habit growing upon the public, it should not be a great while before a place before Chinese and Japanese delicacies of the menu find a place beside the wurst, the fancy cheese, the salad bowls, the olives and the preserved fruits. The list of strange delicacies sold in New York, and some of which will probably find a growing market here, might be almost indefinitely extended, but enough has been said to show that the most cosmopolitan of tastes and appetites can find the wherewithal to gratify them without leaving the United States or even the borders of the metropolis. When these and other strange food products find a lodging place in the delicatessen stock, its cosmopolitan character will not be questioned.

DELICATESSEN IN THE UNITED STATES.

The delicatessen store, as it is to-day and as it has been for the last twenty-five years, is nothing else but a store where first-class meat products are for sale. All the meat products which the delicatessen dealers sell are prepared foods—even the bacon which the delicatessen dealer sells ought to belong to the class of ready cooked foods.

The Original Idea.

The originators of the delicatessen business in America did not sell bacon as a food which needed either boiling or frying. Their bacon was boneless, cured and smoked like the Westphalian hams, and was eaten sliced by the consumer—at that time mostly immigrant Germans—in the form of sandwiches made of rye bread or pumpernickel, with a little salt and pepper. The right kind of bacon, half lean and half fat, when properly cured and smoked, forms with the bread a very wholesome and substantial, health-giving meal.

The Idea Grows.

That the delicatessen business filled a long-felt want, particularly in New York, is best proved by the enormous growth of the business. While twenty-five years ago there was only a few of these stores in New York City, one finds to-day pretty near two thousand of them in Greater New York; that is to say, when one considers as a delicatessen store every store where smoked hams, boiled hams, bolognas, sausages, smoked fish, etc., are for sale. If one applies the true meaning of the German word "delicatessen," then this is changed considerably, and the number of real delicatessen stores dwindles to about 30 or 40 in all Greater New York.

Genuine Delicatessen.

A true delicatessen department should offer for sale everything which is above the average in taste and quality, all dainty foods which are produced in any country, which are scarce and in consequence not sold in any and every store. The genuine delicatessen dealer to-day sells a very large amount of imported meat specialties. All the fine English, French, German, Dutch and Italian hams, bolognas, canned meats, fish preserves, etc., form a part of his stock. One finds there the delicious smoked goose breast from Pomerania, the fine cervalet-wurst from Gotha, the caviar from Russia, the Scotch and Irish bacon, the birdsnest from India, etc.; in short, everything in the line of eatables which the gourmet may long for. The provision line in such a store is of the highest order.

Some Only Partial.

The majority of the so-called delicatessen stores do not cover such an extensive field. They content themselves with the sale of domestic provisions, imported smoked hams and some brands of bolognas and sausages, as well as some domestic and imported fish preparations, such as smoked salmon, caviar, smoked herring, etc. A very large percentage do not keep imported goods at all.

Meets all Classes.

In New York the delicatessen store has taken the place of the French caterer and the English and Irish cook store for the working classes, where one may buy a pretty good assortment of ready-made cooked dishes at a fair price. The genuine delicatessen business, on the other hand, caters to the trade of the well-to-do classes who can afford high prices for all the whims of the palate.

CURING AND SMOKING AS A PRESERVATIVE.

Pickled and cured meats are smoked ed to aid in their preservation and to give flavor and palatability. The creosote formed by the combustion of the wood closes the pores to some extent, excluding the air, and is objectionable to insects.

Ample ventilation should be provided in the smoke house to carry off the warm air in order to prevent the over-heating of the meat. Small openings under the eaves or a chimney in the roof will be sufficient, if arranged so as to be easily controlled.

Best Conditions for Smoking.

A fire pot outside of the house proper, with a flue through which the smoke may be conducted to the meat chamber, gives the best conditions for smoking. When this cannot well be arranged, a fire may be built on the floor of the house and the meat shielded by a sheet of metal. Where the meat can be hung 6 or 7 feet above the fire this precaution need not be taken. The construction should be such as to allow the smoke to pass up freely over the meat and out of the house, though rapid circulation is at the expense of fuel. Brick or stone houses are the best, though the first cost is greater than if they are built of lumber.

Special Fuel Needed.

The best fuel for smoking meats is green hickory or maple wood, smothered with sawdust of the same material. Hard wood of any kind is preferable to soft wood. Resinous woods should never be used, as they are likely to impart bad flavors to the products. Corn cobs are the best substitutes for hard wood, and may be used if desired. Soft woods and corn cobs give off large amounts of carbon in burning, and this is deposited on the meat, making it dark in color and rank flavored. Juniper berries and fragrant woods are sometimes added to the fire to flavor the meat.

Preparing the Meat.

Meat that is to be smoked should be removed from the brine two or three days before being put in the smoke house. If it has been cured in a strong brine, it will be best to soak the pieces in cold water over night to prevent a crust of salt from forming on the outside when drained. Washing the meat in tepid water and scrubbing clean with a brush is a good practice. The pieces should then be hung up to drain for a day or two. When drained they may be hung in the smoke house. All should be suspended below the ventilators, and should hang so that no two pieces come in contact, as this would prevent uniform smoking. A slow fire may then be started, warming up the meat gradually.

Keep the Meat Warm.

During the winter months in cold climates it is best to keep the fire going continually until the smoking is complete, holding the temperature at about the same point. If the fire is allowed to die down the meat becomes cold and the smoke does not penetrate readily. This results in heavy smoke on the outside and very little on the inner portions of the meat. During the Spring months and in the Summer a light fire may be started every second or third day for a couple of weeks, and the meat allowed to hang in the smoke house until sufficiently colored. When the fire is kept going steadily and an even temperature is maintained, twenty-four to thirty-six hours will be required to finish one lot of meat.

Use Every Care.

Smoke will not penetrate frozen meat, and it will be necessary to extract all frost from it before filling the smoke house. The house should be kept dark at all times to prevent flies from entering. As soon as smoked sufficiently the meat should be cooled by opening the ventilators or doors. When hard and firm it may be canvassed or packed away for Summer use.

THE CARE OF SALT FISH.

It often happens that packages of pickled fish are roughly handled in transit when shipped by rail or boat, causing the hoops on barrels, half-barrels and kits to loosen and naturally the pickle leaks out. If the packages are left in this condition for a period of five to ten days, the fish are liable to become stained and rusty. It is, therefore, important as soon as mackerel and other kinds of barrel fish are received, to examine the contents of packages, and if they are dry or any of the pickle has leaked out, to make a brine of salt and water, just strong enough to float an egg or potato, and cover the fish with said brine, which will restore the fish to prime condition if attended to immediately.

Barrels and half-barrels of salt and pickled fish when stored should be examined every thirty days, and if packages have leaked any, same should be refilled with brine. Do not pour fresh water into a barrel of fish—this method causes trouble, as it weakens the original brine, and when the pickle is not sufficiently strong to float an egg or potato the fish turn sour. Another important matter regarding all kinds of fish is to keep in a cool place and out of the sun.

CANNERS' SIZES.

How do the sizes of cans used by canners actually compare? Are grocers familiar with the exact differences? The proportions are as follows: 2s—5 to a gallon can; 2 1-2s—about 3 1-2 to a gallon can; 3s—3 to a gallon can. These proportions vary slightly, but are approximately correct.

A gallon is supposed to be eight pints, or equal to eight pounds; at the rate of three 3-lb. cans to the gallon, the capacity of the latter would be nine pounds, but, as a matter of fact, the can known to some people as a three-pounder is of somewhat smaller capacity than they suppose.

It is a wonder that there is any demand for No. 2 cans of tomatoes when No. 3s are to be had. At the usual wholesale difference in price the consumer should get extra pound of contents in the No. 3 can quite cheaper. At present prices the difference is about 2 1-2c. a can.—Grocer's Advocate.

NO NEED TO BRAG.

"Sir," began a creditor who met one of his victims in the street the other day, "I sent you a bill in January."

"Yes, sir."

"And again in April."

"Yes, sir."

"And again in July."

"Yes, sir."

"And I presume you received one the other day?"

"I did, sir."

"Well, sir; well, sir," flustered the creditor.

"Well, you needn't feel so stuck up over it," replied the other, as he lighted a cigar. "There are firms in this town who send me bills every month in the year, and they never stop me in the street to brag about it, either. I detest such egotism, sir. Good morning."

CANNING AND PRESERVING INDUSTRY

THE STERILIZING OF CANNED GOODS.

Until recently the process of sterilization of canned goods has been one which in many ways lowered the value of the product canned. With corn, for example, subjecting the cans when full to a temperature of 250 degrees for sixty-five minutes caused the corn to darken, and materially impaired its flavor. By experimenting it was found that the great length of time for the complete sterilization was made necessary by the slowness of the heat in reaching the interior of the can, and that the bacteria of the interior were the last to be affected by the sterilization process.

The Polk Idea of Rolling.

In 1901 Ralph Polk, an Indiana experimenter, conceived the idea of agitating the contents of the can by rotation and jarring during the heating process. Rotation alone did not sufficiently shake the corn, but rolling the cans to and fro in small compartments, which caused a jar at the end of each roll, produced the necessary agitation. In the Canner and Dried Fruit Packer, E. W. Duckwall reports the result of the Polk idea under his observation as follows:

Early Experiments.

"An incubating room was arranged, to be heated to 100 degrees F. by steam. In this room we placed several cases of each run that had been made. The corn was thoroughly incubated, and it was an easy matter to determine the percentage of cans which had not been properly sterilized. After the cans had been incubated we found that the goods which had been processed twenty-five, thirty and thirty-five minutes at 247 degrees F. with a four-inch roll and an agitation of four to the minute, contained bacteria. There was no outward sign to indicate the presence of bacteria in the cans. One species, which grew rather slowly, was not actively motile. It grew into long filamentous threads and was rather sluggish in its movements. Nearly all the cans which contained bacteria after forty-eight and seventy-two hours' incubation had no peculiar taste. The corn seemed sweet, but, of course, it was only a question of time until the sugar would turn into acid. In the piles stacked in the warerooms, where the temperature was not over 65 or 70 degrees, the cans showed no signs of bacteria, and it was only after incubation that we were able to find them. It was possible, therefore, to reprocess all of these goods without loss. The simple repetition of the agitating process was all that was necessary.

Further Testing.

"We then tried some experiments in processing various lots at 250 degrees for twenty-five, thirty and thirty-five minutes, with a nine-inch roll and an agitation of four a minute. Several cases from each lot were placed in the incubating room and some of these cans were examined each day for four or five successive days. After twenty-four hours no bacteria were found. After forty-eight hours more, bacteria were found in quite a large per cent. of the goods processed for twenty-five minutes. A careful examination was made of the goods processed at thirty minutes, and for two or three days no bacteria were found. After the fourth day, however, I found a few cans which did contain living bacteria.

Perfect Sterilization.

"The goods which had been processed thirty-five minutes were examined every day during the whole experimental period, lasting twelve days. No bacteria were found in any of the cans, and this indicated clearly that corn processed by the agitating system, four to the minute with a nine-inch roll, using 250 degrees for thirty-five minutes, will be perfectly sterilized and all spores of bacteria will be destroyed. Corn canned by this system is therefore sterilized perfectly in thirty minutes less time than by the old method, and the color and flavor are better than anything ever put up by the old process."

ADULTERANTS IN JELLIES AND JAMS.

The present generation has seen a great increase in the number and diversity of prepared foods that may be obtained on the market.

Many foods that were formerly prepared chiefly or entirely in the home may now be secured of the grocer ready for the table. A great burden has thus been lifted from the shoulders of the housewife, but responsibilities have not been thereby lessened.

"Like Mother Makes."

A study must be made of the subject of prepared foods if the table is to be supplied with articles of the same quality as those that "mother used to make." Home-made jellies are made from fruit juice and granulated sugar; and jams, from the pulped fruit and sugar. Some manufacturers aim to produce an article that is equal to the home-made in every respect, while others supply the demand for cheaper goods by using lower-priced substitutes for the fruit or sugar, or both.

Thus apple juice, or a solution prepared from dried apple cores and peelings, is often used where higher-priced fruits are understood to be employed, and glucose is frequently used in place of sugar.

Common Adulterants.

Jellies and jams are both commonly adulterated with preservatives (usually salicylic acid and benzoic acid), coloring matter and glucose. Artificial coloring matter is frequently employed, sometimes to give a fictitious appearance to relatively cheap goods, sometimes with a high-grade article, in order that the color may be permanent when exposed to light for long periods of time on grocers' shelves.

To Detect Starch in Jelly.

Natural fruit jellies become liquid on being warmed. A spoonful dissolves readily in warm water, although considerable time is required with those that are especially firm. The small fruits contain practically no starch, as apples do, and the presence of starch in a jelly indicates that some apple juice has been used in its preparation. Starch may be detected as follows: Dissolve a teaspoonful of jelly in a half teacupful of hot water, heat to boiling and add, drop by drop, while stirring with a teaspoon, a solution of potassium permanganate until the solution is almost colorless. Then allow the solution to cool and add a single drop of tincture of iodine. If starch is present a clear blue color is produced. Artificially colored jellies are sometimes not decolorized by potassium permanganate. Even without decoloring, however, the blue color can usually be seen. Both potassium permanganate and tincture of iodine can, of course, be secured at any drug store.

Discovering the Presence of Glucose.

For the detection of glucose, a teaspoonful of the jelly may be dissolved in a glass tumbler or bottle in two or three tablespoonfuls of water. The vessel in which the jelly is dissolved may be placed in a vessel of hot water if necessary to hasten the solution. In case a jam or marmalade is being examined, the mixture is filtered to separate the insoluble matter. The solution is allowed to cool, and an equal volume, or a little more, of strong alcohol is added. If the sample is a pure fruit product, the addition of alcohol causes no precipitation, except that a very slight amount of proteid bodies is thrown down. If glucose had been employed in its manufacture, however, a dense white precipitate separates, and after a time settles to the bottom of the liquid.

Some Simple Adulterants in Jam.

In addition to the form of adulteration to which jellies are subject, jams are sometimes manufactured from the exhausted fruit pulp left after removing the juice for making jelly. When this is done, residues from different fruits are sometimes mixed. Exhausted raspberry or blackberry pulp is sometimes used in making "strawberry" jam, and vice versa. Some instances are reported of various small seeds being used with jams made from seedless pulp. With the aid of a small magnifying glass such forms of adulteration may be detected, the observer familiarizing himself with the seeds of the ordinary fruits.

Artificial Coloring.

Many of the artificial colors employed with jellies and jams may be detected as follows:—One or two teaspoonfuls of the product are dissolved in a half teacupful of warm water, the solution heated to boiling, after adding a few drops of hydrochloric acid and a small piece of white woolen cloth or a few strands of white woolen yarn. The wool should first be boiled with water containing a little soda, to remove any fat it may contain, and then washed with water. The wool is washed first with hot and then with cold water, the water pressed out as completely as possible, and the color of the fabric noted. If no marked color is produced, the test may be discontinued, otherwise the fabric, which may have taken up coal tar colors, some foreign vegetable colors, and (if a fruit product is being examined) some of the natural coloring matter of the fruit, is boiled for two or three minutes in about one-third of a teacupful of water and two or three teaspoonfuls of household ammonia, freed from liquid as much as possible by pressing, and removed. The fabric will usually retain the greater part of the natural fruit color while the coal tar color usually dissolves in the diluted ammonia. The liquid is then stirred with a splinter of wood and hydrochloric acid added, a drop or two at a time, until there is no further odor of the ammonia, and the liquid transferred to tongue by means of the splinter with which it is stirred has an acid (sour) taste.

A fresh piece of white woolen cloth is boiled in the liquid and thoroughly washed. If this piece of cloth has a distinct color, the food under examination is colored artificially. This color may be a coal tar derivative, or it may be one of the vegetable colors (prepared from certain lichens) now largely used with foods. If of the latter class, the dyed fabric is usually turned blue or purple by ammonia.

Care and Practice Necessary.

The tests described above may be employed in the kitchen by one who has had no chemical training, and will serve to point out some of the forms of adulteration practiced with those products. These tests are simple, but must be used with judgment. They require considerable practice from the operator before satisfactory results can be obtained.—Dr. W. D. Bicelow, U.S. Bureau of Chemistry.

CANNED GOODS IN ENGLAND.

The American Consul at Bristol, England, has issued a report on the market for canned goods at that place which it would be well for Canadians to take note of, as it appears there is much room still for Canadian canned enterprise. He says:

There is a large market in the neighborhood for which Bristol is the distributing centre for American canned and dried fruit, especially in prunes, pears, apples, apricots, and peaches. The bulk of these goods reach Bristol in direct shipments from California, via New York, and thence by the Bristol City Line, but an occasional shipment comes through New Orleans. Most of the large Californian packers are represented in Bristol either by their own agents or by local correspondents of their agents in Liverpool or other large English centres.

The heaviest business from California is in dried plums, for which Santa Clara seems to be the standard, outside packs coming in at 10 to 12 cents less. The duty on these is $1.70 per 112 pounds. The payment in nearly all cases is made by drafts at 60 or 90 days' sight. Wholesale c.i.f. prices Bristol to-day for dried plums are as follows: 30s to 40s 34s. 6d. ($8.37); 40s to 50s 33s. 6d. ($8.12); 50s to 60s 30s. 0d. ($7.40); 60s to 70s 28s. 6d. ($7.03).

Canned goods are shipped in three grades in cans (nominal), two pounds. To-day's quotations for extras are: Apricots, $1.30; pears, $2.05; peaches, $2.11. Extra standard—Apricots, $1.08; pears, $1.81; peaches, $1.30 to $1.55. Standard—Apricots, 90 cents; pears, $1.57; peaches, $1.30.

A good many brands are already well established here and it is the practice to send at the beginning of the season samples in the three grades on which all c.i.f. offers would be based.

MEXICAN EGG TEST.

It is a common sight in the plaza in a Mexican town to behold a stall-woman, who is selling two reals worth of eggs, pick them up one by one, put one end and then the other to her lips, and hand them over to the customer, who repeats the same operation. To the inexperienced onlooker it seems as if they were tasting the extremities of the eggs. As a matter of fact, they never touch the eggs with the tongue.

The idea of the performance is that when an egg is fresh, one end is distinctly colder than the other. The end which has the air chamber is the warmer of the two. The human lips are exceedingly sensitive to heat and cold, and even the novice at this form of egg testing promptly becomes a capable judge. If both ends of the egg reveal the same temperature, that egg may be counted as bad, as it is a fairly good sign that the air chamber is broken, and the contents spread equally within the shell.

GROWTH OF THE CONDENSED MILK INDUSTRY.

The evolution of the condensed milk industry has been great. Less than a century ago such a product as this was unknown. In the '50's, however, through the genius of Gail Borden, probably the first condensed milk ever prepared was put on the market. In those days the originator of condensed milk found it necessary to sell his milk through personal canvassing. Borden practically peddled his product before it gained a place in the trade. Afterwards he began to advertise, and gradually but surely the present great business controlled by the Borden Condensed Milk Co., was built up from nothing. It took time and perseverance to accomplish this, to introduce condensed milk to the public, but the man was worthy of his task and at the present day this has become one of the largest industries. Borden's branches are established all over the world and condensed milk is now obtainable in every civilized country.

PACIFIC COAST CITIES AND WHOLESALE TRADE

Development of the wholesale grocery and provision trade of the Coast cities of British Columbia has been closely contemporaneous with development of the means of transportation. Until some eleven years ago, when the Kootenay was first exploited by mining people and the numerous camps, such as Rossland, Nelson, Kaslo, and at other points were established, the distribution area served by Victoria and Vancouver, outside of the cities themselves, was practically confined to the main line of the C.P.R. in the province, and to the up-coast points reached by the coasting steamer service, traffic, both railway and marine, being then much less than to-day. The old Cariboo trade, what remained of it, was also served, and the old-established Victoria houses held this, as they still do to a large extent.

Tributary to the coast cities themselves, including New Westminster and Nanaimo, the trade of the canneries of the Fraser River, and of the logging camps and mills was no inconsiderable factor of the period a decade ago.

Just Needed a Chance.

With the completion of the Arrow Lakes steamer service and rail connections from the C.P.R. main line at including Rossland, Nelson, and the Slocan country, were made accessible to the wholesale trade of Vancouver and Victoria. Previous to that it was difficult to get supplies in at all, and the Corbin railroad, reaching the two principal points from Spokane, had given a large part of the trade of the Kootenay to that city, which was the more possible because a majority of the mining operators in the Kootenay then were from the American side and many of them had formerly operated in Spokane and vicinity.

Access to the Kootenay district was inducement enough to the jobbers of the coast. They went after the trade in earnest and to-day they have the bulk of it. Seven years ago this trade of the interior was increased by the completion of the Columbia & Western Railway, to the camps of the Boundary district, Greenwood, Grand Forks and Phoenix. Prior to both these developments, the construction of the Shuswap & Okanagan line from Sicamous to Okanagan Lake had opened that famous agricultural district, then in a much less forward state than to-day. With these three lines of communication opened, the growth of population and establishment of permanent industry, has increased the volume of trade very substantially. During the same time the cannery industry of the coast, northern as well as Fraser River, has been another growing factor and the unprecedented increase in the lumber industry has added its quota to the field for supply trade.

Americans Went First.

All these influences, important as they are, and permanent as is their character, have, however, to be counted secondary to one new factor, that of the Yukon trade. Beginning almost without warning some eight years or more ago, this trade was at first apparently lost altogether to Canadian wholesale men, though the new gold field was entirely in Canadian territory. Two reasons may be given in explanation. One, and the most important, was that in the United States territory of Alaska, for years, two very powerful mercantile concerns had been operating, and these had many posts and large stocks of goods at easily available points. The companies were the North American Trading & Transportation Co., and the Northern Commerical Co. These powerful corporations had the whole of the trade of Alaska, and their stocks of goods were in large measure specially adapted for the new mining camps of the Klondike. Their big advantage was that they had the goods practically on the ground, and the Yukon River was readily available to transport from the nearest posts the goods required by the first inrushing crowd of gold-seekers, many of whom had not waited to outfit.

In the personnel of a large proportion of the first crowds who went into the Yukon is found the other, and less important reason for the new trade going to American trading houses. A horde of old Alaska prospectors swooped down on Henderson and Carmack's new-found Eldorado and the active Brother Jonathan, ever ready, in his own picturesque and expressive phrase, to "take a chance," especially if the chance favored a sudden accession to wealth, came from the cities of the coast states and from other parts of the republic in much larger numbers than the more conservative Canadian cousins. This new mining population naturally asked for the goods they had been used to having, and the trade at first merely tried to cater to the demands of these men, who never stopped to ask about price, for what did price matter, when they were to be millionaires in a few months.

Seattle and other Puget Sound cities quickly organized for the big outfitting trade and by the Spring of 1898, when tramp steamers from all parts of the world were carrying crowds of passengers and unlimited cargoes of goods to the north, three-quarters of the gold-seekers were buying their supplies and taking their passage at the Sound city. Vancouver and Victoria merchants awoke to the opportunity too, and soon had a good share of this transient trade.

But when merchants became located in the north, and the means of transportation were improved by the building of the White Pass & Yukon Railway and the placing of many steamers on the Yukon River plying to Dawson, the British Columbia cities swung their heavy batteries in line and in less than three years from the first day of the Klondike over 85 per cent. of the trade was in the hands of the B. C. jobbers and they have continued to hold it. For a time some of the local houses attempted the policy of establishing branch houses in the north, but that has been entirely abandoned. The trade is reached either by having the merchants from the northern capital come out in the Winter season and buy their supplies for the next year, or by sending in the traveling men of the various houses. But whatever the means, the supply trade is held and will likely be held.

Mining Development Work.

The opening of the Atlin district in Northern B. C. in the second and third years of the Klondike, made another very substantial addition to the trade, which, from its situation, was at once controlled by British Columbia jobbers. This northern trade is now a steady and definable quantity, and because of recent mining developments, notably in the Windy Arm district, at Conrad City, and on the Canadian side of Portland Canal, gives promise of considerable increase. Other mining development in Northern B. C. on the Skeena River, as well as the activity caused by the expected selection of a northern coast terminus for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, indicates an additional field for expansion of supply trade in the north.

In Southern B. C. the rapid increase in agricultural population especially in the Okanagan Valley, and the opening of the rich Similkameen district by the building of two railroad lines, one C.P.R. and the other Great Northern, will add a large amount of distributing trade and make it easy to handle. The mining districts of the Kootenays are all in prosperous and growing condition and the camps are all demanding closer attention in the way of supplies every season.

So much for the yesterday and to-day of the jobbing trade of British Columbia. The future holds much of promise. There are new fields to open when railway construction shall have reached the northern interior, the largest portion of the province, and still undeveloped in large measure. The portions of the province now in part developed, are still capable of great progress, and that progress is proceeding rapidly. In the new provinces of the prairie Northwest there is a good deal of business to be obtained, but the jobbers of B. C. cities have been sadly handicapped in their efforts to reach that territory, though they have no reason to be discouraged over the volume of trade secured in face of adverse conditions.

Trans-Pacific Trade.

But great as the local field will surely become, there is a very large business to be secured from trans-Pacific trade. In the Orient the Chinese empire is slowly awakening to modern methods of commerce, and Japan has already shown that she is thoroughly imbued with the spirit of western progress. Here is an opportunity not lightly to be neglected, for in fostering it the coast cities will secure an export business of enormous value not only to themselves and the province, but to the Dominion at large.

By reason of the geographical position of the B. C. coast cities the establishment of direct and efficient steamship service, to China, Japan, India and other parts of the east, is easily feasible, and the consequent intercourse with those countries will develop an enormous commerce. A beginning of no small proportions has been already made. In fact, from an importer's point of view, the beginning is very considerable. All the tea of China, India and Japan for the whole Dominion comes through these ports. The product of the rice fields of China and Japan is shipped this way. The sago and tapioca of Singapore and Malacca are imported direct. The raw sugar from the Philippines and from Java comes here to be refined, the coffee of the islands of the southern seas is also brought in by local merchants and manufacturers to be sent out, a finished product, over an ever-widening field of distribution. Many other staples of commerce are thus brought to the shores of Canada by the shortest and most direct route, to the Sunset Doorway of the Dominion. Nor is the scope confined to oriental products. From England and Europe, the products of their marts and manufactories are brought by direct steamers, avoiding the long overland rail haul.

Wide Range of Goods.

The range of goods brought to coast cities includes as well, the products of Australia and New Zealand, imported direct by lines of steamers, which on their return take many of Canada's products to the sister colonies under the Southern Cross. From South America come coffee, sugar, etc., while from California are imported fine fruits, both fresh and dried, and in some instances in preserved form.

The range of goods thus assembled by regular direct lines of steamships is certainly greater than any other city of Canada may boast. This advantage is telling in the race for the great and growing trade of the Canadian west.

The advantage, already referred to, of being a shipping port for Canadian products sent to the Orient and Australiasia is telling every year. The salmon of British Columbia waters, both fresh, frozen and packed in tins, is all shipped from here, with the exception of the comparatively small quantity required for domestic trade. The wheat of Alberta is destined to come to Vancouver to be shipped to all parts of the world, either in the grain or ground into flour, and this big trade is being given very close attention now. The beginning of an elevator system marks the turning of attention to this important export business, and the increase of shipments of Canadian flour from B. C. ports is being felt by the wheat and flour producing states of the Pacific Coast and their shipping ports. Heretofore, the flour trade of China, Japan and Siberia was in the hands of Washington, Oregon and California flour millers. The advent of Alberta wheat is changing all that, and it is benefitting the jobbing trade of the province.

That the wholesale people of the coast cities are preparing for their coming heritage of commercial supremacy with an abiding faith may be seen in one particular if not in others. In the city of Vancouver, where ten years ago there were but few and struggling jobbing houses, to-day are brick warehouses of six and seven storeys in which are assembled great stores of merchandise from all parts of the world for Canadian consumption or gathered from domestic sources for export to the far corners of the earth. The extent of the warehouse section of the city is a marvel of western development, and every year the number and size of new blocks is increasing.

TRUE SUCCESS.

The propensity of the present day to live at an unreasonable rate of speed cannot be disregarded. We are often impelled to pause and ask ourselves what is really worth while, for we no sooner attain one purpose or pleasure than we dash off in pursuit of others. This is confusing to youth. The shams of life are so hopelessly mingled with the genuine, the dross with the real gold, that one hardly realizes its true ring.

It is just as well for youth to realize at the beginning that the inexorable law never changes—that what was the best yesterday is the best to-day, to-morrow and forever after. In beginning a career, the young man must set forth with the old Puritanical ideas of right and wrong—with a conscience that cannot be obscured nor clouded by the glitter and noise of the market place. Most of these bubbles burst in good time. The successes of fraud are not lasting.

Every Task Well Done.

The true success is that which is found along the rigidly pursued paths of truth and honor. Every task well done is a stepping stone to another better done. Every day should bring a new idea into life, some new and useful knowledge. There is no royal road to success, no meteoric flights to the rose-colored clouds in the heights.

The Master Becomes the Genius.

And so it is to be done in commercial fields. The genius is he who brings to his labors a willingness to master it in all its details, who patiently, even if ploddingly, pegs away at it until he understands thoroughly all there is to learn of its intricacies. Thereby he fits himself to direct others and assumes by right the commanding position when a commander is sought. If a man has persistently cultivated a belief in himself and is optimistic of the future, he unconsciously keeps at work agencies that bring about desired results. A tranquil spirit, enthusiasm, energy and a determination to overcome obstacles one by one as they arise, inevitably lead to satisfactory achievement.

MONTREAL'S OLDEST GROCERY HOUSE

An Interesting Story of the Growth of the Grocery Business in Montreal—The Difficulties Encountered in the Transaction of Business in the Days when Transportation was a Problem.

A building most interesting to commercial men visiting Montreal, and particularly to those engaged in the grocery business, is that occupied by Mathewson's Sons..

In this building, situated at 202 McGill street, just a few doors below Notre Dame street, may almost be said to have originated the first wholesale grocery firm in Montreal—Samuel Mathewson. To let it go at this, however, would not be giving the exact facts, so that it would be better perhaps to start at the beginning.

Samuel Mathewson, the founder of the present house, came to Canada in 1833 from Strabane, Ireland, where he was then doing business. Accompanying him was his son, J. A. Mathewson. Landing in Canada, he came to Montreal and in 1834 started the first wholesale grocery business in the City of Montreal. He then occupied premises situated at the corner of St. Paul street and St. Eloi Lane, on the spot where is now situated the firm of Snowdon, Forbes & Co. Here he successfully carried on business until the place became too small to suit the growing trade he had worked up, so that he found it necessary to remove to larger premises. He purchased a lot on what is now McGill street, and built thereon what was in those days counted a splendid, large building. That building still stands.

It was built three stories high, which was considered something out of the ordinary at that time. Samuel Mathewson moved into this place in 1842. Only the ground floor was devoted to the business, the upper floors being occupied as a residence by the family.

The business continued to grow, and in 1843 Mr. Mathewson took his son into partnership with him, and thereafter the firm was known as Samuel Mathewson & Son. At this period in the history of Canada the wholesale grocery house was not what is it to-day. Then it was only natural to do all the retail business that came along, and this was considerable. Nor was the stock carried specified, or confined within certain limits as it now is. Almost every necessity required in the young country was required of the wholesaler. This does not mean that the grocery store carried dry goods, hardware and such like, in equal proportion to groceries, but nevertheless many articles and products never seen in the warehouse of a wholesale establishment nowadays were then considered essential lines. To illustrate this it is interesting to note the fact that at the time of the rebellion in Canada in 1837 it was necessary that every ounce of gunpowder owned by wholesale houses should be deposited with the Government. Among the old documents of the house of Mathewson is a receipt for a quantity of gunpowder thus deposited by Mr. Mathewson, showing that this article occupied a place in the trade.

At this time transportation facilities were not the best. Supplies were not obtainable on such short notice as it is now possible to obtain them. The business, however, was not so large, but the lack of proper transportation was felt nevertheless. The business was mostly local and at first was perhaps more retail than wholesale, as old records show that day after day business was transacted at the old Bonsecours market, which is still in existence. What outside business there was came through the hustling of Mr. Mathewson, or of his son, J. A., the latter as a rule. As a "drummer," J. A. Mathewson had no such comforts when traveling as has the knight of the grip to-day. It was a case of get there the best way possible, which generally meant driving a buckboard or a sleigh. It was impossible then to do business outside of a certain radius, but many were the trips made by J. A. Mathewson, driving in blinding snowstorms or in the rain and shine of a Summer's day. The old sleigh used 'way back at that time, still in the possesion of the family, although, needless to say, it is never used. Blotters, which were in use long ago, tell of sales made in "Bytown" which has now grown into the capital of our Dominion, and with York, now recognized as one of the premier cities of Canada—Toronto.

A trip to New York was a novel experience not often indulged in. A trip to Halifax, or St. John, N.B., was something which it took a long time to complete. To reach either of the latter places it was necessary to go via New York where the rest of the trip was made by boat.

Energy was one of the chief possessions of the merchants at this period, and no better example of this quality is at hand than their action in forming a fire brigade for the protection of their property, when it was found impossible to obtain adequate protection from the city. Mr. Mathewson was a member of the brigade, with other merchants such as the late Mr. Lyman, of Lyman Sons, the wholesale druggists.

Samuel Mathewson died in 1854 and was succeeded by his son, who carried on the business as J. A. Mathewson after 1868 until 1884, when the firm name was changed to J. A. Mathewson & Co. When J. A. Mathewson died in 1905 the three sons, W. B., S. J., and J. A. took up the reins, styling themselves Mathewson's Sons, which is the present firm name.

One of the most successful periods in the life of the house of Mathewson was during the American Civil War from 1861 to 1865. The books show that a tremendous business was done during those five years. Another interesting fact, gleaned from the books, is that the firm has done business continuously with the Bank of British North America since that institution was established in 1835.

Since the year 1860 this old firm of Mathewsons has never carried a stock of liquors or tobaccos. Up to that time certain of these lines were carried, as they are to-day, in practically every wholesale grocery house in Canada, but since that time these lines have not formed a part of the stock.

Samuel Mathewson was probably the first wholesale merchant to introduce to the Canadian trade the now well-known Japan teas. To say the least, he was a pioneer in the tea business, and tea has always been one of the strongest lines carried by the firm.

This is an outline of the foundation and growth of the first wholesale grocery house in Canada. It is an interesting story of the growth of the Canadian trade. In 1842 Samuel Mathewson and his son carried on the business. The latter did what traveling there was to be done. To-day the house is represented on the road by eleven travelers and their trade extends all over the country, although it is still mainly confined to the eastern portion of Canada.

The house has ever had a reputation and has held a most honorable place in the trade since its foundation over eighty years ago.

The building occupied in 1842 is still used, but the back has been renovated and three stories have been addd to its height so that now it is a six storey building, comparing favorably with the best warehouses in the city. Two hoists are kept busy and a large staff of workers are engaged all the year long to handle the business of a wholesale house established when trade conditions in Canada were far different indeed to what they are to-day. A stone on the right of the main entrance stands as a fitting memorial of the efforts of the founder of the business, Samuel Mathewson, and also serves to show the continual growth and expansion of the house of Mathewson.

KEEPING UP THE PRESTIGE OF THE CLERK.

The light in which the clerk stands in the eyes of the customers is a matter which is deserving of very careful attention by every retail merchant. The customers should be brought to realize that they can get just as good treatment and just as low prices when buying goods from any one of the clerks as they can when buying from the proprietor himself. The mistake is often made by the average retail merchant of cutting the price on goods after the clerk has been unable to make the sale.

A Retailer's Experience.

A large retail merchant has given expression to the following sentiments on this subject, which are well worth the consideration of our retail readers. He says:

"I never will belittle my clerks by cutting the price after they have quoted a price to a customer and been unable to sell him goods. I have an understanding with everyone of my employes that when he gets to the place that it is impossible to persuade the customer into paying the price asked, that he shall come to me. If I think that we can go lower on the goods, I go down with the clerk to the customer and try to sell him at the price quoted by the clerk. If that fails to effect the sale, I appeal to the clerk and say, 'Do you think that we can cut the price any lower than that?' In my private conversation with this clerk, we have decided whether the price shall be cut or not, and when the above question is put to him he will say, 'Yes, I think we can shade that a little, as we have a pretty good stock on hand of that article,' and I then say, 'All right, go ahead and make the price which you think best.'

Improves Value of the Clerk.

"In this way the customer is brought to believe that the clerk has the privilege of making just as low a price as the proprietor, and the next time he comes in he does not ask for me in the belief that I can make him a lower price, as would have been the case had I cut the price in the first place myself. I have followed this plan now for the past five years, and I know that my clerks appreciate this kind of treatment. I think that my clerks will average up as loyal and as competent as any similar number of clerks to be found in a store anywhere, and it is a great satisfaction to me to know that any one of these clerks is competent to handle any customer who may come into the store.

Keep the Clerks' Interest Up.

"I have known retailers who endeavor to keep their clerks in the background, and do not believe in letting them use their own discretion in the matter of sales, and in such cases the clerk will always continue to feel that he is nothing more than an employe and has no interest in increasing the business, while with the plan which I have followed my clerks have all begun to show a genuine interest in the store's affairs, and it is a pleasure to have a business transacted upon that basis."

MUTUAL RECOGNITION.

Did you ever ride on another person's railroad pass or deadhead your passage? Anyway, the following story, as told on an American lawyer, is humorously interesting. The lawyer in question had gone to a western state to practice his profession, but as he got no clients and stood a good chance of starving to death he decided to return eastward again. Without any money he got into a train for Nashville, Tenn., intending to seek employment as a reporter on one of the daily papers. When the conductor called for his ticket he said:

"I am on the staff of ——, of Nashville. I suppose you will pass me?"

The conductor looked at him sharply.

"The editor of that paper is in the smoker. Come with me. If he identifies you, all right."

He followed the conductor into the smoker; the situation was explained. Mr. Editor said:

"Oh, yes; I recognize him as one of the staff; it is all right."

Before leaving the train the lawyer again sought the editor.

"Why did you say you recognized me? I'm not on your paper."

"I'm not the editor either. I'm traveling on his pass, and was scared to death lest you should give me away."

A CRUSHING REPLY.

The schoolmaster of a certain village asked his pupils the following question:

Suppose in a family there are five children and mother has only four potatoes between them. Now, she wants to give every child an equal share. What is she going to do?

Silence reigned in the room.

Everybody calculated very hard, till a little boy stood up and gave, to the great surprise of the schoolmaster, the following unexpected answer:

"Mash the potatoes, sir."—Birmingham (Eng.) Post.

CANADA IN THE WORLD OF FOOD STUFFS

The feeding of the world involves the exchange between countries in a year of over two billion dollars worth of food stuffs. Canada's part in this colossal business is, in proportion to its population, exceeded only by thrifty and organized Denmark, and by the Argentine Republic, whose five millions are given over almost wholly to agriculture. In actual bulk, the British Empire towers above the nations in the export food stuff figures, but the great bulk of the trade is between Great Britain and the colonies. Among single nations exporting to foreigners the United States and Russia, the giant farmers, overshadow all the rest.

The following table shows, in the order of value, the total export business in food stuffs done by the principal nations and the British colonies, and the principal commodity of export is indicated in each case :

Western Canada Lead.

Canada's preeminence is in cheese, of which our exports are more than double those of any other country. In the export of butter, Canada is surpassed, in the order named, by Denmark, Russia, France, Australia, Sweden, Holland, and New Zealand.

Breadstuffs make up the largest package in the international trade in food stuffs, and Russia leads the procession, or did before the war, with 247 millions' worth, and the other big fellows fall in in this order : United States, 111 millions; British India, 105 millions; Holland, 108 millions; Argentine, 74 millions; Germany, 33 millions; Australia, 30 millions; Canada, 23 millions; Belgium, 19 millions.

The live cattle in the world's markets come mostly from the United States, $43,553,000 worth; but Canada's herds are next, $12,869,000. Then comes Argentina with $6,427,000.

The United States leads also with animal products, $143,631,000; with Denmark second, $22,928,000, and Canada third, with $16,693,000. New Zealand sends $13,810,000 worth; Australia, $7,966,000; Uruquay, $7,869,000; Argentina, $7,521,000, and Russia contributes $5,110,000 worth of food and game.

A British Business.

Curiously enough, the United Kingdom itself is the largest contributor of fish to foreign markets, exporting $17,313,000 worth. The other large sellers are : Norway, $12,557,000; Canada, $10,856,000; Holland, $10,471,000; Newfoundland, $6,588,000; United States, $6,527,000.

The Canadian hen is not a large figure abroad. She sent $712,000 dollars' worth of eggs to the English market last year, while from Russia there came $26,310,000 worth; from Austria-Hungary, $21,425,000; from Italy, $8,464,000; from Denmark, $7,350,000, and from France, $3,357,000. The United States hen sent anly $543,000 worth.

Canada comes fifth among the contributors to the international trade in fruit, but at least two of the four ahead are a very long way ahead. The figures are : Spain, $25,567,000; United States, $15,606,000; Italy, $9,023,000; France, $8,065,000; Canada, $3,273,000.

Origin of Sugar.

Sugar is not a line Canada exports to any considerable extent, but it may interest some who have not looked into the subject to know that Austria-Hungary sends abroad more beet sugar than any other country, and Cuba more cane. Cuba sent to the United States over $50,000,000 worth in 1905, and Austria-Hungary exported to the value of $33,394,000. Other exportations were Germany, $30,734,000; Holland, $19,041,000; France, $17,540,000; Russia, $12,966,000; Mauritius, $12,739,768; Belgium, $9,904,000.

Infinite are the calculations the curious might evolve on the subject of food stuff exportation. It is sufficient here to state that Canada's relative standing among the nations in regard to export of the food stuffs it produces is as follows : Cheese, first; cattle, second; animal products, third; fruit, fifth; butter, eighth; bread stuffs, ninth.

Britain the Biggest Buyer.

Great Britain is the largest purchaser of food stuffs, taking in 1904 material to the astounding total of $1,057,849,482, as follows :

Live animals	$ 52,719,495
Corn and grain	338,049,716
Fish	16,260,644
Fruit	66,161,597

According to some reports received here the California apricot crop this year will amount to only about 25 per cent. of that of last season.

It is reported that the British Columbia Packers' Association will this year send an agent to Japan to enlarge the market there for British Columbia canned salmon.

NEW MEMBERS OF WARREN BROS.

This week's Ontario Gazette will contain notice of the application for a charter to convert Warren Bros. & Co. of Toronto into a limited liability company. The provisional directors of the new corporation will be named as follows: R. Wells, C. A. R. Warren, E. G. Williams, F. C. Armstrong, J. H. Devaney, W. Glover, W. B. Dack, E. Harwood. These constitute the new members of the company. Messrs. Williams, Armstrong, Devaney, Glover and Dack are now traveling representatives of the firm.

INTO A NEW HOME.

It is a distinction always worth while to have in your own class the nicest home in town. The public are sure to sit up and take notice, and there's all the pleasure and inspiration of it. That is why every member of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co.'s staff is looking a little more pleased and stepping a little livelier than usual. They have just moved into their new business house at 69 Front street east, Toronto.

Three storeys and a basement, a hundred and fifty feet by thirty, should, one would think, afford space in which a firm of grocery brokers and manufacturers' agents might lose themselves; but the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., in addition to the cheese business, have twenty-one live agencies for firms in every quarter of the globe, many of them among the largest of their kind in the world and every bit of this great space is occupied.

The office is one of the handsomest on the street. Of course it's new. The whole building is new in the air of scrupulous cleanliness, paint, whitewash and fireproofing. Carefully selected quarter-cut oak and plate glass are the materials for the office fittings. The porch at the front entrance is of oak with quarter-cut, panelled ceiling. Inside, a quarter-cut oak railing defines the public space and another, but lower one, divides the salesroom from the office proper. The ceiling is corrugated and white. The upper part of the walls is buff tinted, the lower part a bronze green burlap dado under a quarter-cut oak cornice. Three supporting pillars down the centre have been utilized for a curious illuminating device, four longitudinal bands of oak surmounted by a plain cornice of the same, four-armed, sustaining handsome electric fixtures.

Mr. Henry Wright, president of the company, has his office in the front, enclosed by clear plate glass in oak frames. It has a very handsome mantel and the furnishings are in keeping.

In the warehouse cleanliness and roominess are the most obvious features. A new cement floor has been laid in the basement, new lavatories have been installed, the ceilings have been whitewashed, the floors cleaned, and anywhere one could sit and eat Imperial cheese with zest and pleasure.

The ground storey front is of plate and prismatic glass and every window in the street elevation bears in gilt on green the name of one of the articles for which the company is the Canadian agent.

ANOTHER CANNING FACTORY.

A new line of canned goods will always interest the retail grocer if it promises quality. One such promise the trade will have an opportunity of proving next Fall is put forward by the Lakeside Canning Co., of Wellington, Ont., with the "Riverdale" brand of goods. This is a new company and will commence operations this season.

In a talk with a representative of The Canadian Grocer, the manager, G. J. Furman, speaking of the company's plans and intentions, said:

"We have erected a large and well equipped factory at Wellington, the heart of the canning district, celebrated for producing the finest fruits and vegetables. We have given careful attention to every essential detail in establishing a canning industry.

"What are they? Here are the principal ones: (1) Locate in a district where there are efiperienced growers. (2) Select for distribution seeds of varieties adopted to the soil and climate so as to insure maturity, thereby securing the natural flavor which cannot be had from immatured vegetables. (3) The most thoroughly sanitary system for handling the pack. (4) Good spring water for the syrups. (5) Installation of the most improved machinery. (6) Adoption of a process that will retain the natural flavor of fruit and vegetable. This last is the high art of the business—the canning that conceals canning.

"We have done all this as well as our experience and ability could show us how. There remains the outer dress of our goods—the label. No one now-a-days questions the commercial advantage of dressing well. It certainly applies to canned goods. We would just as soon send a tramp to solicit orders as send out our goods with a poor label. We've done our best, that's all.

"I feel justified in promising the trade that our goods will not be excelled."

The fruit trade in Toronto and the Province of Ontario generally has grown to very large proportions in the past few years, until to-day it ranks as one of the important lines of business. An enterprising house in this line is White & Co., Limited, who have also a branch house at Hamilton, Ont. In addition to their regular jobbing and shipping trade they conduct in the season auction sales where large quantities of goods are disposed of. Their importing connection being with most of the best shippers enables them to import largely and regularly.

NEW WHOLESALE GROCERY.

Leon Tanguay, 107-109 St. Paul street, is the latest addition to the list of wholesale grocery houses of Montreal. Mr. Tanguay carries a well assorted stock of grocery staples and having had many years' experience of the grocery trade as a member of the Canadian Vinegar Co., will no doubt receive good attention from the retail trade.

The teas, "Victoria" and "Princess Louise," sold by Laporte, Martin & Cie., Limited, are the best value on the market. When Sir Thos. Lipton decided to place these teas and coffees with this house, he was satisfied that the firm possessed the best customers in this country for such fine products.

CANADA, A HAVEN FOR THE TOURIST

Canada has waited patiently for the attention that is now being bestowed upon her, and it was simply a matter of educating the ever-increasing brotherhood of tourists to the magnificent Summer resorts in her confines, and to the beautiful country in which are embedded the lovely inland lakes, of which so much has been said and written, and which lie in the Province of Ontario, north of Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River and other parts of the Dominion. Each successive season has seen a phenomenal influx of visitors to the northern regions, which are becoming more and more popular year by year, and the coming season will probably see a large increase over the last.

There is certainly no doubt that one of the greatest pleasures that can be enjoyed from a Summer outing is to get away from one's own familiar haunts and from the sameness of the routine of one's own daily work, to see something new, to meet and mix amongst strangers, to observe and study their manners, and enjoy the complete change of being alone among many.

On the continent of Europe the traveler can within a very short space of time, and with comparatively few miles to travel, pass through several different countries, and various nationalities and tongues tempting him to stay, and affording unending interest in many ways. This charm of novelty has in some degree been lost on the western hemisphere, where the progressive, go-ahead American, gradually widening the borders of his empire, has occupied a large portion of the continent and made it his own. To himself he has attracted the peoples of many foreign countries, and has solidified a republic, making it up of several types into one nationality, and has so changed and unified them that you may travel from one end of the union to the other, the same types and the same characteristics are to be seen, varied only by the degrees in which the arts and comforts of civilization are practiced and enjoyed.

New Fields of Interest.

This is accountable for the interest that is increasing yearly in the tourist districts that are situated in the Province of Ontario, Canada, where a new field of pleasure travel is being opened up.

Hitherto the tourist arriving at the border has proceeded up into the Highlands of Ontario or down the St. Lawrence River, while others have rushed through Canada without even thinking of the vast limitless tracts of navigable waters and scenery of endless variety that many of the inland water courses hold out to the lover of nature. But we would direct his attention to a few of the points on the Canadian shores of that large body of water, Lake Huron, and among which we would choose Goderich, Kincardine, Port Elgin and Southampton.

The popularity of some of these resorts has become so marked that during the past year mammoth hotels have been erected at a cost of thousands of dollars to accommodate the ever-increasing travel which is finding its way into these parts. As a grand tour this northern country offers a fresh and varied trip through the landscape beauties of Ontario, and has but to be better known to tempt the wayfarer in search of new scenes, fresh air and health, from the well-known ways of travel.

The great attractions in these districts appeal to families and those desiring rest and recreation in the quietude of a lakeside town or village.

The bathing beaches at all of the places mentioned are perfect, sandy and quite safe for children, the air is pure and full of ozone, the boating is capital, and in most of the places good fishing may be had. Beautiful country drives are a diversion that can be indulged in, and perfect rest and quietness can be secured.

The Canadian Rockies.

The Canadian Rocky Mountains—the mighty range that is attracting more and more attention each year, both from those who seek noble scenery and those to whom the challenge of a lofty peak is irresistible—are practically endless. They form the backbone of the North American continent, and are part of the great chain that extends from Terra del Fuego, at the extreme end of South America, to the mouth of the Mackenzie, but in all their length there are no portions that are as grand as the passes where the C.P.R. crosses them, and Whymper, with all the authority born of his conquest of the Matterhorn and a lifetime spent in scaling the heights of Switzerland, the Andes and the Himalayas, has declared them the equivalent of "fifty or sixty Switzerlands rolled into one."

From Banff or Field peaks of 10,000 feet are seen on every side, while giants of even greater altitude are not uncommon. At Laggan, the three lovely Lakes in the Clouds are concealed in the recesses of the ranges and the mountains draw back here and there to permit deep vales of wondrous beauty.

A Glorious Country.

It is a glorious country, a land that seems to fill with life and vigor everyone that visits it. The air is pure and exhilarating, the prospect boundless and varied, and the skies above blue as those of Italy. It is the home of stalwart men and sleek cattle, for here is the finest ranching region in the world. The snowfall is scanty, and only under very exceptional circumstances does it remain for any length of time on the ground. All through the year, Summer and Winter, the district is subject to a peculiar wind that, coming from the west where the Chinook Indians dwell, is called the Chinook in consequence. Sometimes it blows as a zephyr, sometimes as a heavy gale, but it is always warm and dry, and before its breath the snow disappears as if by magic. It dries, too, the long "bunch grass" that stands in the bottoms, and the cattle find natural hay awaiting them wherever they go.

"What's new in my territory?" replied the jolly commercial traveler; "why," he chuckled, "Wm. Stinson, of Chesley, Ont., told me this week that business was booming. But then, you know, business is always booming with William."

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

A good general business has been done in shipping circles during the past week. The canals are now all open and trade through them is in full swing. Centres not easily reached other than through these canals are contributing their share to the export business. The railway companies are busy with shipments consigned to Montreal and other centres for export, and, taken all round, there is a fair activity in export trade.

The arrivals of ocean-going vessels in Montreal are increasing every week, although the arrivals for last week were smaller in number than they were the same week last year.

The trade will be sorry to learn that in all probability the Allan liner Bavarian will no more be engaged in the shipping trade between Canada and Great Britain. It will be remembered that the boat ran aground down the St. Lawrence near Quebec last season, and it was found impossible to move her at the time. This Spring every effort was made towards floating her again, but it seems as if this is not to be. Shipping experts have been endeavoring to find some means of floating the boat but so far have been unsuccessful. Capt. D. N. Armit, who came from England to look into the matter, is credited with saying that it would cost $100,000 to bring the boat into the dock at Quebec. This would be a tremendous amount to expend, but it would not begin to place the boat in a position fit to take up the ocean traffic once more.

The Athenia, of the Donaldson line, which docked last week from Glasgow, brought among her cargo some valuable Clydesdales and prize cattle which are to be used for stock purposes.

Speaking of the plans of the C.P.R. to double-track their line from Winnipeg to Fort William, one of the officials of the company recently stated that they would then be in a position to better handle the grain output of the west. He said that the company at present entertained some thoughts of building a fleet of their own for use in carrying grain between Fort William and Victoria Harbor, Peterboro. Nothing would be done, however, until the road direct to this harbor had been completed.

The C.P.R.'s new steamer Empress of Britain arrived in Quebec Saturday night, making a splendid run from Liverpool. The new vessel will be a good addition to the C.P.R. fleet. Its measurements are: Length over all, 570 feet; beam, 65 feet 6 inches; depth amidships, 45 feet; tonnage, 14,500; horse-power, 18,000.

A direct freight line between Montreal and Bristol has been decided upon by the C.P.R. for this season. Three boats, the Montfort, Montcalm and Monmouth, will be engaged upon this service. Formerly it was the custom for these boats to go via Liverpool and after touching at that port to sail for Bristol, where cattle and perishable stock were then landed. The new line will result in the saving of from one to two days in time.

The latest acquisition to the Thomson line is the Latonia, 400 feet long and 4,387 tonnage. The new boat is equipped with the latest models of refrigerator and cold air chambers. The Latonia will engage in the direct London service.

The Elder-Dempster boat Andoni with a cargo of sugar left Trinidad for Montreal on May 4 and is expected toward the end of next week.

A TRAVELER'S "KICK."

Are commercial travelers hard men to please? There have been complaints recently about the lack of accommodation in districts lately won over to local option. Some liquor licenses have recently been issued in the back townships, and here comes a "kick" because in a house licensed May 1 in Coe Hill, the guests had to sleep four or six in a room and before retiring diversion was provided by a free fight in which half a dozen drunks participated. There was no extra charge.

OTTAWA RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING

As a body of business men the Ottawa retail grocers are hard to excel. Their stores are the brightest, cleanest, and from all appearances the best conducted in the land. They are banded together to the number of fifty-two with an executive from the president down to every member of every committee that has the interest of the association and their branch of trade generally, closely at heart. It is natural, therefore, that good results follow the work of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association, and those grocers who are not members of the association cannot help admitting the benefit of their fellow grocers' combined work.

The annual meeting was held last Wednesday, 10th inst., in Royal Albert Hall, O'Connor street, and a large number of members were present. President Fred W. Forde occupied the chair and the proceedings of the evening were put through with order, precision and promptness.

Secretary H. C. Ellis' report of the past year's business was most satisfactory and showed that a lot of good and valuable work had been transacted. During the year that bugaboo of the merchant, the trading stamp question, had been satisfactorily killed and buried. The assistance of the Ottawa retail merchants in bringing pressure upon the Government was most valuable.

The peddling question had been taken in hand and so actively pushed that a new law dealing with same was being framed by the legislators.

Two instructive lectures had been given by Prof. Macfarlane, of the Inland Revenue Department, and Mr. McNeil, of the fruit division, both of which had been valuable and instructive to the members.

One of the most important matters taken in hand and upon which the executive was appointed to look after the same was the new department for the purpose of reporting and collecting. An agent or solicitor will be appointed to secure all information in a private, businesslike way, on the lines of Dun's or Bradstreet's, of proposed new accounts where grocers are asked for credit from day to day. This department naturally will be only for members of the association. Mr. Ellis' description of the department as explained to The Grocer representative would indicate that the scheme about to be adopted cannot but be invaluable to every subscriber to the association. Heretofore many of the schemes adopted by merchants in giving or refusing credit have failed of their purposes, and several of the old style "black list" schemes verged so closely upon blackmail or libel that they had to be abandoned. In several Canadian cities schemes had been tried for the legitimate protection of the merchant but none found to cover the case thoroughly. It is believed that the scheme about to be inaugurated by the Ottawa association will not only be a protection to their interests but one that will be adopted, once understood, by other mercantile bodies.

The secretary's report of the association's annual picnic to Carleton Place last August was a most satisfactory one and showed a very handsome surplus.

A strong committee was appointed to deal with the question of this year's outing. It is proposed to hold same on the civic holiday, August 13. The committee are dealing with the place, obtaining rates, etc., and will report at next week's meeting.

President Forde and Secretary Ellis, who had been nominated delegates to atte d the convention of the Retail Merchants' Association held in Toronto last April, rendered an account of their reception, business, etc. President Forde, who is known as a forcible and outspoken critic on all business subjects and etiquette, procedure, etc., did not spare the head association in his remarks. The reception of the Ottawa delegates was not calculated to enthuse them in their work, and he hoped that the members of the Ottawa association would show visiting delegates to the Dominion convention to be held at Ottawa, July 4, 5 and 6 next, how to receive and entertain their visitors. Some of the situations described by President Forde were decidedly ludicrous.

C. J. Provost, treasurer, then read his annual report, showing a most satisfactory balance of $300 on hand, and all bills paid.

The election of officers for the current year was then proceeded with and resulted as follows: President, F. W. Forde (re-elected for second term); vice-presidents, H. W. Booth, E. Scannel;

H. C. Ellis.

treasurer, C. J. Provost; secretary, H. C. Ellis; executive committee, George Atkinson, C. B. McLean, A. Johnston, Jr., D. Halliday, A. J. Warnock, Wm. Farmer.

Messrs. Wall and McLean were appointed auditors for the current year.

OTTAWA NEWS.

Robt. Neill, representing J. Bruce Payne, Granby, P.Q., was met by The Canadian Grocer. Mr. Neill knows a lot about cigars, but there's one thing he says he doesn't know, and that is, a better cigar than the Pharaoh and Pebble.

The Ottawa grocery trade last week had pleasant calls from a veteran traveler, J. M. Kirk, representing the Robt. Greig Co., Limited, Toronto, and that they were glad to see him his order book clearly testified.

Pyle's Pearline is being well looked after in the capital at present. A. B. Hardwicke, Canadian representative, with a staff of advertising agents is spreading good news around among the trade.

A. E. Sterling ("Teddy"), he of Lytle's pickle, etc., fame, dropped in on The Canadian Grocer at Paisley's hostelry. Business is always good in Ottawa, where both Teddy and Lytle's lines seem to be popular.

L. R. Buzzell, representing Mathewson's Sons, Montreal, was returning from a good trip up Perth and Renfrew way. A steady reader of The Canadian Grocer, he took pleasure in renewing his subscription for another year.

E. G. Williams, traveler for Warren Bros., Toronto, intends paying a visit to friends in England about the end of the month.

BACK TO OATMEAL.

The Canadian section of the Society of Chemical Industry concluded the session of 1905-6 last Thursday evening, with a consideration of breakfast foods. They met at the National Club, Toronto, and after dinner heard a paper by Prof. R. Harcourt, of the Guelph Agricultural College, entitled, "Results of Recent Investigations of Breakfast Foods." It dealt with a purely scientific inquiry in the field of intestinal digestion. Prof. MacCallum contributed some physiological considerations and thereafter the discussion became general.

Naturally, there was not much said that could be labelled "popular." The ordinary lay mind does not think in the terminology of chemistry, applied or otherwise, nor is the vocabulary of the physiologist current in the marts of trade.

Prof. Harcourt, however, arrived at two interesting conclusions. One was that ordinary rolled oats or rolled wheat cooked half an hour, were just as digestible and nutritious as the much more expensive and widely advertised predigested breakfast foods. The other was that good white bread was more nutritious and quite as digestible as whole wheat or brown bread. "The faddists who have turned to the husks that the swine do eat," as one enthusiastic white-breader termed them, had no part in the discussion.

For the purposes of his inquiry, Prof. Harcourt had secured three Guelph College students to conform to a diet of the various foods he tested. He analyzed the foods, then the waste discharge by his subjects, to determine the percentage of available material in the foods that had been utilized.

SARDINE PROSPECTS.

P. M. Loubrie, of the firm of P. M. Loubrie & Co., Bordeaux, France, is in Canada on a business trip. He was in Toronto this week and from there goes to Montreal. He called on the trade in Toronto in company with C. L. Marshall, of the A. F. MacLaren Cheese Company, who represent P. M. Loubrie & Co. in that city. His firm are manufacturers of canned goods, of which they put up between three and four hundred different varieties under the "Elephant" brand.

Speaking of the outlook for canned goods in France he said that it was too early to make any reliable prognostication. At present the crops are in a fairly good condition, but between this and the canning season quite a change might take place.

"Whether we shall have the same experience as during the last three years in regard to the sardine catch I cannot say," said Mr. Loubrie. "As you know, the catch during the last three years was particularly poor. Had it not been for the conservatism and prejudices of the fishermen, however, it might have been better. Hitherto the catch of sardines has been taken near the coast of France. When the catch along the coast failed the Government appointed a commission to investigate, and this commission discovered that although the sardines had left the coast they were to be found further out at sea. A steamer was chartered and a fishing boat and crew selected to go out and fish on the new grounds and to use a different style of net, but the other sardine fishermen threatened the men that if they went out their lives would pay the penalty. Consequently the men did not go."

Mr. Loubrie said that the sardines found on the French coast were much better than those found on the Spanish and Portuguese coast. He also pointed out that the packers of sardines in Spain and Portugal employ a different method from that in France. In France, for example, the sardines are cured in oil, while in Spain and Portugal they are first of all boiled and then put in oil.

Speaking of the difference between sprats, which are often used as substitutes for sardines, and the genuine sardine, Mr. Loubrie pointed out that the flesh of the latter was a rosy brown color and the body was covered with scales, whereas the sprat or small herring, which was used as a substitute by certain countries, had white flesh and its body was devoid of scales. These substitutes for sardines, which are sold at a lower price than the genuine article, are doing a great deal of injury to the sardine trade, in Canada as well as elsewhere.

Speaking of the olive oil trade, Mr. Loubrie said that the consumption of this commodity was rapidly increasing, both on this continent and in Europe, particularly on account of its increased use as an article of diet and for medicinal purposes.

WHEN PRICES WERE CUT IN HALIFAX.

These are the grocers of Halifax. At any rate the original cartoon is displayed in the window of a Halifax tobacconist and a member of the trade in the Maritime capital says of the picture, "It very truthfully represents the condition of the retail grocery trade of this place to-day. You will notice on the right the man who started the cutting. He is weeping and says he is sorry. He represents a large grocery firm. The rest speaks for itself."

I WILL CRUSH ALL RIVALS
WE CARRY EVERY THING HOME FOR THE CUSTOMER
FOR 1 DOLLAR I GIVE 10 POUNDS OF SUGAR 20 OF FLOUR BOTTLE OF GIN AND CARRY EVERY THING HOME CUSTOMERS AND ALL
I ONLY WANT YOU MY FRIEND AND OUR KIND CO

THE FIGHT OF THE GROCERS OR HOW WILL IT END—
WE HAVE CAUGHT THE FEVER TOO AND ARE SACRIFICING
R GOODS , BRIAR PIPES BELOW COST, NEVER SOLD SO CHEAP
EFORE , COME IN AND GET BARGAINS , NORTH END CIGAR STORE .

It should speak loudly enough to be heard wherever more than one retailer is in business. No end of wholesome advice could be written, but as the grocer says, "the picture speaks for itself."

A GROCER'S CANNING COMPANY.

The Farmers' Canning Co., Bloomfield, Ont., is an incorporation of several of the best growers in that celebrated district of the Quinte fruit and vegetable area. Their factory is ideally situated on an eminence in a seven acre space with one large stream for drainage and another of finest spring water for brines and syrups and the most particular factory uses. Their factory is equipped with the latest improved machinery. It is in charge of an expert processor with a competent, careful and interested staff. The most thorough cleanliness is vigorously enforced. Their last season's pack was entirely sold.

THE GUILD AND THE CANADA GROCERS.

Some of the daily papers throughout the country are getting badly mixed up in regard to the Wholesale Grocers' Guild and the Canada Grocers, Limited. They are asserting that the dissolution of the Canada Grocers, Limited, was due to the investigation which has been carried on at Hamilton.

The absurdity of this is patent to all in the trade. The investigation at Hamilton was no more the cause of the dissolution of the Canada Grocers, Limited, than was the defeat of the Balfour Government due to the fact that Mr. Balfour occasionally lost a game of golf.

The Canada Grocers, Limited, was a joint stock company composed of ten or a dozen different firms throughout Canada. These happened to be members of Wholesale Grocers' Guild and that is the only connection there is between the Canada Grocers and the guild. There are a dozen or more wholesale grocers throughout Canada who are members of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild who never had any connection with the Canada Grocers, Limited. In fact the wholesale houses composing the incorporated company which is now going out of existence composed but a small percentage of the members of the guild.

The proceedings against the guild were instituted by people who conceived the idea that an injustice existed. The Canada Grocers on the other hand were dissolved because the partnership in the corporation did not work smoothly, obviously two different causes altogether. Had the guild been dissolved as a result of the proceedings at Hamilton then these misinformed daily papers would have had something upon which to base their assertions; but the guild has not been dissolved, nor is there any sign of dissolution.

MARKET FOR CANADA IN MANCHURIA.

The industrial exhibition being held at Mukden, the capital of Manchuria, is another mark showing the commercial awakening of the Far East. Mukden has a population of about 250,000 and is 120 miles inland from its port, Newchwang.

Although Canada has no exhibit at Mukden some information regarding the trade and commerce of Manchuria may not be uninteresting.

The amount of commerce of Newchwang during the year 1905 was fifty-three million dollars. Of this amount some forty-four millions represented foreign commerce, the balance representing the business carried on between the different points in the Chinese empire, or what might be termed home trade.

The foreign imports of Newchwang amounted to over twenty-two million dollars, and of this amount half was captured by the United States, which means that the United States has shared in the commercial activity of Manchuria as much as all other nations combined who have traded there. The greater portion of these figures represented cotton sheeting, drills, jeans and similar productions from American textile mills, but the amount of wheat flour sent in by the Americans was also of considerable volume. After flour came kerosene oil to the value of $326,875, followed by cigarettes, $313,882, and lumber, $191,889.

These importations may be considered relatively small as compared with the imports of other countries, but it must be remembered that in one year they were increased by twenty per cent., and from this fact can be gathered some idea of the volume of trade that will be done in a few years with Manchuria, which has a population of twenty-two millions.

In connection with the increase of cotton goods importations from the United States it is noteworthy that they were double in 1905 what they were in 1903, while the other imports mentioned—flour, kerosene oil and cigarettes, also showed a remarkable increase in that time.

Now that the war is over and a settled condition prevails in that province, there is certain to be a trade developed there, part of which should be shared by Canada, and in view of the work the Dominion commercial agents have done in other parts of the world—some less important as regards population—Canada with her manufactures and her wheat should not be dilatory in placing a commercial agent at Newchwang, or in other ways seeking to build up this trade.

The United States consul at Newchwang states that the Chinese are preparing to enter into whatever commercial field promises a profitable return, and this year a cotton spinning plant is to be installed in Newchwang, which if successful will no doubt be quickly followed by the introduction of other industries. The Manchurians are also looking forword to the day when they will supply their own wheat and flour, but the development of their country's resources will not lessen the outside business intercourse, and there must still be a growing foreign trade.

WHAT ABOUT A COMMISSION?

Stalking business organizations is now the favorite political sport on this continent. The political press agent's name for it is "Fighting the trusts." But a trust is anything from Standard Oil to the Hucksters' Protective Association. A lot of the talk about trade combination and organization is buncome, saturated in ignorance.

The underlying principle of all business is buying and selling at a profit. Buying and selling at a loss is contrary to that principle, and an injury to trade. Sovereign control of an article of commerce carrying with it power of taxation in proportion to the demand for the article is monopoly, is contrary to that principle, and quite, if not more, injurious to trade than selling at a loss.

The trust hunters have not learned to distinguish between organization to prevent selling at a loss and organization to create monopoly. With them all organization save and except that to promote political corruption and graft, is conspiracy. They rush in where angels might wisely hesitate.

The cure must be knowledge of trade conditions applied with honest, common sense. That does not appear to come within the powers of the legally trained judiciary. The rights of trade in relation to the railways required treatment other than could be provided by a court of law, and the railway commission resulted. A trade commission is now needed to deal intelligently with these questions of organization.

RETAIL GROCERS TO MEET.

In connection with the Pure Food Show now being held in Montreal, there will be a meeting of the retail grocers of the Province of Quebec on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 22 and May 23. The meeting will be held in the new quarters of the Retail Grocers' Association, 270 St. Catherine street east, Montreal, at 10 a.m., and another conference will be held in the afternoon at the Victoria Rink at 2.30 p.m. Subjects of interest to retailers will be discussed at these meetings. A delegation of wholesale grocers will be received also, in order that something may be done to create a more favorable feeling between the wholesale and retail trade.

OUR ADVERTISING PRIZE.

The competition for the fountain pen offered for the best newspaper advertisement made up by a grocery clerk has resulted in the prize being awarded in favor of R. J. Donaghy, of T. A. Rowat & Co., London, Ontario.

TRAVELERS SHOULD KNOW IT ALL.

The ambition of the average clerk, particularly those in the sample room, is to "get on the road," to become a traveler. This ambition is commendable and does credit to the business instinct of the aspirants. In the days of the pioneer jobbing houses, when the trade was mainly of a necessitous character and the conditions and environments of the community were less modern and critical, it was comparatively speaking, easier to fill the bill as a traveler than now.

Then periodical trips, two, three or four times annually, were made and the demand was for such staples, speaking, of course, of groceries, as tea, sugar, molasses, coffee, flour, the old style oatmeal and the plain necessities of life, and little more than superficial knowledge of the goods sold was required. The hardships of the trips were on the other hand more trying and it required physique and endurance of a character unknown to the traveling salesman of to-day, and some of the old warehouses will still recount tales of the road in the '50s and '60s that put the experiences of the modern traveler in the shade.

Knowledge of the goods to be sold was, in a measure, not a vital necessity, as it is to-day. Now, as the country is settled and the railways and steamboats have brought the most remote parts of the country into practically the same conditions of life; when the merchant is brought into keen competition with the shrewdest city traders; when people move around more freely from point to point, according to the exigencies of their trade or calling; when the former luxuries of life have in a measure become the necessities of to-day; when new goods, new foods, new fads and new fancies are being marketed every week; when the trader himself is awake and endeavors to improve his learning and "wants to know" about things; when the press is spreading light and knowledge into the remotest hamlet and camp, and questions are being asked, it is the imperative duty of every young would-be traveler, yes, and every old one, on the road to-day, to post himself not only as to his prices, terms and so on, but he should acquire an authoritative knowledge of all the goods he sells.

He should be able, and it won't be long before he must be able, to answer and explain these things. The grocery salesman should, for instance, have an accurate knowledge of teas, the countries producing same, the tea growing districts, manner of cultivation and preparation for the market, ports of shipment, principal controlling and storing markets; keep himself posted as to new fields that are being opened for the cultivation of teas, the principal consuming countries of the various grades of teas, the duties on same.

The same applies in every sense to coffees, sugars, molasses, etc. He should know whether tapioca grows as a berry, is the sap of a tree or made from German potato paste. He should be able and ready to use his knowledge for the benefit of his house, his customer and his own future success.

There isn't a retail grocer in Canada to-day but what will have a higher respect for the salesman and his house if he realizes that every time the traveler calls, he feels that he has learned something new, something valuable, something that probably has been bothering him about the quality of certain of his goods.

That there are wholesale grocery firms in Canada to-day studying this very phase of improving the "goods knowledge" of their traveling staff, is a credit to their business foresight.

The Canadian Grocer knows of one prominent firm in Hamilton whose principal has a so-called "school for travelers" and where every week, or as often as the salesmen visit headquarters, they are put through a course of instruction on some particular line of goods, where they are handed clippings and information that has been culled for their benefit from reliable magazines, trade journals and newspapers. It goes without saying that such a policy must be of undoubted benefit to the house and place the traveler himself on a higher plane with his confreres.

The Canadian Grocer has for years endeavored to instill this idea of improvement of the salesman into the boys on the road. That many have profited we believe. We also believe that it is the duty of every jobbing house to encourage salesmen to improve their knowledge of their goods, to place literature dealing with same at their disposal, to try and elevate the tone of their calling and raise the standard of salesmanship. This can easily be done by commencing in the sample room, which might practically be considered the "kindergarten" of the trade, whose object lessons can so easily be had and where the young salesman should be made to study.

Old travelers, whose success is evidenced by their sales, do not naturally take kindly to the idea, but they should bear in mind the truth of the Spanish saying:

"Thus every man of true learning
Is anxious to increase his store,
And feels in fact, a greater yearning
The more he knows, to know the more."

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," but the lack of it is still more harmful and detrimental to progress. No man knows it all, but a lot can be learned from men that know a lot. Our advice to travelers is "learn a lot," talk with men that "know a lot" and in the end if you do not know it all, you will at least have tasted the sweets of knowledge.

CAUSE OF THE ADVANCE IN TAPIOCA.

The abnormal advance in tapioca which has been going on nearly a year now, is hard to explain without carefully going over the situation since the rise started. For this reason a review of the conditions prevailing since June, 1905, will explain the present situation, and show how the advance in price has been caused.

The upward tendency in the market began in June last, when shipments from the east began to show a falling off. Shipments from Penang and Singapore to the United Kingdom in February, 1905, amounted to only 731 tons, against 1,066 tons in February, 1904, and were only 870 tons in March, against 1,362 tons in the same month, 1904. This caused an advance in the price of medium pearl tapioca in the London market from 9s. 6d to 10s. per cwt. on c.i.f. terms to arrive, and by beginning of July, the market continuing to improve, and stocks below spot sales were made at from 11s. to 13s. 6d per cwt., according to quality.

At this time the east had not contracted much for forward delivery, owing to lack of supplies, which continued limited. During August, however, there was a larger demand from America and Europe, and although sellers were at first found on a basis of 9s. 6d to 10s. 6d per cwt., c.i.f. New York, the lack of supplies gradually caused the market to harden, and the upward movement continued throughout the month of September. In October, because of a cessation of the demand from the continent, principally France, and owing to pressure to sell from the east, a slight decline in values was realized. The market recovered, however, and the improvement continued until the end of the year.

By this time it had become apparent to those best informed, that there had been considerable diminution in the production of the article, with a consequent shortage of supplies, and no reserve stocks to draw upon. Advices from the east stated that the low prices ruling in the article for some years past had at last told their tale, and caused a steady but sure abandonment of the producing estates. Statistics show that about 8,000 tons less were exported from the Straits in 1905 than in 1902. This news attracted the attention of speculators, both in the east and at home, and the large business done in London, New York and the continent, had the effect of completely upsetting the market, fancy prices being asked. The subsequent rise during the opening months of this year has been caused chiefly by speculation, which has led to several reactions owing to realizations, and the January-March shipment figures also show an increase. When these weak holders had been shaken out, however, and shipments also beginning to fall off again, the market immediately recovered, and is to-day firm, with prospects of short supplies for some time to come.

There can be no doubt but that tapioca has been selling too cheaply for the past few years in Canada, the price having been as low as $2.30 to $2.35 per hundred weight for carload quantities, laid down duty paid in Montreal. It can easily be seen that there was not much money for growers in it at such prices, after the cost of carriage for two months voyage from the east, shipment charges, and duty are taken off, together with the original cost of manufacturing the tapioca, even at the enhanced prices have not helped the growers much, as, owing to the rise in exchange, prices are not remunerative enough to induce fresh cultivation. Quotations have gradually advanced from $2.35 for carload quantities, to $5.87 1-2, about the highest point reached, though buyers were unwilling to pay this latter high price. Indeed, Canadian buyers have all along been unwilling to follow the advance, and while wholesalers have profited by getting increased values for holdings bought at lower prices, the time has now come when supplies are running out, and the trade is bare of stocks.

Canadian buyers are at some disadvantage owing to the length of time taken in transit from the east, as, should the New York market give way before shipments arrive, purchases might be made in the States and duty paid on New York value to better advantage, and for this reason some have preferred to buy at greater cost in New York and London markets on the hand-to-mouth principle, getting their goods at once, rather than to take the risk of getting shipments direct from the east. At the same time there can be no doubt but that the judgment of the trade has been warped by the low prices ruling in recent years, and had they taken the rise in its initial stages as a genuine one, which it undoubtedly was, they might now be reaping the benefit. There have been some reactions from the highest point touched, but latest cables report firm and advancing market, and previous high figures almost reached again.

The following short table will show the decline which has taken place in shipments since 1902 (including medium, seed pearl, and flake tapioca):

Congratulations are not things to be despised or thought lightly of. The average business man is far too busy to stop and concern himself about other men's business, but when he does, for a moment, stay to give expression to feelings of satisfaction, there are volumes in the few words he speaks. It is, therefore, with a feeling of pride and pleasure that The Canadian Grocer reviews some of the congratulations which have quite recently reached the office.

Canadian Grocer Helped.

"I started business a green boy from the farm with $100 capital in a little country village and in eleven years sold out and had $10,000 to the good. I want to tell you The Canadian Grocer was a great assistance to me and I always recommend it to retail grocers who don't get it."

The speaker was a grocery traveler, who had to give up his general store on account of his health. He is now making a success in the management of an eastern branch of a Toronto house. He broke into the territory new to the trade and with a new house, but he has made good and got back his health into the bargain.

It isn't pretended that The Canadian Grocer made this man. That was in him. But it should be useful to a few men in the trade to know that a "green" man, whose principal capital was the business stuff in him, found the trade paper of great assistance to him.

There's another thing worth remembering about this man. When he knew a good thing he passed it on. He recommended The Canadian Grocer to others. That is the kind of generous spirit that succeeds in the largest way. The men who are making this world a better place to live in are the men who want to get on themselves and see others succeed.

A World-Wide Influence.

"Editor Canadian Grocer :

"Dear Sir :—We were somewhat surprised to receive a communication from a firm in Auckland, New Zealand, a few weeks ago, they having noticed our advertisement in your paper, and they wrote to us for prices. It will doubtless interest you to be made aware of this fact as it shows what a wide circulation your journal has.

"Yours faithfully,
"BARNARD & HOLLAND CO.,
"Montreal."

Considerable Credit to Canadian Grocer

"Canadian Grocer :

"Gentlemen :—We enclose herewith a short article, which we would be pleased to have you accord space in an early issue of your paper. It contains matter which we are sure your readers will find very interesting, and in connection with the cuts we are also sending you, is something that will likewise prove valuable.

"We want to say in this connection that our Toronto office is doing an ever-increasing business, the first three months of this year being the largest three months that our Canadian branch ever had, and we must lay considerable credit to the advertising we are doing in your paper.

"Yours truly,
"S. F. BOWSER & CO. (Inc.)"

What a Guelph Subscriber Says.

"We are subscribers to The Grocer and after we have read it we always loan it among the clerks who find many good ideas in it.

"Sincerely yours,

Canadian Grocer's Advice Gives Results

One of our subscribers in Kentville, N.S., in writing us made the following remarks :

"Those stores that read The Canadian Grocer and profit by the advice given from week to week, did the largest trade. The ideas you set forth about the grocers making a display at Easter had their effect, and they found that seasonable novelties help out the staple lines. More attention was paid to window display, and we noticed that the firm of DeWolfe & Lamont devoted one of their large display windows to potted plants, and they had them all sold by noon. It is just such little things as this at the right time that tells and also adds to the profits. The grocer is too prone to let someone else benefit by such lines, and as a rule pays too little attention to novelties and to the confectionery end of the business.

"I think your remarks are opening the eyes of many to the importance of the biscuit and confectionery department."

New Era in Grocery Trade.

The bright grocery traveler who has been in the retail trade himself can give as many pointers to the pound as any man in the business. Here's one : Every traveler and every retailer should subscribe to and read his trade paper. It came about this way : The reporter was in the warehouse talking to two travelers.

"I think you should send The Grocer to travelers free," remarked the short, stout man.

"No, it wouldn't be good for you," the reporter told him. "People don't appreciate papers they get for nothing. Indeed, it seems natural to belittle publications that come free. Now, The Grocer is proud of the good opinion the travelers have often expressed regarding it and does not propose to jeopardize that esteem by sending them the paper free. Besides, the postal people discountenance free lists."

"Well, we don't get any good out of The Grocer."

"Oh, yes, we do," said the tall traveler. "Every traveler should keep posted on the news of the trade and the markets. Why, we're just the people who can get good out of The Grocer.

"A good many retailers, too, don't appreciate The Grocer as they should," he continued. "When I was in the retail trade with my brother we took The Grocer for a number of years and used to read it. But when renewal time came round one year we said, 'We don't need it, it's no use to us,' and we stopped it. Why, I never missed anything as I did that paper as soon as it was stopped. You bet we put it back again."

The grocery business is entering a new era. The price-cutter is doomed — to bankruptcy. From now on the competition that will tell will be the competition in better stores, better equipment, better clerks, better goods and a better knowledge of them. In every one of these directions The Canadian Grocer will be an aid. It will be a great help to your best clerks, the ones that want to be grocers in something more than wearing an apron. It may surprise a good many of you, but one of the department stores subscribes to several copies of The Grocer for its clerks. The fact is there isn't a grocer or a dealer who sells groceries who can afford to be without it.

Chas. Rowlands, general merchant, Coe Hill, Ont., has sold out to W. B. Gunter, of Bogart, Ont. Mr. Gunter is in business in Bogart and will remove his stock to Coe Hill.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Quebec Markets.

FLUCTUATIONS—
Sugar—Firm
Molasses—Firming for advance.
Prunes—Quotations withdrawn.
Filiatras—Advanced ½c.

Business has been very good during the week, and wholesale houses report a better showing on their books. The warmer weather has had a good effect on the trade generally, and more money is being circulated in the country. These two facts combine in making orders better. Collections are coming in very well. Canned goods are without feature unless for the steady demand for corn and peas. There is nothing new in sugar to report, and from present indications it is improbable that prices will decline, at least not in the near future. Molasses is still quoted at the old figures, but half a cent advance is being asked of jobbers. All the talk in tea circles is about the new crop of Japans. From what is said there will be a banner season for these teas. Various reports have appeared regarding the damage done to crops through frost and other causes, but these rumors are not credited here. Prices on prunes have been withdrawn on the command of the fruit houses in California. This would indicate that prunes will be high. Coffee and spices are unchanged locally. Rice and tapioca are about the same as last week, there being little demand for the latter. Other lines are normal.

CANNED GOODS—There is very little that is new in canned goods with the exception, perhaps, of the increased demand for corn and peas. At the prices prevailing there is a steady demand from all parts of the country. For some little time past there has been a noticeable increase in the orders for corn and peas. This week there was a very large increase in the number and size of orders received by wholesalers. Tomatoes are still selling at $1.30, but the arrival of new vegetables, it is thought, will ease off the demand for the canned article.

SUGAR—There is practically nothing new in the sugar situation this week. Business is not very brisk, as merchants do not know whether to buy or to wait. At any rate they are not purchasing freely. It is very hard to say whether the prices will be lower or not. Advices from primary markets state that raw sugar has advanced about ⅛c., and, of course, this would tend to advance prices on the manufactured article.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—Molasses remain unchanged locally as to price, but it is reasonable to expect that there may be an advance, since in the neighborhood of half a cent advance is asked in a wholesale way. This is caused by the advances noted recently as having taken place at the Barbadoes. The price asked there now, including puncheon, is 18c. This is an advance of two cents in as many weeks, and an advance of four cents since the opening. Stocks at the primary market are pretty well all cleared up.

TEAS—All the talk in tea circles at present is in reference to the new Japan stock. The situation generally is about the same as it was last week, with the exception that great interest is being displayed in the possible future of Japans. It is generally thought that there is a good season before them, and many express the opinion that once they are put on the market they will take the place now occupied in the trade by Ceylon greens and other teas of this kind. Many reports have come to hand regarding the new crop, some of them saying that considerable damage has been done by frost, but as local representatives of large Japan houses have heard nothing to this effect these rumors cannot be credited. Ceylon siftings and fannings are much in demand in some quarters. Gunpowders are dear and scarce.

COFFEE—There is practically nothing new in coffee this week. The situation both locally and in primary markets remains about the same. Mochas and Javas are moving fairly well. Brazilian coffees are also going out in an encouraging manner.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — Representatives of Californian houses have received word to withdraw all prices on prunes. This will mean quite a serious outlook for some houses which have already booked orders at the prices sent them last week. The prospect for the coming crop is the cause of this order on the part of the southern fruit merchants. Reports from Greece say that currants are higher. Valencia raisins are firmer. Figs are about cleaned up locally, and dates are being sold freely at prices quoted. Stocks of almonds are gradually being cleaned up at figures ranging from 11½c. to 12c. For shelled almonds as high as 26c. is asked. Filberts are unchanged.

EVAPORATED APPLES—The situation in evaporated apples may be summarized in a few words. There is a limited supply with a limited demand at the old high prices—from 12c. to 12½c.

FISH—Lake trout and whitefish are arriving more freely this week and are easily disposed of at prices quoted. Brook trout are still coming in very well, but not nearly quickly enough to meet the demand there is for them. Haddock received is still of high quality and prices have not come down any. In a week or two, however, it is expected that figures quoted will be lower.

Salt and prepared fish are being sold in quantities usual at this time of year. Salt salmon, however, are selling fairly well. Pickled fish are moving but fairly.

LAST MINUTE PROVISION MARKETS.

Montreal, Thursday, May 17, 1906.

BUTTER—Competition between buyers in country still being felt and prices have advanced again. Now asking 21½c. for choicest creamery.

CHEESE—Situation practically unchanged. Dealers asking 11 to 11½c.

EGGS—Market steady. Fair demand. In some quarters 17c. is asked.

PROVISIONS—No change in market. Fairly good demand in all lines.

Ontario Markets.

MARKET FEATURES:

Valencia raisins, figs, dates and currants—Higher.

Filberts—Advancing.

Potatoes—Higher.

Tomatoes—Cheaper.

Butter—A little easier.

Eggs—Firm.

GROCERIES—Trade has been good to fair this week with a generally strong tone to the markets. Interest has centred in the dried fruit situation, but prices for spot have been affected very little. Valencia raisins are selling here at considerably less than the wholesaler can buy them abroad. Currants are in the same position. Dates and figs are also higher. Sugar is quiet, but the tone is firmer. Salmon is higher and lower. A speculative movement in Fraser River sockeye was checked by some houses by an advance to $1.75; but a large consignment of a favorite brand will arrive here next week to go to the retailer at $1.57 1-2. The canned goods situation remains strong. Tomatoes are still at $1.25 to $1.30, but here and there close buyers can do even better.

CANNED GOODS—Some dealers are still looking for $1.50 tomatoes. That means a very firm market, but there are no quotations above $1.30 as yet, and $1.25 is not uncommon. Better than that is rare. There is a firm feeling for corn of superior quality; but the situation is somewhat complicated by an unusual amount of very inferior goods. Peas are sharing the stronger tone, but prices are unchanged.

Salmon is in a very strong position. Advices from the coast anticipate an opening price on this season's pack 75c. above last year's. The destruction of salmon in San Francisco is a factor. A less proportion of "talls," the favorite shape here, are likely to be put up this season. But in the face of it all one house announces a carload of a favorite brand due next week to sell at $1.57 1-2. The recent bullish talk on salmon encouraged some retailers to speculative effort, and to discourage that some houses raised the price on choice brands to $1.75.

TEA—Business locally has not been in more than average volume. The reduction of the tea duty a penny by the British Chancellor of the Exchequer does not seem to have pleased anyone but the retailer, who alone reaps the benefit. The tone of the London market during April was quiet, but prices averaged a farthing for Indian and 1-8d. more than in April, 1905. The finer grades are still in demand.

COFFEE—The local market continues unchanged and without much information on the outside to indicate the trend. Crop reports from Brazil are very irregular, and the speculative element hesitates.

SUGAR—Raws are somewhat firmer in tone in New York Monday, but in Europe the market was weak. Six centrals have quit grinding in Cuba. After this time last year, 176,000 tons were made by only 104 centrals, and the extra this year is estimated at 15,000 tons. F. O. Licht reports very favorable weather for beets in Europe, and to that probably is due the decline there. Porto Rico, whose sugars enter the United States free, is having a prosperous year, but in Cuba, with a 20 per cent. advantage over other foreign sugars, the planters are having a hard time to make ends meet. A movement is on for a 40 per cent. preference for Cuban sugar in the United States, but it is said to have no chance, in view of the position of the Philippines and the need of the beet sugar industry in the States for protection.

The world's visible supply is now 3,925,567 tons. against 2,836,571 tons last year, an increase of 1,088,996.

DRIED FRUITS—"The great advance in the price of Valencia raisins abroad amounting to about a cent and a half a pound has absolutely stopped further importation," says J. L. Watt. "The trading that has been done in a wholesale way during the past couple of weeks has been between houses, and has in a large measure reduced stocks held by some houses to limits that their own distributing trade is likely to absorb, and consequently an advance of about 1-2c. a pound has taken place locally. The supply, now that it cannot be supplemented by importation, is not considered over abundant, and there is still some trading being done between wholesale houses at the advance indicated. During the next four months, and prior to the arrival of new crop, at the end of that period any change that takes place is likely to be, and we should say certain to be, towards higher prices, as there is yet nearly a cent a pound difference between prices on spot and cost of importation in favor of the former. As there is no other cheap dried fruit on the market, it is not at all improbable that a shortage should manifest itself during the latter part of the period referred to, with a consequent very sensible advance in values."

Dates, too, are higher. Hallowees for importation are costing more than the wholesale price here. Sairs are sound, but of poor quality, and because of a shortage and abnormal demand, last season's crop is about used up. The consumption of dates in Canada this year has been about 2 1-2 million pounds. which is about 25 per cent. more than the average. Figs, tapnets, are also very scarce, and the price has advanced.

NUTS—Quotations to wholesalers on filberts are at least a cent a pound more than at the same time last year. The reason is partly an anticipated larger demand in consequence of a shortage of almonds and other competing nuts. Tarragona almonds are costing 2c. a pound more than a year ago because of frosts in the growing districts of France and Spain.

Maritime Markets

Halifax, May 15, 1906.

The most notable change in the grocery markets during the week is an advance of ten cents per barrel on all grades of Ontario flour. This advance is said to be due to an increase in the price of wheat. The Manitoba flours did not advance, as the Summer freight rates came into effect within the past few days, and these give Manitoba flours an advantage of ten cents per barrel, which about counteracts the advance in wheat. It is thought that Ontario flour will further advance on this market.

The markets on the whole are in a healthy condition, and satisfactory business is reported all along the line. Collections continue good, which is most beneficial to business. From the eastern section of the province trade is reported to be excellent, and with lots of work in sight good times are expected to continue.

The Halifax Board of Trade's excursion over the Halifax and South Western Railway to the shore towns, during the week, was a marked success. Fifty business men of the city took in the trip, including many of the leading wholesale grocers, who called on their customers, not to do business, but merely for the purpose of acquainting themselves with the existing conditions, which were found to be most satisfactory.

There has been no further change in the price of sugar since the advance of the Halifax refineries noted last week. Molasses continue firm, with no change in quotations.

EGGS—The receipts of eggs are only a fair average for the season of the year. Shipments from Prince Edward Island are somewhat disappointing. They are quoted at 17c., and Nova Scotia at 18c.

BUTTER — Considerable local butter has been marketed this week, but the price is unchanged. Small tubs of dairy butter are scarce, and creamery prints are only in fair supply. Good butter finds ready sale at 25c. Tubs are 23c., and fresh rolls from 21c. to 22c.

The Annapolis Creamery, situated in Cornwallis, N.S., is in a most prosperous condition. It has been making large quantities of butter this season, and is now turning its attention to cheese making, intending immediately to turn out even more of this produce the coming year than it did last, when it made 50,000 pounds. Dairying seems to be advancing in the valley.

One of the advantages of railway communication was shown this week, when a commission house received a shipment of butter from Lunenburg. This butter came in over the South Western road, and it is the first that the firm has handled from that county.

FISH—The market shows no change. Large quantities of live lobsters continue to be sent from here to the United States. The steamer Beverley on her last trip from this port to Boston took over 900 crates.

ONIONS—Onions are very scarce on this market, and good stock is hard to obtain. Up to the present no Bermuda onions have reached here, and it is reported that the crop is a complete failure.

In response to a letter asking the results of the experiment of Arnaud merchants in placing their business on a strictly cash basis, Wilfrid Ledoux writes The Canadian Grocer as follows :

Arnaud, Man., April 26, 1906.

"The Canadian Grocer, Winnipeg :

"Dear Sirs,—Your favor of the 23rd inst. duly received, asking me to contribute a letter to The Canadian Grocer giving my experience as to the working of the cash system, which was inaugurated by the merchants of this town on Oct. 1, 1905, and which has been in force ever since.

"I must thank you, Mr. Editor, for allowing me this opportunity of stating my experience with the "Cash System" because this important part of the business is receiving much attention by the trade at present.

"Arnaud is a small country town doing business wholly with farmers, a town where formerly it was the practice to extend long credit in all the stores, and permit me to say that if a cash business can be established in Arnaud it can be done anywhere on earth. The merchants are now so well satisfied with the new system that they have now made up their minds to sell goods for cash 12 months in the year.

"When we established the cash system we certainly anticipated some difficulties in order to retain our regular credit customers, but we were ready for a battle and we fought it through, and I think the battle is just about over now. We met some opposition from our customers for the first month or so, but now they are getting into the new way of doing business and we hear almost every day that they are only too glad the cash system is in force, as it keeps them out of debt and teaches them to economize.

"But we find ourselves up against another proposition now, viz., that of selling goods for cash to a man who has not the money to buy the goods with and can not procure it. You must know how hard it is to collect a $50 debt from a man who has only $10, and can not borrow the balance.

"You may say : Why don't the farmer borrow the money to pay cash for his goods ? Well, if the farmers could borrow a working 'capital of from $100 to $500 each the whole question would be solved and the transactions of the country placed on a cash basis. But in that case the farmer would be the only one paying interest on the 'money,' while the retailer, the jobber and manufacturer would use it for 'nothing.' In other words, four different parties would have the use of the same money and only the farmer would have paid interest on it, while every man in the trade would have received the benefit of a cash deal.

"Under the present system the 'working capital' of the country is kept out of the farmer's hands, and therefore the farmer, the retailer and the jobber have to go in debt, the farmer to the retailer and the retailer and jobber to the banks. The jobber is the only man who uses the money, but all three pay interest on it, and every man in the trade gets a credit deal. Do you see the point ?

"If our banks are unable to supply the people with the necessary money to enable them to pay cash and place the transactions of the country on a cash basis, I do not see what we have banks for.

"In order to be able to buy the production of the people for cash we would require to have three times more money in circulation than we have at present. That is, the production of the country now exceeds the money supply by two-thirds, and it is no wonder that the retailers are complaining that money is scarce in the country.

"I would suggest that our trade associations take the matter up and ask the Government to establish an Agricultural Bank, so as to lend money to farmers on real estate, or other good security, at a living rate of interest, say 5 per cent. to 6 per cent. At the present time the retailer and the farmer are paying from 8 per cent. to 12 per cent. interest, and are compelled to use credit instead of money. This does not appear to me to be at all fair play.

"Another remedy would be for both wholesale and retail merchants to refuse to buy and sell another dollar's worth of goods on credit. This would certainly be the most effective weapon with which to fight the credit system.

"I would be pleased to hear from other members of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada on this subject."

It is gratifying to know that the bold experiment of the Arnaud merchants is succeeding so well. In many parts of the west the merchants undertook to follow the association plan of refusing credit from November 1 to April 1, but the Arnaud merchants were not content with half measures, and they boldly shut off all credit on October 1. Their undertaking was probably rendered the more difficult by the fact that Arnaud was one of the few districts to suffer severely last Summer from hail. In spite of all difficulties the experiment of shutting off all credit is apparently succeeding very well, and what Arnaud merchants can do should not be impossible for merchants in other parts of the west.

In his discussion of the banking system, Mr. Ledoux raises an interesting question which The Canadian Grocer would be glad to have its readers discuss in these columns. Mr. Ledoux ascribes the scarcity of money and the credit evil as it affects the stores to the fact that the banks do not lend money readily to the farmer. The farmer being denied his "working capital" is compelled to go in debt to the retailer. In order to pay his bills, the retailer borrows from the bank, as does the wholesaler to pay the manufacturer. If the former could borrow readily from the banks he could pay for his goods in cash, and the retailer and wholesaler would not have to go to the banks for their ready cash. Has Mr. Ledoux struck at the root of the difficulty? Discussion is invited.

B. C. Markets

Vancouver, May 10, 1906.

To handle Alberta wheat for export to the Orient and elsewhere, the Alberta Pacific Elevator Company will at once begin the construction of an elevator on the Burrard Inlet waterfront, so that direct loading from cars to ocean-going ships may be made possible. The company is already extensively engaged in handling grain in Alberta and has in hand the construction of a big sorting elevator at Calgary of half a million bushels capacity. With these facilities and with large numbers of farmers' elevators all through the province, the company expects to take full advantage of special freight rates secured from the C.P.R. Mr. L. C. Strong, manager of the company, thinks the price of wheat for export will soon be as high on Edmonton and Calgary base as on Winnipeg and Brandon.

There is already one elevator erected and in operation in Vancouver, handling Alberta wheat for the local market. This is owned by Messrs. Hall & Sons.

There promises to be a exceedingly large fruit crop in the province this year, though the season is unusually dry. The wet weather ended very early in the year, and the Spring is very warm and dry, in fact it has been, strictly speaking, Summer weather for the past month. The tree fruit crops of the lower mainland will, of course, benefit from the dry season, while it is not too dry for the orchards of the upper country districts, which never have an excess of rain at any time.

The supply of fruit from California, which at this season of the year is the principal source of replenishing the local market, has been somewhat interrupted owing to the steamer service between San Francisco and British Columbia ports being suspended for a time. Shipments have, however, begun again and will be kept up regularly. The steamer Queen, of the Pacific Coast Steamship Co., was the first to arrive, reaching port on Monday night. She brought a large tonnage, much of which was fruit and fresh vegetables.

The coast halibut fisheries of British Columbia are to be still further exploited by the New England Fish Co., which is adding a third steamer to its fleet of ocean-going tugs engaged in the halibut trade. The new vessel, built especially on the Atlantic coast for this trade, is now en route around the Horn and when she arrives in the course of a few weeks will be at once put in commission, bringing cargoes of halibut to this port for the Boston market. The vessel is of similar type to the two large ones already operated by the company. They are very fast and strong fishing vessels and have a capacity up to a hundred tons or more of halibut.

Action has been taken by the Alberta Legislature in bonusing the beet sugar industry in that province to the extent of $50,000 per year, at half a cent per pound for the first two years and one-quarter of a cent for the next three years. Interest is taken in Vancouver because of the fact that the big beet sugar refinery at Raymond, in Southern Alberta, is a direct competitor of the B. C. Sugar Refinery here. Of course the vast difference in the product, the B. C. sugar being pure cane sugar, has an effect in the consumer's mind. The bonus system as applied to beet sugar has been abolished in European countries, where the industry was first established.

Market conditions are healthy though not unusually active. Northern shipments by steamer, both to cannery points up the coast and to White Horse for the Yukon trade, are fairly active. The salmon packing season on northern rivers commences very soon now. The waiting for the opening of Yukon navigation is the most important matter before the people of the northern country just now. Old-timers say that the last month, when the Winter traffic is suspended by breaking of snow roads, and before the steamer service can begin on the river, is the hardest to stand in the whole year. Betting on the day, hour, minute and second the ice will go out of the river, and on any and every point in connection with that event, forms the chief relaxation for some weeks while everyone waits for the movement.

Groceries move quietly at present. Staples are in steady supply, and no alterations in price of any moment have been given. The fact that trade has been disturbed in the south by the San Francisco disaster has not affected prices of dried fruits materially, for the demand is of course not heavy just at present. Later, when shipments begin north, the standing of prices will be more interesting.

In the produce market the supply of local fresh butter both dairy and creamery increases steadily, and the stock of local fresh eggs is still meeting demands. Prices now quoted are 30c. for creamery and 25c. to 27c. for fresh local dairy. Eggs are bringing 23 to 25 cents. None but local are offering.

In vegetables, Australian onions are offering at 5 to 5½c. per lb. Lettuce, in crates, is $1.75, while green onions, parsley, and radishes bring 25c. per dozen bunches. Asparagus is quoted 10½c. per lb.

BROKEN EGGS.

Broken eggs have long been a source of worry and annoyance to the retail dealer and in spite of all his care he has been unable to get away from them. There is an article now on the market in which eggs can be packed and delivered without breaking and at a saving of time, worry, money and eggs. It consists of a substantial wooden carrier and a paper tray. In delivering, the carrier is turned upside down and eggs are deposited on the tray and left there, the carrier being returned to the store. This device is manufactured by the Star Egg Carrier & Tray Mfg. Co., Rochester, N.Y.

PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

There is nothing of interest to report since our last review, and little relief is expected for some time to come. There are practically no indications of increased outputs on farmers' side, although it is generally believed that more "stores" are in bearing. The full requirements of all factories stand at some 60,000 hogs, whilst the receipts for recent weeks have averaged little more than half that number. The reports of the last seven weeks show a fluctuation of some 8,000 hogs ; two and three weeks ago supplies reached a good increase, and things had a better aspect. Present prices, however, are a factor of equal importance, as on present basis of values at export points, it is almost impossible to make trade remunerative.

The English market has for some time ruled fairly steady with upward tendency for all quality goods. It came, therefore, somewhat of a surprise when that market made a sharp decline of two shillings, which it did some two weeks since, this occurring at the very moment when supplies on this side looked more promising, and prices were being well maintained by competitive buyers.

The whole situation is a peculiarly difficult one. Packers are doing their utmost to encourage farmers' supplies, and are disposed to give the highest margin of values for live hogs, and to show discrimination in favor of hogs which have been specially cared for. They are, however, up against a serious proposition with the export market on account of the sudden and unexpected drop, which has now reached seven shillings below prices ruling some seven weeks ago. It is, therefore, easy to see that with home markets good, the inclination of the packer is to care for domestic trade at the expense of export. A further important feature has been the continued arrival of increased supplies on the English market of Danish bacon, which has been a factor in bringing down export prices, and one which gives it rather a permanent character.

The American situation shows no material change. The belief is that as the farmers are over their more urgent Spring work that they will pay more attention to marketing live stock supplies, and that the hog and cattle supplies should be by this time of somewhat increased volume ready for market. It is regarded as probable by some of the leading traders in the products that the Summer marketing of hogs will be of a materially enlarged order.

Our contemporary, the National Provision, in its most recent report states : "There is little doubt but that with hog supplies enlarging, efforts would be made to obtain them at lower prices, particularly as they are now at higher than usual with the cost of the products. Moreover, with the efforts to get the prices of hogs upon an easier basis there would be, likely, as well, freer selling of the products on the 'short' side by the leading interests."

CANADIAN HOG RAISING INDUSTRY.

Investigations have shown that for some months past the supply of bacon hogs in Canada has been falling off. Even before the order was issued debarring packers from importing United States hogs to be slaughtered in bond, difficulty was experienced by Canadian packers in procuring sufficient hogs. The amount of the shortage during the Summer and Fall is indicated by the fact that packers claim to have been able to secure only from 30 to 50 per cent. of the capacity of their factories.

Whatever may the extent of the shortage or the real cause of it, the fact remains that unless producers and packers grapple in sympathetic co-operation with the situation, Canada's valuable bacon industry which has cost years of strenuous effort to build up may become seriously demoralized.

1890 there were only two packing houses in the export trade with a weekly capacity of some 3,000 hogs, while in 1905 the weekly capacity of the sixteen packing houses in operation was some 50,000. While this limit has not been reached within from 10,000 to 15,000 hogs weekly according to the season, the output from Canada has reached about $15,000,000 annually, or 20 per cent. of the total quantity of bacon imported by Great Britain. To jeopardize so valuable an industry would be nothing less than a national calamity.

If the farmers who have been in the habit of raising hogs will accord the bacon industry a steady persistent support begotten of the knowledge that hog raising pays year in and year out, the future has very large possibilities for the Canadian bacon industry. Canadian bacon having already won a place on the British market commanding respect, as it increases in quantity and improves in quality it will undoubtedly become a daily necessity of the British consumer. That it may occupy this enviable position both farmer and packer must co-operate, the farmer producing the steady supply of the right class of hogs, the packer by paying a fairly uniform price from month to month and from year to year; and he must give value per pound according to the quality of the product he received. Let each do his part and there will be little trouble about the supply of hogs for keeping the factories going at a normal capacity. What appears to be most needed at the present time is that relations of confidence be restored and maintained between packer and farmer through fair dealing and intelligent co-operation. With these and an appreciation on the part of the producer, of the possibilities of the industry, hog raising cannot fail to be one of the most profitable branches of Canadian agriculture.

THE PACKER A UNIVERSAL BENEFACTOR.

The packers' contribution to economic progress in the way of by-product utilization has been enormous. It is impossible to realize the extent to which this touches almost every physical element in our everyday life—from making worn out and barren land yield bounteous crops to supplying the buttons on our coats. If all of these by-products were suddenly striken from commerce the void would astound the world and the result would be everywhere considered a public calamity.

"Waste not" is the packer's creed, and his scientific faithfulness to it—inspired by self-interest—is actually one of the most fruitful sources of economic advantage to the people of the civilized world thus far brought about by the aid of the laboratory of the scientist.

Let us see just how much this by-product utilization means to the grower and the consumer of food animals as well as the people in general.

Ice and Refrigeration Revolutionizes Packing.

In the old times packing was done in the Winter. The first change in method was the use of ice and the commencement of Summer packing. This started in hog packing, but, with the introduction of the refrigerator car, beef was killed largely in the Summer. About this time some of the packers adopted the method of packing and shipping meats in tin cans. The refrigerator car permitted beef to be killed near where it was grown, as it was cheaper to pay freight on 550 pounds of carcass beef than on 1,000 pounds of live animal. Immediately following this the railroads endeavored to advance the freight on dressed beef so that they could still continue to ship the animals alive on the hoof, as they were afraid that their tonnage would be materially reduced. It was soon demonstrated that under the new system their beef tonnage was greater and their old live animal tonnage smaller, and though the dressed beef rates east were much greater per pound than for live animals, yet the freight on 550 pounds of dressed beef is less than on 1,000 pounds of live animal.

Winnowing the Waste.

The 450 pounds of non-edible material was largely thrown away, although the hide and tallow were utilized. Later, some of the waste product was used in the manufacture of glue. Nitrogen being the chief element in plant food, and this being abundant in the great mass of refuse matter originally thrown away as hopeless waste from all the packer's processes, a most important economic advance was made in the step which turned this large volume of scrappage into fertilizer.

It is good sense and for the best interest of the world that all material not needed to feed, clothe and heal the world should be returned to the ground as food for plants to grow more grain, to feed more cattle and to feed more people. Thus is the circle completed by the packer.

By-product Utilization a Great Success.

All the cunning of the chemist has been called into service to save, to make the most of every scrap of material in hand, and to discover new ways in which some element of waste may be diverted from uselessness to use. Hundreds of valuable products are now made and shipped all over the world from materials which, under the old methods, had little or no value. Thousands of people are employed in manufacturing these products. The technical schools are constantly being called upon for young men to aid in solving new problems in by-product utilization. New plants are being built requiring material, machinery and labor in their construction. Success in by-product utilization in the packing industry has directed the attention of other industries to this important element in industrial administration.

Of World-Wide Importance.

All this directly affects the people and has been of great benefit to them. The investigator in medicinal and other lines is constantly calling on the packer for material to aid him in his work. In the pharmaceutical line much has been done of benefit, and many ills are helped by pharmaceutical preparations of animal origin. In the fertilizer line many sections are given over to growing products which could not be profitably grown without the use of fertilizers. The upland cotton section of the south has been made by the use of fertilizer in the growing of cotton. Sandy soils in sections climatically favorable have been developed into large truck-farming districts through the use of fertilizer, as the soil, without fertilizer, is practically sterile. In the manufacture of fertilizer the packer has done his share in saving material formerly permitted to go to waste.

All Industries Make Call on Packer's By-product.

The furniture of the country is glued with the packer's glue. A great deal of the wool used in clothing is from sheep slaughtered by the packers. One of the largest sources of curled hair is the switch from the tails of cattle. A large portion of the soap manufactured comes from the tallows and greases prepared by the packers. The colors in the Summer prints worn by women are largely fixed by the use of albumen prepared by the packers, as is also the finish on many of the finer leathers. The horn-comb, hair-pins and buttons are made from the horns of steers. The knife-handle, the bone button, and many other articles are made from the hard bone of cattle.

The Physician Well Represented.

Packing house laboratory products, the results of original research by scientists of the first class, are employed every day by physicians, surgeons, dentists and chemists throughout the world. More than thirty recognized therapeutic agents of animal origin are produced in Armour & Co.'s laboratory, Chicago. Among them are the pepsin and pancreatin that physicians use in treating digestive disorders. There is a product of thyroid glands that is employed in treating cretinism, or idiocy. Another is suprarenalin, used in the most delicate surgical operations to stop the flow of blood. To illustrate how closely the by-product feature of the business is gleaned, the suprarenal glands of more than 100,000 sheep are required to produce one pound of suprarenalin and, when produced, this suprarenalin is worth more than $5,000 a pound.

Certain by-products of the packing plants are used for hardening and for coloring steel; in fact, materials of animal origin, the result of by-product utilization, enter into the manufacture of almost every article extensively.

A Feature in Buying.

The packer who could make the most out of these products could afford to pay and did pay more for the live steer than his competitor who was not so progressive, and in consequence he got his pick of the cattle. The stock-grower was benefited by the higher price paid for the live animal, and the people were benefited by the lower selling cost of the beef over the old method. One cannot eat his cake and have it, too, and the reward that the packer received was that of increased business and the decreased cost per head of killing cattle, owing to his much heavier kill; but, in order to cash in that reward, he had to give both the stock-grower and the public a part of the benefit of by-product utilization.*

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—The lard situation is practically the same as last week. The prices remain unchanged for all lines. There is little or no export demand, and the quantity going into consumption locally is not as large as might be expected this time of year. Hams and bacon and provisions generally are not going very quickly. What business is being transacted is mostly of a sorting character and is not on a very large scale. Warmer weather will no doubt bring with it a better trade in hams and bacon at least.

PROVISIONS—The market continues firm and the largest commission houses do not look for lower prices before September, when, it is said, the supply of hogs will increase. High prices have stimulated production throughout the country but the farmers have not the new hogs ready. The high price on front quarters of beef has been lowered 50 cents and street lots of hogs are quoted 25 cents less. Business is in fair volume.

EGGS—A firmer tone with a slight advance indicates the increasing efforts of the packers to secure supplies. Packing or storing at present prices is regarded as precarious business by some, but the eggs are being put away all over the country. Perhaps someone has seen signs of a hard Winter ahead. Doubtless consumption has greatly increased also, due in part at least to the high cost of meat. A dozen of eggs will go round a good-sized family, even for dinner, but 20c. worth of meat would leave much to be desired.

are the best oatmeal biscuits made. This isn't simply our own opinion, it's the verdict of thousands of regular consumers in many parts of the world.

These highly nutritious, palatable, and remarkably digestible biscuits have an entirely unique and delicious flavour, peculiar to themselves, which will, undoubtedly, be much appreciated by everyone. They are made from the celebrated "VEDA" Oat Food, which is prepared entirely from the finest oats, by a special process, which, while conserving and improving the whole food value of oatmeal, converts the high percentage of insoluble carbohydrates in the oats into soluble food material, resulting in an article sixteen times more digestible than ordinary oatmeal. "VEDA" is so highly digestible that its use often cures indigestion, greatly improves the general health, and increases the vigour of mind and body. Containing, as it does, the whole, admittedly high, nutritive qualities of the finest Oatmeal in so highly digestible a form, "VEDA" becomes quickly assimilated into the blood, which it enriches, and builds up brain, bone and muscle.

We have the exclusive rights of biscuit making from the proprietors of "VEDA" Oatmeal.

CONFECTIONERY AN OPPORTUNITY

Profit is the first consideration in establishing a store. To obtain this is the great endeavor of every trader, and many are the devices, some questionable, some otherwise, to which recourse is made. There is one feature, however, to which attention may be drawn, and which, if properly heeded, might be the means of giving to the grocer a revenue far in excess of the extra trouble and expense involved.

A Complete Line of Confectionery.

During the past quarter of a century trade has gone under a complete revolution, and the "up-to-date" retail grocer will consider as his line anything that can be ranked as a household necessity; such a man will carry in his store many a line which his opponent round the corner cannot be induced to stock. The time has now come when confectionery in its fullest details—cakes, biscuits, sweets and pastries—must be considered a legitimate staple in the grocery trade; and the grocer, if he is to keep on top, must now bring his confectionery boldly to the front, and see to it that he not only has a few popular lines, but a full and complete line of all kinds of confections.

Not a Side Line.

Many grocers carry their confectionery more as a side line than as a staple, and relegate these goods to an unimportant corner or shelf. By confectionery is meant not only sweets and candies, but all lines of cakes and biscuits usually classed as household confections.

An Attractive Place.

Give your confectionery department a special place in your store and arrange it attractively to take your customer's eye, and with a little extra pushing you will soon have a department paying you equal to anything you carry, and which will attract to your store the young and coming generation, just the ones you want.

A Little Light Refreshment.

Further, when once your confectionery department is located, add a few small tables and chairs, and what is to hinder a judicious light refreshment being served, such as a cup of tea and a biscuit? You have the tea, coffee and cocoa; you have the cake and biscuits; why not use it as an additional attraction to your store—a paying one too? In England and continental cities many a grocer runs a good side issue in the form of light refreshment, making his favorite blend the leader, and at the same time educating his customers' palates in tea and coffee tasting. An instance is on record where a grocer gave up his shop parlor for this purpose and he soon had a room full nearly every afternoon, the very time he was usually quiet, and with a good revenue to boot. His sales of sweets and confections increased as well.

STRANGE AMERICAN CONFECTIONERY STORES.

Of all the queer nooks and corners of New York, there is none more interesting than the bakeshops of the distinctly foreign elements, for nearly all European and Oriental nations are fond of sweets and in many cases they have brought to their new home the same methods and receipts that were wont to tickle their palates in the distant "fatherland."

Incidentally, one may comment on the vagaries of public "impressions." When thinking of the heathen Chinese, who would picture him eating a cake— the mental vision would have the long-tailed one devouring a bowl of white rice and a chop suey, if, indeed, the imagination did not conjure up a bow-wow stew or a fricasee of rodents. Yet the Chinese are great cake eaters, and many of their cakes and sweets are delicious.

Furthermore, there is nothing in their making that would prejudice even the most fastidious. Indeed, even the New England woman, whom tradition credits with being a model housewife, could spend an hour or more in the tiny little room dignified by the Mongolian as a "bakery" to the very great benefit, not only of herself, but of her family as well.

She would find the "bakery" in the cellar, of course, for he of the pigtail is fond of the twilight, and the salesroom and the mixing room are all one—but these are only minor differences of custom.

A Dainty Confection.

On the narrow shelves of a tiny glass case are displayed a variety of colors and shapes of something which one is assured are "cakes.' Queer-looking things they are, but one is finally prevailed upon to sink one's teeth into a globe of golden brown parchment-looking stuff flaked over with seasame seeds. The first bite was probably half-hearted and was perhaps taken principally to avoid hurting the feelings of the celestial who stands close by with a look of real interest on his usually immobile countenance, and also to avoid encountering the gibes of one's friends at any tendency to "back out," but that first bite converts you as your teeth go through the crust and the paste of bean and fig is taken on the tongue—you are conscious only of a vague taste of perfume, but it's a most alluring taste, and you don't need much persuasion to make you tackle number two!

How it is Done.

The expert Chinese baker makes about forty different kinds of cake (all of different shapes and color) and several varieties of candies. His method of preparing his dough and the ingredients he uses are totally unlike those of the Occident.

The mixing board is a white wood table about six by three and a half feet in dimensions. On to the middle of this he sits a small pile of flour, and in the exact centre of this he makes a hole with his hand and pours in his sweetening (sugar and water boiled to a syrup), which he calls "honey," his shorten-particular receipt in mind. These are kneaded into the flour—a very small amount of flour comparatively and the dough is exceedingly short—and then it is ready for the filling, for most of the cakes the Chinese make are of pastry with filling of jelly.

A National Institution.

Perhaps the cake most acceptable to the palate of the Occidental is the "Moon cake."

This is as characteristic of the orthodox Chinese as are baked beans of the New Englander, and has been called by some writers the "mince pie" of the Orient. It is made only during harvest time, but during the season (from August to October) a visit to one of these tiny shops has much of interest.

There will be one man choping fruits and nuts, and another kneading dough, while a third carries the pans of culinary marvels to the oven.

The filling of the Moon cake contains plum jelly, bean paste, seasame seeds, ginger root, soy beans, coriander, poppy seeds, watermelon and squash seeds, sugar, peanut oil, hard fat (from young pigs), and coarser ingredients, well chopped and mixed with paste and jelly.

One workman rolls the mixture into a thin sheet of pastry, and his assistant presses it into a mould cut in a solid block of wood, and then hits it hard on the edge of the table to dislodge the cake, which falls out perfect in shape and ready for the oven.

"Takee big lot strength," he says, breathing hard. "Muchee hard work" —and whack! out falls another cake.

The mould produces a form like the old-fashioned round pat of butter, and on the top are embossed complicated hieroglyphics which the American conceives to be weird invocations to the harvest gods, until a little questioning brings out the matter-of-fact information that it is only the trade mark of the shop.

The Crystal Cake.

Another interesting cake revels in the fascinating name of "Crystal Cake." It is a product unique in itself, and unlike anything to be found elsewhere in America. It is of the consistency of guava paste, the color of boiled starch and of the appearance of a honeycomb —with a flavor, which is at first distasteful, but the next moment carries one off to the realms of Lichee and Gum Guat.

Imagine a cake the ordinary size of a New England sponge cake brought to the table in a quivering, shivering, shaky condition which refuses to have a knife passed through it gracefully and most strenuously objects to being cut with a fork. Alas, the only way to eat this cake is go back to the days of our childhood, when, with a piece of bread and butter in one hand and a piece of bread and jam in the other, we were absolutely happy!

So with the Crystal cake—the only way to conquer it is to take it in your fingers and thus proceed with its proper disposition.

Unfortunately this extraordinary cake —so-called—will not live but twenty-four hours (short hours, too), as it soon becomes rancid even when kept in an American ice box.

They Taste Like Sunrise.

One kind of candy worthy of mention is circular in shape, somewhat larger in size than a silver dollar, about a third of an inch thick and of a cream and white color. It is very dry, and when one first takes a bit in the mouth there seems to be a little or no flavor, but as it dissolves you are conscious of a sweet, subtle taste—half the taste of fruit, half the perfume of flowers. It's an indescribable flavor unless one can appreciate the effect they had on one woman, when she said: "They taste like 'sunrise.'"

CANADA'S OUTPUT OF MAPLE GOODS.

An interesting fact not generally known is that Canada supplies about half of the maple syrup and sugar used all over the world. The average output per year is about 17,804,825 pounds. The yield of 1901 was valued at $1,780,482.

If the yield was in proportion to the number of maple trees growing in Canada it would be worth nearly six times this amount. At the present time the Province of Quebec is the heaviest producer with 13,564,819 pounds. New Brunswick yields 207,450 pounds, and the annual production of Nova Scotia aggregates 112,496 pounds.

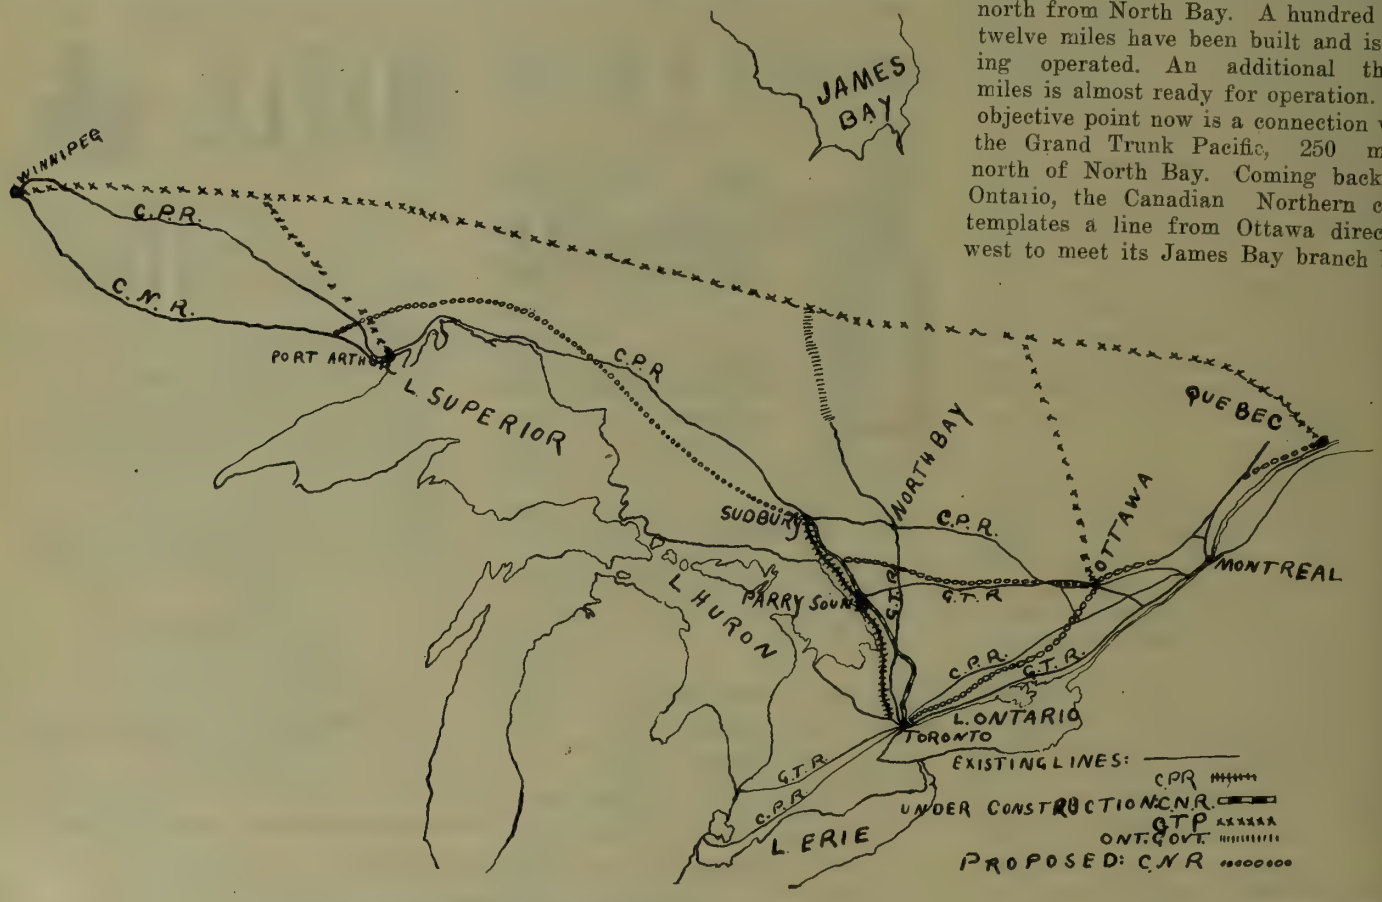
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS COCOA

RAILWAY BUILDING FROM WINNIPEG TO QUEBEC

There could be no more convincing evidence of the phenomenal industrial development and settlement now going on in Canada than the railway building and extension under way and immediately contemplated.

In the west, that is west of Lake Superior, a second great railway system, the Canadian Northern, has grown up in ten years with 1,200 miles of main line from Port Arthur to Edmonton, and many branches. This year it will enter Toronto and in a very few years will be the second Canadian transcontinental. The third transcontinental, the Grand Trunk Pacific, is being made to the order of the Government and Grand Trunk interests. The C.P.R. is building extensively in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, every province from the St. Lawrence to the Pacific.

How many thousand miles of new railway are here indicated is not to the point and need not be made a memory test. Take, as a concrete example, the operations in Ontario, looking to improved communication with the west and larger outlet for the prairie products. Until now the only direct all-rail route from Toronto to the west was by the Northern division of the Grand Trunk to North Bay. The C.P.R. sent its passengers that way. To-day both C.P.R. and Canadian Northern are each building as rapidly as posible a line from Toronto to Sudbury. The C.P.R. expects to be operating its new line as far as Coldwater, 100 miles north of Toronto, in a little over a month. This Summer, probably sometime in August, the Canadian Northern will be operating its line as far as Parry Sound, thus affording an additional lake and rail route to and from the west in time for the moving of this year's crop. By August next year it is expected the C.P.R. line will be finished to Sudbury. The Canadian Northern also expects to complete its line to Sudbury next year.



Short Way to the Sea.

Another very important project which the C.P.R. has in hand is the construction of an air line from Victoria Harbor on the Georgian Bay, near Midland, to Peterboro to improve their facilities for handling the western crop. Their present Georgian Bay port is Owen Sound. This new line will lessen the distance between the bay and tide water by about a hundred miles.

Within a fortnight the Canadian Northern filed with the Railway Commissioners plans for a line between Toronto and Ottawa. The Canadian Northern will have this year, when work under construction is completed, the most extensive railway system in Nova Scotia. The extensions building are from Liverpool to Barrington on the east coast, and from Middleton to Victoria Beach on the Bay of Fundy. In Quebec they have 200 miles of line from Grenville and Montreal to Riviere a Pierre Junction and are building from Grand Mere on that line 75 miles to Quebec. When completed this will give a third trunk line from Quebec to Montreal. The company have a charter to build from Quebec to Pugwash, N.S., but that part of the transcontinental plan is not yet under way.

A Government Line.

The Government of Ontario, several years ago undertook to construct a line north from North Bay. A hundred and twelve miles have been built and is being operated. An additional thirty miles is almost ready for operation. The objective point now is a connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific, 250 miles north of North Bay. Coming back to Ontario, the Canadian Northern contemplates a line from Ottawa directly west to meet its James Bay branch between Parry Sound and Sudbury and from Sudbury to a point on its line west of Port Arthur, making the middle link of the system across the continent.

The accompanying map shows the main features of present railway development between Winnipeg and Quebec. Of existing railways only main lines are indicated.

Canadians, spread out in a thin line across the American continent, are bred to such conceptions of distance that these immense railway undertakings appear as ordinary everyday matters, but they portend development that means a readjustment shortly of the world's trade. They are outlets for the coming mammoth product of the Canadian west.

A DOUBLE PROFIT

Royal Baking Powder Pays a Greater Profit to the Grocer Than any Other Baking Powder He Sells.

Profit means real money in the bank. It does not mean "percentage," which may represent very little actual money. A grocer often has the chance to sell either:

1. A baking powder for 45c. a pound and make a profit of 5c. or 6c., or,
2. A baking powder for 10c. a pound and make "20 per cent profit," which means only 2c. actual money. Which choice should you take?

Royal Baking Powder makes the customer satisfied and pleased, not only with the baking powder, but also with the flour, butter, eggs, etc., which the grocer sells.

This satisfaction of the customer is the foundation of the best and surest profit in business—it is permanent. Do not take the risk of selling a cheap alum baking powder; some day the customer may find out about the alum, and then your best profit in the customer's confidence is gone.

Royal Baking Powder pays greater profits to the grocer than any other baking powder he sells.

It keeps better than any other cereal. It is not "treated" or "flavored" with anything and hence does not deteriorate.

It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve, requiring only a slight warming in the oven to restore crispness.

It is economical. Contains more nutriment than meat or eggs and costs much less.

The Shredding process makes it the most easily digested of all the cereal foods.

It is good for any meal any day in any season in any climate.

It has larger culinary uses than any other cereal food. Hundreds of dainty and palatable dishes may be made with it.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The general situation is somewhat disappointing from a dealer's standpoint at the present moment. Export prices have been slowly declining, until at the present time the best offers from the English market for flour are in the neighborhood of twenty-one and six and twenty-two shillings, a price at which it is impossible to let the dealers out.

The price of Winter wheat shows an advance of ½c. per bushel, 80½c. having been paid for several cars of No. 2 white wheat, and No. 1 white is reported as selling at 82c. The majority of millers, however, are not willing to pay over 80c., which, combined with the very light stocks, has resulted in a very limited business being transacted.

Prices of Manitoba wheat have held very steady, being practically unchanged from a week ago. The principal feature in the buying of Manitoba wheat has been the purchasing of July by the larger Ontario mills as well as by some of the millers whose mills are of less capacity. The high quality of flour made from the Manitoba wheat of this year's crop is no doubt largely responsible for this movement, the mills wishing to lay in a stock of old wheat sufficient to carry them into the new crop year.

In Manitoba the demand for flour is good. The last few weeks have shown notable improvement in this respect. Considerable quantities are being shipped to Eastern Canada lake-and-rail and the foreign markets are also buying more liberally than was the case a few weeks ago. Local trade in the west is excellent. Many new stores have opened in the towns and villages of the west this Spring and these are all liberal buyers. Older customers of the mills have also increased their orders. Surplus stocks of flour accumulated during the Winter are much reduced. The larger mills are selling their product as fast as it is ready for marketing.

The demand from the eastern provinces is fair, but so far has not been anything like as good as the millers expected, showing little or no response, so far, in either inquiry or prices, to the advance in the price of wheat.

HOW TAPIOCA IS PRODUCED.

Much interest is being displayed in tapioca at present, owing to the state of the market, and to the scarcity of that product, so that a few words on its production, and other facts concerning it may prove instructive to those who are interested in tapioca.

It may surprise the uninformed to learn that tapioca is the product of a tree, or plant, known as the cassava or manioc plant, which is a native of Brazil. It is easily transplanted, however, as it thrives in all tropical countries. The plant is easily propagated by cutting the stems, and is of rapid growth, attaining maturity in six months.

As it is known to commerce, tapioca is a farinaceous food substance. It is prepared from cassava starch, which is a product of the large tuberous roots of the plant above mentioned. The cassava or manioc plant, is very bushy and reaches an average height of from six to eight feet, although it is often higher. The stems are white, very brittle, and have a large pith. The leaves are near the extremity of the branches which are very crooked. The roots are very large and turnip like, and sometimes weigh as much as thirty pounds. From three to eight roots grow in a cluster. The tapioca is obtained from these roots, which, like other parts of the plant, contain a milky acid which is poisonous. This acid, however, is very easily dissipated by heat, and the poison is eventually totally extracted.

The roots are washed and grated to a pulp. After being thoroughly washed this pulp is spread and heated on iron plates, being subjected to much stirring and mussing with an iron rod. It is thus exposed to sufficient heat to cause a partial rupture of the starchy granules, which burst into irregular pellets, known as flake tapioca. The different sizes produced are caused by slight variations in the method of manufacture, so that we have what is known as the ordinary medium pearl tapioca, and also seed pearl tapioca, the latter in Canada very often being known as white sago.

As already stated, the plant from which tapioca is obtained, originally came from Brazil, but it has been transplanted in different parts of the world and at the present time the chief producing country is the Straits Settlements. Almost the entire amount of tapioca used in Canada, and in fact the world over, comes from that country, part of the British Empire, being exported through Penang and Singapore. The cost of manufacturing the tapioca is not very great owing to the cheap labor obtainable in the Settlements, but at the prices which have been ruling up to a year or so ago, there was very little money in it for the producer.

OATMEAL INDUSTRY IN CANADA.

		Bbls.
Mill capacity		1,500,000
Domestic consumption	180,000
Export	200,000
Total		380,000
Surplus capacity		1,120,000

These figures represent, approximately at least, the oatmeal milling situation in Canada. Yet stories reach the newspapers of new mills about to be started. It was to meet this situation that the organization of oatmeal millers was formed a few years ago with a view to, in a measure, at least, controling the output. The association disbanded a couple of months ago.

The mill capacity may be in excess of the figures stated. The proprietor of one of the large mills made a careful computation and arrived at 1,750,000 barrels as the total capacity. Another gentleman of large interests placed the consumption at 1,500,000 barrels and the milling capacity at six times that, 9,000,000. A third miller placed the domestic consumption last year at 210,000 barrels and a fourth at 130,000 barrels The understanding among the members of the late association was that the aggregate milling capacity was 1,500,000 barrels and the domestic consumption 180,000 barrels, and they looked into the matter pretty carefully.

Since 1891.

The record export of oatmeal, according to the latest report of the Department of Trade and Commerce, was 204,464 barrels in 1904. The export figures since 1891 are:

Year.	Bbls.	Avg. price per bbl.
1891	11,988	$3.83
1892	103,174	4.02
1893	156,512	4.00
1894	92,262	3.46
1895	80,265	3.44
1896	110,577	3.30
1897	153,865	3.04
1898	176,821	3.13
1899	119,986	3 30
1900	145,867	3.25
1901	151,851	3.08

1902	91,706	3.75
1903	145,036	3.71
1904	204,464	3.70
1905	168,607	3.80

Great Britain takes over 90 per cent. of the oatmeal Canada exports. The total value of export oatmeal during the fiscal year 1905 was $641,233 divided as follows: Great Britain, $587,964; United States, $138; South Africa, $7,706; Denmark, $7,906; France, $5,280; Germany, $1,547; Holland, $8,105; Newfoundland, $9,341; Norway and Sweden, $11,593; other countries, $1,653.

Scotch is Preferred.

Scotch oatmeal is preferred on the English market and brings 6d to a shilling per cwt. more than Canadian. The Scotch oats are heavier than the Canadian and the meal is said to possess a superior flavor derived from the sea air. How much of the oats ground in Scotch mills get their sea air flavor on the way from Russia there are no figures at hand to show. Great Britain imports enormous quantities of oats annually, varying, between 1900 and 1904, from 20 to 14 million cwts., and only a very small proportion comes from Canada.

The Scotch mills cannot, however, supply the English market with oatmeal. The importations in 1900 were 837,000 cwts.; in 1901, 840,000; in 1902, 612,000; in 1903, 728,000, and in 1904, 648,000. Practically all of it came from the United States and Canada. Up to 1903 the United States sent anywhere from four to eight times as much oatmeal to Great Britain. In 1903 Canada sent 262,000 cwts. and the United States 457,000; while in 1904 the figures were more than reversed,Canada sending 447,000 cwts. and the United States 191.000.

A Question of Crops.

It is all a question of crops. If prices are on a parity in Canada and the States the Canadian miller can compete favorably for the British trade because the sentiment in the Old Country is strongly on the side of the Canadian product. But when oats are five or even ten cents dearer in Canada than across the line the Canadian miller has a poor show. The crop will often vary greatly in districts only a few miles apart and the American millers have the advantage over the Canadian of having a very much larger area to draw upon for their supplies.

Oatmeal milling itself cuts no figure in the price of oats. The total yield in Canada approximates 200,000,000 bushels, and the consumption for oatmeal only 3,800,000 bushels, not quite 2 per cent. of the yield.

WESTERN CROP PROSPECTS.

Robert Hall, ex-mayor of Brandon, who farms some 1,200 acres of land, and whose opinion on agricultural matters is of value, expresses in an interview the following views upon the crop situation:

"We have had splendid weather, so far, for putting in the crop, and the growth is something wonderful. The weather has been warm and balmy. In some sheltered places with southern exposure, the trees are quite out in leaf, the grass green, and a good part of the early-sowed wheat is appearing above ground, but I do not know that the early growth is a good thing, for I feel that it is premature, and that we will have frosty weather to check it back, but the green grass will be certainly valuable for the live stock. There is, I would say, about 60 per cent. of the wheat now in the ground and 75 per cent. will be soon sowed if the weather continues as it is now. Of course, we always have a percentage of seeding in the hands of slow and unfortunate people that always drags, but I do not think we have ever had a more favorable year than this, so far, excepting that the weather may be a little too warm and the growth too quick for so early in the season."

NEW MILLING COMPANY.

It is rumored that plans are being completed for the formation of a third large Canadian milling company which is expected to be an important factor in the flour trade of Canada. Mr. Thos. Fyshe, ex-president of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, and ex-general manager of the Merchants' Bank of Canada, is among those at the head of the project by which it is intended to include nineteen of the smaller milling companies of Manitoba into one company with a capital in the neighborhood of $1,300,000. Most of the mills to be included in the merger have at present an output of from 100 to 200 barrels of flour a day, but it is intended that the output of a number of the mills should be largely increased, and in the near future the new company would have a daily output of close to 3,000 barrels a day.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

FLOUR—A splendid business is being transacted in flour this week, both in an export way and locally. Quite a number of shipments have been made to the United Kingdom by the large milling companies and some orders have been shipped to Germany and South Africa. In the latter country the finer grades have been demanded, but the call in England at present is for the lower grades. Quite a good business is being done with the Maritime Provinces. Five Roses has been advanced ten cents.

GRAIN—Trade is moving fairly well this week. Yellow corn has been advanced and now commands 59c. Peas also have gone up and are worth to-day 80c. The latter have been advancing quite freely all along. They are at present very strong at this price. Oats are very firm. Barley is scarce.

FEED—No new features have developed in feed since last report. Moullie is moving better since cattle shipments have commenced as large quantities are used every year for feeding the cattle during shipment. Bran and shorts are still very scarce, particularly the latter. A good demand for feed flour is reported.

TORONTO MARKETS.

FLOUR—No new feature has transpired since our last review; local trade continues on about same line. Demand is good and generally speaking prices firm, with upward tendency. Indications are that prices will probably advance.

THE MAKING OF BROOMS.

If any man who sells brooms could go through a factory and see them made he would be much better equipped for his work; he could interest his customers and sell more brooms of a higher grade. Many of them will not find that immediately convenient and thats why a Canadian Grocer representative yesterday visited the new factory of H. W. Nelson & Co., 15 to 21 Jarvis street, Toronto, where, under the guidance of Sidney G. Wharin, the managing director, he followed the process of broom making from start to finish.

Begin in the basement, where there is storage room for ten carloads of broom corn and handles. The corn comes from Kansas and other middle western states, in wired bundles about four feet in diameter. It is grown for the purpose and some seed is taken from it for fodder purposes. The handles are plain round maple sticks done up in bundles of 50.

Preparing the Handles.

Follow the handles first. Four days' supply is placed in a drying room, which is then steam heated to a temperature of 125 to 150 degrees. After four days the handles are removed, perfectly dry, every vestage of moisture having been driven off. If this were not done, and in some factories it is not, the handle will shrink and the wire will come loose. The next stage of preparation for the handles is the sorting and decorating room where they are graded, varnished and the characteristic decoration in the nature of colored rings added, when they are ready for the broom makers.

Getting Ready the Corn.

The corn passes through half a dozen hands in a course of preparation before meeting the handle in the tying room. It breaks bulk with two or three men, who stand at benches and sort it, that is, divide the hurl, the fine corn for the outside of the broom, from the insides. The hurl is then put through a machine or rather over it, that sizes it in seven different lengths after cutting off most of the stalk. Hurl cutting is the next operation. It consists in cutting off the remainder of the stock so as to free the stems and culling out the large inside stem of each piece of corn. The hurl passes then to the scraper. This is a rapidly revolving toothed cylinder, and the workman holding a handful of hurl by the lower ends, whips the flying teeth. This is to remove the seeds. The next process is taking out the short lengths. A man stands at a bench on which are several rows of long upright spikes. He grasps a handful of hurl, by the lower end again, and combs it through the spikes. This is termed "pulling."

Into the Dye Vat.

The corn is by this time prepared and has gone quite round the room. It is next dipped in a vat of green dye and placed wet in a small room called the bleach room. There, a pot of sulphur is burned and the corn left over night. This evens up the color.

Its next progress is the tying room. There it meets the handle and takes form somewhat as the thrifty housewife and the dusty janitor know it. In this room are 25 broom makers, each at a separate machine. The broom making machine is mostly human; that is to say, the work is really done by hand with some assistance from the apparatus. The machine holds the handle and the wire; the man does the rest. An expert can turn out six dozen of high grade brooms in a day.

To the Sewing Machines.

But the broom maker does no sewing, and the broom would leave him looking like a witches' hair did he not put a loop cord about it to hold it in a bunch. In this form it goes to the sewing room at the entrance to which it goes through another scraping operation to remove any seeds that may still adhere. The operator grasps the newly formed broom by the handle, tweeks off on a hook on the wall the band confining the corn and floggs a rapidly revolving toothed cylinder for about two winks; the cord is replaced and the operation completed while you say "Jack Robinson."

The broom is then ready for the sewing. The sewing machine does not much resemble the domestic variety. The broom handle down, is placed in a vice, the jaws marking the line where the sewing is done. The operator, by a double twist of the wrist, wraps a strand of colored twine about the broom, and two long arms, one on either side, and each armed with a needle big enough to point Goliath's javlin, swing back and forth and do the sewing. There are six sewing machines in the room. One of them has a record of 65 dozen brooms in a day, but its average output is 50.

The Drying Test.

The brooms are made while the corn is still wet. After being bundled in dozens, they are removed to a steam-heated drying room. There they remain at a high temperature till perfectly dry. There can be no moulding in hot weather after that. This process is indeed a hard test of the broom, because if the handle is ever going to shrink and loosen up the wire, it will do it in this heat. This is the only factory in the country, it is said, equipped with such a drying room.

No End of Whisks.

In the whisk department the reporter saw the very latest thing in broom sewing machines, the only one in the country, turning out 75 to 100 dozen a day. Ordinarily, whisks are made from the finer grades of broom corn, but H. W. Nelson & Co. import whisk corn from Kansas in carload lots.

The factory employs 50 men and its product reaches every part of the Dominion. When the reporter was there a quantity of galvanized wire sewn brooms were being shipped for use in the salmon canneries of British Columbia. In their former premises the company was badly cramped for room, but here every facility is afforded, and there is warehouse room for four carloads of finished product.

The company was founded by H. A. Nelson in Montreal in 1840; became H. A. Nelson & Sons, Montreal and Toronto, in 1869; was made a limited company in 1897. In 1901 the premises in Montreal were burned and the business was continued in Toronto by H. W. Nelson & Co. till the death of Mr. Nelson, when the present company was organized with these officers: Henry W. Darling, president; Joseph Kilgour and Walter S. Crone, vice-presidents; Sidney G. Wharin, managing director, and A. Sommerville, secretary-treasurer. The offices of the company are at 92 Adelaide street west.

SAFFRON.

Dealers who have trade on saffron will be interested in a handsome and instructive booklet on this subject just issued by Sherer-Gillett Co., Chicago.

A number of photographic illustrations depict the saffron field in bloom, the gathering of the flowers and the sorting and curing processes, giving several unique views of the various steps in the preparation for the market of this useful article.

From the selection of the soil and the planting of the crocus-like bulb to the final packing for export, each successive operation is interestingly portrayed.

Much information is contained in the booklet, mention being made of the surprising fact that 4,300 flowers, or say 1,000 bulbs, are required to produce one ounce of the saffron of commerce.

As the consumption of saffron is steadily increasing and more merchants are finding a demand for it, this booklet is timely as well as interesting. The saffron plant is shown in its natural colors on the cover.

Upon request the above mentioned company will send a copy of the booklet, without charge, to any dealer in saffron.

GREEN FRUITS, VEGETABLES, AND FISH

Trade continues remarkably good at all points. The number of lines on sale are of course limited at this season, but Winter supplies have had a most remarkable run. Quality has been considerably above the average, whilst prices have kept fairly even, making trade much easier and more satisfactory.

Small fruits are now close on the market, and reports from California are most satisfactory. Advices, both mail and telegraphic, received from the Pacific coast state that the prospects are good for large shipments to the east during the season which has just opened. Fully 7,000 cars of green fruit and grapes will be sent east of the Rocky Mountains before the season closes next Fall. This volume of business will mean between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000 to the California orchardists.

The cherry crop throughout California is splendid and shipments are now going forward rapidly. The peach, pear and apple crops promise large yields, particularly of apples and pears. Grapes give promise of a big yield. Apricots and plums do not promise so well. What is lost by these will be more than made up, it is said, on pears, apples and grapes.

The lemon market appears to be a very strong one, and prices are likely to at least continue firm, but probably will make an upward move. The statistical position of the Sicily lemon market is remarkably strong, as the following figures taken at recent date will show :

Afloat for all U. S. ports	202,500
Afloat for Montreal	5,000
At wharf at New York unsold	26,500
Making a total of	234,000
Against same time in 1905	276,500
Against same time in 1904	354,500
Against same time in 1903	262,000
Against same time in 1902	331,000

From above comparative figures it will be seen that the available supply to-day is 234,000 against same time last year 276,500, showing a shortage of 42,500 boxes. Comparing to-day's available supply with the average of the past four years (306,000 boxes), there are 72,000 boxes short.

With these figures there is no reason why prices should not continue to rule steady, whilst on the other hand a few days of seasonable weather will mean a further advance in values.

For the past two or three weeks the demand has been most urgent, showing conclusively that the lemons were wanted for immediate consumption and not bought on speculation ; this condition of affairs works most auspiciously for the future of this article and makes a sanguine outlook for the future.

NEW LAW INTRODUCED.

The legislation which the Minister of Agriculture has introduced in Parliament to give effect to some of the suggestions that were made at the recent fruit-growers' conference in Ottawa, is of the character calculated to help Canada to obtain a permanent market outside her own boundaries for her fruit—in a word, to assist the Dominion to take the place to which she is entitled in respect of fruit production by reason of her soil and climate.

It is a well established fact that as regards the production of some classes of fruit, particularly apples and pears, the Dominion is surpassed by no country in the world, but notwithstanding this fact Canadian exporters have experienced considerable difficulty in securing a foothold in the English market, and in retaining an advantageous place there after it has been won.

One reason for this is the unequal quality of the shipments and the fact that the packing of the fruit is of such a character as to create a suspicion as to the honesty of some of the men who are engaged in the trade, especially in certain branches of it. It is the same trouble that arises from time to time in connection with dairy products, and the many suffer for the faults of the few.

The home market in the different provinces grows larger as population increases, but it is obvious that if the fruit industry is to reach the proportions that it may, having regard to the favorable conditions of production, be expected to assume, attention must be given to these matters.

Mr. Fisher states that the Fruit Marks Act, which has been five years in force, has proved on the whole most satisfactory, but defining the others will, there is every reason to believe, have a still more salutary effect.

Amongst other things it will lead to more intelligent and better directed effort. It is deplorable to think that while the fruit growing industry is just in its infancy there should be a large quantity of fruit going to waste through unskillful husbandry. The fruit-growing industry is both healthy and profitable, but it needs intelligence and enterprise and honesty in its development.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—The weather during the past few weeks has been rather unfavorable for the successful transaction of business in green fruits. This week the warmer days brought with them increased business in all lines. The strawberries arriving daily are disposed of without much trouble at prices quoted, and fair business is being done in this line. Navel oranges are up a little and pineapples are down. Lemons are advanced slightly, but the quality is better.

VEGETABLES—What is said of green fruits applies also to vegetables — the weather has been unfavorable. With the warmer days better business has come, and the different lines have sold very well recently. Cabbages, southern, are now selling from $3.25 to $4. Parsley is arriving in greater quantities and consequently the price has declined. Twenty-five cents is now asked. Potatoes are going very well and as high as eighty-five cents has been obtained in some cases. Cucumbers are sold freely at prices quoted. New vegetables are moving fairly well at the high prices generally quoted.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—Business has been first rate this week and a larger volume of fresh fruit is going into consumption than at the same period of any previous season. There is a firm tone in oranges, especially for medium sizes, which are in most demand. Sorrento fruit is now arriving via Montreal. The lemon market was surprisingly firm at New York the end of the week. Prices are unchanged here. Several carloads of southern strawberries are arriving daily and prices are tending gradually lower. Pines are cheaper, but whether or not they are at preserving, that is, about lowest level, is hard to say. "May be or may not," says the commission man.

VEGETABLES—Large quantities of vegetables from southern gardens are arriving, but the supplies are taken without difficulty. There will be a big holiday trade next week. Potatoes are firm and advancing. The lowest for Delawares is now $1.10 and Ontario varieties are 80c. to 90c. The Silver Dollar is as good as the Delaware and some like it better, but it has very deep eyes and is objected to on that account. The Delawares are very scarce. Americans are paying for them in New Brunswick as much as they have cost to lay down here. Some dealers here look for prices to go still higher.

HINTS REGARDING SARDINES.

Sardines belong to the class of hermetically sealed goods which have become so important a part of the grocery trade, and, as an important item in that class, merit, perhaps, more attention from the trade than is generally given to the article.

It would be well to suggest consideration of the fact, liable to be overlooked, that the packing of fish, meats, vegetables, etc., in sealed cans is the circumstance that transfers the sale of such goods from fish, meat and vegetable vendors, and places them amongst grocery articles, and that attention to such articles, resulting in enlarged sales, increases not only the amount of business done by the individual store but enlarges the whole volume of the grocery trade.

This result can only be obtained in the greatest degree by the intelligent presentation of the goods to the consumer, based on an intimate knowledge of the article by the grocer.

Grocers who are fortunate enough to have a large trade and particularly those who have a large clientage of a good class and have the opportunity of opening and examining samples of goods offered to them, may be fairly assumed to possess the requisite knowledge, and to use that knowledge to the advantage of both their customers and of themselves, but there is a vast army of traders who are not so fortunately circumstanced and considerable difficulty will be experienced by the latter class, who, after all, are the great distributors of goods, in acquiring a knowledge of sardines which will enable them to give the greatest satisfaction to the buying public by catering well to varied demands both as to quality and price.

Some of the cheapest and trashiest products are put up in the most attractive tins and bear the most seductive titles and are put up at a much greater expense than the value of the contents warrants, simply because a very large proportion of the trade demands "tins," "decorations," "shapes," etc., and are not particular as to contents, and so we find sprats without character or flavor and packed in cheap oil, in quite as fancy tins as the most superb French sardines packed in finest olive oil (indeed, the very highest brands of French are usually plain white tins with brass soldered labels, though many good French packs are put up in decorated tins) and all branded "Sardines - a l'huille."

I venture to give a few suggestions to those who buy sardines without knowing what is inside the tin—and this must be so in most instances, unless in the case of brands of the quality of What Can't be Had.

Genuine French sardines in olive oil cannot be retailed under 15c. to 20c. per quarter tin. When, therefore, you are offered fine French sardines to retail at 10c. or two for 25c., you can be quite sure that the goods do not belong to this class, however good value they may be.

The 12 oz. (small half), which can retail profitably at 25c. in genuine French of good quality, should be a good seller owing to the high price of quarters.

Portuguese and Spanish sardines, many of which bear French names and are commonly sold as French or "imported," vary very much in quality, from very coarse, unpalatable fish in objectionable oil to fine qualities barely distinguishable from the lower grades of genuine French, and so the greatest care should be exercised in buying the former.

Sprats are a still cheaper product and are generally sold everywhere as sardines and are usually called so on the tins. In good qualities and in good oil they are quite eatable and are chiefly distinguished and easily known by their general "lack of character," neither "fish, flesh, nor good red herring." When smoked, as is usually done, in Norway they are much more palatable and appetizing, and people have been known to say they prefer them to sardines. Well, it is at least fortunate for such people that their tastes are not expensive and yet Norwegian smoked sprats are much more palatable than poor sardines in poor oil.

Suggestions.

Don't accept "imported" as a description for "good."

Don't buy on the appearance of the tin or because it bears a French name.

Don't demand 20 to 30 fish to the quarter tin, or your order can most easily be filled with sprats.

Small Sardines Not Best.

Smallest sardines are not always the best and are frequently when obtainable sold below the price of medium in the same brand, but of late years the French fisheries have not produced them.

When buying brands the quality of which you do not know do not be afraid to tell an intelligent, honest wholesaler that you want the best goods you can get to retail for a named price with a fair margin of profit, and trust him. Then open a tin of every shipment and see how you would like it if you bought it over another man's counter to use in your own home.

There are tens of thousands of families all over Canada who would buy good sardines regularly if they could get them, but who won't eat bad ones.

Traders are sometimes too pessimistic about the public's willingness to pay. The wholesaler says, "It won't sell. The retail price is too high." The retailer says, "It won't sell; price is too high." Yet we see the cheap, poor store go down and the store for which nothing is too good prosper. Remember, though you are present when the cash is paid, you are not present when the tin is opened and so you are not represented at the board where the value is decided.

Every unsatisfactory tin sold hurts the sale of sardines, every tin that gives pleasure increases the sale.

As far as your trade will permit, work for quality, and however low-priced trade it may be, let your influence be in the upward direction. — Sardinicus.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

STARTING, EQUIPPING AND RUNNING A TOBACCO DEPARTMENT.

An orderly, well conducted tobacco department always pays the grocer for the small trouble incurred. This has been stated in the Canadian Grocer many times, and as time wears on merchants throughout the country experiment, and find for themselves the truth of this statement, and thereafter they would as soon think of dropping their most staple lines as of giving up their tobacco department. Experience has taught them that there are few lines which reach the grocery store that offer better inducements in the way of good profits than tobaccos of different kinds.

Time was, and not so very long ago, when a grocer would as soon have kept bales of hay and such like in his store as tobacco, but those days are now past, and in the great majority of stores throughout the Dominion tobacco has attained a position in the trade which warrants its being called a staple line. The prejudice entertained by many merchants against the keeping of tobacco has gradually been overcome, and to-day in hundreds of stores it is regarded as it should be by the wide-awake grocer. There are many still, however, who do not feel inclined to do anything in this line, and it is to them that this article is particularly directed.

Make a Right Start.

If a merchant is going to make anything out of his tobacco department he must run it on something the same principles as he would any other branch of his trade which he is desirous of making pay. It will not do to order a supply of cigars in a haphazard fashion, with two or three cases of plug tobacco and perhaps a few boxes of cigarettes, and when they arrive to consign them to some corner of the store where there happens to be a little room for them. No, if this was to be the line of campaign it would be as well not to do anything, in fact, it would be better. What the grocer must do is to push his tobacco in every possible way. It can be done without interfering with other lines, but it should be done in the right way.

Use Discretion in Stocking Up.

In the first place, if it is decided to take on this line, discretion should be exercised in what tobacco is ordered. Many things are to be considered in this connection. Brand and price are the chief considerations. The classes of trade to be catered to, is another point, although the modern grocery trade can attract almost every class in grocery lines, and there is no reason why this should not be the case in tobaccos also. In country districts, of couse, conditions are different to what they are in the cities and have to be met accordingly. In selecting the stock for a country store the safest lines to buy are those which have attained a place in the long list of different brands. In plug tobaccos, for instance, there are some lines which have been selling for years. These staple lines, no doubt, the merchant knows, whether he has carried tobacco or not. These, of course, should form his principle stock.

Give New Lines a Place.

It does not do, however, to sell only the old lines, because new brands are constantly appearing, and while it is not advisable to buy everything that comes along, by any means, still it does not do to turn down a good proposition. This is something in which the merchant must use his own discretion. A good policy to pursue, and practically the only safe way to successfully handle new lines, is the purchasing of those lines which are widely and systematically advertised. This applies more to cigars and cigarettes than to plug tobaccos, the trade in plug lines, as a rule, keeping very close to the staple lines.

The Show Case Display.

A splendid way to display cigars and cigarettes is by means of a small show case placed in some prominent position in the store—just back from the door, on a small table, for instance. Some of the large manufacturers are willing to supply these cases free, or for practically nothing, for the advertising obtained by them through a line on the glass front of the case, or something of that nature. Anyway the case does not cost much, even if it has to be purchased outright, and it is a great medium for display. Care should be taken that the cigars in the case and elsewhere are kept moist. If no better way is available a glass of water placed in the case will serve the purpose. Many neat fixtures for this purpose are obtainable.

Window display is also essential, as is advertising space in the town paper or papers so as to let the people know you have tobacco for sale. It is up to the merchant to build up the trade as he may.

Tobacco as a Trade Bringer.

A good feature to be considered is the fact that tobacco can be made to attract more trade to the grocery lines. For instance, a housekeeper goes shopping and her husband accompanies her. When they come to the grocery store, the man does not care to go in. "I'll go around the corner to the cigar store, or to the barber shop, and get some cigars while you go in," he says. If the grocer kept cigars the chances are that the man would have entered the store also. And inside, once more there are chances. His wife is in ecstasy when she gets him into a store if he happens to have a little cash with him, and it is very rarely the couple go out without purchasing something extra, something the woman had not thought of when she started out on her shopping expedition. She will spy something in canned goods, for instance, which she has not hitherto known you to keep, and exclaims, perhaps, "Let us have some of this John," and John nine times out of ten will assent. This naturally builds up your grocery trade. It means more profits for the grocer. This is but an instance. There are other ways in which the tobacco department helps the grocery end, as there are also ways in which the grocery department helps the tobacco lines.

The Farmers' Trade.

Trade may be cultivated in a variety of ways, and there is very often a good opportunity to do big business in cigars and cigarettes, take for example during fair time; when there is a circus in town; and on other such occasions when men are in a mood to spend money. It is possible also to do a good business with farmers. They will, in most cases, buy their tobacco from their grocer in preference to a cigar merchant.

The situation has now been viewed in different lights, and in closing, it might well be stated as in the beginning, that an orderly, well conducted tobacco department pays the grocer every time.

SMOKING HABITS OF THE WORLD'S POTENTATES.

A gentleman formerly connected with one of the foreign legations in Washington, D.C., has been at some pains to compile data on the smoking habits of the leading potentates of the world. From this interesting mass of information, it is learned that King Edward of Great Britain and the Austrian Emperor prefer cigars, and the Kaiser of Germany and the Czar of Russia are devotees of the cigarette, while the Sultan of Turkey, never touches tobacco, in spite of the popular impression to the contrary. King Leopold of Belgium contents himself with a cigarette when he is unable to lay hands upon one of his favorite briarwood pipes. Even the Pope smokes, so it is said, and is the first pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church to indulge in cigars, his predecessors, notably Pius IX. and Leo XIII., having contented themselves with snuff.

Cigarettes Allowed.

Emperor William smokes cigarettes of large size in great numbers, made especially for him in the suburbs of Berlin. Despite the fact that the Kaiser is afflicted with an affection of the larynx, his doctors make no objection to his using cigarettes, approving them in the light of a wholesome sedative. In view of the fact that Germany has made absolute phenomenal progress, not only in a military and naval sense, but more especially in every branch of trade and industry under the Kaiser's leadership, it can hardly be said that the cigarette has interfered with his activity and usefulness for his country.

King Edward's Smoke.

Years ago King Edward was exceedingly fond of cigarettes and smoked them in great quantities, though of late they have been supplanted by cigars, and nowadays it is said he is seldom seen without a large black Havana between his teeth. The King has reached his sixty-fourth year and has been an inveterate smoker since attaining manhood.

A Spirit Lamp to Light a Cigar.

Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria-Hungary, has managed to hold together for fifty years or more the discordant racial elements in Hungary and Vienna, during which time he has been an inveterate smoker, his favorite form of the weed being those long cigars known in Austria as Virginias, which have a straw through them in order to enable them to draw, and have to be held in the flame of a spirit lamp for a moment or two before they can be lighted.

It is said that King Charles of Portugal smokes forty cigars a day, and has been declared to be the most inveterate smoker of all the "anointed of the Lord" in the old world.

Moslem Rulers Do Not Smoke.

It is a peculiar fact that the leading Moslem rulers refrain from smoking, and it was doubtless owing to the fact that he never indulged in tobacco himself that the cigarettes of the late Khedive Tewfik were so abominable.

The Diplomatic Cigarette.

As a result of his observations in the direction of the habits of rulers of the nations of the earth, the diplomat furnishing this data says that as a general rule the cigarette has supplanted the pinch of snuff in diplomacy. He finds that there is scarcely any foreign minister or diplomat who is not provided with his cigarette box, which he regards not in the light of an object of personal luxury, but as a part of the most indispensable paraphernalia of his profession, and it is worthy of note that the Russians, who devote more attention and importance to the study of diplomacy than any other European nation, are always provided with finer cigarettes than any of their colleagues in the service.

Tobacco and Politics.

The compiler of the foregoing information says that the influence of tobacco upon the course of political events has been almost invariably of a beneficial character. "Not only have its narcotic properties tended to soothe the angry passions of those entrusted with the conduct of international relations, but it has also afforded them the opportunity of thinking before they spoke, and allowing time for those second thoughts which, in diplomacy and statecraft, at any rate, are always the best. People are often disposed to make fun of the so-called pipe of peace, and to regard it as a mere form of speech originating with the red Indians. But tobacco, whether in the form of a cigar, cigarette, snuff or a pipe, has ever proved a powerful and effective aid to the maintenance of peace, and as such its use deserves to be fostered and propagated by all patriotic and lawabiding citizens in lieu of being condemned as noxious."

INFORMATION.

If you want to buy or sell or know anything in connection with the grocery trade, write The Canadian Grocer. We make it our business to answer all legitimate trade enquiries.

Supplied under cont act to the British and Indian Governments.

THOUGH ESTABLISHED IN 1849

we have hitherto been prevented from largely developing our Canadian trade. The Home Market has absorbed our principal attention.

But now, with greatly increased capacity, new plant of most modern type, a staff of expert analysts, and the largest Vinegar Brewery in existence, we are in a position to handle an increased export business—lots of it—and we invite enquiries from Canadian importers.

Arrangements are being made for our representation in Canada. Meanwhile it will be a pleasure to us to send YOU samples. Our representative will call on you later.

CUSTOMERS WHO KICK.

The dealer who does business on the assumption that every one who comes into his store is ready to beat him if the chance offers is making a a serious mistake. It pays to trust people. When a woman comes in with a complaint, take it for granted that she has a just grievance. If she is manifestly mistaken and you can show her to her satisfaction that she is, then you will lose nothing by differing with her, but if she thinks she is right and insists upon thinking so, yield as gracefully as you can, even to your own disadvantage. You cannot afford to let a customer go away feeling that she has been treated unfairly, even if it costs you something to keep her good will. Never get angry over the discussion of the adjustment of a complaint. If you cannot keep your temper in such cases leave that sort of thing to a diplomatic clerk. To settle a claim ungraciously is to lose the cost of settling without gaining the customer's good will.

TO BANQUET SIR THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY.

Some time ago it was decided by the Quebec Board of Trade to banquet Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R., but owing to the fact that he could not say when he might be able to attend, the matter was temporarily dropped. A few days ago the board received a cable from Sir Thomas, who is at present in England, to the effect that he would be at liberty to attend a banquet on the 19th inst. Consequently the board has appointed a sub-committee composed of G. Tanguay, E. B. Rattray and G. A. Vandry, to make arrangements for the function, which will be held in the Chateau Frontenac.

ABOUT COFFEE PRODUCTION.

A report recently issued by a coffee expert at the Porto Rico Agricultural Experiment Station gives a few facts in connection with the production of coffee which are very interesting.

In Porto Rico an old grove yields in ripe berries something like 887 pounds to the acre, which means in coffee ready for the market 180 pounds. These figures would mean an average of a little over one-quarter of a pound per tree, which would figure out 746 producing trees to the acre. It is reckoned that the cost, exclusive of freight to point of consumption, of harvesting and marketing the coffee is $2.26 per hundred pounds.

"Price" is an argument for trade, but "quality" goes far ahead of it. Quality holds trade while price attracts for the moment only. Sell standard goods and you increase the faith your customers have in the service of your store. It pays to "increase their faith"

By Selling These Goods :

Felix & Co. Italian Macaroni

Always the same delicate, tender, Macaroni that makes for permanent trade. Most attractively labelled and packed. Macaroni that will "increase their faith."

"Thistle" Brand Maple Syrup

A rich, clear, pure Maple Syrup that reminds you of boyhood days way up among the sugar trees. Always the same, and always choice.

Griffin & Skelley's Dried Fruits

"The pick of the pack" from the finest vineyards and orchards on the Pacific Coast. Peaches, Pears, Raisins, Apricots, Nectarines, Dried Plums and Prunes. "Increase their faith" by selling them.

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish

If you want pleased customers stick to our brands exclusively.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

TEA CHARACTER

Like human nature, tea character is of infinite variety. It will live, or rather exist, in most diverse situations; but there is one country, one set of environments most conducive to fine character in teas, as in men.

Ceylon is that country, a country that affords every requirement of soil and climate for the production of teas of the very finest character.

The flavor, fragrance, fullness, body, stability of Ceylon Teas commended them from the first to the favor of the consuming world.

Every year has but served to demonstrate more emphatically the superiority of the Ceylon product.

Grocers who build their tea trade on the sound foundation of Ceylon Tea are going to reap the benefit in the confidence of satisfied customers.

Black and Green Ceylon Tea Best Ever Black and Green

Old Homestead Brand

OUR THIRD BIRTHDAY

Here we are again. In the spring of 1904 we set out to create a new standard for canned goods in Canada—the Old Homestead standard.

Away down on the Bay of Quinte in the far-famed county of Prince Edward is the town of Picton in the centre of the garden of Canada.

Here we located, erected our handsome pressed stone factory, installed the most up-to-date machinery to be had, and put up a line of canned goods that set the other fellows thinking. That line we named

OLD HOMESTEAD

If you tried a sample order you know how it went. The public liked the name. They liked the handsome label and they liked the Old Homestead quality. That brought them back for more.

Last year we doubled our capacity and the cry was still for more. This year we are preparing to meet a still larger demand. A great part of our prospective pack is already contracted for.

You will consult your best interests by placing your orders for Old Homestead goods now. Old Homestead brand will give an impetus to your canned goods trade that will surprise and gratify you.

THE MOST DELICIOUS PICKLE MADE A TRIUMPH OF SCIENTIFIC PICKLE MAKING

Sole Agent for Ontario—Mr. R. S. McINDOE, 120 CHURCH STREET, TORONTO.

"People all like PERRY'S SAUCE
And they never count the cost."

No! They never count the cost because when it is put alongside "others" it shows the necessity for their "coming down."

"How can

be as good as the others and yet be cheaper?" you ask.

Just this way, Grocers: The makers of Perry's Sauce don't charge you for the English reputation or the "nobleness" of the recipe. They just charge you for the ingredients and the cost of production.

That means that you and your patrons save money by getting Perry's Sauce.

Say, you start the "Economical" ball rolling.

Salmon, King Fish of the Pacific Coast

Canned Salmon is regarded by most housekeepers rather as an emergency ration than as a staple and regular article of diet. This would not be so if they knew how to open the can to get the salmon out whole; how to broil the fish and how to prepare the liquor for it. Properly prepared, canned salmon is one of the most delicious and nutritious of our domestic food products. It is also one of the cheapest. Fifteen cents for a pound of rich, cooked food without an ounce of waste is surely an economical fish food. But the price has advanced and a question salmon packers are asking is, "Has salmon reached a permanently higher level of price?"

Last year was a "big year," that is, there was a big run of fish, and the pack in British Columbia was 1,167,460 cases, and on the entire coast, including Alaska, 4,667,816 cases. The year before the B. C. pack was only 465,894 cases, and the coast total 3,323,654. The pack this year is almost certain to be not as large by hundreds of thousands of cases as last year. The choicer brands of last year's pack are already scarce. The demand is increasing. With a short pack at least expected this year, the natural conclusion is, "How can the price recede to former levels?" The European demand is for "flats," and the likelihood is that this season a larger proportion of "flats" and fewer "talls" will be packed. It costs more to put up "flats" than "talls," but if the people in Eastern Canada would take to the "flats" more half pounds would probably be sold, because very often a pound is more than a person wants at one time.

Districts, Kinds and Shapes.

Perhaps a short statement in cases of last year's pack by districts and by kinds would not be uninteresting :

Fraser River—Sockeyes, 837,489; red and white springs, 5,507; humpbacks, 3,304; cohoes, 30,836; total, 877,136.

Northern Rivers — Sockeyes, 243,184; red and white springs, 22,852; humpbacks, 10,666; cohoes, 13,622; total, 290,324.

As to shapes, the division was as follows : 1-lb. talls, 405,606; 1-lb. flats, 432,654; 1-lb. ovals, 7,033; ½-lb. talls, 5,578; ½-lb. flats, 272,147; ½-lb. ovals, 8,816; squatts, 36,256.

The lb. talls were divided nearly evenly between the Fraser and Northern Rivers, but the flats, both lb. and ½ lb., were practically all packed on the Fraser. The ½ lb. talls were all from northern canneries. The ovals and squatts were all from the Fraser.

British Columbia Fisheries.

The chief authority on fish and fishing in Canada is Prof. Edward E. Prince, Dominion Commissioner of Fisheries. In a recent article in the Pacific Fisherman he said of the salmon industry :

"The position of British Columbia from a fishery point of view is, in many important respects, unique. Extending from the 49th parallel to Alaska, its coastal waters form vast areas like Hecate Straits, Dixon Entrance, Queen Charlotte Sound, and the Straits of Georgia, sheltered from the ocean, favorable for the pursuit of fishing operations and abounding in the most valuable economic species of fish. Vancouver Island and the group of Queen Charlotte Islands, form a barrier against the storms of the outside waters and provide the most extensive spawning and feeding ground in the world for the halibut, herring and numerous other food-fishes. The coast is also deeply indented, and remarkable inlets occur at every point where sea-fishing operations can be carried on. But more remarkable still is the fact that all the principal salmon rivers of the Pacific Coast take their rise on the western watershed of British Columbia, and the Fraser, the Skeena, and the Naas, in their whole course, flow through the province while others like the Columbia river debouch beyond its boundaries. If, as all fishery authorities are agreed, food fishes improve in quality in cold northern waters, it must be admitted that the province possesses an advantage in its geographical position. But the very plentitude of these fishery resources prevented for many years a proper appreciation of some of them. While the salmon canning industry has for a quarter of a century occupied a prominent place among Pacific commercial enterprises, it is barely fifteen years since the immense value of the British Columbia halibut banks was first understood, while the rich herring harvest of the province went to waste until five or six years ago.

King Salmon.

"Since salmon canning operations began in a small way on the Fraser River in the "sixties," until the present time, when about seventy canneries are operated on the coast, its growth has been gradual and healthy. The main operations have been confined to four centres, the Fraser, the Skeena, Rivers Inlet, and Naas River, each excepting the last, separated by a distance from each other of from two hundred and fifty to three hundred miles. At Lowe Inlet, Namu, Alert Bay, and at Clayoquot, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, canneries have also been long in operation, but the principal centre, with 42 canneries, has been the Fraser River. Twenty years ago, in order to guard against excessive fishing the limit of 500 was placed upon the number of fishing licenses issued; to-day over 3,000 licenses are issued, the licenses being required not for canning or packing but for fishing. During the greater part of the history of the industry one kind of salmon only may be said to have been handled, viz., the sockeye, the vermilion-fleshed salmon of the Fraser and of British Columbia rivers generally. Spring salmon or chinooks, cohoes, dog salmon, humpbacks, and steel heads, were plentiful though infinetly less so than the marvellously abundant sockeye, and these less important fish were frequently thrown away. Some were smoked, others salted or frozen, but the British Columbia salmon par excellence was the sockeye.

"A widely prevalent belief exists that every fourth year is a "big year" on the Fraser, and no doubt some foundation exists for the belief, though the periodicity is not perfectly confirmed. Large runs during the last thirty years have, indeed, occurred three times in 'fourth' years, twice in 'fifth' years, once in 'sixth' year, and three times in a 'third' year. There is, however, even less semblance of periodicity in the northern rivers of the province. With the increasing demand for fish, salmon, other than sockeyes, have been increasingly canned in British Columbia, and the last official statistics show that of the pack on the Fraser of 129,000 cases, over 51,000 cases were of these previously neglected kinds of salmon (1904). Formerly the pack was made up of 1-pound talls, whereas now the demand is for 'flats.'

Japs do the Work.

"Other changes are observable in the industry. The Indians and white fishermen have been largely displaced by Japanese. It is stated that 85 per cent. of the Fraser River fishermen are Japanese, and in some canneries 90 out of every 100 employes are from Japan. Chinese labor prevailed in the packing establishments owing to its cheapness, but the price of that Oriental labor has immensely increased: $30 to $40 per month, in addition to board, being now paid by some canneries. There are signs of a general movement northward on the part of canners, who regard the Fraser River as in peril, owing to excessive fishing in the Straits of Georgia and Puget Sound. A great increase in the number of canneries in the north, and along the west coast of Vancouver Island, is certain, within the next two or three years.

Dog Salmon for Christmas.

"Perhaps the most remarkable development is that of the dog salmon industry. These fish until recently were regarded with contempt, but as great is the demand from the Japanese market that more than 3,000 tons, dry-salted, were shipped this year from the province. Just as the turkey is the universal dish at Christmas tide with us, so a salted dog salmon is the chief item at New Year feasts in Japan. The usual price is said to be 50 cents each in the Japanese markets. Certain Japanese firms are prominent in the British Columbia dog salmon industry, and one of them salted over 58,000 of these fish this year, a total weight of nearly 200 tons (the salt salmon averaging 7 pounds, i.e., 300 to a ton). Quinnat, a Spring salmon, cohoes, steelheads, etc., are also shipped frozen, smoked, and variously prepared; indeed one firm is known to have sent 150 to 200 tons each season to the German, French, and other European markets."

PRICE CONTRACTS ILLEGAL

Price agreements are a violation of the criminal law of Canada. That is the import of a judgment handed out by Mr. Justice Clute at Toronto last week in the case of Wampole & Co., manufacturing druggists, and the F. E. Karn Co., a retail drug firm of Toronto.

The Karn Co. conduct what is termed a "cut rate" drug store. Wampole & Co. claimed damages for breach of agreement to sell their proprietary medicines at a list price, and for an injunction to restrain the Karn Co. from further selling at reduced rates. The case was tried without a jury.

The Agreement.

In the course of the examination of Wampole & Co.'s manager, Judge Clute said:

"Apparently this agreement is the result, as you say at the top of it, of an agreement between the joint committees of the Wholesale Druggists' Association and the drug section of the Retail Merchants' Association?"

"Yes," replied the witness.

"And you entered into it by an agreement with the committee of the retail merchants who waited upon you?"

"Just so," assented the witness.

The Judge's Conclusions.

In his judgment Mr. Justice Clute, after reviewing the evidence, continues:

"Competition, therefore, in these articles is not only affected but entirely destroyed. The agreement exists not simply between the parties to this action, but affects the entire trade in the article. No one can buy an article for resale, whether wholesale or retail, unless he enters into one or the other of these agreements, as the case may be.

Agreements General.

"This agreement is used not simply in relation to these commodities between the plaintiffs and their various customers, but is the form adopted by the committees representing a large part of the wholesale and retail trade of Canada. It means that nearly every commodity in common use is to be subject to a hard and fixed contract which fixes the manufacturer's price, the wholesale price, and the retail price below which none can sell, and no one can purchase who is not a member of the association and agrees to sign the contract in question. It means that competition is not only unduly prevented or lessened in the purchase, barter and sale of this article, but is absolutely destroyed. In the present case the evidence also showed, I think, that the price was unreasonably enhanced by reason of this agreement.

What Statute was for.

"I think the statute was intended to provide against agreements similar to the one in question. The history of the law shows that it was passed at a time when the law relating to the protection of native industries was being introduced. As an objection to the protective tariff it was argued that combinations might be formed which would destroy competition and so enhance the price. That while on the one hand foreign goods were excluded, the introduction of which might moderate the price of the article in question, upon the other hand trade combinations might be formed which would destroy competition and greatly raise the price of the commodity to the consumers.

Absolutely Control Prices.

"To meet that objection the law against restraint of trade was passed. It was intended to prevent the very thing that was aimed at in the present contract, and it is difficult to conceive of a scheme more effective to destroy competition and to enhance prices than the contract sued on. It is the form adopted by the association of retail merchants in Canada and by the association of wholesale merchants in Canada. It thus includes to the extent of the membership of these various associations a very large part of the trade in Canada. The result is that, to the extent that these associations are able to reach persons engaged in the manufacture and trade, they will be able absolutely to control the prices of the various commodities and articles of trade; not only to limit but to destroy competition, and, in effect, to declare that no one will be permitted to deal in their commodity who will not first of all bind himself to sell the same only at a fixed price.

An Unlawful Conspiracy.

"I find," concludes the judgment, "as a fact from the evidence that the agreements in question and each of them were procured by an unlawful conspiracy between the plaintiffs, defendants and other manufacturing chemists and the association of wholesale and retail druggists, and that the conspiracy was entered into for the purpose of unduly preventing or lessening competition in the purchase, barter and sale of the articles in question, being articles of trade and commerce, and for the purpose of unreasonably enhancing the prices of said commodities, and are contrary to the provisions of the criminal code and are null and void."

Retailers Want it.

A leading Toronto wholesale druggist stated in an interview that five leading wholesale drug firms and several smaller ones were using the price contract, and that it was not confined to the drug trade, but was a standard agreement in use throughout the wholesale trade. The wholesale druggists, he held, were not in favor of the plan because it enabled retailers to push their own preparations at lower prices. The druggists' section of the Retail Merchants' Association are said by the defendent, Mr. Karn, to be responsible for the adoption of the agreement. A prominent member of the Toronto branch, speaking of the judgment, said:

"We had looked upon the contract as so invulnerable that we never dreamed we were outside the law. The Elliman Company sent that contract from England, where it has been sustained in a number of cases, and also in America, about thirty or forty altogether. Justice Kekewich held it legal in the case of Elliman v. Carrington. It has been held there is a perfect right to make an agreement about a proprietary medicine. In Philadelphia it was held that the contract was legal, but that it had been procured in a case there in an illegal way. We had no understanding with Wampole and the retail merchants did not contribute a dollar to Wampole's expenses, but I said to-day that as we are brought into it might we not be at liberty to put up part of the expenses of an appeal."

WINDOW AND INTERIOR DISPLAYS

SEASONABLE WINDOW DRESSING.

Window dressing within recent years has been studied to much good purpose and may be said to have attained almost to the degree of a fine art. As the number of lines handled by the grocer continue to increase so will he find wider scope for his talents in the way of window display. During the Christmas season the attention of even the most unobservant of persons is almost imperceptably diverted to a grocer's shop window, but during the Summer months there is no gainsaying the fact that the grocery windows lack variety. With the development of the green fruit trade, the grocer should find no difficulty in making his window attractive. Canned goods which, just now probably, are amongst the most saleable articles comprised in a grocer's stock in trade, certainly do not lend themselves to ornamentative effect, but as showing how even such unpromising materials as these can be turned to advantage, we can tell of an enterprising retailer who placed in his window some freshly-opened tins of lobster with an accompanying dish of salad, beside which was placed a bottle of salad cream and a bottle of olive oil, together with a bill bearing the printed words, "Try our lobster, for salads." Such a refreshing picture could not fail to attract the sympathetic attention of the hot and jaded passers-by, many of whom doubtless were tempted to purchase.

IN GO-AHEAD BRANTFORD.

The interior of the store of one of the most progressive grocers in Western Ontario is shown in the accompanying illustration. He is Fred Corey, of Brantford, Ont., and of Brantford in a very intimate way, for he is an alderman of the corporation and has been returned by Ward 4 at the head of the poll for six consecutive years.

Alderman Corey entered the grocery business five years ago and has made a record to be proud of. This is a new store located in a good residential section of Brantford, having sold his former premises to a bank. He opened his new store with a reception and furnished music and other attractions.

The Silent Salesman.

There are a lot of suggestions in the picture. Both sides of the store are fitted with the Walker bin. Mr. Corey says in a letter: "It was through The Canadian Grocer that I located the Walker Pivotal Bin Co., from whom I bought my store fixtures at a cost of $700."

Notice the artistic grouping of biscuits in the fronts of the counter bins and the pictures instead of posters on the end wall. There seems to be a place for everything and everything to be in its place. Just visible at the right-hand corner is a large potted plant, an uncommon addition to the adornment of a grocery store.

Answer This One.

What's the table for? Is it a demonstration by a manufacturer or tea merchant or is it a demonstration of his own goods by the grocer, or is it a thoughtful provision for the refreshment of customers? This last named plan was advocated in last week's Canadian Grocer. Many customers would enjoy a cup of tea tastefully served in this way. And if she liked it and it was the store's own blend on a special line there could be no harm in telling her. An arrangement of that kind would sell a lot of goods in a nice store like this and would create in the customers an interest that otherwise would be lacking.

Table for Buyers.

With the floor space available there wouldn't it be a good idea to have a table where customer and clerk could sit down and give and get an order comfortably? That's a little scheme of the departmentals, and they scheme for business, not for fun.

Without being personal, isn't it satisfying to see how well dressed everyone connected with the business is? Grocers handle food stuffs and should not look as if they worked in a glue factory.

Just one suggestion—is up against the handsome metallic ceiling the best storage for canned meats and vegetables? There are grocers—good grocers—who say not. It's the hottest part of the store and canned stuff does better in a moderate temperature.

A study of the illustration will show a grocer a lot of good points not mentioned. The store is a credit to Mr. Corey and to the trade.

TWAIN CAUGHT THE GROCER.

The local grocer was once hoaxed by Mark Twain. Mr. Clemens had ordered an invoice of pepper. In the store a few days later Mr. Clemens casually remarked that the pepper was half peas. The grocer indignantly protested.

"How do you spell pepper?" drawled Mr. Clemens, in a lull of the objurgatory storm. It took some time for the grocer to discover the jest and a little longer to appreciate it.

IDEAS FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS

AN EXAMPLE FOR YOUNG MEN.

Extreme attention to minute details has laid the foundation of many great fortunes; no fortune has been established without effective consideration of details. Such unfailing adherence to detail was the keynote to the character of the late Levi Z Leiter, capitalist in Chicago, gentleman of leisure in Washington, genial companion of great men in London. It enabled him to amass in fifty years a fortune whose top-notch figure was $22,000,000 in 1897, and which was not less than $15,000,000 at the time of his death some years later.

No Turning Back.

When he was the financial manager and spirit of the old Palmer dry goods establishment which he and Marshall Field took over, he started east one day (this was prior to 1871) to borrow money at a critical time in the affairs of the house. He was half-way to New York when he received a telegram from Chicago reading:

"Come home. No use borrowing; we can't tide over situation."

He wired back: "We can. I know the business."

And he went on. He raised the money, the house did not fail and the name of Leiter grew synonymous with the phrase "financial soundness."

Judgment, Not Guesswork.

He had the daring confidence of the man who leaves nothing to guesswork. He had not been averse in the early days to sweeping out other people's stores and he had even used the mop when occasion demanded. The time came when he had in his employ in Chicago four hundred scrub-women for night work in his office buildings. They were receiving $1.25 a day. They asked for $1.50. His manager refused. The demand reached Mr. Leiter's ears. He stayed in the city one night and talked with many of the women. They explained to him the difficulties of the work and the reasons why more pay should be given.

"I understand," he replied. "I know what the work is." And the advance in pay was made immediately.

Kept Account With Himself.

Mr. Leiter's touch upon his own affairs began when he was an obscure bookkeeper in Chicago. Accounts were not kept with the science that now controls them. "Staying late in the store one night," he said, as quoted by a writer in System, "searching for an error in a balance the thought struck me as to where I got off with my own affairs—how much was I worth, was I earning enough, what did I owe, what was owed me. I made the company's balance correct and then, taking a cheap note-book, started the accounting of Levi Z. Leiter. I cheated myself in nothing in opening that record of myself with myself and the world. From that day to this I have always known, better than my own employes, where I was at."

Kept Up To Details.

This was the evening when he formally announced the engagement of his daughter Mary to George Curzon, of Kedleston, now Lord Curzon, of England. He was standing in front of the magnificent library which he had accumulated at No. 4 Tower Place. I desired some personal reminiscences of himself — something characteristic of what had made him the sturdiest real estate factor in Chicago for more than a quarter of a century.

Knowledge of details—details—details!

"I never bought a stock of goods, I never gave a long line of credit. I never invested in land," he said with some show of pride, "without knowing as far as a man can know what I was doing. When I have wanted a piece of land, say, that was improved, before I laid down a dollar I have tried to know not only its past and present history, but to calculate what its future would be in my lifetime. If I determine that the purchase will only pay me for a long term of years 2 per cent. I buy on a 2 per cent. basis or not at all, for I never buy land for speculative purposes. I buy to hold and improve it. If the investment will pay 6 per cent. I buy with that in view. I want to know what I am doing before I undertake anything, and I want it in black and white before me before I decide. It may be a slow way of getting at results, but it is sure."

Always Sure of His Ground.

Nothing more characteristic of the methods of the man could be told than his attitude toward the currency question in 1896. He was a democrat of the old school. When it was proposed to nominate Bryan to oppose McKinley and the democratic free-silver platform was advanced, Mr. Leiter purchased every volume on currency of the old and the new worlds that he could obtain. I was with him one afternoon in McClurg's when his purchases in this direction exceeded the fat side of a twenty-dollar bill. He read the monetary evolutions and revolutions of France, of England, of Germany and even of Russia and the history of money in this country. I did not meet him again until the night that McKinley's election was assured. Then I called upon him at the Chicago Club. I asked him for an interview on the result.

"My boy," said he, "I read and studied everything on the subject that I could get hold of; then I thought it over for a month; then I talked with people whom I thought knew more about it than I did and thought over what they said for a month. After that my mind was made up. For this day and age Mr. Bryan was wrong and Mr. McKinley right. I voted for Mr. McKinley."

Honor Before Business.

One more point may be made as to his attention to details—he was proud of his name, proud of his family and proud of his honor. He never regarded an obligation as one of "business," but as one to which the name of Leiter had been pledged. He harked back to the days of pioneer merchandising when a man's credit was his name. In this he, Mr. Field and Mr. Palmer were never far apart. "What Leiter pledges, Leiter fulfils," was his motto. He upheld this sense of honor with knowledge of details.

WANTED SEA LION TEA.

"There's a man in 390 who says he wants some Sea Lion tea!" shouted the bellboy, as he rushed excitedly to the order clerk at the Hotel Victoria.

"What!"

"Sea Lion tea. I told him I never heard tell of no such tea, and he jest says, 'You tell de clerk what I want and bring it quick.' I guess de gent's some loose on de top."

James Jefferson Johnson walked off, still muttering, as the clerk wrote:

"Pot of Ceylon for 390."

THE AD COMPETITION.

The ad competition is over and the prize has been awarded. Herewith is shown the winning ad, which speaks for itself.

It is just necessary to state that R. J. Donaghy, of T. A. Rowat & Co., complied with the full conditions of the competition, while, unfortunately, others did not. Rowat's ad was awarded the prize because it was timely, well worded, attractive in shape, and, taking the accompanying letter as authority, reliable.

GROWTH FROM ADVERTISING.

A merchant of a western city recently made a trip to New York. Calling upon a business friend, he was asked: "How does your store really compare with others in your line in your city? Are you setting or following the pace?" For reply the merchant took from his handbag several late issues of his leading home newspaper and said: "Look over these papers. I will mark for you my advertisement and those of my competitors for three successive days. Judging from these ads., what is your opinion of how my store stands in the race?"

After some consideration and the use of a measuring tape, the friend replied: "On the showing here made—if it represents the general average for a longer period—your store stands first in your line in your city." "Yes, it is true that in that showing I use eight inches more space than my next competitor—but is it safe to estimate a store's importance upon the space it occupies in its advertisements?" "Safe enough," replied the friend, "to make it a general rule among business men. Your newspaper advertising is an outlet for your enterprise, and big enterprise requires a big outlet." "Now, as a matter of fact," confessed the merchant, "my store is still second in volume of business done in my line in our city. But two years ago it was fifth. At that time I concluded that I would use as much space in our leading newspaper as my competitor used, although such a campaign seemed to be beyond my real resources. I was then doing less than half as much business as the biggest store in the city—employing less than half as many clerks, occupying a building a third as large.

At the end of the first year I found that I had had less worry over the big advertising bills than I had previously had over the small ones—and that I was fourth in the procession. Then I concluded to use a little more space in this newspaper than the biggest store was using—and for the year past I have done that. The result is that I am now a good second in the race—and a year from now the other man will be second and I will be first."—Selected.

A Columbus grocer got a number of dollar watches and had a short message printed on the dial. To the first 50 people visiting his soap counter and making a purchase he gave a watch. The message on the dial ran "I am glad I deal at Thornton's for his groceries suit me fine," and, of course, every person who examined the watch saw the message.

J. B. Horrell & Son, Midland, Ont., tried a school scheme that proved very successful. Every pupil in the public school, Midland, was given a sheet of paper containing blank space for his name, address and favorite teacher. Two jingles appearing on the sheet had to be copied by the pupil and the sheet then forwarded to Messrs. Horrell & Son's store. Money prizes were given to the six pupils giving their answer in the best form. The three teachers getting the highest number of votes were each given a pair of shoes.

BRITISH COLUMBIA FORGING AHEAD

Easily first in point of interest to the business public of British Columbia this week has been the announcement of Mr. J. J. Hill at Winnipeg that the coast-Kootenay line building by his company, or under its supervision, locally known as the V., V. & E. Railway, will be rushed to completion this Summer. The line is being built through from the Boundary district and across the Similkameen, thence via Hope Mountains into the lower Fraser Valley at Hope, whence it will presumably keep on the south side of the river till it reaches New Westminster. The coast portions of the line, connecting with the coast section of the Great Northern in the State of Washington, is now being extended from Cloverdale to Sumas, and the work is to be carried on from this end to meet the line being pushed through from the interior. It is possible that the two ends will meet at Hope or in the pass which has been located across the Hope Mountains. This line will give a day shorter connection to the southwestern interior of the province than by heretofore existing lines of communication.

The further announcements of Mr. Hill that he proposes to extend his system across the prairie provinces of Canada are of almost equal importance to the Pacific province, as by that means additional communication can be had with the Northwest, where lies a large market for products of British Columbia.

Vancouver's 100,000 Club.

With the laudable object of getting and holding employment for the hundred thousand people it has undertaken to gather into the limits of the city of Vancouver by 1910, the 100,000 Club has undertaken a "Patronize Home Industries" campaign with the intention of increasing local demand for local products and of fostering a home-building spirit. In addition, the field for industries not yet represented is to be very carefully and systematically exploited, with a view to presenting good openings for investors in industries to be established here.

Business in the Yukon.

Mr. A. L. Berdoe, general manager of the White Pass & Yukon Route, who has been spending some weeks in the north to get in touch with conditions for the coming season, has every confidence that there will be a greater traffic into the north this year than last. The fact that the ice is much thinner than in past seasons is indication that it will all be out early. It is out of the river now, below White Horse, and the White Pass boats will be running by June, it is expected. In addition to the Yukon trade, Mr. Berdoe points out the rapid forward movement at Conrad City, the centre of the new Windy Arm camp. Here the number of men employed already reaches several hundred, and more are to be put on as soon as it is possible to work. The new town is springing up very rapidly and many business places are being opened up. No less than six stores are in course of erection in the new town.

Salmon Futures.

Because this is to be an off year in the sockeye run of the Fraser River, the statement is made that as high as 40c. per fish will be paid for sock-eyes during the coming season. One trap-operator has contracted to sell all the fish he catches at his five traps, for 26c. each. Columbia River salmon packers have placed the price of futures in canned salmon at $1.50 per dozen.

The Canadian Fish Co., a new organization which will fish halibut in Northern British Columbia waters, has recently brought from England the steam trawler Celestial Empire. This is the first time that trawling has been attempted on this coast. The new fishing tug is 153 tons gross and has been used in the past for deep sea trawling, such as she will now be engaged in.

PRESENTATION TO MR. MEREDITH.

Chas. H. Meredith, for many years with the Cowan Co., Limited, has resigned his position as secretary of the company, to assume the management of the Stewart Co., Limited, in which he is largely interested. Mr. Meredith entered the services of the Cowan Co. when a young boy and by close application to the work and the exercise of good judgment, he soon became invaluable to the concern and his retirement is very much regretted, not only by his employers, but by his fellow employes. That his services were appreciated and that he was very popular was clearly evidenced on Saturday, May 5, when on behalf of the directors, Rev. Elmore Harris, D.D., presented Mr. Meredith with a very handsome set of knives and forks. In making the presentation, Dr. Harris spoke in glowing terms of Mr. Meredith's business ability and high character, and expressed deep regret at losing him from the company's service.

Mr. Cowan, president of the company, on behalf of the employes, presented Mr. Meredith with a very beautiful carving set, adding further words of praise to what Dr. Harris had already said. He expressed a very high opinion of Mr. Meredith's work while in the employ of the company and was indeed sorry to see him sever the connection. The employes had assembled in the office to witness the presentation and all joined in wishing Mr. Meredith continued success in his new sphere of action.

BUSINESS PERSONALS.

Geo. Wallbridge, of Wallbridge & Clarke, Belleville, intends shortly to take a pleasure trip to the Pacific Coast.

Amos Hilker, general merchant, at Inwood, Ont., recently underwent a successful operation in Hamilton Hospital and is again back at business.

Mr. George Hadrill, the secretary of the Montreal Board of Trade, has left for England, where he will attend the sixth congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire.

C. C. Cook, who recently succeeded N. B. Zinkan, Southampton, has had the store thoroughly refitted and made up-to-date. Mr. Zinkan is now devoting his whole time to his furniture factory.

Mr. Percy Cleave, one of the partners in Cleave's Devonshire Cream Chocolate Co., of Crediton, Devon, England, is a visitor to Canada, in company with Stanley Bristow, a trusted and responsible servant of the same company. Whilst the trip from Montreal to Vancouver will undoubtedly prove a pleasurable one, these gentlemen have their eyes open to business, and it is probable their trip will result in Cleave's Devonshire cream chocolate being vigorously pushed ahead.

R. Pratt, of the Red Rose tea selling staff, this month completes his tenth year with T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, N.B. He was one of Mr. Estabrooks' first two travelers. Five years he traveled the Maritime Provinces and the last five in Ontario. He said yesterday: "I have seen the business double year after year. That was in the early stages; of course it doesn't do that now. It has grown too large to double in a year. Since I have been with him, Mr. Estabrooks has moved three times, each time to a larger warehouse."

SAMUEL SCHOFIELD DEAD.

Samuel Schofield, head of the shipping firm of Schofield & Co., St. John, N.B., representing the Donaldson and several other steamship lines, died last week. Mr. Schofield was a prominent member of the council of the board of trade. No man was better informed in regard to all matters pertaining to the shipping and port of St. John.

George W. Davey has purchased the old established grocery of J. Proctor & Son, Queen street, west, Toronto. Proctor & Son have been in business in that vicinity over twenty years and were highly respected. Mr. Proctor, sen., died a year ago and Mr. Walter Proctor, who has since been conducting the business, decided to devote his energy to another branch of trade.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

Business through the port of Montreal during the past week has been very good. According to steamship companies there has not been a great deal doing in butter and cheese, the shipments being rather limited, but other lines have been moving out quite freely. Great quantities of grain are shipped daily. Meats also constitute a goodly portion of the cargo of many boats.

The boat at present receiving the greatest attention in shipping circles is the C.P.R. Co's Empress of Britain, which sailed from Quebec last Saturday afternoon. She took with her a large cargo, including forty-two cars of meats and six cars of cheese, as well as a large consignment of grain. The new boat was visited during its stay in port by some eighty steamship agents from Canadian and American cities. All were very lavish in their praise of her, both as a freight and passenger boat.

The old Sovereign, which was engaged, up to the time it was burned, on the Montreal-Carillon service, has been replaced by the Duchess of York. The Ottawa River Navigation Co. has made the necessary alterations in the Duchess of York, and it is thought that it will now meet all requirements.

The Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co. has decided to make several improvements in the Montreal-Quebec service. In the Fall of this year the Quebec, now running between these two cities, will be taken to pieces and rebuilt on a model eighteen feet longer. This will place the vessel in the same class as the Montreal.

Last Friday brought with it the first accident of the season on the St. Lawrence route. The steamship Campana ran aground at St. Valier, just below Quebec. The vessel is the property of the Quebec Steamship Co., for whom J. G. Brock & Co. are Montreal agents. A thick fog was the cause of the accident. The boat was on the way to Montreal from Charlottetown and Gaspe, carrying passengers and a cargo. Little damage was done to either the boat or cargo. The boat was floated the afternoon of the same day.

The Escalona, which left Cadiz April 27, arrived in Montreal May 18 with a cargo of wine and fruit.

One of the sailings last Saturday was the twin screw vessel Canada, of the Dominion line, which left for Liverpool carrying a large general cargo including butter, cheese, and some 90,000 bushels of grain. The Canada will touch at Queenstown, Ireland. This is a departure from the regular route via Moville, the latter being the shorter passage.

It is stated for a fact that the Allan liner Bavarian has been abandoned altogether and that the boat is shortly to be sold, for the wreck which it is, to the highest bidder.

In produce circles there is a great deal of dissatisfaction over the proposed change in the sailing day of mail steamers. The British Government desires to have the sailing day from Liverpool of the C.P.R. boats changed from Saturday to Thursday, which would necessitate a change of date on this side also. The Allan boats at present sail on Thurs-

These rates are for general information only, and are subject to change at any time without notice; it is therefore important that all contracts must be reported by wire and confirmation obtained before closing with shippers, and unless specifically stated to be prompt shipment, or shipped within ten days after date of contract from the west.

The above rates are exchanged on basis of $4.80 to £1 Stg., excepting that when freight is prepaid, the ocean proportion of the through rate must be collected on basis of $4.86 to the pound sterling.

If freight is offered other than specified above, on which steamship connections are accustomed to quote a weight or measurement rate at their option, prompt replies will be facilitated by giving, when applying for rate, the relative weight and measurement of the merchandise.

It is understood that when reporting Sack Flour engagements, a carload is considered 28,000 lbs.

It is also important that shipper's name be given for every engagement made.

* Rates quoted in cents are per 100 lbs. † Per 2,240 lbs, No Primage via Montreal.

PRICE CONTRACTS AND THE LAW.

Judge Clute's decision that all price agreements are illegal is not relished by the members of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, but, on the other hand, they are not convinced that the learned judge is right in his interpretation of the law. Eminent lawyers assert, after careful consideration, that it is impossible to give a definite opinion as to the intention of section 520 of the criminal code, which is the enactment in question. The Dominion Government is understood to hold strongly to the view that any sort of trade organization or agreement is legal so long as prices are not enhanced. Believing that, it is not likely the Government will undertake to alter the law this session, or until some injustice has been worked by it. The actions now before the courts against the Grocers' Guild, plumbers' supply men and dealers in some lines of hardware, constitute, some think, another good reason why the Government should not act immediately.

But surely there is no sufficient reason for leaving a law in such an indefinite state. If the Government is assured of its meaning why not make it read so that business men, and even eminent counsel, have the same assurance? The law, and especially the criminal law, should be so plain that he who runs may read.

If the Government is right about it then the wholesale grocers have nothing to fear, because, according to a careful computation on the staples they sell under agreement—constituting fifty per cent. of their turnover—they make a net loss of two per cent. That is to say, the profit on half their turnover is two per cent. less than the cost of doing business.

The issue now seems to be, make the law clear.

CIVICS AND BUSINESS

Nova Scotia business men and the New Brunswickers, too, are progressive. They have the board of trade idea and apply it in a way Ontario merchants haven't thought of yet. They make a business of civics down by the sea and thereby make civics serve business. They don't let municipal affairs go to seed for lack of a little attention. And they don't ask to be the whole thing either.

Halifax has in operation an admirable plan for co-operative effort by the municipal council and the board of trade. It is a joint committee of the board of trade and city council. But let the chairman of the board, A. M. Bell, tell the story. In his address at the first quarterly meeting of the board he said:

"During the quarter there have been ten meetings of the board of trade council, besides seven meetings of committees and on these occasions the members of the council and of these committees have tried to do things.

"Decidedly the most important committee with which the board of trade is associated is what is known as the Commercial Committee, which is composed of members of the city council and members of the board of trade in equal numbers. The existence of such a committee ensures that harmony and co-operation between these two bodies, which is so much to be desired, and provides, whenever necessary, a representative committee to deal with matters of great importance to the welfare of the city. It is through the work of this committee, of which his worship, the mayor, is chairman, that much of the work of railroad extension has been accomplished.

"Among the many matters which are pressing for solution and which are engaging the attention of the council, is the endeavor to make Halifax a manufacturing and distributing centre. In connection with this, the commercial committee has recommended to the city council that a bill be submitted to the legislature by which new industries which may be started in the city shall be free from taxation for a term of years. I am pleased to be able to report that this has passed the city council and is now in the hands of a committee that is at work on the details of the bill, and it may reasonably be expected that during the present session of the house such a law will be put on the statute books as will lead to the greater development of manufacturing and distributing industries in our city.

"An effort of a different character, but with the same end in view, is that of an experimental business trip by the manufacturers and those engaged in the wholesale trade of the city to some of the towns on the Halifax and Southwestern Railway. A committee has made arrangements with the management of the road for a special train, and as soon as the weather is more favorable it is expected that a three days' trip will be taken as far as Liverpool and Caledonia, calling at Lunenburg, Mahone and Chester, during which an opportunity will be given to discuss with the merchants of these places, problems of mutual interest to those interested in the business of the several points and Halifax.

"Your council is looking with renewed hope to the time in the near future when Halifax will reap the benefit of its splendid position as the finest gateway of Canada on her eastern seaboard. It must be apparent to every observer that the increased size, the greater speed and the immense cost of modern steamers is causing the owners of these splendid vessels to look for ports at which they can at all times lie afloat, and load and discharge without regard to tides, and which they can approach at all times at the highest speed with the least danger. It is the aim of your council to bring the advantages of Halifax to the attention of the great railroad, the steamship corporations, and they now have under consideration a plan which they hope will be of great benefit to the port.."

The commercial committee and the experimental trip are very suggestive departures. The business trip was over a new extension of the Canadian Northern's Nova Scotia system and might be only locally applicable. The commercial committee could be copied with very valuable results in every place where there is a council and a board of trade.

Consider the situation in Toronto, for example, where business men carefully avoid municipal politics. The board of trade's influence in the conduct of civic business is a cipher and wasteful, antiquated methods are in vogue; questions and undertakings of paramount commercial importance drag on from year to year without settlement or progress. Not an alderman and, probably, not a member of the board of trade can tell the financial position of the city. The government of a municipality ought to be simply business. A commercial committee, such as Halifax has, could remove many obstacles to progress not only of Toronto, but of most municipalities in the Dominion.

RETURNED DRAFTS.

There are times when the retailer does not seem to realize his relation with the wholesaler in the matter of accepting or returning drafts, and refuses to accept a draft on account of some trivial or imaginary reason. Perhaps, if the retailer could really see the amount of work entailed, and the unnecessary expense the non-acceptance of a draft puts the jobber or wholesaler to, he would be more considerate in the matter.

Complaints come to the notice of this paper from time to time, where drafts are returned with no other explanation than "goods not yet checked over," or "drawee out of town," and in some cases simply the word "refused" is written across the back of the draft without even an explanation. Surely it is not the fault of the jobber that the goods are not checked over. To the house making the draft these returns mean the loss of 25 cents collection, the making of new entries and the reversal of every entry put upon the books in connection with the transaction. And then there is the interest due the bank on account of "drafts returned," which is a direct pecuniary loss to the house.

Sometimes an irate letter follows closely on the heels of a returned draft, claiming a shortage or an overcharge of some small amount, in some cases almost charging the house with an attempt to defraud. If the writer would be less hasty in these refusals, and, if he has a grievance, send in a letter explaining the same, there is no jobbing house of any standing whatever that would not be glad to rectify the matter. But to ignore or refuse to accept a draft, unless for some good and sufficient reason, is an act of business discourtesy and a source of inconvenience and expense to the maker of the draft.

Sometimes a draft is returned on account of a small overcharge, the retailer thinking he will commit himself by signing; but he can have little confidence in the house if he feels that by acceptance he is signing away his chance of being credited with the amount, as it would indeed be a short-sighted firm that would take such an advantage. No doubt those who return drafts freely do so without the knowledge that it causes so much trouble, but it does cause needless trouble and work.

TRADE WITH GERMANY.

Canadians, with few exceptions, approve the German surtax as a reply to Germany's unfriendly commercial attitude; but our Government should be just as ready to reciprocate a friendly overture. Germany imports large quantities of food stuffs, and under normal conditions Canada should have a share of that trade. Last year Germany imported 2,288,600 metric tons of wheat, 1,620,000 tons of barley, 354,000 tons of potatoes, 966,300 tons of oats, 928,100 tons of corn, 21,400 tons of wheat flour, $27,000,000 worth of cattle, $6,000,000 worth of beef and veal, $10,300,000 worth of pork, bacon and hams, $16,500,000 worth of butter, $6,700,000 worth of cheese and $28,000,000 worth of eggs. This is the business in which Canada should share. Indications are not lacking that the Germans feel the loss of their trade with Canada and are about ready to remove the obstacle they placed in the way. Canada could not too readily respond by abolishing the surtax.

QUEBEC WANTS MORE MONEY.

Hon. Lomer Gouin, the Premier of the Province of Quebec, is doing his best to secure an increased subsidy from the Federal Government. In fact he was a prime mover in the concerted action of the various premiers who met at Quebec and agreed together that each needed and were entitled to more money from the Dominion House. However, Sir Wilfrid and his ministers seem to have shown a tendency to evade the question at issue. With his usually strong determination Mr. Gouin took another step and used his influence with the Montreal Board of Trade to get that body to appeal to the Government. They passed a resolution in support of the provincial demands for more money.

Now, whether the action of the Montreal Board of Trade was right or not, it is a fact that whoever gets Government money and no matter how it is spent the money comes out of the people. It seems contrary to economic wisdom that there should be any principle adopted of robbing Peter to pay Paul. The history of the Provincial Government life, in the Quebec case especially, shows many an instance of riotous living. Money had to be raised on two or three occasions, and it was raised sometimes by exorbitant interest-bearing loans which tended to shatter the credit of the province and other times by round-about taxation and it has always resulted in a spendthrift policy. While Quebec is in crying need of money for a better school system, better railways, better public buildings, etc., what will be the result of a Federal subsidy increase? The probabilities are that there is a gap for the money to fill. Then, too, it is a well known human instinct to take an active interest in what one pays for and raises money by effort to obtain. Montreal City Council is at present in the midst of a quarrel owing to the announcement by the chairman of the finance committee that there are funds in abundance to keep the city roads and all its interests in good shape if the patronage system was abolished in the doings of the civic government.

Montreal, May 23, 1905.

The jobbing trade report a very good business during the week just past. Orders have been of good size and have come from representative parts of the country. The trade generally is in a healthy condition, with the exception, perhaps, of the collecting department. It is, according to some wholesale merchants, very difficult to obtain anything in the line of cash at present. It seems that money is tied up, making it impossible for merchants to meet their bills. It is not thought, however, that this condition of affairs will last very long, and once money gets into circulation again business will be on a normal basis. Canned goods present no new features. There is not such a strong demand for tomatoes. Orders are being taken for new stock at open prices. Since the decline in sugar, merchants have shown a disposition to hold off buying, seemingly in the hopes of seeing a further decline. Molasses is practically unchanged. Reports from primary markets state that the crop is just about cleaned out. Teas, on the whole, are moving very well. Coffee and spices are unchanged. Advices from California state that indications point to a light crop of the larger and smaller sized prunes. Other lines will be plentiful, however, it is expected. Very good business is being transacted at the figures now quoted. Other lines are normal.

CANNED GOODS—Canned goods are moving out fairly well. There may be said to be a healthy demand for all lines. Tomatoes are not so strong as they have been in some sections. Already many houses are booking orders for new goods. All orders taken are at open prices. Corn and peas continue to move out quite freely. Fruits are doing very well, although sales are not at present as large as they were some time ago.

SUGAR—There has been a decline in sugar since last quotations. This amounts to ten cents all along the line. The New York market declined the same amount previously. Merchants show an inclination to hold off buying since the drop took place. Evidently they are waiting for a firmer market.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Molasses is under fair demand locally, according to wholesalers, the better part of the business being of a sorting nature. Reports from the Barbadoes state that the market there is very strong. The crop is now practically cleared up.

TEAS—There is little change in the tea situation this week. Japans are well sold up at the primary market and the price is 5 per cent. higher than it was after opening this year. The quality, too, it is stated on good authority, both leaf and liquor, is poorer. Fair local business is being transacted in Japans. There is some demand for China greens and China blacks. Ceylons are about the same as they were last week. Greens continue scarce and consequently high, the quality poor. Indian blacks are moving very well.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—Reports received from California state that the outlook for the large and small size prunes is not the most encouraging, as it is expected there will be a scarcity. Other sizes, however, from present indications, will be as plentiful as usual. There is a fair volume of business being transacted at the rates quoted, which seem reasonable.

Valencia raisins have advanced considerably in the primary markets. Stocks here are very nearly cleaned up, but so far prices are not affected. Currants are unchanged. Walnuts are firm and there is no change in filberts. Tarragona almonds have advanced and are now selling at 13½c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Evaporated apples are still selling at the high figure which has been quoted steadily for the past month or so. The best quality fruit cannot be obtained under 12½c., and supplies are limited at that price. Inferior quality goods are selling at prices somewhat lower.

FISH—Dealers report an excellent business being transacted in fresh fish. All lines are in great demand and it is very often hard to fill orders from the stocks arriving. Fresh lake and brook trout are now coming in more freely but not yet in quantities sufficient to easily meet all demands. Fresh haddock are arriving in increasing lots and are now obtainable at 4½c. Fresh steak cod and grass pike are also coming in better. The season for dore is again open and this line is now quoted at 9c. Oysters have been advanced to $1.50 per imperial gallon. Ontario Markets.

Toronto, May 23, 1906.

ABBREVIATIONS—
SUGAR—Down 10c.
DRIED FRUIT—Prices creeping up.
BLUE FISH—10c.
PINES—About the lowest.
RHUBARB—Cheap.
CABBAGE—Scarce and dear.
POTATOES—Firm.

GROCERIES—Trade has inclined to quietness this week, with here and there a house that is "busy enough." On all lines the market is firm. Canned goods are in good demand, and sugar is said to be subject to a strong consumptive demand. Stocks here have been very light because of the market uncertainty, but there is a firmer feeling and heavy purchasing in expectation of an advance is said by sugar men to have characterized this week. Dried fruits continue firm with advances lagging behind advances abroad.

CANNED GOODS—The demand for all lines continues considerable in excess of last year. Unlike other years, light stocks, it is said, are held by retailers, who are buying steadily to meet consumption. The effect, therefore, of the advanced price on tomatoes cannot easily be gauged. While the firmness continues there is no change in quotations for the week.

SUGAR—Prices declined 10c. Thursday last, following a similar movement in New York, and the market looked weak. But rains in Cuba interfering with the operations at most of the 164 centrals grinding has created a better feeling, and there has been some buying in anticipation of a rise. Stocks, it is said, have been light, and the consumptive demand is considerable.

In Europe last week beet showed a decline of 1½d, and the weather reports are favorable for the growing crop. The prime factor just now is the weather in Cuba. If the weather fairs and a considerable number of centrals resume the market firmness would probably evaporate. Willett & Gray say: "The shortage in the crop is now made up, the visible production to date being 1,025,000 tons, with 164 centrals grinding, against 1,002,000 tons and 69 centrals at same time last year. Several large factories, favorably located, are expected to continue working this season much longer than usual."

The world's visible supply at the close of last week was 3,640,202 tons, against 2,669,113 tons last year, an increase of 971,089 tons.

TEA—Locally the market is featureless, with very moderate business doing. In London there is a distinctly healthier tone. The large blending houses have decided to utilize the penny-a-pound reduction in the duty in improving the quality, the price to the consumer to remain the same. It is therefore possible that the demand will run more strongly upon medium and good liquoring descriptions. Mail advices from London for the week ending May 11 show a firm market for all except common grades in best Indian and Ceylon.

The shipments of both Indian and Ceylon to America showed a slight decrease last year from the shipments of the year before. In 1904 the shipments of India were 15,294,509 pounds—over 3,000,000 pounds more than the highest previous record. Last year the total was 13,556,647 lbs. The shipments of Ceylons to America have declined two years. In 1903 they were 20,912,445 lbs., in 1904, 19,170,457, and in 1905, 18,998,373 lbs.

COFFEE—The situation is scarcely interesting. Locally there is nothing to report. From Brazil the news is unimportant. Willett & Gray report quite full receipts at Rio for the season of the year, and state that the crop for the year will likely come up to 3¼ million bags. At Santos the receipts show signs of diminishing, and the total crop net there will not exceed 10¾ million bags. It is still too early to judge the next crop, though there are intimations that the quality will not be equal to the last.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — The situation is interesting because of the firmness in lines already alluded to. Locally jobbers seem loath to advance prices in keeping with the market abroad. California dried fruits are very scarce. The trade is very bare; 60-70's are about the most easily obtained. Apricots there are none. Next season's pack is being offered at a price that means about 17c. to the retailer. The Sultana raisin quotation is slowly responding to the sharp rise abroad. Valencias are in about the same class. There is a hardening of date prices. Hallowees are very scarce, but the Sairs are said to be of prime quality.

B. C. Markets

In groceries the firm and increasing prices of California dried fruits continue to attract attention. Of course it is presumable that the recent disturbances in California have had a strong effect on the market. It is to be noted, too, that the 1905 pack is about cleaned up. In very few weeks new crop packings will be offered. It is therefore because of the clean-up that stocks are better sized up, and shortages noted. In every line an increase of price is quoted. White cooking figs are quoted 1c. higher; prunes, all grades, are up fully ¼c., and are likely to go up again. Cots are up very high, 15c. being asked per pound for choice stock here. Raisins are up about ½c., the quotation being 9½c. to 10c. for choice and fancy stock. The increase in this line is not so strong on account of light demand at this season.

Canned goods stand firm, as for some time past. Demand is fair and anticipation of early northern traffic is causing orders to be prepared for shipment. The only change to note is a rise in tomatoes, which are now selling at $1.50 per dozen, though even that is lower than they could be laid down for on present eastern basis. Canned fruits are firm, but no increase is noted.

In produce hams and bacon show an upward tendency, being now quoted at 17½c. per lb. The season of big demand is arriving and the trade is not over well supplied with stock. The main proportion is imported, of course.

The eastern creamery butter supply is kept down by the fact that local stocks continue to increase and nearly fill the market. The local fresh dairy butter is quite a factor, too. Prices asked are 25c. for local creamery and 22½c. to 23c. for local fresh dairy. Eastern creamery brings about the same as local creamery.

There are some eastern eggs on the market selling for 23c., but local fresh stock is plentiful yet. It is bringing 25c. and 26c. per dozen. A small quantity of fresh eastern cheese has been received and sells at 15½c. and 16c. per lb. It will likely go down in price next shipment, the season advancing.

Everyone held potatoes to bring a fancy price, but there has been disappointment, for the expected shortage did not materialize. There has always been a good supply, and the quality is very fair, too. The price quoted for Ashcrofts is $25 per ton; for local lower mainland from $14 to $18 per ton. New potatoes, imported from California, are now quoted at 5½c. per lb. Local new potatoes are expected in shortly. Many lines of fresh bunch vegetables, such as radishes, onions, parsley, etc., are in liberal supply. From California, now that disturbances are over, shipments are regularly received. Cabbage has been brought in by the car, and the general price is 3c. per lb. String beans at 20c., green peas at 10c., asparagus at $2.75 for 15-lb. crate, cucumbers at $2.25 per doz., cauliflower at $1.75 per doz., are some of the lines of imported fresh vegetables. Lettuce is local and is still $1.50 per crate.

Rhubarb is plentiful from local sources at 3c. per lb., or $1.25 for 40-lb. crates.

In fruits, cherries and strawberries from California are the new features. The former bring $2.50 and $2.75 for 10-lb. boxes. Berries in 24-lb. crates are $5.50, and in 15-lb. crates $2.75 and $3 per crate. The cherries are so far all black tartarians. Reports from the local crop of strawberries indicate that it is going to be very good. It will hardly come in before June 1. Hood River, Oregon, is sending a few into the market already.

Oranges are becoming higher every week. Navels are, of course, almost out for the season. They are being followed rapidly by Mediterranean sweets and Valencias, with a few St. Michaels already in the market. Prices quoted are $3.75 to $4.50 for navels; $3.75, $4, $4.25 and $4.50 for valencias; Mediterranean sweets, $4; St. Michaels, $4.50 and $4.75. Lemons are quoted at $4.25 and $4.75 for choice and fancy. Bananas are held at 5½c. per lb. They have been coming forward of late rather green, and the past week's backward weather has not helped to mature them.

Local apples are practically off the market. The only good stock now in are imported Winesaps from Washington and Oregon. They are sold at $3.75 to $4.50 per box. The Oregon box is a little larger than that used in the Okanagan. Very few Tasmanian apples were received by the last Australian steamer, owing to short crop in the Antipodes.

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., May 22, 1906.

A record low price for strawberries at this season of the year prevailed here this week. American berries sold as low as fifteen cents a box. The berries were of very poor quality. A slightly better berry could be had for twenty cents per box, but the price is remarkably low for strawberries of any quality at this season. Trade generally is steady throughout the province, with prices very firm. The demand for canned goods continues very heavy, and there appears to be sufficient stock on hand to meet all requirements. Peas, beans, tomatoes and corn are the leaders. There is not so good a demand for preserved vegetables as in other seasons at the same period. This fact is accounted for by the bountiful supply of fresh vegetables in prime condition now on the market. Potatoes did not Winter any too well, and the stock now held is light. The New Brunswick and Cornwallis potatoes on the market find a ready sale.

BUTTER—The local receipts are increasing slightly, and as a result the price is easing off a little. During the week the farmers marketed quite a lot of fresh made butter, the best of which sold from 23c. to 25c. per pound. The poorer quality sold around 21c. and 22c. Some of the retailers have also dropped the price of creamery prints to 25c. Very few rolls are now on the market. The supply of creamery is not quite up to expectations.

EGGS—The demand for eggs continues good. There is no change in either the receipts or the price. Nova Scotia eggs are quoted at 17c., and Prince Edward Island stock at 16c. to 16 1-2c. The jobbers do not expect that the price will go any lower.

FRUIT—The market is well supplied with seasonable fruit. The Jamaica oranges, which are very small, are quoted at $6; Valencias, 714, at $6.50; 420, large, $5.50; ordinary, $5. Californias range from $4 to $4.50, and Mediterranean from $3.75 to $4. Lemons are quoted at $3 to $3.50, and bananas from $1.75 to $2.25. The quality of the latter has improved greatly.

N. B. Markets.

Office of the Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N.B., May, 1906.

Business is good. The lumbermen in particular are happy. As a rule each Spring, through lack of water, a large quantity of logs are hung up in the rivers. It looks this year as if not only those hung up last year would come out, but all of the present season's cut. As the outlook is for high prices the situation is extremely favorable. The farmers are not quite so fortunate. The Spring is backward, the weather has been cold and wet, and roads are still bad. In markets there are no particular changes. Prices are generally firm. The quantity of molasses so far imported, particularly Barbadoes, has been large. It looks as if this would be a record season.

OIL—This is the quiet season, but dealers continue busy. Orders are already booked for Fall illuminating. While shipments of it are light, lubricating oils are active and there is much competition. This year there is a very heavy demand for gasoline, which is largely new business. Paint oils are also in large demand at high prices.

SALT—Considerable stocks of Liverpool coarse salt are held. Sales have been good. Prices are rather firmer. In fine salt there is improved demand.

CANNED GOODS—The situation is unchanged. Corn is held in full supply. Peas continue low. The supply of tomatoes is limited, but while prices are firm at the advance, there is no further change. In fruit there is a steady business. Gallon apples are higher. Peaches and strawberries firmer. Salmon is firmly held, and there is a fair demand. Lobsters are high. Meats have an improved sale. American goods are being pushed. In domestic fish the situation is unchanged. Some sardines are still held, and there is little else.

GREEN FRUIT—Business is very active. Bananas are in heavy demand. While local prices are unchanged, the market is very firm. Oranges are firmly held. Messinas are chiefly offered in half boxes. Some very nice Jamaicas are seen. Lemons are firmer. Best apples are high. Poor fruit sells slowly. Strawberries are quite freely imported. Now that native rhubarb is here, prices are lower.

DRIED FRUIT—California prices are quoted earlier this year than usual. Raisins are well below last season's figures. Valencias, and particularly Malagas, are quite a factor here. Prunes are about the same as the early figures of last season. Considering the market will be bare, present prices should be attractive. Apricots and peaches are quoted high, particularly apricots. In spot goods prunes are very scarce. Apricots and peaches high. Dates higher. Peels are high. Evaporated apples are very scarce. Onions are lower.

SUGAR—Prices are off ten cents. The market is, however, considered fairly firm. There is a good demand.

MOLASSES — Since the last report there have been quite large arrivals of Barbadoes. Prices are higher and firmly held. Fancy continue to have a large sale. The importations of Barbadoes will be the largest for years. Further lots of Porto Rico are shortly expected. Importations will not be large.

FISH—The quantity of gaspereaux so far caught has not been large. A few shad are seen; there is also an occasional salmon. It is still early. Lobsters are quite plentiful. Dry fish are still high, though rather easier. Smoked herring are rather dull. Pickled herring are high.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—While there is no further change in flour, the market is very firm. Feed is still quite high, and there is rather less demand. Oats are high. Oatmeal is unchanged. Cornmeal is easier. There are now three mills here. Beans are rather dull. Prices are firmer, particularly for hand picked. Barley and peas are dull. In seeds a fair sale is reported. Prices are unchanged.

Several new sections have been formed during the last fortnight and in others the organization has been completed.

The Crystal City section has been organized, and it now includes eighteen merchants from the towns of Crystal City, Cartwright, Mather, Clearwater and Pilot Mound.

The new Carman section includes the towns of Carman, Sparling, Elm Creek and Roland. There are 22 merchants in this section.

The Manitou section includes the towns of Manitou, Darlingford, La Riviere, Snowflake and Mowbray. There are 15 merchants in this section.

Organization has been completed in the Boissevain section, and it now includes Boissevain, Whitewater, Deloraine, Medora, Napinka, Dunrea, Killarney, Holmfield, Minto, Margaret, Ninette, Elgin and Ninga. This is one of the strongest sections in the association, and it is working well. Harmony prevails and dealers are seeing the tangible benefits of membership in the association.

W. G. McIntyre has succeeded T. J. McCammon as secretary of the Moose Jaw section.

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Wednesday, May 23, 1906.)

FLUCTUATIONS—

Sugar—Declined 10c. per cwt. east Moose Jaw.

Clark's Roast Beef — Advanced 5c. per doz. for 1's, and 10c. per doz. for 2's.

In sympathy with a similar decline in New York, all refined sugars were reduced 10c. per cwt. last week after The Canadian Grocer had gone to press. This decline applies to all points west of the B.C. boundary, but does not go into effect on the other side of the boundary. California fruit houses are quoting local jobbers now for October deliveries of prunes and raisins. Contrary to expectations, the opening quotions on raisins are lower than last year, and prunes also show a slight decline. No other fruits are quoted yet. California dried fruits now in stock are held firmly at present high prices. General business is active, and collections show a marked improvement as compared with last year.

CANNED GOODS—From advices received from the Pacific Coast it is believed that very little of the best sockeye salmon will be packed in tall tins this season, the reason being that the demand outside Canada is almost entirely for the flat tins. Humpbacks, cohoes and the late run sockeyes will be packed in tall tins as before. Indications point to higher prices than last year. Clark's roast beef has been advanced 5c. per doz. for 1's, and 10c. per doz. for 2's. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — California fruit houses are quoting local jobbers on October deliveries of raisins and prunes. Opening quotations on raisins indicate a decline as compared with last year. Prunes are also slightly lower. These are the only fruits on which quotations have actually been made, but higher prices for apricots are confidently predicted as the crop is undoubtedly short.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

The new season for cheese and butter has now fairly well opened, and, as was to be expected, prices of the new product are high and therefore remunerative for the farmers; the season's prospects are, however, as yet shrouded in mystery.

Our season is undoubtedly backward, and, owing to the lack of snow last Winter, our pastures are in poor condition. What the country is now mostly in need of is warm rains; we must have good grass to make good cheese and butter.

In most sections the dairy cows are now turned out during the day and housed and fed over night; the flow of milk is thus kept up, but the quality is as yet weak and foddery.

Last season's make of cheese was insufficient for the natural consumptive demand. Prices rose to a high point in consequence; the new season's make was wanted, and full prices are ruling today. This has stimulated farmers to extra feeding of their stock, with the result that receipts of both cheese and butter, and also the exports, show a marked increase over last year's figures. Whether this means an increased number of dairy cows, or is just the result of extra feeding to produce more milk, is not clearly established at present, but it is quite probable that both these causes may be accepted.

The dairy industry has undoubtedly been profitable for the farmers for the past two years. It is therefore only natural to suppose that the farmers have increased their dairy stocks and, further, getting good prices for the product of their milk, they are probably feeding their cows to get as much milk as possible at this season.

Receipts of cheese at Montreal since May 1 were 82,875 boxes against 46,908 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. The receipts of butter since May 1 were 28,056 packages against 20,349 packages for the corresponding period of last year. These figures show a wonderful increase of production of both cheese and butter, especially if the very backward season is taken into consideration, and only an increased number of dairy cows and also extra feeding of the dairy stock can be accounted responsible for this increase of production.

Meanwhile, British markets are bare of supplies and no matter what the price may be, they have some of our goods to supply their trade, but, if this increase in production continued, and probably augmented, when the condition of pastures improves we may get an over supply and consequently much lower price later on.

At present it looks like another season of high prices for both cheese and butter, but, whatever the market prices for cheese or butter may be, the farmers always get the best end of it; they get cash for their products and run no risk of losses.

The winding up of last season brought some disappointments to late holders of goods, as they did not realize the generally expected extreme high prices. The weakening and consequent decline in prices was undoubtedly caused by operators on this side, who, in their eagerness to dispose of the early fodder goods, kept offering them over the cable at rapidly declining prices. This resulted in bringing out a demand considerably in excess of the meagre supplies and the consequence was, a sharp reaction in prices at a time when a gradual lowering of prices should have taken place. Stocks in Great Britain are light and the consumption does not stop, but the fear of a big drop in values makes dealers cautious, so that present trading is only from hand to mouth, which policy is likely to be kept up until real full grass June goods come on the market.

There is quite a rupture at present between the Eastern Townships Dairy Association of Cowansville and the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association, the former being altogether too aggressive and offensive. The latter concluded to keep away from the old board and get up a new one, the main point at issue being "Montreal inspection" against "factory inspection." Owing to the large area, the latter is too expensive for Montreal merchants and they naturally feel that the producers should have sufficient confidence in them to concede this point. In the present age of keen competition for goods and trade, the Montreal merchants would not be likely to take unfair advantage of the men in the country ; in fact, it has been proven that Montreal inspection was in many cases fairer than factory inspection to the farmers, and a large number of creamery and cheese factory salesmen fully realize this, so that they are quite willing to join hands with their Montreal customers in establishing a new board at Cowansville, based on fairer business principles. A limited faction of the old board are still holding out, but if they find themselves left by the buyers, they will probably come around and join the board where they can readily dispose of their goods.

PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

OUR LONDON LETTER.

(By Our Own Correspondent.)

There is very little change to report in the position of the London produce markets. There is a good demand for colonial butters, considering the time of the year, and this is due, in all probability, to the fact that British and Irish butters have been curtailed in their production by the coldness of Spring and inclemency of the weather. Fortunately for home farmers, however, the temperature has risen within the last few days, and the change from cold to heat will be sure to have a beneficial effect upon pastures.

Meanwhile, choicest parcels of colonial butter are in demand, and secondary grades are finding a better market. Receipts have been small during April as compared with March, statistics showing that there was a decline of 87,000 boxes. Since July 1, 1905, to date, more than 2,000,000 boxes of colonial butter have been received into the United Kingdom. Of these 575,000 boxes came from Canada, 511,000 from New Zealand, and 982,000 from Australia.

Know the Markets.

Now that the Canadian butter season is drawing nearer, shippers will do well to gather as much information as possible about the individual requirements of each of the various British markets. In addition to the information which was published in the London letter of last week as to the coloring of butter, the additional advice is to hand that in Leeds and Hull consumers discriminate in favor of butter of a lighter shade. They prefer, also, to have less salt than the amount usually used by Canadian makers. In this district there is a ready market for Canadian hay in competition with the Dutch product.

High Commissioner Busy.

The high commissioner for Canada is circulating amongst the trade here an interesting paper on water in butter, wherein he states that well-made butter should not contain more than 15 per cent. of water, and should not, in reality, approach the Canadian limit of 16 per cent. About two years ago he analyzed samples of butter from various parts of the Dominion, and found the average of water to be 12.3. This Lord Strathcona considers satisfactory. What he has stated in this pamphlet he has confirmed in his evidence, quite recently, before the select committee on butter adulteration, now sitting at the House of Commons. He declared that he was against the addition of moisture to the butter, which was certainly being done at present, and he would make such practices a penal offence. Canadian butter should be sold for what it is, and if that were done he believed that exports of Canadian butter to this country would increase more than they had done in the past. He added that there were no margarine factories in Canada, as far as he knew.

Cheese Market.

There is little or nothing new to report in the state of the cheese market. A fair trade has been done and values remain unchanged. Receipts of Canadian cheese have been on a small scale, and stocks in warehouse are steadily decreasing. It is understood, however, that larger supplies may be expected before long. Meanwhile, the consumptive demand remains quiet, grades of "white" cheese having a slight advantage over colored. Stocks of New Zealand cheese are on a rather small scale.

The bacon market is very unsettled, and altogether on an unsatisfactory basis. In the early part of the week the demand was at its lowest. Prices were put away down to a most tempting figure, but buyers, in view of the bad consumptive demand, would not accept. During the last two days there has been a little more buying done, and the best that can be said is that things were no worse at the end of the week than at the beginning.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

The produce market now has its gaze fixed on September and after. It is expected that then the supply of hogs will assume normal dimensions. It is now about 60 per cent. of normal and for the present shows no tendency to advance, and prices remain firm. At Toronto the live weight price is $7.40. Even with the decreased supply of hogs about 75 or 80 per cent. of the products are exported.

The domestic market remains very firm and then the provision men's margins are not as large, it is said, as when the output is large and prices are normal. Stocks are low and the season of consumption is at hand. Reports indicate a good demand throughout the Dominion for pork products.

NEW BUSINESS FOR SYDNEY, N.S.

Another evidence of the forward movement in Sydney, N.S., is the opening up of a branch there of the Maritime Dairy Co., Ltd., of Sussex, N.B. The company have leased a store for a term of years. It is proposed to carry in stock a large supply of the products of the company for the trade of Cape Breton Island.

The company manufactures creamery butter, having 28 factories and buying from six thousand farmers living along the St. John and Kennebecasis rivers and through the counties of Kings, Albert, Queen's and Westmoreland. They also manufacture cheese, pork products. They can peas and corn and can butter for the West Indies, Mexico and South America. They also manufacture ice cream which is sold all over the Maritime Provinces.

J. D. Frier, the manager of the company, is in Sydney completing the preliminary work in connection with opening the branch. A. J. Hart will be the manager of the Sydney branch.

MANIPULATING CANADIAN BUTTER.

Before the select committee of the British House of Commons, enquiring into the adulteration of butter, Lord Strathcona testified that at present Canadian butter was frequently manipulated after importation into England. The percentage of moisture was increased, and it was then sold as English butter. This was a practice which should be prohibited, as blending was not permitted in Canada. If the practices were prohibited he felt sure the sale of Canadian butter would increase.

Witnesses from the Australian colonies gave evidence on the same lines.

BIGGEST SEASON YET.

There will be a larger production of butter and cheese in Ontario this season than ever before is the opinion of H. B. Cowan, Ontario superintendent of Fall fairs, who is in close touch with the dairying districts.

Jos. Charbonneau, Plantagenet, Ont., has been appointed to the staff of dairy instructors for eastern Ontario.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—In provisions there is very little new this week. Prices are firm. Compound lard has advanced a quarter of a cent. From orders being received it is evident that merchants have at last cleared their Easter stocks, and business is getting down to its normal basis. There is a good steady demand for provisions generally. Hams and bacon are going out much better than they have been. Pure lard is selling fairly well.

BUTTER — The advance which occurred in butter last week had the effect of stopping the export demand and, as a consequence, the receipts last week are nearly all in store here. The receipts amounted to 12,000 cases, while only 3,000 boxes were shipped. While country prices are down ¼c., locally prices are unchanged.

CHEESE — The cheese market is steady. Prices have been advanced in the country from ½c. to ¼c., but prices locally remain unchanged. Stocks locally are light, cheese being shipped the same week it is received. This accounts in a measure for the firmness of the market.

PROVISIONS—The situation here has not changed materially. Despite a somewhat larger delivery of live hogs and easier prices, products are all firm, and smoked breakfast bacon is quoted as high as 16c., which is 1-2c. to a cent advance. Light stocks just at the beginning of the season of heavy consumption have sufficed thus far to keep prices at the present high level. Comission men still hold to the view that there will be no backward movement for some months, and choice carcasses of beef are lower and yearling lamb and street hogs firmer.

ANOTHER B.C. BUTTER MAKER.

A new creamery has been added to the butter making institutions of British Columbia. The Ford-Saxton Co., of which J. E. Merryfield is manager, is now making butter in Vancouver with a very complete and well-kept plant. The company is turning out about 300 to 400 pounds per day, and expects to increase that considerably. The cream is brought in by rail and steamer from points up the Fraser River. In addition to manufacturing butter, the company is also dealing in a wholesale way in butter, cheese, eggs and produce.

DEATH OF MRS. CHAPUT.

Mrs. Helene St. Denis Chaput, relict of the late Mr. Leandre Chaput, founder of the house of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, in 1842, died on Saturday at her home, Montreal. Born in 1818 on Faubourg St. Joseph, now Notre Dame street, Mrs. Chaput was therefore in her 88th year. Her husband, Mr. Leandre Chaput, predeceased her five years ago. Mrs. Chaput leaves one son, Mr. Charles Chaput, head of the firm of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, and five daughters. The funeral was held on Tuesday from the parish church at Notre Dame de Grace and was attended by many friends of the deceased and her family.

T. H. Gothard, of Trenton, Ont., who sold his business recently, will start west on June 15 to locate a new place of business.

The grocery store of G. R. Rinn, St. Thomas, was badly damaged last week by fire supposed to have been caused by fire-crackers.

Mr. Potts, of E. Potts & Son, Woodstock, Ont., was in Toronto last week and called upon Manager Campbell, of Red Rose tea.

F. E. Deitch, grocer, Clinton street, Toronto, has sold to Jas. G. Smith, who was formerly in Eaton's. Mr. Deitch is thinking of going west.

Mr. H. J. Stevens, the Montreal commission broker, has been appointed agent for the Province of Quebec for "Beaver" oats. With the agency in Mr. Stevens' hands the province will be thoroughly covered as Mr. Stevens has a good connection with the trade, and knows what it is to hustle.

Fred Corey, grocer, Brantford, having sold his premises to a bank and built himself a handsome and commodious new store, held an opening the other day with some pomp and circumstance. And it's a fine store quite worth the effort. Situated in a good residential section, it is an ornament and attraction. Both sides of the store are fitted with Walker Bin fixtures, and in every other way he could Mr. Corey has provided for his business a thoroughly efficient equipment.

SARDINE FISHING AND CURING.

Sardines—French, Portuguese, Norwegian and domestic. These four principal varieties, with their numerous subvarieties, make a very interesting group, and stand for retail prices varying from 4c. a tin for domestic quarters up to in the neighborhood of half a dollar for the largest tins of the best French grades.

Sardines—or fish that can be packed and sold as sardines (for the word has come to have generic rather than specific meaning)—are found in nearly all oceanic waters.

French Sardine the Real One.

The really, truly sardines, however, belongs only to the Atlantic off the coast of France and to certain parts of the Mediterranean. His name in the scientific fish books is clupea pilchardus, and when he has grown too big for commercial purposes he takes the name pilchard. His nearest relative is a small fish found along the California coast rejoicing under the name of clupea sagax.

The sardine par excellence of the grocery stores is the product of French waters and factories; and this fact should always be remembered by the grocery buyer, for, while French sardines are necessarily imported, all imported sardines are not necessarily French. Indeed, unless specifically described as French, they are more than likely to be of Portuguese origin and much inferior in eating quality.

An Enormous Industry.

Brittany, the northwestern coast of France, is the centre of the French sardine industry. It is estimated that the business of catching sardines affords a livelihood in France to upwards of 30,000 fishermen, of which total more than 20,000 are included in the Brittany district alone. Particularly identified with sardine packing are the Brittany towns of Concarneau, Douarnenez and Nantes.

The Method of Catching.

Catching sardines is a most interesting piece of business. Great gill nets, dyed a greenish blue, to make them as inconspicuous to the fish as possible, are cast from the boats and set. Then the surface of the water is strewn with a specially prepared bait called rogue, made from the salted roe of cod and other fish. The fish, attracted by their favorite food, rise in dense schools, the nets are drawn and thousands are found caught in their meshes. The catch is marketed to the canners when the boats return to shore. The fresher the fish, the better prices they bring, of course.

Scarcity of bait is one of the most serious difficulties of the business. Nearly all the rogue used is imported either from Norway or the United States. In some seasons when the cod catch has been smaller than usual, rogue has risen to the almost prohibitive price of $18 a barrel. Even in ordinary seasons the bait item alone represents an expenditure of over $300,000. This fact, coupled with a demand that nearly always exceeds the supply, explains the high prices that prevail for French sardines of good quality.

Some years the sardines seem to forsake their accustomed waters. This was the case in 1902 and 1903, when the whole industry was practically at a standstill. However, the fish appeared again, and the market, for two years practically bare, has been fully supplied again.

The Curing Process.

As soon as the fish are landed they are cleaned, sorted as to size, soaked for a short time in strong brine, washed, dried, and then cooked in oil for a few minutes. When the tail fin breaks easily the cooking is considered done, and the fish are now ready for the final packing in tins.

Oil figures prominently throughout the entire canning process. In preparing the very highest grades, the very best olive oil obtainable is employed, but in the cheaper grades, peanut, sesame and cottonseed oil are largely used. The flavor of a sardine depends, indeed, very greatly upon the character of the oils used in the cooking and packing. It is believed that some packers whose products are of a particular flavor, use one kind of oil for cooking and another for packing. What is known as Bari olive oil is particularly esteemed for packing, and is largely imported for this purpose. As the oil costs very much more than the fish, the latter are crowded as closely as possible in the cans—a circumstance which has passed into a proverb. The cheapest fish are packed in the same oil in which they are boiled.

The superiority of French sardines over those from other waters is due principally to the flavor. Portuguese sardines and those of Mediterranean origin are always cheaper than the genuine French for this sole reason, and the Portuguese fish, even when put up in the cheapest oils, are still superior to the best domestic sardines.

Keeping Improves Quality.

Within certain limits, all sardines improve with time. This is particularly true of the aromatized varieties. These are packed with spices—a clove or two, a bit of bay leaf, a sprig of thyme, and the like—and it takes considerable time for the flavor of these ingredients to thoroughly permeate the flesh of the fish.

The Domestic Article.

Domestic sardines have a wide sale by reason of their cheapness. They go to market packed in oil, mustard, spices and tomato sauce. The fish used are not, strictly speaking, sardines, but are the young of herring, menhaden and other fish. Nevertheless, the demand for them is so great that prices are practically controlled within very narrow fluctuations.

What Makes Quality.

The value of a genuine French sardine depends primarily upon two conditions, namely, whether the fish are with or without bones, and what character of oil is employed. The number of fish to the can and the size of the can also affects the price. Take quarters, for example. The trade recognizes three or four styles of quarters, with values opposite them varying chiefly with the quantity contained within them.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The flour market is stronger and is finding support in the "weather" wheat market. On the strength of damage reports the market has advanced a cent. The flour situation is such that some dealers are already quoting an advance of 10c. Millers, however, are buying cautiously despite admonitions from the grain men that wheat is going to advance. Their purchases are all on the hand-to-mouth basis.

Rolled oats and oatmeal have advanced at Toronto to maintain the margin between the raw and finished product, but at Montreal the price is steady.

INFLUENCE OF CLIMATE UPON WHEAT.

Schindler has shown that the size and weight of the berry of wheats of different localities depend upon the length of the vegetation period, and more especially upon the length of the interval between blossoming and ripening. This, as he explains, is in accordance with the development of the grain as it matures, which is as follows: The glumes or chaff of the berry are first in order of growth; following these, the outer fruit coating and then the inner true seed coats develop, then follows the endosperm, which is the richest in gluten, and later still the storage tissues in the interior of the berry are formed.

In regions with a moist, warm climate the fruiting period is prolonged and abundant quantities of starch are formed in the large leaf surfaces which such a climate produces on the wheats. The starch thus formed is all transferred to the berry, which is thus filled up as is shown externally by the broadly expanded form. Such a wheat is relatively rich in carbohydrates and poor in protein.

On the other hand, a hot dry climate shortens the time for starch transference, and the native wheats of such a climate are in general richer in protein and lower in carbohydrates. As illustrations of this, he shows that the climate, and especially proximity to the sea, closely affects the amount of gluten in the wheat. The insular climate of England produces a robust wheat having large ears with numerous kernels, but with less gluten than the wheats of eastern Europe. According to this author, the wheats of England and other countries having a similar climate seldom contain more than 10 per cent. of gluten; while in the warm temperate zone, in eastern Europe, as well as in the western United States, in southern Russia, Roumania and Turkey, and in the subtropical zone, the gluten content may even exceed 20 per cent.

TO SEND GRAIN WEST.

Canadian Pacific coast cities are greatly interested in an attempt by the Alberta Pacific Elevator Co. to divert part of the grain produced in the North-West from eastern to western export channels. A through rate from the grain fields to Hong-Kong has been secured. The company plan the erection of a 500,000 bushel cleaning and sorting elevator at Edmonton and 15 or 20 farmers' elevators this Summer.

C.P.R. GRAIN FLEET.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R., has stated that when the line from Fort William to Winnipeg is double tracked and the air line from Victoria Harbor to Peterboro' is built, the company will have its own fleet of grain carriers on the upper lakes.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

FLOUR—Although there has not yet been any advance in the price of flour a rise is expected any day. The market for wheat is very strong. An excellent local business is being done but there is not as good a shipping trade as there might be.

The export demand is large, which is embarrassing considering the limited stocks. It is thought in some quarters, however, that next week will bring some relief in the way of increased stocks. HOW CLOVES ARE PRODUCED.

The cloves received in every grocery store are the unopened flowers of a very small evergreen tree, which is a native of the Malay Islands, where so much spice comes from. This tree thrives in all tropical countries, however, and at present is cultivated in many parts of the world. The flowers, which are rather small, grow in clusters at the extreme end of the branches of the tree. The flowers are gathered before they open, or bloom, and are smoked, after which they are dried by exposure to the sun, and thus assume the shape in which they reach the grocers' shelves.

SHREDDED WHEAT LUNCHEON.

The Canadian Shredded Wheat Co tendered a luncheon to the press of Montreal last Thursday at W. H. Scroggie Co's store on St. Catherine street. It was a unique experience for the press representatives present to partake of a luncheon entirely prepared from shredded wheat in its various forms and combinations. Mrs. E. H. Beattie, the lady demonstrator of the company, proved herself an artist, not only in the preparation of the dainty and novel dishes served, but in her capacity as a hostess. Her explanations of the methods of preparation, the variety of forms in which shredded wheat can be served—something over two hundred—was most interesting and showed a thorough knowledge of the art of cookery. The menu was as follows:

Creamed Beef in Shredded Wheat.
Pattie Shells.
Cold Chicken, Triscuits with Butter,
Triscuits with Imperial Cheese.
Strawberries in Shredded Wheat.
Baskets with Whipped Cream.
Shredded Wheat Ice Cream, Coffee.

Since the demonstrations commenced at Scroggie's, over 25,000 people had been served with shredded wheat luncheons and according to Mr. Lloyd, manager of the grocery department, the sale of this food had increased very much through the dietary educational course offered.

Mr. R. G. Enos, who was in charge of the mechanical department of the demonstration, explained to the guests the precess of manufacturing the shredded wheat and triscuit, showing a series of photographs of the plant at Niagara Falls.

The whole wheat is used in the manufacture of this food, as a miniature plant on exhibition shows. The method is to cook the grain for thirty minutes, and then cure it for twenty-four hours, a process which serves to make it light and pliable for the shredders. The latter machines are equipped with thirty-six pairs of rolls, each pair dropping its layer of shreds. The entire process is conducted in a perfectly hygienic manner, and the manufactured product retains the entire food elements of the wheat grain.

Those attending the luncheon were: Horace Davis, M. R. Nutting, and G. T. Perry, of the Standard; W. E. Playfair, the Star; R. Kinnard, the Herald; Chas. W. Davis, jun., the Witness; P. R. Bisaillon, La Patrie; M. B. de La Bruere, La Patrie; Jules Fournier, Le Canada; Tancrede Marcil, city editor Le Canada; C. D. Cliffe, Hardware and Metal; W. H. Seyler, Canadian Grocer.

Farmers of the Tenby, Man., district have organized a $15,000 milling company. Their mill will have a capacity of 75 barrels, and will be ready for this year's crop.

TROUBLE OVER TEA REPORT.

Considerable excitement has been caused in Japan tea circles over the publication of a report sent to Canada by the Government commercial agent in Japan. The report was as follows:

"The first shipments of the new crop have gone forward to Canada, and the tea interests are cheered by the prospects of a good crop. Large quantities of the old teas have been stored in warehouses, and when the new crop reaches the market in large quantities, the price of the older and inferior article is certain to depreciate."

This report is emphatically denied by tea merchants in Montreal, who are in touch with the Japan markets. Well-known houses handling Japan teas only are surely in a position to speak with authority on the situation of these teas in Canada. A representative of the Canadian Grocer interviewed one large importing house and found that much unnecessary confusion and discontent had been caused by the report sent in by Mr. McLean.

"Mr. McLean says that shipments have been made to Canada," said this house, "which shows that he is misinformed because it is impossible for any large quantity of new tea to reach Canada for at least a month or six weeks, by which time the stocks at present held by the retail merchants will have been exhausted. Again, he says that large quantities of the old teas have been stored in warehouses and predicts a decline in the prices when the new teas arrive on the market in large quantities. As a matter of fact there are no stocks of old teas held in Japan and besides this very little is held in Canada in first hands. Advices by cable from Japan state that the market has opened on a higher basis than last year, which is another fact.

"The trade is worked up about this report and it is hard to make them see that the writer was under a false impression of some kind. They believe that prices will go much lower and consequently hold off buying. From present indications, prices will not be lower. It is to be hoped that in future more accurate reports will be sent to Canada."

SHOULD EMPLOYE WHO STEALS BE GIVEN ANOTHER CHANCE?

"What shall we do with this employe who has gone wrong?"

It is a question troubling the heads of more financial, industrial and mercantile establishments than the average reader will readily believe. One man at the head of a business employing 5,000 men and women has assumed to answer the question for his house.

"We figure in our business that two-thirds of the petty thefts in the house are traceable to the managers of departments and the management generally. Failing to judge character and the environment of the individual as we should, we discover that the temptations of the place into which the individual is put, have overcome him. He has taken money. Why did he take it? And how systematically and how much?

"Then from the management's point of view we raise the counter question, 'Why was that person put into that position of temptation and opportunity?' In two cases out of three our decisions have been that we have been responsible in more or less degree, and in this manner it devolves upon us to try to right the individual with himself and with us."

Why One Became a Thief.

As illustrating the position of this manager, one story of a defalcation may be told. The young fellow was 22 years old, and married. His salary was just $12 a week, and his position with the house at the time was in handling the incoming mail and opening that portion which contained inclosures of money.

There was no particular strength in the man's face and bearing. With a keen looking over before he was assigned to his duty, an experienced judge of human nature would have put him where he would have had to handle money in such a manner as it came to his hands. But he went to the work, and about the time that suspicion began to circulate against some one, the young man went to the general manager with a full confession.

The story was that of a man, hardly more than a boy, who had married a woman scarcely more than a child, and the two of them, in the necessity of eating, dressing respectably and maintaining themselves had found $12 a week an impossible income. But the young man had hopes of promotion and advance in salary, and on the strength of that hope had taken small sums of money, keeping a strict tabulation of them, and willing at the time of his confession to repay the full amount if only given a little time. The sum taken was under $100. It would have cost more to trace the amount through experts, than $200 would have been worth. The young man had confessed, fully and without reserve, promising wherever he might be in the future to make a restitution of the money. Every cent of the abstracted funds had gone to the needs of the family. Having an insufficient sum on which to live and facing wants and wishes of his young wife, he had become a thief, irresponsably.

Saved and Made Valuable.

The manager saw these things. He saw the responsibility of the house. To turn the young fellow out, disgraced, would be to ruin him when he was culpable in the least degree. Could the house keep him, putting him where, under pressure, if need be, he would earn enough for his needs?

It was found years ago that this proposition came in this form to the manager of a great business. To-day, using the words of the man, "You couldn't drive that fellow from the house with a club; or, if you could, the house wouldn't stand for it half a minute!"

Not only was this young man saved to himself and to the house, but in those four years twenty other persons discovered in small peculations have been given the same consideration and are fixtures in the business, removed from all temptations of money, and serving better in other capacities than they could serve where money is. Five individuals out of a pay roll of 5,000 is not a large percentage of the working force, but to the manager of the business these five persons have been worth while to save and worth while to keep.

But against this group of twenty-one persons the record of the house read plainly to all subordinate managers "before promoting John Smith, please see the general manager." It is the echo of that old first question, "What shall we do with this employe who has gone wrong?"

Problem Never is Solved.

In this way, considered from the position of the business man, the problem of the man who has gone wrong never is solved When the unsentimental business man has considered the possible ignorant part which he has played in the fall of the man, he is still handicapped in his amends. We will admit that the manager's negligence in sizing up his man has brought the employe into a lasting shame, leaving a scarred conscience that may never heal. Yet it would be absurd to consider the man of business in an attempt at making moral restitution. It is something done that cannot be undone. The victim has been a full party to it and the employer at most has been unfortunate in a hurried guess.

In a possible attempt to make a full material restitution for the ill, a general manager of a great business must consider first the keeping of the person in the same line of work in which he proved too weak in his bout with temptation. This in itself would involve a conscious risk against which the management would have little reassurance.

This would make an impossible situation at once. To the thousand honest, struggling ones would come the disheartened, demoralizing thought that honesty in the establishment is at a discount. And to the crooked one, left in his position which he has betrayed, there is the thought that he is indispensable to the business.

Is "Another Chance" Folly?

Here is the basis of the reasoning of many men, that an employe who has been unfaithful to a trust—no matter what his penitence and his determination to make restitution—must be summarily dismissed for the good of the service. It is folly, from his material point of view, for the sociologist to theorize that, having "burnt his fingers" once to his shame and disgrace, the man will not offend again. Practical experience in business has never borne out the theory. It becomes a concession in itself to retain such a delinquent anywhere in the business, and when this concession has been made it seems to be the only practical procedure to show the crooked one that there are positions in the house to which he never may aspire. After which, if he chooses to stay and make the amends that are in his power, he may be assured that the management during his good behavior is willing to forgive, but not to forget. To forgive may be humanitarian and unselfish: not to forget is business, however, and it is a business proposition after all has been said.

The field of speculation in business is so wide and the opportunities so diversified that the theft of $10 or $100 scarcely ever may be under conditions similar to another theft of like amount. Allowing for the difference in mental capacities and responsibilities, the theft of $10 by a paying teller in a bank never could be overlooked as the theft of $10 in postage stamps in some mercantile house could be. The first always would be deliberate theft

"The way of the transgresser is hard." Business, after thousands of years, has not tended to make the way easier. It promises to make it more stony and impassable than ever before. The young man in business cannot learn the truth of this too soon.—L. M. B. in the "Southern Merchant."

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

The lemon market, which a month ago was in poor form, has not had to wait long for betterment. The feeling is now very strong. Crops everywhere are said to be light and comparatively few cases have been stored in Canada.

Otherwise the fruit trade is in a very gratifying condition. Pines are good crop, but the prices are being maintained and are thought to be at their lowest now. The quality, too, is all that could be desired. As an indication of the growth of the Canadian trade in pines, it is stated that the receipts at Toronto this year are at least 25 per cent. ahead of last. Up to last Saturday 10,000 cases had been brought into that one distributing point.

The outlook for the Canadian fruit appears to be everywhere satisfactory, though it is a little early for definite forecasts.

SPREAD OF CALIFORNIA FRUIT.

The sale of the cargo of Mediterranean fruit which recently arrived per SS. Bellona, says the Montreal Herald, revealed some interesting facts regarding the changed conditions in the fruit trade resulting from the improved methods of transportation established within recent years. The better facilities for carrying fruit by rail have been of great benefit to local dealers in one way, and yet Montreal has lost a large amount of valuable business since these improvements were inaugurated.

Five years ago instead of one shipload of Messina oranges and lemons arriving at this port in the early Spring there were at least five or six cargoes. The cool water way made it the favorite route in the early Spring and American dealers had most of their Mediterranean fruit consigned for Montreal. The California fruit trade was very much smaller than at present, and American dealers, not only in the east but in the middle west as well, relied chiefly on the orchards of the Mediterranean for their supplies of oranges and lemons.

In those days the annual auction sale of fruit at Montreal was an important affair. The American buyers turned up in droves from all parts of the United States, including many from the west and south. Five years ago there were over a hundred American buyers at the sale. This year there were none.

This change is due entirely to the improved facilities for transportation and the resultant rapid growth of the California fruit-growing industry. California now supplies practically all the oranges and lemons consumed west of Chicago, as well as a large proportion of the fruit sold in the Eastern States. All the American railways now have special refrigerator fruit cars which are never used to carry any other class of freight. These cars carry California fruit to every part of the continent. Montreal dealers now receive over 100 cars every season.

Prices obtained at the auction were as follows: Lemons sold at from $1.60 to $3.50 per box; Messina oranges at from $1 to $1.85 per half box, and Sorrento oranges at $1.75 to $3.50 per box. The sale realized in all about $70,000.

The principal local buyers were: Messrs. Hart & Tuckwell, John Barry & Son, John Caldwell & Co., J. J. Vipond & Co., George Vipond & Co., Montreal Fruit Exchange, J. R. Clogg & Co., A. Bowes & Co., H. E. Vipond, T. S. Vipond & Co., W. Vipond & Co., C. E. Plain, J. de McGregor and G. W. Hunt, of Ottawa; J. R. Dickson, of Hamilton; G. W. Ryerson, of Brantlord; G. McPherson, Winnipeg; R. H. Foy, of Kingston; J. B. White, R. McMillan, W. Everist and W. Clemes, of Toronto.

FRUIT OUTLOOK BRIGHT.

H. B. Cowan, superintendent of Fall fairs in Ontario, states that the outlook for a fine fruit crop in Ontario was never better. The Niagara district came through the Winter with less injury than usual, and the only real damage was to the strawbwerry plants in the Ottawa district.

ELECTRICS IN FRUIT DISTRICT.

It was stated by a representative of the Mackenzie-Nicholls Syndicate before the St. Catharines (Ont.) Council last week that it was their intention to build branch electric lines all through the Niagara peninsula, as feeders for the Toronto to Buffalo line.

EXPERIMENTAL SPRAYING.

Apple orchards in the Orillia (Ont.) district are said to have been deteriorating, and the Provincial Department of Agriculture has selected 11 for experimental spraying under the direction of W. E. A. Reer. Portions of the orchards only will be sprayed so as to enable a contrast with the portions untreated. The spraying takes place before blossoming, after the blossoms fall, when the fruit forms, and, lastly, when it droops over enough to expose the stems.

A MARYLAND FROST.

A frost on Monday night is said to have practically destroyed the new tomato plants in Maryland. Commission men in Toronto say it will not affect the supply of tomatoes here, as they can be got elsewhere, but they have been expecting Maryland strawberries next week and usually depend on them for supplies during the month before the Canadian berries come in. Anxious inquiries are now being made as to the damage to the berry crop. Canadian berries will, it is said, be late this season and are not expected before June 15.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—Very good business is being done in fruits this week. There is a good demand generally with no call for any one line in particular. Navel, Messina and Jamaica oranges are all advanced more or less. Strawberries are quoted at 15c., and good sales are being made at this figure. Bananas are still selling from $1.85 to $2.25. Other lines remain about the same as they were last week.

VEGGTABLES—A good general business is being done in vegetables. Local shipping is increasing as the weather becomes warmer. Already many houses have a good trade with many points along the St. Lawrence route between Montreal and Quebec. Parsley has been advanced to 40 cents. Southern cabbage has advanced, as have also Florida tomatoes and red onions. There has, in fact, been a general tendency towards higher prices during the week. Cucumbers are selling quite freely at the advance to $4 a basket.

YOU NOW KNOW THE LAW

A $25.00 fine was the penalty a Toronto grocer paid for selling adulterated Jam.

The chances are he didn't know the stuff was "doctored," but the law doesn't make much allowance for that.

There is no need of any grocer being in doubt. All he has to do is to get the goods that are guaranteed to be pure—

E.D.S. Brand

The Grocer then throws the onus upon E. D. Smith because the latter puts the guarantee label on his goods and must stand by them—a thing he is quite willing to do.

Sell the E.D.S. Brand and get sure trade.

considerably ahead of last year. Ten thousand cases of pine apples arrived in Toronto this season up to this week. That is said to be at least 25 per cent. in advance of any previous record. The crop in Cuba is large and of exceptional quality, but prices here are said to be about at rock bottom, and wise housekeepers will do their preserving now. Retail dealers ordering quantities for preserving could probably shade somewhat under the prices quoted, but they should see to it right away. The fruit is now in heavy demand everywhere.

Lemons are 25c. higher, and throughout the trade still higher prices are expected. In both Italy and California crops are light. One dealer said $6 lemons would not surprise him this Summer.

Strawberries are arriving freely and prices are slightly lower. Maryland berries are expected next week, and the crop there is said not to be good. Hot, dry winds are doing much damage.

Oranges are firm and slightly higher. California Mediterranean sweets and seedlings are scarce this year and the crop will be largely absorbed in the Western states.

HOW TO KNOW THE REAL

It's quite a habit now with makers to call any old stuff Swiss Milk Chocolate.

The surface of the "Pharisee" chocolate looks the same as the "Swiss-right-through" goods; and the wrapper is made quite dainty, you know.

If you want the "shadow" trade buy the make-believe chocolate.

If you want the "substance" trade buy the chocolate made in Switzerland—

TOBLER'S

You don't have to take our word for it. Write the Canadian agent at Switzerland, ask him if there is such a firm as Tobler & Co. in Berne and if they export any of their chocolate.

The skimmed milk may also be separately evaporated, then mixed with the homogeneous cream, and the desiccation continued.

The Good Trade is Worth Capturing

You will admit that, of course. But, perhaps you are not so sure as to just what biscuits will capture it.

We have but one opinion—you must sell Perfection Cream Sodas if you desire the good trade.

What makes us reason so? Just this :

have the Right-From-The-Oven-Flavor, the original sweetness, that palatable quality so many biscuits lose after entering the tin.

TRAVELER WORKED THE HAND CAR.

Overtaking a train that has a good start is not an everyday feat even among commercial travelers, and they learn most of the tricks of traveling. But Norman Notter, a young grocery traveler, was in South Africa three years, and there or elsewhere he acquired the virtue of not knowing when he was beaten.

He was at Tory Hill last week, a small place, with one store, on the Irondale, Bancroft & Ontario Railway. The lone merchant is close to the station and Mr. Notter hustled over to get his order while the train waited. Usually this is a feasible proposition, because the limited expresses don't go around by the I. B. & O. This day, however, someone was in a hurry, and when Mr. Notter rushed back to the station the train had disappeared. The next one was the day after at the same hour. A gang of section men were at work nearby, their hand car in the ditch beside the track. It didn't take long to negotiate with them for a chase after the train, and soon Mr. Notter and three laborers were "pumping" hard and making record handcar time in the direction the train had taken. They caught it at Wilberforce, five miles down the line.

In South Africa Mr. Notter was for three years transport conductor in charge of the long convoys of native ox teams with ammunition and provisions which it was the special delight of the Boers to intercept and appropriate.

THE BIRTH OF RICE IN AMERICA.

The very introduction of rice into America seems almost providential, having been brought about by accident, when, in the year 1694, an English vessel, being storm-bound, put into Charleston Harbor. The ship, beaten by the storm and in need of repairs, was compelled to lay in harbor for some time; and it was while there that her captain gave to one of the citizens, Thomas Smith, a small quantity of rice, which principally constituted the cargo. Smith planted the grain in his garden, and the plant thrived and bore most abundantly; whereupon Smith gave seeds to his neighbors, which they also planted, and were successful in raising crops. Prior to that eventful occasion, the great stretches of lowland along the Carolina coast (now very valuable) had proven a barren waste and in the planting of this little parcel of the wonderful cereal and its successful harvest is found the logical beginning of rice culture in America.

One morning last week the "Salada" Tea Co. received orders for three and a half carloads of "Salada" tea from Boston, one carload from Buffalo and one carload from Winnipeg, and in addition a number of large local orders. These figures speak for themselves.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

TOBACCO SMOKE AND MICROBES.

Whether or not tobacco smoke is a germ destroyer is discussed by the London Lancet, the leading medical journal of the world. It is often asserted that tobacco users are proof against certain contagious diseases because the smoke destroys the germs that find their way into the mouth and nose. It is a question of the chemical composition of the smoke of the weed. It is often said nicotine abounds in tobacco smoke, and nicotine is undoubtedly a powerful disinfectant. But the Lancet affirms that the quantity of this poison in tobacco is minute, if indeed it is present at all. It is certainly not present in quantity to be worth considering. There is, however, in smoke a very poisonous oil, pyridine, which accumulates in a pipe. There is present also carbon monoxide which is said to have germicidal properties. But the most important germicide in tobacco smoke is formaldehyde, which is present in very appreciable quantities.

If water through which a few puffs of tobacco smoke has been blown be tested, a strikingly positive formaldehyde reaction is obtained. One part of this substance in 10,000 parts of water produces a solution fatal to all microbes, but practically innocuous to the human organism. When it is considered that a vast number of microbes are hourly deposited in the nose, it is conceivable that these may be effectively destroyed by the frequent passage of tobacco smoke through that organ. In the same way the organisms exposed to tobacco smoke in the mouth would succumb. Formaldehyde is one of the most powerful disinfectants we possess. The cigar yields more formaldehyde than the pipe and the pipe more than the cigarette.

GROWING MORE IN ESSEX.

Tobacco growers of Essex county, Ont., are reported to be this year planting more than ever before. The Government's announcement regarding an experimental tobacco farm has stimulated interest.

The growers themselves have been carrying on experimental operations for years, and believe themselves able to grow better tobacco this year than ever before. Certain kinds of the leaf grown have heretofore obtained a ready sale to Canadian manufacturers.

A PROFITABLE CROP.

John Little, of Harrow, Ont., on scant six acres raised last season 11,842 pounds of tobacco, which was purchased by the Empire Tobacco Co. at 8 1-2c., in all $1,006, or over $167 an acre.

ESSEX AND KENT CROP.

The value of the tobacco crop of Essex and Kent counties, Ontario, have been estimated for the 1905 crop at $104 per acre, or a total of $686,400 for a total production of 8,580,000 pounds, from 6,600 acres. The average yield was 1,300 pounds an acre, and the average price was in the neighborhood of 8c. The average yield per acre in the United States last year, as estimated by the department of agriculture, was 830 lbs., and the average price 7 1-2c.

THE 20th CENTURY TEA

It is almost superfluous to explain that the tea of the 20th Century is Ceylon Tea.

Every grocer who has watched the development of the tea trade knows that from its first introduction has appealed to the taste of consumers in a remarkable way. Other teas have fallen away and given place to the Ceylon product wherever they have come in contact.

There is only one explanation for this —the inherent merit of the tea of Ceylon. Otherwise Ceylon tea could not have maintained the precedence it so pre-eminently enjoys.

The Grocer who specializes on Ceylon tea is building on a sure foundation.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

HAVE STOOD THE TEST

Old Homestead Brand Canned Fruits and Vegetables have stood every test to which they have been subjected and with every test stand higher in the estimation of the trade.

The reason of this stability is simple—QUALITY. The Old Homestead Canning Company built their factory when they did and where they did because they believed they could put up a better line of canned goods than had yet appeared on the Canadian market.

Old Homestead Brand CANNED GOODS were to stand for what was best in the Canadian Canned Goods trade.

There was no doubt that the Picton district produced the finest vegetables and fruits in Canada.

There was no doubt that the factory erected by the Old Homestead Canning Company was the most up-to-date and sanitary factory in Canada.

There is no doubt in the minds of those who have used the Old Homestead Canned Goods that the Old Homestead people know how to handle their choice fruit and admirable factory to get the best results.

Those best results have been materialized in the

The Salt that Saves Money and Time for You

"Time is money"—save time then, and you save money too. Waste no time and you waste no money. Is it really worth while to spend useless energy in an endeavor to push inferior articles of trade? We think not.

Windsor Salt is the standard because so often used for comparison—you hear "as pure as Windsor Salt" used everywhere to-day. You don't have to argue with a customer over its merits—its quality is too well known. It's pure white, dry, crystalline. It is nothing but salt.

You lose more than we do by not stocking up with it—lose time, lose money, lose trade.

"Queen Quality Sweet Pickles are full of spice, And that is what makes them extra nice."

Of course there's not too much spice—just the right quantity. The pickles are solid and firm too, and never lose their original flavor. The vinegar used is the purest pickling vinegar obtainable—not commercial acid vinegar with colorings and other substitutes. This latter forms a part of so many pickles that one is justified in designating them "Bottled Poison." You can sell at the same price as the inferior goods and yet get a handsome profit for yourself.

Does the opportunity to do a profitable and satisfactory pickle trade appeal to you?

COOL CURING OF CHEESE

Dairy Commissioner J. A. Ruddick's evidence before the standing committee of Parliament on agriculture and colonization, has been issued by the department as a bulletin, and parts of it are of interest to every one associated with the provision and dairy industry. Regarding the central cool curing rooms for cheese, established by the Government a couple of years ago, the evidence was as follows:

It has been definitely decided that the coming season will be the last year for the Government to carry on this work. At one time it had been practically decided to drop the work at the end of last season, but during my visit to Great Britain last year I obtained information which made me think that it was advisable to recommend operation for another year. Of course, you know that one of the objects of carrying on this work was to provide a sufficiently large quantity of cheese to have an appreciable effect upon the market; to put the cool cured cheese on a commercial basis so that those who deal in those goods would get a clear idea of the difference in value. I found while in England during the months of July, August and September, that very few of these cheese were coming forward at that time. They make good stock for holding, and the result has been, apparently, that a large percentage of them are held during the Summer months and shipped over in the Autumn, or in the early part of the Winter, so that those who receive them are comparing them with Fall-made cheese instead of Summer-made cheese, as the comparison should be made. They have, therefore, not realized the full value of the improvement due to cool curing. I think something can be done in the way of having the cheese go forward a little earlier during the coming season, and if that can be done it will have a good effect in educating the trade on the other side to the importance of this question.

Cheese Factory Improvements.

Many cheese factories in Canada are improving their curing rooms. We have very many demands for information concerning the building of improved curing rooms, and the alteration of old ones. I would not undertake to say how many of these new cheese factory curing rooms have been built, but I know of a large number, and they are already having a very marked effect on the average quality of Summer-made cheese.

By Mr. Armstrong:

Q. What is the increased value that the farmer will receive, or should receive, for his cheese sent from the cool curing rooms to the British market?

A. Well, I do not think we have realized yet what the full increase in value is. In the Old Country, where cheese is cured at a temperature of about 60 to 65 degrees, it matures with such a mild flavor that there is a great demand for it and it sells for prices at from a cent to a cent and a half and even two cents a pound more than the best Canadian. The important difference between that cheese and the cheese which is produced in Canada during the Summer months is that there is a difference in the temperature of curing.

What the Farmer Gets.

Q. What I am anxious to know is the estimate you place upon the increased value per pound of the cheese that goes from the cool curing rooms?

A. Well, so far, the increased value in actual sales has amounted to about one-quarter of a cent, but it will be more when the real value is better known. Then there are other differences. There is a saving of shrinkage which means about one pound per box. This is a distinct gain and the cheese are all the better for it. Then there is this other point. Many of the cheese cured at ordinary temperatures go off flavor and in consequence a loss is sustained when they are sold. Cool curing will not make good cheese out of bad ones, but it will prevent many good cheese from going wrong.

An English Testimony.

Q. Would the cheese buyers pay a quarter of a cent a pound more for the cheese from the cool curing rooms?

A. Yes, they have paid that much more. I know that contracts for the cheese have been made on that basis. There is no doubt that these cool cured cheese are worth more money. Let me read you a letter which I have here. It was written by one of the large firms in Manchester to a firm in Montreal, and the writer sent me a copy of it and I have permission to use it. The letter is as follows:

Manchester, October 24, 1905.

"Dear Sir,—On going through cheese marked 'Hollybush 20-30' with one of our most prominent customers this morning, we were much struck with the lots marked No. 23 and 26. On examining these we found that the difference between these two lots and the others appears to arise from the fact that they have been cured in a cool room. The No. 27 also have been treated in the same way, but are much riper. Altogether these three lots of cheese stand out from the others such a long way that we thought it worth while writing you about them, and if you can impress upon makers to have all their cheese cured in this way, you will confer an enormous benefit on the trade. Cheese like these are a treat to handle, and it is astonishing that the old system should be continued in the face of such a marked improvement."

Two days later the same firm wrote:

"Dear Sir,—Further to our letter of Tuesday regarding cheese cured in a Government cooling room. We have weighed these for average and find that they gain in weight over box weights, and we think this is as it ought to be. The customer who buys them is delighted when he gets full weight, because in ordinary Canadian cheese he does not, after he has made allowance for the cloths. We are so impressed with the value and the out-turn of these cheese that we want you to do all you can to have all cheese cured in the same way. The trade would be so much more pleasant, and we believe the consumption of cheese would be increased by goods of this kind."

Good Time Coming.

The cool cured cheese suits the taste of the consumers better and there will be a tremendous increase in the consumption, and that means a higher price. It is certain that the relative price of Canadian cheese will be raised very considerably when a large proportion of it is cured at a proper temperature. I have some other information to give you on that point if you will allow me to go on, and when we come to it I will take it up.

By Mr. Telford:

Q. What is the proper temperature for curing cheese?

A. We find that a temperature between 55 and 60 gives the best practical results. Experiments in curing cheese all the way down to the freezing point of water have been conducted, but while it has been shown that a temperature of 40, in some cases, has produced a rather milder flavor in the cheese than a temperature of from 55 to 60, there are practical difficulties in the way and it does not appear to me to be advisable, judging by our experience, to go below a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees. If you reduce the temperature too much it means that a long time must be taken for curing, and that would be a serious drawback to the farmers who want their money promptly. The expense of maintaining a low temperature would also be very considerable. A temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees can be maintained in a curing room at very little expense. The ordinary cheese factory can maintain a temperature of between 55 and 60 at the cost of from 20 to 30 tons of ice and even less in some places.

By Mr. Blain:

Q. What temperature is required in the Government cool curing room?

A. We maintain a temperature of about 58 degrees.

By Mr. Sproule:

Q. Would you recommend that the same temperature be maintained in the cooled air compartments?

Plans for Factories.

A. That is about the temperature which is maintained. In this connection I would like to draw attention to plans which I have prepared. After the experience gained in the operation of the cool curing rooms, we are able now to give cheese factory owners plans of buildings which will enable them to adopt cool curing successfully, and we find there is a great demand for this information at the present time. These plans are quite complete and they will shortly be published with specifications and full information so that any builder can make use of them.

By Mr. Cochrane:

Q. How long does it take to cure cheese at a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees?

A. That, of course, depends upon the character of the cheese; but we have found that it takes about a week or ten days longer, on the average, than it does at ordinary temperatures.

By Mr. Wright (Renfrew):

Q. Is it advisable that every factory should have its own cool curing room, or should there be a central station where all the factories would send their cheese?

Each Factory for Itself.

A. I think the plan of each factory having its own cool curing room will be adopted almost entirely. It was never expected that any other system would be followed. The central stations have been useful for the purposes of demonstration and for impressing the importance of the question upon those engaged in the business. The chief objection to the plan is that it involves considerable expense in the handling of cheese without adding anything to its value that cannot be added at the cheese factory if the facilities are provided. In certain cases and under certain circumstances, it is possible that it is advisable to follow the central system. If the cheese business was being reorganized entirely, or if it was being newly started, it would be a somewhat different matter, because then if a central curing room was provided it would not be necessary to build any at the factories and a saving would be effected. The curing rooms of all factories can be, with very little expense, made just as good for the purpose as the central cool curing rooms.

Q. As a matter of fact, a deputation has already come to us to see if we could not do something of that kind, and if so, what we would charge them for doing it. They do not want to incur this additional expense for a cool curing room; their factory is a small one, and they thought it would cost them no more to deliver that cheese at our curing room than it would to deliver it at a railway station.

A. But there would be the additional cost of handling it in your curing room and from there to the station, and they would not save any of the expense in handling it at their factory. Where the factories are large enough so that the wages of one man might be saved by having the cheese cured in a central cool curing room, it would be different. It is entirely a commercial consideration, and there are of course some places where I think it might be found that that system will work out better than the other.

MODERN METHODS ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

The British Columbia Market Co's premises in Victoria are undergoing alterations and improvements that will make them one of the most modern meat and fruit emporiums on the coast, or indeed, in the Dominion. An entrance is being constructed from Yates street in addition to the one on Government street, necessitating the removal of the fruit department to another location.

The principal improvement is the installation of a large refrigerator chamber, 16 feet by 30 feet, in the centre of the store. It is capable of being regulated from 36 to 38 degrees and will be fitted with steel railroad tracks and sidetracks which will enable the carcasses to be run in from the wagons with little handling, and with great economy of labor into this central storehouse.

From this chamber, glass counters of the most modern type will extend, within which, protected from dust and flies, but visible to the customer and easily accessible to the counter man, will be arranged the supply of cut joints, etc., for the day's trade supply. Underneath these glass counters, cold air is conveyed in pipes by which meat will be kept chilled to 40 degrees while exposed for sale, the temperature being capable of regulation by valves for the purpose.

Altogether, the plant is very complete and said to be the only one of its kind on the coast at present.

Another addition will be a steel smokestack, to replace the present structure, for the curing of meat and sausages. Beyond this the premises are undegoing a complete course of cleansing and renovating.

TOOK THE TRAVELER'S ADVICE.

A. E. Brend of Clinton street, Toronto, was burned out at an early hour a week ago Monday, and his case presents a strong argument in favor of insurance. The stock was a total loss, not so much as a can of vegetables surviving, and Mr. Brend and his family had a very narrow escape. They were hemmed in by the flames and were assisted to safety over the roofs of the outhouses by neighbors before the firemen arrived.

A few months ago a grocery traveler asked one day if they were insured, and Mrs. Brend, who was in the store, said "No. I'm willing, but Brend thinks it's foolish." The traveler urged the wisdom of insurance and sent a friend in the business to see them. He got the risk after a fortnight's work, and Mrs. Brend afterwards told the traveler she was ashamed to see the agent coming. The agent told the traveler after the fire he had worked harder for the risk than for any other business he ever got."

IN THE SWIM AGAIN.

Wingham, Ont., Board of Trade has been re-organized. Officers were elected as follows: President, R. Clegg; 1st vice-president, W. J. Greer; 2nd vice-president, Abner Cosens; secretary, T. Hall; treasurer, A. E. Smith.

WINDOW AND INTERIOR DISPLAYS

A STORE TO BE PROUD OF.

Is there a grocer in Canada who wouldn't be proud to own a store like the one shown in the accompanying illustration? It looks like a model, doesn't it?

The owner is Peter Anderson, and it is situated in the old royal town and new loyal city of Guelph. These fixtures and those on the opposite wall for crockery and fruit are of quarter-cut oak and plate glass, and they cost Mr. Anderson something like $1,000. They were designed and installed by Jones Bros., Toronto.

The lower section of the wall fixtures is half bins and half open spaces for weighed out packages. One of the bins is shown in the illustration. They are for tea and cereals, and are tin lined and absolutely dust and vermin proof. For ordinary access the top slides back, but the front is movable and the whole bin may be lifted out.

The Upper Works.

Above the bins are two tiers of spice drawers. The shelves above are adjustable and that explains why the goods fit them so well. The fact is, they fit the goods. Notice the carving on the cornice and the border on the wall decoration.

The beauty of the quarter-cut oak is not shown at all in the picture, but the silent salesman that occupies the foreground of the illustration is evidently a handsome piece of furnishing. The frame is also quartered oak, and the rest, including the shelves, in plate glass. The doors are mirrors. The contents are the finer lines of package goods, with the position of honor on the second shelf from the top, reserved for a choice display of confectionery.

A Dandy Counter.

The counter, too, is quartered oak, and is glass fronted with eight double compartments. The glass, here again, is British plate. The display space is six inches deep. At the back of the counter the space is utilized for drawers. The top is beautifully polished, and the illustration shows the reflection of the goods on it.

A manager in one of the largest groceries in Canada told The Canadian Grocer not long ago that between the shelving and the ceiling was not a good location for canned goods. He said it was too warm, and that the goods were apt to swell and cause a very undesirable aroma to pervade the store, and was he right? If grocers who have an idea on the subject would send them to The Canadian Grocer the trade generally would arrive at a better understanding of the subject.

Neatness Next to Profit Making.

It is worth noticing that the floor space in front of the counter, at any-rate, is not blocked with barrels or boxes. But to the practical grocer the picture tells its own story best. The scales, the cash carrier, the lighting, everything seems to be of the most modern type, but, above all, the store looks tidy and clean. Cleanliness is the basis of all best storekeeping.

How They Do It in Guelph.

VALUE OF WINDOW DISPLAY.

How many dealers really recognize the value of their display windows? It is true that the importance of keeping the windows attractive is being felt more and more each year by the retailer, but still there are a number who are somewhat negligent in this respect, and do not seem to fully understand the value of their windows as an advertising medium. Did you ever stop to think how many people see your window during a day? If you watch for a couple of hours some day and see the number who pass your store and glance at your window, you will get a rough estimate of the advertising value of your window.

The window should always be used in connection with your newspaper as an advertising medium, as in the window you can show as many lines as you please, and they can be displayed as attractively as the nature of the goods will allow, while in newspaper advertising only cuts can be shown, and cuts are not always perfect representations of the goods themselves; so if you want the public to know all about your goods the best way is to show them in your window space. Of course we do not mean to say that newspaper advertising alone does not get trade. Without it no dealer can be successful, but use your windows in connection with your newspaper advertising, and when you call attention to some special lines, mention the fact that they can be seen in your store windows.

When you are conducting a newspaper advertising campaign, you prepare new copy for every issue of the paper containing your ad. You do not let the same ad run week in and week out because you know it will not bring any returns, and it is the same way with your windows. You cannot expect results from a display which is put in the window and left there for a whole season without any change of stock or arrangement. New things in the windows attract just as much more attention as new items in your newspaper ad. If a customer reads your ads and sees only the same goods advertised day after day, and the same prices quoted, he naturally begins to think that you have only those in stock.

EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

A department devoted to the improvement of Retail Advertising. The editor of this department will be pleased to answer questions on advertising and review any advertisements submitted to him.

TOUCHING THE CHORD IN ADVERTISING.

The popular song of the day appeals to a vast number of people. It is pleasing, interesting and, most of all, easily understood. It may have little rhyme, rythm or reason, yet it possesses certain human qualities which make for success; in short, it touches the chord.

The successful play, whether drama or opera, depends on more than gorgeous scenery and fancy stage setting for its popularity.

The highest priced "star," clever situations and witty talk are all futile unless the play possesses that mysterious but magnetic "heart interest."

The keen playwright combining these constructs a play which—touches the chord.

The popular store touches the chord. It may not be the largest nor most prominent establishment in town, nor have the best and most convenient location.

As often noticed, the store that makes heroic efforts for trade does not always win out.

Well arranged windows, fancy signs, good lighting and a generally inviting exterior somehow do not invite.

A store to "touch the chord" must have a personality of its own; it must have an "atmosphere" peculiar to itself, so that the stranger on his first vivit will feel a vague but pleasant magnetism.

The advertising must have the same "feeling" that pervades the store itself. It does not necessarily follow that a metropolitan style will fit the country merchant. Advertising need not be "smart" to be effective. It need not create a sensation to sell goods.

It must faithfully, accurately, absolutely represent the store it is intended to represent, then and then only will it "touch the chord." J.A.M.

QUALITY IN ADVERTISEMENTS.

When a grocer writes his first ad, and it is the means of bringing in new customers, naturally the grocer thinks he has struck the right vein, and, therefore, can "tie up."

When a grocer ties up to one style of ad writing he begins to pave the way for a "rut." The fact that copy "takes" on one occasion is no proof that it will always take.

People change as well as the weather. What influences them to-day may fall flat in six months' time.

Therefore, a grocer instead of being elated over the results of his first effort should merely use those results as a sort of foundation stone for making a series of tests as to which kind of copy is most effective on the majority of occasions.

Do this and you will write better ads and people will enjoy reading them.

"HIGHER" ADVERTISING.

Lucas & McCreary's ad is a good specimen of the "higher" style of retail advertising—the men and their methods, first; the goods, second.

While the style is not as yet popular, its popularity is increasing, and likewise its effectiveness.

The "higher" advertising is really in the category of general publicity; but the only way a grocer can build up a continuous custom is by calling to his aid this much-denounced general publicity.

Merely selling goods advertised is not necessarily indicative of a permanently growing trade. When the advertising stops, perhaps the orders will too. If the lines brought before the people always represent specialties, goods on which the margins do not permit of advertising are apt to suffer.

Lucas & McCreary, by taking the slow but sure course, will in time become known for the very characteristics they advertise, and consequently will secure a "complete" patronage.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

When the "pure food show" propaganda is spreading from one city to another why not avail yourself of the opportunity to blend your newspaper advertising with the popular fancy?

In this way you can help give a double force to the purity campaign and personally share in the benefits.

BE ON TIME.

Get your copy into the newspaper office as early as possible. The earlier your copy is in the better it will be displayed, and if your contract calls for no particular position, the better it will be "placed."

Last minute copy is seldom presented attractively, and often is marred by one or two typographical errors. Should any of these errors be amongst prices they are destined to cause considerable confusion.

HINTS.

When a customer asks for something you do not carry make a note about it.

Never be afraid to try a new line of advertising.

Use the experience of yesterday as a partial guide for to-morrow.

Do not attempt to force your own blends of tea on customers when they ask for a certain brand.

Say "No" to the man who wants to sell you ready-made advertisements.

Give all suggestions a hearing.

BIRTH OF A NEW PACIFIC CITY

By Our British Columbia Correspondent

That the Grand Trunk Pacific Co. is in earnest in locating "Prince Rupert," its name-chosen capital, on Kaien Island the famous, by the shores of Tuck's Inlet, is very apparent from all present indications. The engineering staff is located at the old Indian mission village of Metlakatlah, and from that temporary base movement is being made upon the site of the terminus. Mr. W. D. Hays, a brother of the general manager of the company, is in the north superintending the erection of a saw mill by a company of which he is the head, and which has a large contract for ties and timbers for the G.T.P. On the site of the new metropolis, Chief Engineer Pillsbury, in charge of northern operations, has located a wharf and it will be erected at once. Survey work, both on the townsite and on railway work eastward from Kaien Island, is in progress with a large staff of men.

And so a new coast terminal city is born.

Northern Canning Activity.

Northern coast canneries are getting well along with their preparations for the Spring and Summer pack of salmon. The last of the tin plate supplies has been shipped north, the steamer Ventura taking out 50 tons quite recently. Fishing boats for use in the service of many of the northern canneries, especially the newly built plants, have been made by wholesale at local shipyards and are awaiting room on the northbound coasting steamers to be shipped. The run is expected in the north to be on very quickly now.

Halibut Fishing.

Halibut fishing is becoming a very prominent industry on this coast as there will be three well-equipped companies in the business very shortly, and the purchase of the fishing steamer Manhattan by the New England Fish Co. is adding one vessel more to that company's fleet. The new vessel will reach port from the Atlantic in about three months' time.

Montreal merchants note the opening of a direct supply market there for British Columbia halibut, the fish being shipped in car lots from Vancouver. Hitherto the fish has all been consigned direct to Boston by the New England Fish Co., which operates from this port. Now Messrs. Leonard Bros., of Montreal, have made arrangements to handle car lots in Montreal, distributing from there to all parts of the east. Five days is the time taken in shipping the iced cars of halibut from Vancouver to Montreal, the cars being attached to the eastbound express trains.

Opening of the Yukon.

The lower Yukon River, from Lake Laberge down to Dawson, is open for steamer travel, but the ice not being out of the lake, there is no through traffic north from White Horse to Dawson yet, though the ice is expected to move out of the lake before the end of the month. If it does, it will make an early season record for the Yukon since navigation has been conducted there. The steamer Thistle, which wintered at Hootalinqua, followed the ice down the river from that point, reaching Dawson last Saturday.

In preparation for the opening freight season large quantities of goods are going north. Mackenzie Bros. have put another steamer, the Themis, into commission, and are shipping full cargoes by both this steamer and the Henriette.

Worried About a Market.

Vancouver citizens still worry over the proposed market and site. It is now suggested that a central location on Cordova street, and running back to Water street, be secured, and a large building built on the property for the benefit of both merchants in the business portion of the city and the incoming ranchers, as well as the buying public, who will, it is asserted, find it irksome to go out to the southern side of the city to the proposed Westminster Avenue site, which was, however, selected by plebiscite at last civic elections.

Grocers' Clerks Busy.

The Retail Grocers' Clerks' Association announces that its committee has secured the co-operation of all but one grocer in Vancouver for the proposed Wednesday half-holiday. A canvass of the proprietors of all the stores in the city was made and the result obtained. The clerks in the grocery stores in New Westminster have also secured the mid-week half-holiday for the season, the employers being particularly courteous in their expression of willingness to co-operate.

NEW GENERAL MANAGER.

The general managership of the Canadian Canners, Limited, is a position that, at any season of the year, entails no small amount of concern, but for the next few months during the preparation for the season's operation, and the campaign itself, the position is one of great responsibility.

The gentleman who has succeeded Mr. David Marshall as manager is one whose experience has well fitted him for the onerous and responsible duties he is called upon to perform.

Junius J. Nairn, whose portrait is reproduced herewith, was, it might be said, born into the canning business, his father having been in partnership with Mr. Marshall, one of the pioneers in the canning business in Western Ontario.

The new general manager is a Canadian, born in Aylmer, Ont., where he received his early education. On leaving school Mr. Nairn entered a dry goods store, where he received his first lessons in business. Some time later he decided to leave the commercial for the financial side of business and entered the Aylmer branch of the old Exchange Bank of Canada, where he remained for two years, going thence to the head office at Montreal for a period of three years.

Believing that the Western States offered better inducements, Mr. Nairn, like many another young man, went west and spent five stirring years in private banking in the City of Cheyenne, Wyoming.

RETURNED JUN 4- 1906

The death of his father recalled the young western banker to Aylmer, where he took his father's place in the canning business of Marshall & Nairn. That was seventeen years ago. Since that time Mr. Nairn has made the canning business his study.

When the consolidation of the majority of the Canadian canning factories took place some few years ago, Mr. Nairn remained in charge of the Aylmer factory.

On the death of Mr. Ferguson, something over a year ago, Mr. Nairn was called to the head office to act along with Mr. Marshall, and on the resignation of the latter gentleman this Spring, his logical successor was found in the quiet-mannered gentleman who had been closest in touch with the work.

Mr. Nairn is mayor of his native town of Aylmer and has been for the past three years. This makes a service of five years in the office of mayor, as Mr. Nairn filled this honorable position for two years on a previous occasion. Mr. Nairn has a fond spot in his heart for his native town of Aylmer and although his business now keeps him in Hamilton for most of the time, he always manages to spend the week end in the East Elgin town, in which he has extensive property interests. His faith in his handsome little town is evidenced by the fact that he last year erected there a fine new brick business block of five storeys.

Mr. Nairn's favorite recreation is driving his auto, as he is an enthusiastic motorist. This fact may throw some light on the origin of the canner's new brand of "Auto" canned goods.

WORCESTER SAUCE IN COURT.

The Grocers' Gazette, of London, Eng., contains the following report of the conclusion of a legal action relating to Worcester sauce:

Worcester Sauce.—Lea & Perrins vs. Holbrooks, Limited.—A motion by the plaintiffs in this action for an interim injunction to restrain the defendants from advertising Worcester sauce in a manner alleged to be an infringement of the plaintiffs' rights came before Mr. Justice Swinfen Eady in the High Court on Tuesday. Mr. Sebastian, for the plaintiffs, said the injunction asked for was to restrain the defendants from advertising their Worcester sauce as the original, the genuine, or the only original and genuine. The defendants some weeks ago gave an interim undertaking, and they now agree to make an end of the whole matter. It has been arranged that the motion should be treated as the trial of the action, the defendants admitting that the plaintiffs were the original makers of Worcester sauce. The defendants also submitted to a perpetual injunction in terms which were in writing, in effect restraining them from using in connection with the sale of their sauce the words "original," "genuine." "the original" or "the genuine." The written terms contained some further language, but it only expressed the same thing in a different way. The defendants would pay the plaintiffs £10 as damages, deliver up all documents containing the offending statements, and pay the taxed costs of the action. Counsel for the defendants stated that everything complained of had taken place in Canada. The advertisements with the words "genuine" and "original" were inserted in Canadian papers by the defendant company's agent without their knowledge, and before the action was commenced they gave instructions for the advertisements to be stopped. They never contended that theirs was the original Worcester sauce, and they did not intend to say so. His lordship made an order in the terms agreed.

AFTER THE U. S. DRUG TRUST.

The Attorney-General of the United States last week began proceedings in Indiana against the triple organization known as the Drug Trust. In a published statement he says: "The parties defendant specifically named in the bill have voluntarily combined together to control the prices at which proprietary medicines and drugs shall be sold to the consumer through the retail druggists, in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law. The parties to the combination include the Proprietary Association of America, the National Wholesale Druggists' Association, and the National Association of Retail Druggists. An injunction is prayed for prohibiting these associations from acting in concert for the purpose of maintaining prices, and the individuals, firms, and corporations who are members of the respective associations from acting together for the purpose of maintaining uniform prices to the consumers throughout the United States."

How it is Done.

The plan of the trust is to restrict the sale of proprietary medicines to members of the association of retailers, one of the obligations of membership in which is to observe the established prices. If a member breaks this obligation he is listed as an "aggressive cutter," and thereafter cannot obtain goods from any member of any section of the trust. About 90 per cent. of the trade belong to the trust. "There is but one ultimate object of the conspiracy," says the Attorney-General, viz., "to fix the price which shall be observed by all retail druggists in selling to the consumer the various commodities manufactured by the several members of the proprietary association."

Henry W. Loder recently brought suit in Philadelphia against the triple organization and obtained a substantial verdict, establishing a case substantially the same as that charged in the Government bill.

The officers of the three organizations all deny the allegations.

A LONG AUTO TRIP.

Chas. W. Gillett, president of E. W. Gillett Co., Toronto, has planned a long auto tour for himself and family. He purposes going from Chicago to New York via Toronto. He intends to start in about a month and will travel in his fine Renault car. He will tarry a few days in Toronto.

CURIOUS GOOSE EGGS.

B. A. Belyea has on exhibit in his store at Southampton three curious goose eggs. One, when the farmer whose goose is to blame brought it, weighed 20 ounces and measured 13½ inches long and 10¾ inches round. It was opened and inside was found a second complete egg, shell and all, weighing 6½ ounces. There is a third egg weighing 11 ounces, but it measures a foot long by 9 inches round.

STILL ONE OF THE BOYS.

Warren Bros. & Co., Toronto, received last week from their traveler, Wm. Glover, a post card having this interesting note, dated Port Hope, May 13, 1906:

"Thirty-two years ago to-day at one p.m. I started on my first trip east to Port Hope, carrying your sample case. Tea then was 80 to 82 1-2 cents and every chest came to $52 or $53."

HINTS TO BUYERS.

"Thistle" brand canned haddies of this season's pack are now in the hands of the trade.

W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, report the first arrival of new lobsters in halves and pounds, "Beaver" and "Ice Castle" brands, which show exceptional quality.

At the beginning of this week the E. D. Marceau Co., Montreal, received their first shipment of this season's April pickings of choice Japan teas. This fact will be interesting to the trade, as these are among the first arrivals of Japan teas.

BUSINESS PERSONALS.

A. H. Brittain, of Montreal, is up west on business this week.

Mr. Bartley, of Bartley & Reid, tea merchants, Montreal, is on a business trip to points in Ontario.

George Shelly, fisheries overseer at Niagara Falls, Ont., has been dismissed from the Fisheries Department of Ontario for alleged unjustifiable seizures.

J. C. Black, representing Heinz' 57 varieties, is making a tour of Canada, and speaking to The Canadian Grocer said that the business of the firm in Canada was constantly increasing. Mr. Black represented Heinz for two years in England.

A CANNER'S EVENTFUL HOLIDAY

Wellington Boulter, of Picton, Ont., the pioneer canner, and Mrs. Boulter have just returned from a five months holiday in California. Mr. Boulter had the time of his life, with earthquake, fire and railway wreck, but he came through it all improved in health and spirits and with nothing more embarrassing than a few additional stories.

On the day of the quake the Boulters were not in 'Frisco, having gone a few days before to Huntington Beach. They were awakened early by the shock. Mr. Boulter jumped out of bed. He had been across the Atlantic but he never felt the boat heave as that house did, he told The Canadian Grocer representative. He and Mrs. Boulter got into some clothes, then rushed out. They had hardly reached the street when Mrs. Boulter ran back upstairs. From a bureau drawer she extracted their available cash and reaching the street again, declared with emphasis, "Now I'm ready to go back to Canada."

Earthquake to Wreck.

That morning they took the train for Oaklands, a suburb of San Francisco, where they had their holiday abode. Then came the railway wreck. They were traveling, the railway people said, at 50 miles an hour, but Mr. Boulter thought about 40, when the train struck a piece of track the earthquake had distorted and in a moment the train was a wreck. The engine lay wheels up. A car full of Chinamen was in a similar plight. The dining car ahead was athwart the tracks and the end of the Pullman in which the Boulters were was in matchwood.

Mr. Boulter had a very narrow escape. It was about seven o'clock and he had been just about starting for the dining car for breakfast when a young man crowded ahead of him. Then the porter with an armful of linen got in the way and the crash followed before he had time to get past. The young man who had gone ahead was killed instantly.

Killed and Injured.

The poor Chinamen were in a bad plight. Some of them were dead and many more were hurt. The coach in which they were imprisoned had to be broken open with axes to enable them to escape. The fireman was under the engine. It was pried up with a steel rail sufficiently to allow his extrication, when it was found that he had got off with a broken thigh. The wreck started to blaze in several places but sufficient water was at hand and the passengers put the fires out.

Eventually Mr. and Mrs. Boulter reached their home in Oaklands safely and from a distance of six miles watched the pall of smoke that told of the burning of the Pacific metropolis.

In the Ruined City.

After the fire Mr. Boulter made a tour of the ruined city in an automobile with his son Frank, who has been appointed manager of a big new canning factory at Huntington Beach, Cal.

Two souvenirs of the disaster Mr. Boulter brought home with him, a single sheet newspaper upon which the three great dailies of 'Frisco were printed jointly, their first appearance after the fire, and a $20 gold piece taken from a vault that had come through the fire. The only mark of the fire on the gold is a slight discoloration.

Just to show the strength of the Canadian and home sentiment in some of these old chaps a little incident that befell is worth repeating. Mr. Boulter was out one day when James Lumbers, the Toronto wholesale grocer, rushed up to him with: "Shake, Wellington; I haven't seen a Canadian since I left home and it seems a year."

They shook good and hard and each was to the other as real Canadian air.

THE NEW SALMON PACK.

A prominent Toronto broker has received from the coast advices he considers reliable to the effect that the opening prices on this season's pack of salmon will be in advance of last year's, on sockeyes, 75c., on cohoes, 50c., and on humpbacks or pinks, 25c.

Another change the trade in Eastern Canada will have to get used to is flat tins. The proportion of talls to be packed this season will be much smaller than formerly. The English market prefers flats and it is merely a case of the minority yielding to the majority. The flats are more expensive than the talls, but in Ontario many retailers will not have them at the same price.

The season's pack is estimated as follows: Fraser River, 250,000 cases; Skeena River, 120,000; Naas, 30,000; Rivers Inlet, 100,000; outside points, 50,000.

STRAWBERRIES HALF A CROP.

Strawberries and raspberries will be scarce this season. Representatives of McWilliam & Everist and White & Co., leading Toronto fruit firms, are now in the berry districts between Toronto and Hamilton, and both agree that the strawberry plants have been winter-killed to an extent that will reduce the average yield by half. There is, however, some additional acreage, which it is estimated may bring the crop up to two-thirds of an average. This, of course, means high prices again this season.

BORROWING A NAME.

Some months ago attention was drawn in these columns to the fact that a prize competition company in New York was trading under a name almost identical with the MacLean Publishing Company. The only difference was that they spelled the name (Mc)Lean instead of (Mac)Lean, and some people had mistaken it for this company. At one time our New York offices were situated in the New York Life Building, Broadway. Shortly after we abandoned our New York offices we found that the company complained of had retained our sign on the door and were trading under our name. We set about a confidential investigation and found that a company had actually been incorporated under that name, and that a man named McLean was said to be connected with it. Our representative called several times at the office but at no time was he ever able to find that anyone named McLean was actually connected with the concern.

The Canadian and American post office authorities were notified, and we understood that some investigation had been made, but apparently the concern is still trading under the old name, for one of our subscribers, Mr. J. L. Naylor, Searchmont, Ont., writing May 23rd, says: "I enclose a communication from the McLean Publishing Company of New York, also my signature, apparently torn from a letter, which was enclosed with the circular letter referred to. I do not think I ever wrote a letter to the McLean Publishing Co. of New York, and would like to know how they secured my signature. If you know what this game is, let me know through The Grocer."

By the same mail the post office delivered to us a letter addressed "The McLean Publishing Co.," mailed from Deerfield, Mass., saying that the writer had sent money four weeks' ago and had not received any answer. The Canadian authorities have had several similar complaints, and we strongly advise our readers not to send any money to the concern. In fact such a hint seems unnecessary to give to the average business man, who should treat their circulars as Mr. Naylor has done, or pass them over to the post office authorities.

We notice from the correspondence that this concern has moved from the office formerly in the New York Life Building to another address in New York, but the blank forms used are exactly the same as those sent out from the New York Life Building, with the exception of the change in address.

TOMATOES HIGHER NEXT SEASON

There is good promise of dearer tomatoes next season. It is now practically certain that the new pack will come upon a bare market. There is assurance of an active demand for immediate consumption, for tomatoes are now a staple food of all classes.

In the States conditions will be abnormal. A frost in Maryland has nearly wiped out the early tomato crop, and the weather is so dry that in many sections the farmers have been unable to plant anew. Under these conditions the early pack must be weeks late. It must, however, be borne in mind that the States are not as dependant as they were only recently on the Atlantic Coast packers. The centre of the industry has been shifting to the west, and even now Chicago is putting forward pretentions to being the centre of the tomato packing business.

But to return to Canada. The conditions on both sides of the line indicate a hearty welcome to the new pack. And what do the packers themselves think of it? The Canadian Grocer is informed that some canners have purchased the future pack unlabeled of other firms at a price nearly equal to what the wholesalers paid for first-class stock a year ago. That is a pretty fair indication of what the packers expect.

LUMBERMEN ASK GAME RIGHTS.

The lumbermen of Nova Scotia are a progressive company. They move on the John D. Rockefeller plan—all the goods for me; all the good advice for my neighbor. Just now their neighbors are the sportsmen of the province, the holiday fishers and hunters. A movement is on foot for the improvement of the fish and game laws. The Annapolis Royal Spectator advocates the proposed renovation and continues:

"A new feature has, however, arisen in the claim of the owners of timber limits to control the game and fishing privileges on their own areas. They also claim that they have been advised by the Hon. Attorney-General for Nova Scotia that the licenses granted to sportsmen by the Government entitles those sportsmen to hunt or fish only on Crown lands. If such is the case the Government is issuing licenses for a worthless privilege. The Crown lands of the province have been given away and sold at 40 cents per acre until nothing remains to-day but a few scattering sections impossible to reach without trespassing on the lands of some of the parties who make up the Lumbermen's Association of Western N. S. The claim, however, under present conditions, is a false one. These gaming privileges were not granted with the lands any more than the mineral rights, except in the case of some very early grants, too few to be of any real importance. Custom, too, is allowed to be almost as strong as law and for the past forty years a hunter might kill game in his neighbor's back yard and if no damage was done, no trespass was claimed or thought of."

WEST INDIAN FRUIT TRADE.

Dishonesty is trade suicide. But it's a good deal worse than that when practiced in the export fruit trade. Then it is poisoning the public well. There would be less of it if every Canadian who goes abroad would report dishonesty when he finds it.

Gordon McKeen sets a good example from Hamilton, Bermuda. In a letter to the Acadian Orchardist he tells of finding in a store there apples "just imported from Halifax, N.S., and upon looking at them, I blushed with shame for my country." They were small, bruised, misshapen and wormy, very poor No. 4 grade, and marked No. 1, but the barrel didn't bear the grower's name as the law requires. Mr. McKeen says:

"Are our chances of selling honestly packed fruit to these islands to be killed outright and our name and reputation trampled upon, through a few dishonest vagabonds? And upon inquiry elsewhere I found to my great regret that the case just cited is far from being an isolated one. And after being here these last two or three months, I notice the trade, not only in fruit, but in other lines I might mention, and may later, is gradually slipping away from us and going to our neighbors in the United States. And right here I would say that one thing very much needed is a larger and swifter boat to run from Halifax to these islands and cut the time of transit down to forty-eight hours, as is the time between here and New York. At the present time instead, it takes the greater part of a week, cutting off among many other things the chance of shipping small fruit, etc., here."

FENCING IN THE BANKS.

Some members of the Senate on Tuesday objected to a bill to incorporate a new bank. "Parliament," remarked Senator Power, "should proceed slowly in adding to the number of banks. There were a good many of them now, and all were quite successful. However, they seemed to be able to meet the requirements of the country. If too many were incorporated dull times might bring some disasters."

Nice of the old gentleman to proceed slowly; but why shouldn't Parliament hesitate to incorporate a company for the refining of sugar or the manufacture of soda biscuits? There are a good many of them now; they are quite successful and they seem able to meet the requirements of the country. But not many of them are quite as successful as the banks. Why should there not be competition in banking just as in making sugar or salt? Bankers are traders as other people are. They buy and sell credit or accommodation and render various services for a consideration. Why hedge them about with privileges which the Criminal Code denies to traders in other lines?

SOMETHING DOING IN CHEESE.

The abnormally high price for cheese is explained by the trade at Toronto by two stories of business antagonism. The minor incident is to the effect that a prominent operator who acted last year for a large English firm had left them and formed an affiliation with a rival concern and that his old associates had set about making it uncomfortably warm for him.

The other and larger incident is the reputed amalgamation of three large Canadian exporting houses with three prominent English importers, resulting in keen competition and strength to push the fight. The production of cheese thus far being comparatively limited, the quantity going forward was not such as to swamp strong speculative traders.

Perhaps both these stories are partly true. That the cheese market and to some extent the butter market are being manipulated is accepted by the trade without question, and judging by the reports of cheese board sales the movement seems to be stronger east than west.

As a corollary to the three-firm amalgamation story it is suggested that large buyers are merely competing for a fresh hold on the business with a view to preferred position when the season is in full swing.

DISPLAY YOUR STOCK.

Merchants cannot give too much attention to the display of their goods in stock. Many lines of stock may be old and hard to sell, but by judicious display and by keeping them dusted and fresh looking, a storekeeper will reap his reward in better sales. The goods which occupy a place in the window today should not be left there for weeks, or, as is sometimes the case in country stores, for months, but should be moved into the store and placed in a prominent position on the counter or elsewhere, where they cannot escape the notice of customers. The same applies to the goods in the back of the store. Bring them up to the front for a change. Move your stock about as much as possible.

This does not mean, of course, to unload all your shelves and disturb your entire stock, but that portion of it which might be called the transient stock will be benefited by frequent moving and good display, as will such lines as are mentioned above—old or slow sellers. Mark the goods in plain figures, place them before the public eye, and have your salesmen speak for them whenever possible. All this means work, necessarily, but to get along successfully nowadays, to beat the other fellow, you have to take off your coat and put on your thinking cap and buckle down to work hard and unceasingly.

OPINIONS WANTED.

The Halifax plan of a commercial committee, half members of the board of trade, half members of the city council, with the mayor as chairman, is an example for the whole of Canada as a means of bringing to bear upon municipal affairs the organized business ability of the community. It is an exceedingly important question, and increasing in importance every year. Something must be done to improve the municipal administration, especially in the larger centres of population. In another column we publish this week a statement by Mayor Coatsworth of Toronto in reply to a request for his opinion regarding the Halifax plan. We will be pleased to receive from any of our readers an expression of opinion regarding the plan or through them the opinions of others competent to speak.

MAKE THE LAW PLAIN.

A few lines in last week's issue conveyed the information received from the Canadian Grocer's special Ottawa correspondent as the paper was going to press that the Government did not intend to amend the commercial code at this session of Parliament. After the annual meeting of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild in Montreal in April, a large deputation of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers waited on the Government and made an appeal for the amendment of Code section 520, to make clear and plain the meaning of the law.

It seems a very reasonable request. Eminent counsel declare that the intent of the law is not plain and surely too prompt action could not be taken to get rid of misunderstanding. It is said the Government will not act now because of the actions against the wholesale grocers and others pending. The claim is made that some of these actions have resulted from a misunderstanding of the law's intention. Then, if justice is the end sought, would it not be best attained by letting in the light and making the way plain? The mind of the Government, it is understood, is quite clear as to what the meaning of the law is. Why not enable the bench and bar to be just as certain. The Government holds positively that section 520 does not apply where there has not been an undue enhancement of prices to the consumer. Some existing prosecutions are not based on that view.

IS THIS A CEREAL CONFLICT?

Now let the grower of wheat take to heart that wise saying, "Pride goeth before a fall." The cotton seed tribe are on the warpath. In the National Provisioner's report of the tenth annual convention of the Interstate Cotton-seed Crushers' convention in Atlanta, Ga., this month, occurs the following:

"A striking feature of the educational value of the convention was what might be called the discovery of a new wave of exploitation for a product of the cottonseed and one which promises to eclipse all others both in commercial value and from a humanitarian standpoint. This was the debut of cottonseed meal as a human food. The proposition was advanced by Prof. Connell, of Texas, in a strikingly interesting address, effectively illustrated by the distribution of delicious biscuits and cakes cooked in Prof. Connell's kitchen from a mixture of wheat flour and cottonseed meal. The speaker advanced the proposition that cottonseed flour would in time surpass wheat flour both in commercial and consumptive value and left the novel thought to germinate in the minds of his hearers.

"The association promises to take up practically the question of putting cottonseed flour on a commercial basis in the markets of the world."

The hungering millions of America will not stop work to watch the onslaught of the cotton seed upon the wheat kernel, but lest the clash cause a market quake, the grocer should be forewarned.

More probably it is a pardonable burst of enthusiasm generated by the cotton seed crusher in bulk. If it were not for this enthusiasm he might not be the real benefactor of the south he is today. Men still young remember when cotton seeds were burned and were a very great nuisance to the cotton grower. During the season of 1904-05 there were four and a half million tons of seed bought from the cotton growers of the Southern States, for which they received $75,000,000. In the cotton seed oil industry $100,000,000 are invested.

SUGAR'S UPS AND DOWNS.

The ups and downs of the sugar market are the epitaphs of dead opportunities for gain with a good many members of the grocery fraternity, else why does an advance always stimulate buying? Here they are this year to date:

DIRECT RESULTS.

An exchange recently gave notice that in case a stolen carriage whip was not returned to a certain place before the next issue, it would publish the name of the party who took it. The place designated was the back yard of a certain block. The next morning after the first notice came out—the night being very dark—seventeen whips were picked up in said backyard. Yet there are people who do not believe in advertising.

FLUCTUATIONS—

Sugar—Advanced 10c.
Evaporated Apples—Advanced ½c.
Fish—Revised.

Montreal, May 30, 1906.

Very good business has been done in groceries during the week just passed. The wholesale trade state that orders coming in from country districts, as well as from city points, are as large as they should be under present conditions. Collections are picking up considerably, and the trade generally is healthy. The advance which took place in sugar the end of last week came as a surprise to nearly everybody, and many were caught shorthanded and will have to pay the higher figure for any supplies they may buy. The rise, which amounted to ten cents, was all along the line. Teas are moving quite freely. Japans are the feature of the market. Reports from the primary markets state that these teas are now ten per cent. higher than they were last year. New stock is beginning to arrive in Canada, and an excellent Japan season is anticipated. The trade are not of the opinion that there is a great deal of the old tea held, either in first hands or by others. Canned goods are about the same as they were last week. Tomatoes are unchanged under a fair demand. Molasses is quiet this week. The advices received from the Islands contain very little that is of interest to the trade generally. Valencia raisins continue to advance. Currants are pretty well cleaned up and are high also. Coffee and spices do not present any new features for consideration this week. Evaporated apples are as scarce and as high as ever. Trade in them is almost prohibitory. Maple products and honey are on the quiet side.

CANNED GOODS—As in other lines, trade in canned goods is moving along very well at present. There is a very good consumptive demand for the various lines offering, but dealers do not find special activity in any line. Corn and peas continue to move out steadily and there is a very good demand for tomatoes at prices which have not changed. Reports are in circulation to the effect that salmon of certain brands is very scarce and high in price.

The usual canned goods quotations are omitted this week for lack of space.

SUGAR—Saturday morning last an advance of ten cents took place in sugar. To most in the trade, jobbers and retailers alike, the advance was a great surprise, which is only natural when the state of the raw markets, as they were then, is considered. The advance has been the cause of much activity in the market, many apparently making their purchases now before any further rise. A great many houses had delayed buying until the end of May, never thinking that the price would advance under existing conditions.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES — Since the activity ceased in the Island molasses market there has been little of interest reported from that point. Locally there is not a great deal doing. Wholesalers report a very small trade. At present there are moored in Montreal ships, two or three in number, containing cargoes of molasses, but the market has not been materially affected by their arrival.

TEAS—During the past week very good business has been done in teas generally. A report from Japan states that teas are 10 per cent. higher than they were at this time last year. The new teas are arriving now, and, although the quality might be better, they give satisfaction. The freight, being ¼c. higher than heretofore on all eastern teas, will not make any material difference in prices. Dealers are looking forward to a splendid season for Japans. It is not generally thought that there are any lots of old Japans held in first hands, while the jobbing trade are scantily supplied. Indians are enjoying excellent sale according to reports from tea houses. Ceylons are about as usual.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS. — The dried fruit market at present is very active and considerable business is being done. There is a general upward tendency in prices. Valencia raisins are still going up, and the prices locally have advanced and are expected to be even higher. Currants are being sold at a high figure, as they are pretty well cleaned up. There is nothing of particular interest in other lines, except that Tarragona almonds and filberts continue to advance. A report has reached this side that the filbert crop has been damaged by frost.

EVAPORATED APPLES — The present high prices make trade in evaporated apples almost prohibitory. Grocers state that but few sales are made, as this fruit cannot be sold at a figure within the reach of the general public. In the cities fair business is being done among the better classes, but in the country trade is practically nil. Dealers are obtaining almost any price for what they sell. A fair average of what is asked is 12½c. to 13c.

BEANS — A slow demand for beans keeps business in this line on the small side at present. The prices have not changed since last quotations.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Speaking recently on the probabilities for a change in the price of rice when the new crop comes in, an authority on the subject stated, as his opinion, that there would be no change in the figure asked, at least not such a change as would affect the local market. Tapioca continues very high. There is a report that rubber planting is taking the place of tapioca growing in many parts of the Straits Settlements, and this would, of course, be the means of a greater scarcity later on. There has been no change in the price locally.

FISH—A good general business is being done in fish. During the week considerable large business has been transacted. Fresh fish, of course, command the greater part of the trade. In fact there is not a great deal doing outside of this line. Fresh halibut are being received daily and are very much in demand. The price this week is half a cent lower. Lake trout and dore, or pickerel, are arriving freely. Brook trout are now more plentiful, and dealers experience less trouble in filling orders received. Several new lines are quoted this week, including Gaspe salmon, shipments of which are being received every day.

Toronto, May 31, 1906.

Business has improved this week, and while in no way abnormal is satisfactory. There is more than a seasonable demand for canned fruits, and the call for canned vegetables also is a marked feature. The retail trade is showing unusual interest in canned salmon and the purchasing is such as to create the impression that many grocers are stocking up in anticipation of a rise. And the rise will come. Of that there seems to be no reasonable doubt. Raisins are about the only dried fruit left on this market, and there is a strong demand for Valencias. The price is slowly rising in response to the situation at home and abroad. Most of the houses are still selling for less than the fruit can now be laid down here. At the eleventh hour gem jar quotations are advanced. The higher price is: Wine, pts., per gross, $6.25; qts., $6.75; ½ gal., $9; imperial, pts., $6.50; qts., $7.75; ½ gals. $11.

CANNED GOODS — The demand is heavy for both fruit and vegetables, and wholesalers' stocks of salmon, too, are passing rapidly into the hands of retailers. Strawberries are practically off the market; only one or two houses have any, and they very few. The price is $2.25. Peaches and plums also are reported to be getting into small compass. Green beans are very scarce, and have advanced. Some houses are still satisfied with 85c., others are asking $1.

The usual canned goods quotations are omitted this week for lack of space.

SUGAR—The recent advance in the price of sugar was not generally expected, as it followed upon a very marked period of dullness, precipitated by a gradual falling in European quotations, beets declining to 7s. 9½d basis f.o.b. Hamburg, which is equal to 3.61 duty paid New York for 96 test centrifugals, thus reducing the margin between New York beet and cane parity to 19c. per 100 lbs. In New York cane showed a decline of 1-16 to 3-32, maintaining that basis on spot sugars for nearly two weeks. Early last week there were signs of improvement following upon reports of heavy rains in Cuba, where factories are gradually closing up, and from this out the offerings will become gradually less.

To-day's basis is 2½c. c.f. New York for 96 test centrifugals, equal to 3.48 duty paid, and with reduced offerings Cuba will become more and more independent of the course of the European market, as her sugars will all be wanted for United States refiners, less the supply required for local consumption.

With the gradual elimination of Cuba, more interest will be shown in Java sugars, which are now offering more freely, and June and July shipments can be bought at 3.65 duty paid New York, or 15c. per 100 lbs. more than to-day's New York cane parity. Another important factor in the situation is the prospect of a very large increase in the world's consumption, consequent upon prevailing low prices for refined sugars, on which account there will be considerable absorption of surplus stocks before we go into the new season. Since the end of April the world's visible supply is reduced 300,000 tons, compared with a reduction of 200,000 for the same time last year. Now that many cane crops are ended, meaning decreased production, it is clear that there will necessarily follow considerable improvement in the statistical situation. It is rather too early yet to speculate on the European beet crop, though early reports indicate somewhat smaller beet sowings. Much will depend on the weather during the next few weeks. O. Licht writes to Willett & Gray, showing a decrease in sowings for all Europe this year of 4.66, compared with the same time last year.

In refined, following upon the advance in New York of 10c. per 100 lbs. last Saturday, all Canadian refined quotations made a similar advance later in the day, and it is said that a large business transpired in the interim. There are no special indications for the immediate future, and the outlook appears to be for a steady market.

TEA—There is a fair demand for tea locally at present, but nothing unusual. Prices have not materially changed. From London, mail advices of ten days ago bring reports of business on a much better basis, since the duty question has been left behind. Prices for all but common grades have advanced, and the rise increased as the quality improved. New crops of reputed better quality will arrive here about August first.

COFFEE—The market has shown a weakening tendency in the face of an apparently strong statistical position. The world's visible supply on May 1 was 10,356,157 bags; on April 1 it was over a million bags more, 11,747,916 bags, and a year ago 12,297,490 bags. Consumption, also, is increasing. Willett & Gray say: "The liquidations, while temporarily resulting in lower values, are not hurtful to the position, as the coffee is gradually passing from outsiders into the hands of the actual coffee trade, who not only consider present prices low enough to warrant a larger interest than they have taken heretofore, but also to release hedges that have been put out against merchandise." Locally the situation is quiet with moderate demand.

DRIED FRUITS—Probably the market here was never before so cleared of dried fruits. Prunes are very scarce, a few very small sizes and some medium are about all that are left. Apricots have disappeared altogether. Prices for the new crop f.o.b. coast are just twice last year's opening figure. The first price on futures put out was 2c. less than the present, but after a few days it was withdrawn, and after a month's delay the present price was named. The crop is expected to be very short. Valencia raisins are about the only staple left, and they are in good demand at advancing prices, but they can still be bought for less than the cost of bringing the fruit in now. P. L. Mason & Co. have been advised by their foreign correspondents that the new crop is reported very backward, the vines being now about a month behind. Indications are for a crop about as large as last year, though some advices give smaller estimates. Stocks of old Valencias are exhausted in Denia, and nearly so in London.

In the walnut producing districts the weather is reported as cold and stormy, but the trees are looking well though later than usual in budding. Barring accidents fair crops are anticipated.

Higher prices are expected to rule for Hallowee dates than for several years. There is an increasing demand on all sides. Regarding sultana raisins, it is reported that indications are for a yield rather smaller than last year, but ample. Unless there is a serious shortage, prices are likely to be about the same as last Fall.

A large yield of Turkish figs is reported likely, as the culture of fig trees in Turkey has been steadily increasing.

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., May 28, 1906.

The Spring months are gone and Summer is here. We have had little of warm weather. We do not look for it till July, and then it is only warm weather with cool nights. That is what draws the great number of tourists. They are chiefly Americans. If more Ontario people would come they might learn what an important section of Canada is this east and particularly the importance of St. John as the national Winter port. The importance of prompt and generous aid from the Government that this Winter business be not lost to Canada would be borne in upon them. St. John has generously spent her own money, and by the increasing business of ten years, amounting this season to twenty-three millions of dollars, proved her right to Government support as the outlet for Canadian Winter exports. The volume of United States Winter exports via St. John is also very

There is little of importance to note in regard to markets. The early booking of orders for California dried fruit is a feature. Flour continues to tend higher.

OIL—Dealers in burning oil are busy booking orders for Fall delivery. Prices are somewhat higher than last year. Sales of lubricating oils have been large. In paint oils demand is somewhat over. Turpentine, which has for some time been extremely high, is rather easier. This is the quiet season in cod oil. Prices are firmly held.

SALT—There is a good business reported in Liverpool coarse salt. Prices are firmly held. There will be quite regular receipts during the Summer. In fine salt there is an improved sale.

CANNED GOODS—The situation in spot goods is unchanged. Corn and peas are low. Tomatoes are firm at full prices but unchanged for some time. For fruit there is but a fair demand. Gallon apples are quite high. Peaches and strawberries are firm. Meats are low. Oysters tend upward. Lobsters are high. Salmon is unchanged but firm. The increase ever ear in the number of people living in the country in the Summer increases the sale of canned goods. The season is some lines of locally packed fish is about opening.

GREEN FRUIT—Dealers are very busy. Bananas are freely sold. While there is an increasing demand for the cheaper grades, best stock is firm. In oranges, Valencias are about done; Californias higher; Messinas sell quite freely. Lemons are firmer. Pines are freely sold at an average price. In berries, prices last week were quite firm. Rhubarb is lower.

DRIED FRUIT—California dried fruit

for Fall shipment is being quite freely bought, particularly prunes. These are quoted low and the market is about bare. Seeded raisins, while quite low, are not being so freely bought, though about all the buyers take some. In loose raisins they are inclined to wait till Valencias and Malagas are quoted. There is just fair spot business. Dates are higher. Peels are firmly held. Evaporated apples are about out of the market.

SUGAR—Figures remain unchanged at the lower prices quoted last week. Sales good. Dealers think market quite firm. Owing to the loss of a Glasgow steamer imported sugar has been scarce.

MOLASSES—There was a special West India steamer here last week bringing upward of 1,800 casks of Barbadoes molasses, a large proportion being syrup at fancy prices and it is firmly held. Little new Porto Rico yet received.

FISH—There has been but a light catch of Gaspereaux. Shad are now fairly plentiful and some few salmon are being caught. In dried fish there is rather less demand, and prices are somewhat easier. Pickled fish are scarce and high. Smoked herring are rather easier.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—In flour both Ontario and Manitoba brands were slightly advanced last week and the market is firm. Oats and oatmeal are firmer. Cornmeal is unchanged. Beans continue low. Yellow Eyes have had a large sale. In seeds, local stocks are light, dealers preferring to clean up at present prices.

B. C. Markets

In groceries this week nothing notable has occurred. In produce, eggs, local fresh stock, have been showing an upward tendency. The falling off in supply is perhaps owing to the brooding season and that the hens opened the season for laying very early this year on account of extremely fine weather. Recent hot weather had the effect of putting them off the usual supply, and the price has slightly advanced as a result. Wholesale they are quoted at 25c., but scarce. Eastern eggs are 2c. to 3c. per dozen cheaper.

Butter is coming in more freely from dairy sources locally, and the price is now not more than 22c. to 23c. for local fresh dairy, with the creameries standing pat at 25c. Imported butter is about the same. The local supply dominates the market.

In fruit, the local strawberries still hold off tantalizingly, and the imported California and Hood River fruit is still held up to 25c. per lb. Continued rains this week have been giving fruits as well as vegetables a splendid chance, but it is hoped that fine weather will ensue next week, and give the local strawberries a chance to ripen up and get into the market. Prices remain as last week.

In vegetables, the quantity of local old stock potatoes is very considerable, and the price has dropped back. New potatoes are offering from local sources in a limited way. Old stock is bringing up to $1 per sack, retail, with $15 per ton the jobbing rate. The limited quantity of Ashcrofts on the market bring $25 per ton.

Green vegetables in large supply fill the market, and the prices rule low.

In fresh meat the features are scarcity of Spring lamb and abundance of veal. The latter brings wholesale 8c. to 9c., while Spring lamb is grabbed up at 12c. Dressed chickens, local stock, are worth 20c. per lb. Broilers and young ducks are hardly yet on the market, some of the former bringing $3 to $4 per dozen in a limited way.

For northern shipment, beef cattle are being brought in from the interior, and being held here till the opening of navigation. Some small orders for milch cows have been received, which will be filled from local sources of supply.

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., May 29.

Notwithstanding previous reports regarding the failure of the crop of onions in Bermuda, there is now some very fine stock on the market. The first shipment came by the steamer Beta, and is somewhat later than usual. The onions are smaller than the ordinary run but they are of good quality. They are quoted at $1.60 per crate of forty pounds.

The markets are fairly steady throughout, and the price list remains unchanged, with the exception of a drop in the price of sugar, all grades having been reduced ten cents per hundred pounds. The decline is evidently in sympathy with the recent drop in prices in New York. There is not much doing in sugar at the present time, the demand from all quarters being light. The prices quoted here are as follows :

XXX granulated	$4.10
Austrian granulated	4.00
Bright yellow	3.90
No. 1 yellow	3.60
Unbranded	3.45

MOLASSES—Molasses is in fair to good demand and shipments are now coming forward. According to recent advices Barbadoes has been advanced two cents per gallon. It is now quoted at 18c., which makes the price four cents higher than the opening quotation on the island. No decline is looked for here, and it is anticipated that these prices will stand unless something unusual affects the market.

CORNMEAL—Some attention is now being shown to cornmeal, which keeps on advancing. Six weeks ago cornmeal was quoted at 50½c. per bushel delivered in Halifax. The present quotation is 64½c. Three and three-quarter bushels make a barrel of cornmeal, and this is equivalent to an advance of fifty cents a barrel within the past month and a half.

BUTTER—The receipts of butter are improving slowly. During the week quite a lot of local butter was marketed in small tubs, which caused the price to ease off a little. The butter is of good quality and it finds a very ready sale at 21c. and 22c. Creamery is firm at 24c., boxes at 21c. to 22c., and rolls at 20c.

EGGS—The receipts of eggs are insufficient for all demands. The price continues very firm and very few are being stored as the quotations are too high. Nova Scotia are worth 17c. and Prince Edward Island 16½c.

FRUIT—There is plenty of good seasonable fruit on the market, with prices unchanged. The first California cherries have arrived, and they are retailing at 60c. per box. Rhubarb is becoming very plentiful and is quoted at 4c.

VEGETABLES—Good potatoes are becoming scarce. The stock now on hand is quoted at 60c. to 70c. per bushel. Some American cabbage are now on the market. They are very small and the dealers say that there is no money in handling them. Carrots, parsnips and turnips continue in good supply.

FISH—The fish market on the whole is very quiet. Good stocks of fresh fish are held by all the dealers. Sales of salt and dry fish are rather slow. Lobsters are quoted at $1 per dozen for medium size. They are selling at $13 per crate (alive) in Boston. Hundreds of crates continue to be sent weekly from Halifax and Yarmouth to the American markets. Fresh salmon is sold at wholesale for 20c., and at retail for 25c. The first fresh mackerel of the season were marketed during the week, and they found ready sale. The fish were taken on the western shore. They are of very fine quality for early fish, some weighing from 3½ to 4 pounds, and they sold for 25c. each.

GROCERS' GUILD CASE ON AGAIN.

The preliminary police court investigation at Hamilton before Magistrate Jelfs, of the charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade, laid against the officers of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, was resumed on Thursday after an adjournment since March 27.

At previous sittings the proceedings consisted of the examination of Secretary Cook, of the Dominion guild, Montreal, and the reading of a voluminous correspondence. On Thursday, Crown Attorney Washington had a number of witnesses present from various parts of the province, by whom he proposed to prove that manufacturers had refused to sell to dealers because they were not members of the guild. A detailed report of the proceedings will appear in next week's Canadian Grocer.

BUSINESS PERSONALS.

O. Gauthier, who recently joined the traveling staff of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, Toronto, has left on a business trip along the St. Lawrence Gulf district. He will go as far as Anticosti and the Labrador coast. Mr. Gauthier is favorably known to the trade of the Province of Quebec, as he has been a life-long resident of the province and has been associated with the retailers for years.

Reply to Mr. Suddaby.

In the last issue there appeared a letter from Sam Suddaby, postmaster at Burnt River, Ont., taking exception to the attitude of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada to the request of the Postmasters' Association that they be permitted to compile a directory of all post office patrons for the use of mail order houses. Mr. Suddaby's letter was in reply to the letter from President J. F. Hunter published in this department in the issue of May 11.

Secretary W. A. Coulson was asked by The Canadian Grocer for a reply to this letter from the association standpoint.

"If Mr. Suddaby lived in the west," said Mr. Coulson, "he would not say that the mail order houses get the complete list anyway. What he says may be perfectly true in Ontario, but conditions are entirely different here. Immigration is pouring in so fast that the mail order houses cannot keep their lists up to date by reference to the voters' lists; they must have the co-operation of the postmasters if they want correct lists. That is the only way they can get them.

Thousands of Newcomers.

"New settlers from foreign countries are coming in here by the thousands and if they get the habit of buying at the local stores, well and good. If they get the mail order habit as soon as they arrive they may be lost to us for good. We don't want the postmasters to supply the mail order houses with these names.

"It is probably true," he continued, "that the mail order houses send three and four copies to one household owing to the fact that they compile their lists from voters' lists and make no distinction between farmers and farmers' sons. But that is a mail order funeral, and we don't care if they do waste their money in that way.

Put up the Rate.

"I quite agree with Mr. Suddaby that it would be a good thing to have the rate of postage on catalogues and advertising matter raised. Two or three months ago I wrote Ira Stratton offering to co-operate with the Postmasters' Association along these lines if they would drop that one obnoxious clause from their petition to the Government, but no attention was paid to my offer."

On Monday night of this week a successful smoker of the butchers' section of Winnipeg was held in the association rooms. Representatives of the different packing houses were invited to be present.

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, May 31, 1906.)

FLUCTUATIONS—

Prunes—Decline ½c. per lb.
Tapioca—Decline ½c. per lb.
Oatmeal—Decline 10c. per 80-lb. sack.
Lemons—Advance 50c. per case.
Lard—Advance ¼c. per lb.

As noted last week in our telegraphic corrections, there has been an advance of 10c. per cwt. in refined sugars for all points west of Moose Jaw to the British Columbia boundary, this in spite of a decline of 10c. per cwt. in Winnipeg and in Eastern Canada. The California dried fruit situation seems to be better understood now and prices of prunes have settled at a basis ½c. per lb. lower than the prices quoted in these columns during the last three weeks. Tapioca has also declined ½c. per lb. and is now quoted at 7c. Oatmeal has declined 10c. per 80-lb. sack. Business in general is brisk and collections are reported fair to good.

CHOCOLATE RUSH IN HALIFAX.

A. L. Doyle & Co. opened their third grocery store in Halifax on Saturday, and from the opening until the blinds were drawn the place was never empty for a moment. This makes four grocery stores that this firm has now in operation; three in Halifax and one in Dartmouth. As a souvenir, the firm gave away a box of fancy chocolates with every purchase, and as a result the rush was terrific, the crowds lining out to the centre of the street. Two police officers guarded the doors, which were kept locked while the customers within were being served, and then the place was emptied and another batch admitted.

TORONTO'S MAYOR GETS BUSINESS MEN'S ADVICE

Everywhere in Canada municipal government is increasing in importance, and everywhere, but especially in the large cities, leading business men avoid active participation in the administration of civic affairs. Civics are not politics; straight business all the time, and requiring the very best capacity available. Halifax, as set forth in last week's issue of The Canadian Grocer, has adopted a plan for bridging the rift of indifference between the municipal administration and the business community by a commercial committee, half members of the board of trade, half members of the council, with the mayor as chairman.

Mayor Coatsworth, of Toronto, and Peleg Howland, president of the board of trade in the Ontario capital, were asked for expressions of their views on the Halifax plan. Mr. Howland wanted time to consider it. Mayor Coatsworth said:

'I have felt the necessity of consulting prominent and able business men in connection with various city matters and I invariably take an opportunity of doing so whenever I can. During the past week I have consulted two or three prominent business men in relation to important matters affecting the interest of the city. When we come to deal with the question of the radials, my purpose is first to take counsel with several of our leading men, asking their advice as to the best business arrangement to make with the railways, and I will be very much impressed and perhaps entirely guided by their advice, particularly as to the financial side of the question.

"I would not think of entering into important financial matters of city business without first getting the advice of some of our leading financiers. We have a number of splendid and able men in Toronto, and I must say, speaking from my own experience, I have found them ready and willing to enter into a full discussion of city matters at any time and to give me the benefit, for the city, of their long experience and training.

"I found it also of advantage to confer with a committee of working men who have been appointed for that purpose by the Trades and Labor Council. At any moment, if a matter arises affecting the working men, I can immediately reach these gentlemen and secure from them what might be called the very inside information as to the views and wishes of the labor men on the subject.

"I am decidedly in favor of calling in the experts in every line to consult on city matters in their various spheres, and, up to the present time, I am bound to say that these gentlemen have responded in a manner that has made it a pleasure for me to consult them.

"I feel assured that a committee of these gentlemen, wisely chosen, with whom the council could consult, and who would co-operate in city business, would give greater steadiness to important civic affairs and inspire more confidence in the public mind, although we have no reason to complain of the public feeling at present."

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

The market for both cheese and butter is a most puzzling one so far this season. As we pointed out a long while ago, last season's make of cheese was considerably short of natural requirements and the new season's make should have started in at high prices, which might have been lowered gradually as supplies increased. But, instead of following this reasonable policy, operators on this side brought on such a rapid decline on the small supplies then available, that the pendulum began to swing the other way and, as is not at all unusual, it swung too far, again at the wrong time. Present ruling prices, at the present time of the year, have never been so high in the history of the cheese trade and no sane trader in cheese will think of taking on more stocks than what is absolutely required to fill the most urgent wants.

Meanwhile, the grass is now growing nicely all over the country, the cows are giving plenty and good milk and we will have a very full supply of cheese here within a very short time. The British dealers trade from hand to mouth, and with increasing supplies prices must have a considerable break from present figures.

According to board of trade figures, the receipts of cheese in Montreal for the past week were 42,673 boxes against 18,467 boxes for the corresponding week of last year, and the total receipts since May 1 this wear, 125,548 boxes against 65,375 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

This shows a very substantial increase in production with a backward season, yet prices this year are practically three cents per pound higher than a year ago. It is therefore only reasonable to expect that as soon as supplies become larger than the current consumptive demand, prices must decline to a point where merchants feel sufficient confidence to carry stocks for future demand. It is not unlikely now that, when the pendulum commences to swing the other way, it may again swing too far and then is the time for prudent merchants to lay in stocks in excess of their immediate requirements.

Meanwhile, the farmers are reaping the benefit, as usual; they are getting extraordinary prices for their milk and no doubt they will use every means of extra feeding and care to produce as much milk as possible, and, as cheese is still by far the best paying product, those who can make either cheese or butter will not hesitate to turn from butter to cheese, and the prospects are for a good, full make of cheese this year.

Butter has also been rather erratic in prices paid in country markets; goods now coming forward are not yet "full grass quality" and they are therefore not of a "keeping quality," yet prices paid at recent country markets are a long way above the export basis, and, while some of our principal operators have bought the goods at these high prices, they may find some difficulty in disposing of them even at cost.

The production of butter, like cheese, in spite of the backward season, also shows an increase, according to the receipts in Montreal as per board of trade figures, viz.: Receipts last week were 15,130 packages as compared with 11,800 packages for the corresponding week of last year, or a total since May 1 of 43,186 packages against 32,149 packages for the corresponding period of last year. This demonstrates further that the farmers are producing more milk this year than a year ago and, if this is carried along through the entire season, we may expect a record year for production of both cheese and butter.

We alluded last week to the rupture between buyers and salesmen in Cowansville. This seems to be now in a fair way of adjustment. The salesmen insisted on some guarantee of payment for their produce. They will in future ship their goods to their own order in care of the firm buying them; they concede Montreal weights and Montreal inspection, and as soon as payment is made for the goods under these conditions, they become the absolute property of the buyers. This seems a very fair arrangement for both parties and everybody is happy that the old frictions are at an end. The merchants want the goods and they are willing to pay for them for weight received and according to quality, and the producers must sell their goods, and they are willing to do so with a reasonable assurance of getting paid for the same. The other points of dispute are of a minor nature and will undoubtedly also be adjusted to the mutual satisfaction of both buyers and salesmen.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

The market has developed practically nothing new this past week. The domestic consumptive demand is quite satisfactory and prices maintain their firm tone, with here and there a slightly accentuated tendency in that direction. The supply of live hogs has not increased greatly and is not expected to for three or four months.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

During the past few days there has been practically no change in the condition of the butter and cheese markets here in London. Prices are still somewhat higher than last year, but sellers are making little or no money on transactions. Indeed, ever since March they have been complaining of bad times, and it is known that some concerns have lost heavily. When asked the cause of this state of affairs, one will give one reason and his neighbor another, but one and all are agreed that supplies have been too heavy and irregular. Yet, in spite of these statements, the consuming public have received no reduction in the price of butter and cheese. In fact, the price has at times gone up. There clearly is something fundamentally wrong. For one thing, the feeling between produce importers in this centre is anything but cordial towards each other, and the "cut-throat policy" is frequently too much in evidence. Also, having had to pay such high prices to shippers, they have shown an inclination sometimes to hold stocks too long in the hope of forcing their point with buyers, a policy which, on more than one occasion, has proved an error.

At present the market for Australian and New Zealand butters continues without any outstanding features, and prices for Australian "choicest" parcels stand at 96s. to 98s., and for "finest" 90s. to 92s. New Zealand "choicest" makes 4s. more, and "finest" 6s. more.

According to published statistics, imports of all kinds of butter into the United Kingdom during the past four weeks have totalled 58,427 cwts. less than for the same period in 1905. Irish, French and Dutch butters are, of course, now being received in larger quantities in these markets.

The spot prices for Canadian and New Zealand cheese have changed but little from last week's prices. Canadian "choicest" makes 62s. to 64s., and "finest" 61s. to 62s.; New Zealand "choicest" 61s. to 62s., and "finest" 60s. and 61s. These figures are, of course, considerably higher than at this time last year. Stocks of Canadian cheese in warehouse here are continually, though slowly, declining, and at the present time there are not more than 16,570 boxes in store at the Surrey commercial docks.

The outlook for the coming season's domestic milk supply is anything but bright, and farmers will likely have a bad time. The backwardness of growth in the pastures and meadows is responsible for this. In fact, so fitful has the weather been, that the whole of the agricultural community will feel the evil effects. Some of the perennial grasses are now in ear, but there is not yet much sign of a hay crop, for which genial showers and a warmer temperature are required. Just now, one day of Summer heat is followed by another of Wintry coldness.

Both in Leeds and Hull, according to advices to hand, there is a good opening for Canadian canned goods. Canned fruit and fish, in particular, are in request, and it is up to Canadian exporters to push themselves forward.

We can't sell all the Pork and Beans that are sold, but we do sell to buyers who want the best.

FOR SANITARY DAIRYING.

Two dairy sanitary inspectors have been appointed under the act passed at the late session of the Ontario Legislature: For Eastern Ontario, J. H. Echlin, a member of Kingston Dairy School staff and a dairy instructor; for Western Ontario, T. J. Dillon, Toronto.

The act under which the appointments are made is an amendment to the act to prevent fraud in the manufacture of cheese and butter and provides:

1. No person supplying milk or cream to a cheese factory or creamery shall keep his dairy, milk house, milk stand, or any vessels or equipment used for the storing or the carrying of milk or cream, in an unclean or unsanitary condition.

2. Every cheese factory and creamery manufacturing butter or cheese for public use or sale, and the surroundings of every such cheese factory and creamery shall be kept in a clean and sanitary condition, and all the water used therein for the manufacture of any dairy products must be clean and pure.

The penalty for the infraction of the act is a fine of not less than $50, nor more than $200, or six months in jail.

The Government is empowered to appoint inspectors whose powers are defined as follows:

"All dairy inspectors appointed under this Act shall have free access and admission to all cheese factories and creameries located within the province and to all the lands adjoining the same, and to the premises of all persons supplying milk or cream to any cheese factory or creamery, and any person refusing admission to the same or offering obstruction to the work of inspection shall be subject to the penalties provided in section 9 of the Act to prevent Fraud in the Manufacture of Cheese and Butter."

SWINE IN LARGE NUMBERS.

The mid-May crop bulletin of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, says of live stock:

The open Winter appears to have favored live stock. There was sufficient provender of all kinds except roots, as many of the turnips rotted; although the backward Spring caused an unlooked for raid to be made upon surplus fodder. Horses came through the Winter in splendid condition, except where troubled with a light form of distemper, and the cool, dry weather kept them in good condition during Spring work. More mares have been bred of late than formerly, and while some speak of an unusual mortality among colts, the general tone of the reports are favorable in this regard. Owing to the high prices prevailing for horses, they are commanding better care and closer attention. Cattle are described as being rather thin, but healthy. Several correspondents claim that this class of live stock was turned out upon the grass this season before there was a good bite for them. Sheep are now more in favor, and are giving good satisfaction. They would be much more largely kept but for the dog nuisance. Lambs are coming in good and strong, to quote a correspondent. Swine are kept in large numbers, and have wintered well, but there are reports of heavy mortality among Spring litters, a large number of young pigs dying when about a month old. But for the fact that many farmers have lost confidence in the stability of the market, the output of hogs would be immensely increased.

PACKING EGGS FOR ENGLAND.

England imports in a year two hundred million dozen eggs and pays for them more than $32,777,000, and importers there are very particular—Canadians might say pernickity—about how eggs are packed, but if Canada's packing must conform to the requirements of the purchasing end.

J. B. Jackson, Canadian commercial agent at Leeds, furnishes some information about packing for the English market, gathered in an interview with a large importer. He says:

As a start off, it may be said that Canadian pickled eggs have seen their day in England. The eggs most in request now must be glycerined.

The packing also is a great thing. The size, for instance, of an ordinary everyday box of Russian eggs, measures about six feet long, and something like 22 inches wide, each box containing 1,440 eggs, which English importers classify into what is called 12 great hundreds, each great hundred meaning 120 eggs, and weighing on an average, fifteen pounds.

At auction the seller never refers to his eggs as so much per box, but so much per hundred. As is the case with fruit, the packing is everything. The box itself should be of good stout Canadian wood, and the sides should not be one complete board, but preferably two pieces of wood, with a width of about 1-2 inch between them. This may be considered a detail, but it is of vital importance to the freshness of the eggs upon arrival, as it admits the air, thus keeping the eggs at a certain even temperature. The box itself should be divisioned down the centre (cross ways) by two boards, each board being about two inches apart. Thus we find the box apportioned in, say three parts at first, then comes the first partitioning board, a space of two inches, then comes the second board, and after this, the remaining three feet of the box. This central apartment means a big thing, as when the eggs get into the hands of the small wholesaler, it is quite easy to saw the box in half within the width of these two centre boards, thus separating the box absolutely, without having to nail on a side, with the consequent risk of breaking the contents. In many cases the retailing man can only afford to take half a box when trade is bad, and this idea would specially meet his requirements.

Next comes the padding. Russian peasants, first of all, lay a thick layer of wood pulp shavings at the bottom of each of the two divisions, and on top of this they place what may be called the first half of the eggs, every egg being in the same direction, and each division of the box containing 10 rows of 18 eggs, making a total number of 180 in a shelf in each division.

A further layer of shavings is again placed on top of this and so on, until we have four shelves of eggs, when the whole of the 1,440 eggs are fastened down by two boards, with about two inches width between them as mentioned before, for reasons of temperature.

English importers have always been prejudiced against buying small-sized boxes of eggs, their chief reason for this being that in course of transhipment, it only requires one man to lift them, resulting in many cases in breakage of the contents, as it is not to be expected that one man can carry a box of eggs with the same sureness and safety that two men can, in fact, this very reason acts detrimentally to Irish eggs on the British market at the present time.

PACKING COMPANY'S CATALOGUE

The Montreal Packing Co. have issued an artistic catalogue which for its convenient arrangement of styles and prices of the company's products will be appreciated by the trade. The cover is striking and lithographic art is displayed in portraying the various kinds of meats. One of these price lists should be in the hands of every grocer, and a post card addressed to the Montreal Packing Co., Montreal, will bring it.

IT WILL NOT DOWN.

The leading papers of England and Scotland from the Times down are outspoken in their denunciation of the continuance of the Canadian cattle embargo. The Yorkshire Herald quotes Hamar Greenwood as stating in his pre-election speeches that he would support no Government that would not remove the embargo, and hints that he might resign or cross the floor of the House on account of the Government's refusal to do so. While the removal of the embargo will not be introduced again this session, the cause has enough friends in the House to warrant its being an issue again at no very distant date.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—The feature of the provision market this week is the advance of ¼c. which has taken place in compound lard. Pure lard remains unchanged in price. Provisions generally are moving out quite freely. Hams and bacon for local trade are very much in demand, according to some houses, while other firms say fair business is being done in them. Little export trade is being transacted.

BUTTER—Prices continue to advance in butter. The high prices demanded in the country cannot be obtained in the city and trade is in consequence not the best. For the choicest creamery dealers are asking as high as 21½c., but this figure is very hard to obtain.

Choicest creamery	0 2[illegible]¼	0 21½

CHEESE—The cheese market is a little easier. The prices have advanced considerably over last week, but at time of writing the market is in better condition than it has been for quite a little time. The demand is on the quiet side with a possibility of lower prices in the near future.

EGGS—Dealers are pretty well filled up, and many have stopped packing, or at least are not putting away as many eggs as they have been heretofore. Lower prices are expected in consequence. At present 16½c. is asked.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The provision market remains firm with a tendency to eliminate last week's bottom prices on smoked breakfast bacon and backs. The demand is very satisfactory. Veal is slightly higher and the bottom price for street lots of hogs has gone a little lower.

BUTTER—The market shows a phenomenal strength in face of increasing supplies and is accounted for by speculation and manipulation rather than by conditions of supply and demand. There is, too, a tendency on the part of milk producers to turn their supplies into the cheese factories. The quality of butter arriving here is still complained of by some. Prices are firmer at about last week's high point. There is considerable demand for creamery for export.

In barrel pork prices have been again advanced. Business is light. Beef is firmer but there is little demand. Smoked meats continue high. Pure lard shows a further advance. Refined compound is firmer and selling freely. The supply of fresh beef is large and the market is easier. Veal is rather lower. Mutton is also off in price. Lambs are still small and the price is high. Small pigs bring full figures, but there is little sale for heavy hogs.

NOTES.

H. G. Edgecombe, Strathroy, will be manager of the new canning factory at Tilbury, Ont.

English and American capitalists are preparing to erect factories in Jamaica to make bananas into banana meal. The product is said to make nutritious bread.

Prince Albert, Sask., Board of Trade is negotiating with a Winnipeg firm for the establishment of a pork packing factory.

The highest price this season for cheese has been paid in Eastern Ontario and Quebec. At Huntingdon on the 26th inst. 12 5-16 cents per pound was paid, and in all the other producing points prices were high.

Before the English Parliamentary Committee on Butter Adulteration, John Speir, representing Scotch bodies, recommended that colonial butter be refused admission unless accompanied by a certificate of purity.

Mrs. Wm. Davies, wife of the head of the Wm. Davies Co., died last week at her home on Jarvis street, Toronto. The deceased was 77 years of age and had been an invalid for some years.

T. Publow, a graduate of Queen's University, and son of the chief dairy instructor of Eastern Ontario, and himself a cheese instructor for Prince Edward county, has accepted the position of chief inspector with F. Fowler, Montreal.

VISIT FROM THE CAN MAN.

J. B. Campbell, of the Acme Can Works, Montreal, was a caller at the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer this week, with a large leather satchel full of cans. Mr. Campbell is highly elated over the latest improvement he has evolved in the standard can. He is this year making a can with the groove or channel in which the cap fits narrower and deeper than the old style. As a result less solder is required, so that a saving of 2 pounds, or 40 cents, on the thousand cans is effected.

Another improvement on the Acme can this year is a larger button, which prevents the spindle of the capping machine from throwing the cap out of position when soldering.

CAN GET A FEW TO TRY.

For the Summer season, J. Bruce Payne, Limited, cigar manufacturers, of Granby, Que., are making a special offer to grocers in order to interest them in the cigar trade. For the next few months trial orders for five hundred cigars will be filled in order to demonstrate to the grocery trade the advantage of carrying a line of first-class cigars.

WIARTON WILL HANG ON.

Mayor Cameron, of Wiarton, anent the suggested removal of the beet sugar plant, has written to state that the town heavily bonused the industry on condition that it be operated there ten years and will strenuously oppose removal. The owners, however, have assured the mayor the plant will be operated at Wiarton next year.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The cereal situation this week is not specially interesting. Manitoba wheat prices have receded slightly and Winter wheat is rather higher. At present there is no export business. Flour is 10c. higher in Ontario and Quebec and millers' demand for wheat is somewhat impaired, though the buying is still for immediate requirements. The demand for flour is fair, but not any more. Cereals are quiet in keeping with the approach of Summer.

DELAYED FLOUR SHIPMENTS.

The London (Eng.) Flour Trade Association has issued a circular calling the attention of the trade on this side the Atlantic to delays in shipping flour on through bills of lading. Flour, it is stated, has been in transit two, three and four months, and there have been cases where bills of lading dated October, November, December and January have arrived in the same steamer. "Under these conditions," the circular says, "it is impossible for those trading in American flour, whether importers or users, to carry on business without serious risks, and often times heavy losses."

Returns show that 300,000 bags of flour were more than 65 days in getting through to London, and that a large proportion was 90 to 130 days out. It is estimated that the loss to the trade in London last Autumn and Winter was £20,000.

"In recent years," the circular states, "the milling industry in this country has made unprecedented progress, existing mills having greatly increased their capacity and many large mills have been erected, and all equipped with the most modern machinery, so that competition is keener for trade than it has ever been before."

CONSUMPTION OF RICE.

"One-fourth of the world's food is rice," according to the report of the rice committee submitted at the twenty-third annual meeting of the New Orleans Board of Trade. That is a statement which flour manufacturers will be likely to dispute, says the Dixie Miller, but there is room for all the foodstuffs that the soil produces and, because of the growing importance of rice as a cereal food, the additional facts in this report will be interesting. It is stated that rice production in the United States began in colonial times, and grew gradually along the Atlantic and Gulf Coast, and especially after the Civil War it has greatly developed, together with other southern agricultural industries, and is to-day one of the chief products of the States of Louisiana and Texas. In both of these states great irrigation canal systems and pumping works have been put in, but better yet, almost this entire region is found to be underlaid by a stratum of water-bearing gravel, from which the water will rise almost to the surface in bored wells. This water is soft, and, of course, clean from foul seed, is easily raised, and exhaustless. No more ideal rice land can be found on earth than this. Whereas, in Japan, one man can raise one-half of an acre of rice in a year, in Louisiana and Texas one man will produce 80 acres. In Japan, the rice field man earns from $12 to $18 a year, and board. In Louisiana he gets $200 and board. One man in Louisiana will raise as much as thirty Chinese or Filipinos.

WHEAT CROP GROWING.

A bulletin issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture shows an increase of about 33 per cent. in the world's wheat production since 1900. The figures are :

	Bushels.
1905	3,337,748,000
1904	3,163,845,000
1903	3,221,251,000
1902	3,125,227,000
1901	2,954,763,000
1900	2,586,025,000

Between 1896 and 1905 the wheat crop of the United States has increased from 427,684,000 bushels to 692,979,000 bushels, that is 265,295,000 bushels. In the same period the rest of the world's crop increased 566,133,000 bushels.

MONEY IN HAY.

Some big profits, it is stated, are being realized by some Montreal hay dealers who some time since, believing that the mild January and lack of snow followed by 15 to 20 degrees below zero with no overcoat to protect the meadows, would injure them and reduce the yield of the new crop, bought heavily at country points and stored them there, to await the expected advance in prices, which has recently taken place. A brisk demand is now being experienced at an advance of $2.00 to $3.00 per ton, and several firms here stand to make $15,000 to $20,000 each.

CO-OPERATIVE WHEAT SELLING.

A movement is afoot in Manitoba to organize the farmers in a joint stock enterprise for marketing their produce. A charter has been applied for and propaganda meetings are to be held throughout the province. The company intends ultimately to own its own elevators.

ONTARIO CROP BULLETIN.

The Ontario Agricultural Department's mid-May crop bulletin reports some damage to Fall wheat and clover by the open Winter and late Spring. No estimates are given. The most favorable reports are from the Lake Erie and Lake Ontario counties.

The acreage of Winter rye is small, and is chiefly for soiling.

Field and forest vegetation were at that date a week behind.

The fruit orchards wintered well, and a generous blossoming indicated a large crop if rains kept off during the period of setting.

NOTES.

Quebec crop reports are not of the brightest, owing to the backward Spring.

Thomas Newlove has leased the Plewes flour mill at Creemore for a term of years.

The wheat crop of the Punjab, India, for this year has beaten all records, being 500,000 tons is excess of the previous best crop.

Ogilvie's steel tank elevator, at Fort William, took a slide toward the river owing to an impaired foundation. It held 350,000 bushels of wheat, most of which will be destroyed.

Nicholas Barolf, a leading Winnipeg grain dealer, states that the wheat area of the three prairie provinces is 15 per cent. greater than last year, and estimates the crop at 100,000,000 bushels.

It is feared the protracted drouth in Alberta will seriously affect the crops. While rain has fallen steadily for some days, it is said to be too late to save the entire Fall wheat crop, some of which has been already plowed up and oats sown in its place.

Vancouver dispatches credit the C.P.R. with preparing for the shipment of western grain by the Pacific. Besides considerable contemplated additions to the Pacific fleet, it is said to have abandoned a policy of opposition to elevator construction on the coast and to have offered liberal inducements for the erection of elevators at False Creek and Burrard Inlet.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

FLOUR—The expected advance in flour has taken place. Considering the state of the wheat market, which is very strong, the advance is only natural. FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

A very good general business is being done in shipping circles. During the past week many large shipments of different products were made to different parts of the globe. Cheese and butter are still going out rather slowly. Some companies report a very good business in these lines, while others say there is very little doing.

The rates this week are practically unchanged.

Good shipments of grain have been leaving the port of Montreal during the week. Hay, owing to the scarcity which prevails, is not being shipped in anything like large quantities.

The new Donaldson liner Latona, which has been mentioned in these columns before, reached port on May 20, and was an object of interest to those who happened to visit the port while she was moored. The new boat is meant for the Glasgow-Montreal service, and is equipped with all the latest chilled air systems and cold storage devices.

As the season advances and the shipping trade increases, the want of proper shed accommodation is more keenly felt. The wharves are at present stacked day after day with large numbers of packages and boxes meant for shipment, and shippers are unable to have these properly stored in sheds until the time for shipment arrives. The work on the new sheds is progressing, however, and better accommohation is looked for after they are completed.

The C.P.R. liner Mount Temple, which reached the port of Montreal on May 23, claims to have carried into the harbor the largest cargo of general merchandise ever brought to Montreal. The vessel carried 8,225 tons of general merchandise.

The Escalona, a fruit steamer which reached Montreal, was cleared of her cargo May 22, through the fruit auction which took place at the wharf. The auction was held in one of the Thomson line sheds, and there was in attendance a representative gathering of fruit merchants, who kept up a lively bidding throughout the sale. Eight thousand boxes of oranges and lemons from Massena, and 1,200 boxes of oranges and lemons from Valencia, were disposed of at the sale.

The Campana, which ran aground at St. Valier recently, and which was taken to dry dock in Montreal to be overhauled, has been found but slightly damaged. She sailed for Pictou, N.S., on May 22, carrying a general cargo.

The Victorian of the Allan line sailed for Liverpool with a general cargo on May 23.

The Dominion liner Kensington cleared for Liverpool with a varied cargo on May 26.

The Empress of Britain reached Liverpool from Quebec at 2 p.m., May 26, making the trip across in seven days and four hours, which is considered very good time.

On May 27 the Manchester Commerce, of the Furness, Withy Co., sailed with a general cargo for Manchester.

It is expected that the Empress of Ireland will leave Liverpool on her maiden trip across, June 23, and will leave here on the return trip July 7.

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

For green fruits and vegetables the question is now one of supply rather than demand. Consumption at this season of the year in Canada was probably never before so large. The price of pines has advanced wholly because of increased demand. It may recede again a little, but importers say not much. The price of pines varies according to the daily New York auctions. The fruit is auctioned from the steamers as they arrive, and the day's demand determines the price. The present advance is attributable in part to the holiday demand in the States, June 30th being Decoration Day. Some look for a slightly lower price again next week.

The lemon market is very firm, and there has been keen competition at the New York auctions this last week.

Strawberries are not an average crop in the states now yielding, especially Maryland. Consequently prices are ruling high, higher than last week, for the demand is steadily increasing. The Canadian plants are said to have been pretty badly Winter killed and about half a crop is expected here. This shortage will be made up in part by an increased acreage, but there is a promise of scarce berries this Summer.

Oranges are becoming scarce and what remain are higher.

New potatoes from the south are beginning to arrive in quantity. Tomatoes, however, hold up, the demand being heavy.

APPLE TRADE NOTES.

W. A. McKinnon, Canadian commercial agent at Bristol, Eng., having seen a number of prominent fruit dealers, says they are agreed, with one exception, in regard to apples, that Canadians sell more readily and at higher prices than Americans; that one reason for this is the larger sized barrel in which Canadians are packed; that a much more important reason is that Canadians are better packed and graded, the grade marks being more reliable than those used by American competitors, and that this result is unanimously attributed to the influence of Government inspection, carried out under the Fruit Marks Act.

The fruit trade, Mr. McKinnon states, approves the proposals by the recent fruit convention at Ottawa to define No. 2 grade and for a standard Canadian barrel.

Of apples in boxes, he says he will be glad to receive particulars from growers proposing to ship that way, and continues:

"Only a limited trade, confined to the best varieties, and the best samples of them, carefully packed, can be hoped for in the early stages of the development of this trade, so far at least as the south of England is concerned. There is, however, a high-class trade which could use such goods as these at paying prices. Importers would require that shipments should be absolutely reliable from time to time, and that the fruit should be in every respect first-class, and true to name and grade as marked."

OUTLOOK FOR VEGETABLES.

The monthly crop reports for June, as issued by the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, shows vegetable crops throughout the province to be one or two weeks late, owing to the cool and wet weather. There have been several hard frosts since the 20th of May at Ottawa and Kingston, and early potatoes, beans and other crops that were doing nicely were killed. The crop of early cabbage at Ottawa will be nearly double that of last year. Cauliflower and corn will be a light crop, potatoes heavier, and there is no increase in the acreage of vegetables reported near Kingston.

In Prince Edward county, beans and tomatoes will be grown on an increased scale this year, and corn, peas and berries less. A marked increase in the planting of potatoes, tomatoes and onions is reported from Napanee.

Around Toronto correspondents at Doncaster and Humber Bay state crops are looking well, but there will be a light crop of asparagus and a decrease in the crop of onions. Large quantities of early celery have been planted.

Around Burlington there will be more onions than usual. Vegetables under glass are at a more advanced stage than last year. Tomatoes, late and early, will be planted extensively.

At Niagara Falls South tomatoes, corn, beans and beets are being contracted for by the canning factories at last year's prices. There is a decrease in the acreage under contract. A great scarcity of late tomatoes planted is reported.

In the southwestern portion of the province there will be a big increase in the shipments of early tomatoes, in the vicinity of Leamington, the acreage having been considerably increased.

Some of the early vegetables were ruined around Sarnia by the severe frost in May. Early potatoes will, however, be a large crop.

CATCH OF HALIBUT.

The schooner Squid, of the B. C. Packers' Association, took 700,000 pounds of halibut in three days recently. This is the largest catch in so short a time recorded. Each fisherman earned $70.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—Very good business has been done in green fruits, although the weather has not been the best for this line of trade. Several changes are noticeable in the quotations hereunder. The market in lemons has advanced from 35c. to 50c. a case in sympathy with the advances which have taken place in other markets. Oranges are rather firmly held. The price of Jamaicas has declined a little owing to the receipt of some stock not quite up to the average merit. Strawberries are enjoying very good sale from 15c. to 17c.

VEGETABLES—The weather the past couple of weeks has not been conducive to good business in green vegetables. Very good sales have been made, nevertheless, and dealers do not complain of lack of inquiries. Potatoes, according to those in a position to know, are going to be scarce. The price is rising already. Eighty-five cents is the figure demanded at present, and it is thought that higher will be seen very shortly. Southern cabbage is a little lower owing to heavier receipts. Florida tomatoes are also more plentiful. Cucumbers have declined 75c. since last week. Canadian asparagus is now quoted. Dealers are asking $1.75 per basket. Washed celery in bunches is being sold quite freely at $1.25.

Prices are high, too. Pines are higher owing to increased demand, for the crop is average or better and the quality is prime. A car of Floridas, the first, arrived here this week. Berries are higher owing to small supplies due to a short crop in the yielding states, Maryland, Delaware and Missouri. Oranges are getting scarce and are higher. The market here is bare of Mexicans. Lemons are dearer. Even bananas are higher, for the best, but it may be the best are better. There is practically no more grape fruit. In New York as high as $14 a case has been paid for it.

VEGETABLES — Heavy seasonable business pretty well defines the situation in the vegetable market. Some lines are naturally tending lower. New potatoes is one of these. The first carload arrived this week and the price is down to $5 a barrel. Domestic asparagus is getting more plentiful. There is a wide range in the price but it is not wider than the range of quality, from stems that look like timothy stalks three inches long to the fine fat variety that adorns a piece of toast to an epicure's taste. Onions are a little easier and peas and beans are getting nearer the reach of the light purse.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

PLEASE THE CHILDREN.

About three quarters of the candy made in Canada is bought and consumed by children. That is the estimate of one of the largest manufacturers. It is not much wonder, therefore, that the candy man strives to please the boys and girls.

THE CANDY DEPARTMENT.

Confectionery is receiving much more attention from the average grocer than it was a few years ago. The principal reason for this is the increased consumption due to lower prices made possible by the decreased cost of sugar and other raw material.

Chas. F. Wenneker, answering in the Eli Grocer the question how to make a candy department popular, wrote:

"In the first place I would look to its cleanliness. I would see that it had ample show case room and I would have these in a cool place that the sun could not reach. The sun not only fades candy, but it attracts flies, and appetizing candy and flies never can go together. I would dress the showcases often and tastefully. Chocolates, bonbons and caramels make attractive combinations and are the best for effective display. Candy is a luxury, and if you put it temptingly before people they cannot resist it. Like every other line of goods, candy looks best when not crowded. Pile your show case full and you make all its contents unattractive. * * * Chocolates are the most popular of candies. They are in demand everywhere and the demand is always growing. They outsell all other candies by a long way and it is the expensive kinds, too, that are most in demand. But speaking of grades, the high-class goods are the best sellers in all lines of confections. It is more satisfactory to handle the better grades. They net as good or a better profit than cheap lines and they turn the money over quicker. In fact, it is becoming hardly worth while to make the cheaper grades. Even the school children pass these up. It is no longer with them a question of quantity, but one of quality. In other words, candy consumers are cultivating a taste for high class confections."

"Cheap" candy does not necessarily mean low priced. It means poor. Most of the candy sold in this country to the children is low priced, but it is good. The proprietor of a very large Toronto candy factory said the other day: "There isn't a class of candy made here that my children don't eat."

The impression that chocolates do not keep well is erroneous. If properly manufactured, passed through a cold storage plant, chocolates will stand up well even in the hottest weather. All the big factories now have ice plants for this purpose and the results are always satisfactory.

The demand for candy has increased very rapidly of late years. Where it was once a sort of luxury that belonged almost exclusively to the rich, candy has now becomes a pleasure for the masses. The decrease in the prices of sugar and the other commodities used in the manufacture of sweetmeats has put candy within the reach of almost everybody.

Candy stands almost alongside of many household commodities when it comes to popular sellers, Mr. Wenneker concluded, and the grocer who does not make his candy department pay has himself to blame. Keep the cases cool, clean and attractive and candy lovers will do the rest.

VISITOR FROM DUBLIN.

Mr. Chas. E. Jacob, of the firm of W. & R. Jacob, biscuit manufacturers, Dublin, Ireland, was a caller at the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer this week.

Mr. Jacob left Dublin in October last on a trip around the world in the interests of his firm. traveling to the east.

He was in California at the time of the earthquake, and had his luggage burned at San Francisco. Mr. Jacob was at the time of the disaster in Los Angeles for a day, and got back to find the city in ruins.

From San Francisco Mr. Jacob went up the coast to Vancouver and through by Winnipeg to Toronto, leaving for Montreal on Thursday.

Mr. Jacob is quite satisfied with his trip and the prospects for trade in Canada. His high-class biscuits have been very well received by the trade, and the outlook is very encouraging.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

DEFENDS THE CIGARETTE.

The Practitioner, an English medical journal, defends cigarette smoking and protests against the threatened "grand motherly legislation" against it. The prohibition of the cigarette, it says, would drive boys to the cigar and pipe, and proceeds:

"It is not easy for those who know anything of the action of tobacco on the human frame to understand the horror with which so many worthy persons regard the cigarette. That smoking in excess is not good for boy, or man, or woman is a matter as to which all are agreed. As has often been pointed out, the cigarette is more injurious than the cigar or the pipe, because it is more insidious. But to banish the cigarette utterly because it may be abused is simply foolish. An amazing amount of rubbish is talked about the matter by intemperate enthusiasts. The anti-tobacco agitation, like some latter day propagandas, has its origin in the mistaken notion that the rule of healthy life must in everything be adapted, not to the average man, but to the weaker vessels."

BIG NEW CIGAR FACTORY.

L. O. Grothe & Co. have commenced the erection in Montreal of what will be one of the largest and finest cigar factories in Canada. The factories will be five stories above ground, with three frontages, 150 feet on St. Lawrence street, 135 feet on Ontario street, and 184 feet on St. Charles Borromee street. A separate tobacco storage warehouse will be built on the last named street.

WANT ONE REVENUE STAMP.

Essex, Ont., tobacco growers are agitating for a uniform revenue stamp for imported, combination and Canadian leaf. Now there is a black stamp for imported, pink for combination, and green for Canadian, necessitating, it is asserted, separate factories for each class of tobacco, with separate licenses, plants, bonded warehouse and all accessories. Existing regulations do not permit shipping the product of one factory to another and forwarding together, thus rendering separate shipping warehouses necessary. When the growers laid the situation before the Tariff Commission sitting at Windsor and asked a uniform label, the Finance Minister, Mr. Fielding, replied, "You want to dispose of Canadian tobacco by disguising it under a uniform stamp." -The Leamington, Ont., Post, discussing the issue, says:

We do not want to disguise anything. All we ask is, place our native tobacco on an equal footing with the imported article.

We want our tobacco stores to be able to say to the consumer: "Here are all the popular brands of manufactured tobaccos. You pay your money and you can take your choice. You must judge the quality by the merits of the goods and not by prejudice and the color of the stamp."

We heartily agree that the present onerous revenue regulations are unwise, unjust and absolutely unnecessary.

No other country under high heaven has seen the necessity of similar revenue regulations. Mr. Fielding's contention that the green, pink and black stamps are necessary for the protection of the public is absurd and ridiculous. Surely Canadian tobacco is not so injurious to health that the Government must act as a guardian for the tobacco using public.

One would almost think it was a deadly poison and was labeled so as to warn intending purchasers so they could discriminate and buy something less harmful.

Remove this handicap, abolish the triple factory obstruction, prohibit the sale of raw leaf and with reasonable protection we will in a very short time produce 75 per cent. of all tobacco used in the Dominion.

Under the existing law not one of the 235 cigar factories in the country can use one leaf of the product of our own country, unless they go to the enormous expense of building and equipping a new factory.

No wonder there is no cigar leaf grown, when under the law none of the factories can even experiment with it.

There must be a demand before there can be a supply, and this burdensome regulation must be abolished before this type of leaf can ever be grown in commercial quantities.

Surely, surely "it is time for a change" in the revenue regulations.

SUE FOR COMMISSIONS.

W. H. Steele & Co., wholesale tobacconists, Toronto, have issued a writ against the American Tobacco Co. for $139 rebate on goods purchased in March. Since August, 1904, when the law was changed, Steele & Co. have bought goods from other manufacturers than those included in the so-called tobacco trust, and claim that on that account their shipments have been delayed; that while other dealers could get orders filled in two or three days, their's were delayed 10 days or two weeks. A couple of months ago the company took the offensive and began to cut prices. Instead of getting all goods direct from the manufacturers, those they wish in a hurry they get through other dealers, having, they claim, eight such sources of supply. They keep boys busily removing labels whereby the avenue of supply can be traced.

The manufacturers sell goods on the rebate plan on the understanding that the schedule prices are maintained. They have refused to pay Steele & Co. the commissions for March. The result of the suit will be watched with interest.

Goldvogel Bros., tobacconists, Montreal, have assigned. Liabilities are $35,000.

VIRGINIA'S AGE PROBLEM.

Col. Robert M. Lynn, editor of the Richmond Evening Journal, who says of life at the age of 75, that on the whole he has nothing to regret, told a group of friends over the juleps last night that in Southwest Virginia there were counties becoming notorious for never registering a death from natural causes.

"A man's got to be killed down theah, suh," he said, "in orduh to face his Makuh. The climate is so salubrious an' nature is so gowgeous in its plenteous bounty that the folks just keep on livin' until somethin' violent happens.

"Mah friend, Evan Chesterman, who writes literary articles fo' mah papuh, fo' instance, is a sample. Evan is 98 yeahs old. He has been a-nippin' at his toddies in Wintuh and his juleps in Summuh an' has been usin' tobacco sence he was 16. He strayed into a church not long ago jus' to heah an ole chum, who was the pastuh, preach an' to see how he was standin' the yeahs. What was Evan's surprise, suh, to have his old frien' jump on ev'ybody fo' drinkin' liquor and usin' tobacco. Evan stood it as long's he could, an' then he riz up an' said:

" 'Brothuh Wormeley, yo' know well enough, suh, that I have been a-drinkin' of mah liquor an' a-usin' of mah tobacco fo' three-quahtuhs of a century, suh, an' it ain't worried me a bit.'

" 'I know it, suh,' replied the pastuh, 'an' if you hadn't a-been usin' liquor an' tobacco all yo' life, suh, you'd live on on' on until, when Gabriel blew his trumpet, suh, yo' would have to be knocked in the head by an angel, suh, so yo' could come up to the bar of justice fo' yo' rightful reckonin.' "

HOTEL KEEPERS MAKE ENEMIES.

Commercial travelers who work the territory north of Toronto would like to indict on a charge of conspiracy the leading hotelkeepers in Barrie, Orillia, Collingwood and Gravenhurst. Led by mine hosts of Orillia, they have conspired, it is alleged, to raise prices to commercial men from $1.50 to $2 a day. The excuse is the advance in the license fee.

"That," asserted a wrathful traveler, "could at the most amount to only 50c. a day. Under the new schedule the first man in would pay and the 15 or 20 travelers to follow would simply add each his 50 cents to the tavern keeper's already swollen income.

"What did I do? Why, I just got out and went to another hotel. I would rather eat a dried herring and a bun on the street than let those fellows beat me. If the travelers would just stand together we would bring those chaps to time. They've done more for temperance since the first of May than all the temperance workers could do in a year. Now that the Government has made it harder to pass local option they think they can do as they like."

TRIAL WILL GO ON.

Without having had any official notification to that effect the officers of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild indicted for conspiracy at Hamilton are pretty well assured that the Dominion Government will not make any change in the law this year, and that the case at Hamilton will be proceeded with at the end of the month's adjournment.

THE KIND HE LIKED BEST.

A deaf old gentleman was asked to a dinner party, and a lady present was urged to help him along in the conversation. It proved even more difficult than was expected. As the fruit was passed around she asked him:

"Do you like bananas?"

"What?"

"Do you like bananas?"

"No," said he, shaking his head; "I never wear them. The old-fashioned night shirt is good enough for me."

ANCIENT COLONY NOTES.

St. John's, Nfld., May 21, 1906.

Beef and pork are firm.

Harvey & Co. have received a large shipment of tea from Ceylon.

The outport crafts are beginning to arrive for the Spring's supply.

A. Dorken, of Dorken Bros., Montreal, has been in the city a few days.

Molasses are still advancing, and are selling now at 30c. per gallon.

Molasses have a last begun to rise; the best price to-day is 27½c. wholesale.

Philip Templeman, of Bonavista, has purchased a large dwelling house in the city.

H. M. Ross has branched out as a full-fledged tea and commission merchant.

Flour is easier, and some of the knowing ones look for cheaper flour for some time.

R. P. Forbes, representing Stairs, Son & Morrow, of Halifax, was a visitor for a week.

J. H. Roberts, manager for Newfoundland of Vim Tea Company, spent week end at Carbonear.

The new wholesale grocery and provision firm of Rossitter & Co. are doing a very good business.

M. G. Winter, of T. & M. Winter, has returned from a business trip to Canada and the United States.

Over 100 sail of craft arrived in one day this week from the different outports for the season's supplies.

Chas. Chetwynd, who has charge of the tea department of Harvey & Co., reports tea business as very good.

W. J. Murphy, manager of the Exploits Lumber Co., Botwoodville, was a visitor to the city the past week.

Cotton lines are at a premium; none to be had in the city. The local roperies are months behind in their orders.

John Fullerton, representing Rowat & Co., pickles, etc., has just left after a very profitable business trip in this colony.

W. Fallis, eastern representative of the Sherwin-Williams Paint Co., has just left the colony after a very successful business trip.

F. H. Bradshaw, who represents Peek, Winch & Co., London tea merchants, has lately received some large shipments of tea.

L. C. Archibald, manager of the Antigonish Condensed Milk Co., manufacturers of Pheasant milk, left for Sydney by express yesterday.

Clement & Co., Channel, packers of "fish cheese," are running their factory overtime. A shipment was made to Germany a few days ago.

There is a good prospect of fish, salmon and lobsters. Salmon is selling on the street at 20c. per pound; lobsters at 10c. and 15c. each.

D. E. Brown, who formerly represented Baird & Peters, St. John, N.B., in this territory, is now manager of a large business in Manor, Sask.

M. P. Cashin, M.H.A., of Cape Broyle, is in the city. Mr. Cashin is interested in some large industries besides his business at Cape Broyle.

A. Delgado has let the contract for the erection of a fine building on Water street. Mr. John LeDieu is the contractor. It will be 4 storeys high.

The fruit being received now is of a very inferior quality, and great loss is the result. More care should be exercised in the shipment of fruit and vegetables.

W. E. Bearns, one of the city's enterprising merchants, will enlarge his premises this Spring. Mr. Bearns has worked up a large business by close attention to it.

It has been decided to still continue the Thursday half holidays. There is a growing feeling that Saturday would be better, but a few Water street houses are able to block it.

Harry Crowe, manager of the Newfoundland Lumber Estates, Limited, has returned from New York and Boston. While away Mr. Crowe put through a large deal.

Ernest Simmonds, manager of the retail department of Munn & Co., Harbor Grace, was a visitor to St. John's this week, purchasing supplies for the firm's extensive supply business.

Fish has dropped away down in price, about 50 per cent. Thousands of dollars will be lost by the exporters of the staple of the colony owing to exorbitant prices paid last Fall.

The Royal Stores Choral Society will give a concert at Harbor Grace shortly. This society is composed exclusively of employes of the Royal Stores, and includes some excellent talent.

One of our best known business men expects to leave here for the States and Canada early in June in the interests of a new butter factory, while will probably be started in this city on his return.

There never was a year since the discovery of the colony when the preparations for the fishery were anything near approaching what they are this year. Some of the wise heads predict very low prices on fish next Fall.

The amount of trade this Spring has not been equal to former years. The business of the colony has changed and is spread more over the entire year than formerly. The Crystal boats have started to run on the different bays.

The F. P. Wood Company has been incorporated to take over the business formerly conducted by Messrs. F. P. Wood and the Crown Mfg. Co., with the following provisional directors: M. G. Winter, H. McCoubrey, A. Murray, W. Munroe, A. B. Wood.

It is reported that the Bank of Commerce will shortly open here for business in the Duder Building, opposite the post office. It is said that they have an option on real estate where they propose to erect a fine bank building. There is also talk of starting another bank with local capital.

The Anglo-Newfoundland Exporting Company, of which J. C. Crosbie is president and general manager, have just chartered two of their schooners to P. Templeman, Bonavista, to load fish for Europe. Mr. Crosbie has worked up a large business since he started fish exporting five years ago.

The Reid (Nfld.) Co. now issue commercial travelers' special tickets. The travelers have first to obtain the ticket from the manufacturers' association, similar to the Dominion Travelers' Association, and then the Reids issue the travelers' tickets at reduced rates, and allow 300 lbs. baggage free.

Robt Moulton, M.H.A., left for his home in Burgeo by steamer. Mr. Moulton has large interests in the colony, and is one of the most progressive merchants. No member of the House of Assembly has given his district closer attention than has Mr. Moulton. He has developed into a good speaker, and his speeches are listened to with great interest for the simple reason that he knows what the people want.

FAKE ADVERTISING IN GERMANY.

The drastic way in which, under the law against fraudulent advertising, a German concern which makes false or exaggerated statements is handled is shown by a case recently reported from Berlin. The defendant, a merchant of Spandau, advertised that he would clear out his stock of goods at less than half price. A customer who made a purchase complained to the police that the advertisement was a fraud. Thereupon the retailer was prosecuted by the police and was fined $150 and ordered to pay the customer $75 damages. On appeal the fine was reduced to $75 and the damages were remitted on the charge that the customer had not suffered any material loss.

It's Hard to Pull Against the Tide

Just as hard to try to stem the progress of Ceylon Tea. It took some courage a few years ago to predict that Ceylon Teas would capture the Canadian market, but that's what they have done.

The prediction was made in confidence, knowing the inherent merits of the teas of Ceylon. Their made them incomparably the best value on the market. They met the taste of the Canadian public to a nicety. There could be but one result—success.

Purity, Flavor, Strength,

There can be but one result for the Grocer who builds his tea trade on a Ceylon basis—success.

It is ill-requited work to "pull against the tide."

1906 PACK

Our 1906 pack Fruits, Vegetables and Meats will be, as usual, of the very best quality.

Our 1906 pack will be the best ever packed anywhere. We guarantee the quality of all our goods.

Remember the brands, viz.: "Canada First," "Auto," "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe," "Lynnvalley," "Maple Leaf," "Kent," "Lion," "Thistle," "Grand River." "Jubilee," "White Rose," "Deer," "Globe," etc.

If you want pleased customers stick to our brands exclusively.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

An Article of Faith

On no article in the store does a customer exercise greater faith in buying than on canned fruits and vegetables.

The can is sealed.
The label is more or less attractive.
The goods may be fresh or years old.
The contents may be delicious or flat.

The customer puts faith, not in the can but in you, her grocer. If the can is not satisfactory you receive the blame.

You may have a chance to make good the mistake; you may lose the customer and never know why.

Is it not wiser to sell a brand you can depend upon absolutely, a brand grown in the best district in Canada, put up in the most modernly-equipped factory under conditions of perfect freshness and cleanliness?

Old Homestead Brand
Canned Goods

fulfil all these conditions. They have won friends wherever used. Old Homestead Canned Goods are the finest goods on the Canadian market.

"THE FAIRBANK PLAN"

LOOK INTO IT

and see just what "The Fairbank Plan" is. While we spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year advertising the six great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap
Fairbank's Sanitary Soap

and educating the public regarding them; and while we intend to continue doing this, we realize fully that advertising alone has not accomplished the splendid results we have enjoyed in the sale of these goods, but that "the man behind the counter" has been an important factor in extending and increasing our trade. It was the realization of this fact that gave birth to "The Fairbank Plan," as a method of rewarding the retail clerks for their earnest co-operation in selling these goods and, consequently, a portion of our immense advertising appropriation is now set aside for the recognition of the dealer and his clerks.

"The Fairbank Plan" is an absolutely fair method of rewarding the clerk in direct proportion to the interest displayed in pushing the six specialties, as each package of these goods is couponed in such a manner that the coupon can be easily removed before the goods pass into the hands of the consumer. For these coupons we offer many valuable articles.

If you will send for an illustrated premium list of "The Fairbank Plan" it will convince you that this is no cheap trading-stamp scheme.

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY - Montreal, Canada.

"Perry's Sauce equal can't be found
For curries; spoonful to the pound."

Perry's Worcestershire Sauce

came to fill a long-felt want, and it fills it well. Perry's Worcestershire Sauce stands on its own merits and those merits are strong enough to stand on.

The principal argument why a grocer should become a "Perry" man is this: The price at which Perry's Sauce sells makes a large trade possible.

You can count on it that the people are not going to pay any more than is necessary for Worcestershire Sauce. The Perry price is the necessary price—not one cent more.

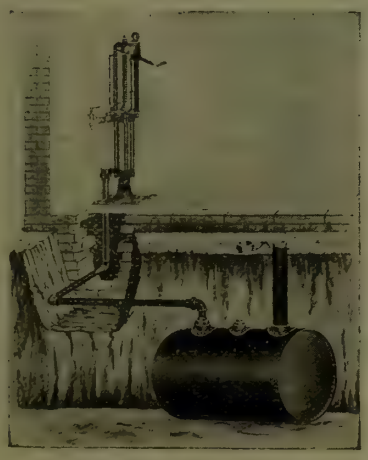
He Wanted a Perfect Gasolene Tank



CUT No. 42.
Tank Buried, Pump in Store.
One of Fifty.
Good for Kerosene, too.

The other day a grocer who retails gasolene said to our sales-manager: "I want a tank for gasolene that will be absolutely safe under all conditions; one that will make it unnecessary for me to buy 25 per cent. more gasolene than I need on account of evaporation, leakage and waste; one that will allow me to handle gasolene in the store instead of out on the back lot—and still not increase my fire hazard.

"I haven't much room, I haven't much time, I'm short of help, and I want a tank that will accommodate itself to these limitations. If I could get one, I'd buy one to-day, and be ready for the big business that the automobile season would bring."

PURE FOOD SHOW IN MONTREAL

Sampling and Demonstrating by Many Foodstuff Manufacturers

The first really good pure food show which has been attempted in Montreal for the past few years, and which came to a close May 26, was a great success. The fair was under the auspices of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, and was without a hitch from start to finish.

For two full weeks, from May 14 to May 26, the Montreal Pure Food Show held sway in the Victoria Rink. The Victoria is one of the largest rinks in Montreal and being centrally located as any was thought to be the most suitable for the fair. When the numerous booths were erected and the people began to visit the show it at once became apparent that the space at the disposal of the association was much too small to be comfortable—that is, when the crowds came. The inconvenience, however, was not as great as might have been expected. No doubt the next fair held will be in a larger place.

Mr. P. Daoust,
President Montreal Retail Grocers' Association.

The public liberally patronized the show from the first night. In the mornings and afternoons, while a great many ladies and children were present, the attendance was not large, but all evening from seven o'clock to ten o'clock and later the rink was packed and presented a very lively appearance.

Official Opening.

The fair was officially opened by Dr. Ald. Dagenais, chairman of the hygiene committee of the city council. The mayor was to have opened the show but was unable to attend. Dr. Dagenais spoke at some length on the danger to the public of using adulterated food stuffs and strongly commended the holding of fairs in order that the general public might be educated to discriminate between the good and the bad. He was followed by J. A. Beaudry, the secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association, to whose energy, by the way, the fair owed a very large measure of its success. Mr. Beaudry made a few remarks on the necessity of food fairs generally. Other short addresses were delivered by prominent men in the trade who happened to be present.

Premier Gouin, of the Province of Quebec, visited the fair with a party of friends on May 17. The Premier in a short address very forcibly commended the manufacturers, jobbers and merchants for their enterprise in starting a pure food campaign. He spoke of the increase in the output of impure food stuffs and strongly urged the trade to do everything to help along the pure food agitation. S. W. Ewing and J. A. Beaudry also addressed the people on behalf of the merchants and the trade generally.

Good Musical Programme.

A feature of the show was the splendid musical programme which was carried out during the two weeks. On May 14 the Prince of Wales Fusiliers band supplied the music, while the Kilties Band of Toronto was specially engaged for Tuesday and Wednesday. This band rendered some very fine musical numbers, which were very much appreciated. From May 17 to May 26 the Silverstone Orchestra was present.

It is variously estimated that the attendance between the opening and closing dates of the fair was about 60,000. This is placing it at a low figure as many had grocers' passes and attended more than once.

From the Directors' Gallery.

Just over the main entrance to the arena wherein were situated the different booths, was the directors' gallery, which was nicely decorated with flags and bunting. From this location those who were privileged could obtain a splendid view of the fair, especially at night when every booth was lit up. It was certainly a pretty scene which presented itself to the eye gazing over the brilliantly lighted stands. Overhead could be seen a profusion of flags and bunting, while the gay colors of the exhibitors' stands stood out below. The whole building was brilliantly lighted by electricity, showing to great advantage the beauty of the decorations. The aisles, three in number, were always thronged with visitors ever stopping to obtain a sample or to taste a dainty dish, while away back at the other end of the rink were the musicians, rendering the latest musical hits with occasional attempts to please the people with classical selections.

Directly in front of the gallery could be seen the large electric crown sign of the Edwardsburg Starch Company, signifying the Crown brand table syrup put up by this firm. Further back another particularly noticeable sign was that of the Bode Gum Company, while Fairbanks occupied a booth nearer at hand. No one could miss the booth of F. X. St. Charles, with its splendid statue of Psyche at the spring. The

Mr. J. A. Beaudry,
Secretary, Montreal Retail Grocers' Association.

Canada Maple Exchange booth to the right and the booth of Viau Freres to the left were quite attractive.

No better evidence of the purity and quality of the goods exhibited at the pure food show can be had than the fact that Mr. George Lloyd, manager of the grocery department of W. H. Scroggie, Montreal, bought for his firm nearly all the goods shown.

Edwardsburg Starch Co.

Large, well lighted both day and night and centrally situated, the booth of the Edwardsburg Starch Company was always surrounded by a crowd eager to hear of the standard food stuffs and corn products there being demonstrated.

As far as artistic beauty went the booth had no superior among the forty-odd stands occupying space. When the question of merit as to the goods is raised it is needless to say that no purer goods were to be found. Benson's Enamel Starch, Benson's Corn Starch and Benson's Silver Gloss Starch are the three brands so familiar to the grocery trade. Crown brand corn syrup occupied a prominent place. Daily, hundreds of samples were given away to those who were only too anxious to get hold of a good thing. The products of the Edwardsburg Starch Company are known to the public and the trade through judicious advertising in the best mediums and later by experience. The trade is quite aware that with Benson's and Edwardsburg starch and Crown brand table corn syrup it is always possible to please the most exacting customers. Several large high round jars containing corn syrup of the Crown brand were displayed and frequently remarks were heard on the clarity of the syrup. The demonstrators succeeded in getting rid of thousands of samples, which will surely mean hundreds of customers for the retail trade. The color scheme of the booth was blue and white and the effect was very pretty. Chinese lanterns added beauty to the scene at night. During the day two demonstrators were employed, while in the evening when the rush commenced it taxed the efforts of four persons to administer to the wants of the people.

Pure Food Show—Edwardsburg Starch Co., Limited, Montreal.

Five Roses Flour.

Novelty characterized the booth of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company. Situated about the centre of the rink, one could not pass without noticing the large three-sided stand of the makers of Five Roses flour, so favorably known to the trade of Canada, or to be more exact, to the trade of the world, for Five Roses is shipped to every part of the globe where flour is used. Upon entering the rink one caught sight of the novel booth for it was very high and nearly reached the roof. A pyramid of barrels occupied the centre. No person could fail to get a glimpse of Five Roses in all its different packages, for all sizes were displayed. Barrels, half-barrels, and quarter-barrels were piled beside bags containing six and twenty-four pounds respectively. After the publicity given this brand at the food fair, together with the fact that thousands of two-pound sample bags were distributed, there should be a great demand for it within the sphere of the show's influence. Six-pound bags are found very useful by housekeepers when a small quantity of flour is required.

An attractive feature of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company's booth was the number of vases, each containing five beautiful roses, symbolic of the firm's special brand of flour. It was very difficult to keep the number of roses intact as they were very much in demand by the ladies inquiring for samples of flour. The company's Breakfast Food formed a part of their exhibit and attracted considerable attention on the part of housewives.

Pure Food Show—Lake of the Woods Milling Co., Montreal.

Tobler's Swiss Milk Chocolate.

No visitor who went to the fair with the intention of seeing all that there was to be seen could have missed the striking exhibit by Maclure & Langley, who are agents for Tobler's Swiss Milk Chocolate. The booth used was a large one and was centrally located, and the quality of the goods on show was sufficient in itself to arouse much interest. When a Swiss milk chocolate of the merit possessed by Tobler's has been so widely advertised as Tobler's, an exhibit at the food fair is sure to attract the attention of visitors. Since away back in 1845 when Tobler's was established the firm has been aiming at perfection in milk chocolate and at the present time their chocolate is about as near to perfection as it is possible to make it. Branches have been established all over the civilized world and large business is done yearly. With the agency for Canada and the United States in the hands of Maclure & Langley the products of Tobler's house are sure to be pushed. Chiclets chewing gum, which made such a hit in the States, is to be advertised widely, according to Mr. Gordon, who had charge of the exhibit, and a place for it in the chewing gum trade is already assured. Chiclets chewing gum is something which cannot but take with the trade, as there is sure to be a great demand for it.

Hamilton Saratoga Chip Co.

"Have a Chip" was the sign which greeted one upon walking down the side aisle at the food show. And a great many did have one of Mrs. Rorer's Saratoga Chips which were exhibited by the Hamilton Saratoga Chip Co., of Hamilton, Ont. These Saratoga Chips are put up in ten and twenty-cent packages and although they have not been on the market a great length of time they have already secured an enviable place in the trade. They are crisp and dainty and the firm guarantee their purity. Some persons have an idea that this is a cereal food, but they are mistaken who think so. Samples given away will no doubt be the means of still further advertising this new food. The booth was very tastily decorated and attracted much attention. A continuous demonstration of Saratoga Chips is being held in Scroggie's Montreal store.

The following firms have been appointed agents for Saratoga Chips: Rose & Laflamme, agents for the east; MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto; Stuart Watson, Winnipeg; Dominion Brokerage Co., Calgary, Edmonton and Victoria.

Pure Food Show Hamilton Saratoga Chip Co., Hamilton.

The N. K. Fairbanks Co.

Gold Dust, so much sold by the grocery trade, was given great publicity during the pure food fair. Every visitor asking for one, and others not asking, were given a sample of Gold Dust and also a small cake of Fairbank's Tar Soap. Scouring soap was not forgotten nor was the popular Fairy, which has long since become familiar to the public through the advertising device used by the firm, "Have You a Little Fairy in Your Home?" Boar's Head lard and Cottolene were represented in the exhibit. The booth was in charge of Mr. Robinson, of the company's advertising department.

Peterborough Cereal Co.

In this booth Canada Flakes held a place of vantage and although no samples were given away in packages, dainty dishes of this tempting breakfast food were served out to all desirous of tasting it.

Shirriff's jellies and marmalades were displayed at the other end of the booth as were also the products of the Imperial Extract Company, of Toronto. W. S. Silcock, local agent, was in charge of both these exhibits. The electric sign used to illustrate the different flavors of jellies attracted a great deal of attention and proved a good advertisement.

Pure Food Show—St. Charles Condensing Co., Limited, Ingersoll. S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, Agents.

Bode's Gum Co.

With an energy which is characteristic of him and which has had much to do with the success of his wares, A. Bodenweiser, of Bode's Gum Co., was one of the first to secure a booth and commence work in making it one of the most attractive to be seen. The large electric sign attracted attention right away and the booth being situated on a corner was a centre of interest. Several girls were employed in wrapping and packing the different brands of Bode's gums and the public were enabled to see the cleanliness and care which is used in the putting up of these gums. Bode's Menthal Pepsin, Crushed Fruit and Pepsin Gums were all displayed. Pieces of the raw products from which the gum is manufactured were also on view. Samples were given away liberally and the public were afforded every opportunity to test the purity of the different chewing gums put out by this firm. Bode's gum slot machine was very much in evidence. This machine has been found a great money-maker by those who have obtained one of them.

S. H. Ewing & Sons.

Many different lines were represented in the booth taken by S. H. Ewing & Sons. Good Luck milk, Purity milk, and Silver Cow milk were placed alongside cases of St. Charles cream in different sized cans. Ewing's Club coffee was demonstrated and many visitors were convinced of the merits of this brand.

Blue Ribbon Tea.

A very neat tea display was that made by the Blue Ribbon Tea Co. Situated on the corner of the side aisle nearest the main entrance, it attracted great numbers every day. Blue Ribbon is known in all parts of the country, as it is most extensively advertised. At the food fair numerous sales were made every day, without the formality of sampling first.

Good Goods to Drink.

It is estimated that between ten and fifteen thousand sample cups of Cowan's cocoa and chocolate were given away during the fair. Considering the number of people generally around the booth, this statement is not hard to believe. All lines of Swiss milk chocolate made by the firm were on exhibition, as were Cowan's Perfection cocoa and other special brands of both cocoa and chocolate.

P. McIntosh & Sons.

Swiss Food and Beaver Oats were shown in the stand occupied by P. McIntosh & Sons, of Toronto. Samples of both foods were served to visitors. H. J. Stevens, of Montreal, who has the agency for these in the Province of Quebec, was seen around the stand quite often and with his assistants made many sales to grocers.

Returned June 15/06 Montreal Office Book 5

Pure Food Show—Bode's Gum Co., Limited, Montreal.

Canada Maple Exchange.

To the right of the main entrance was an exhibit which, for the purity of the goods shown, was unexcelled. This was the booth of the Canada Maple Exchange. Mr. Small was fortunate indeed in obtaining a stand so well located, as it was one which the public visited as soon as they entered. A girl was employed during the time the fair was in progress to demonstrate the manner in which Small's maple cream chocolates were dipped, and in this way people were shown the absolute care used to make cleanliness certain. Of the purity of the goods the trade is quite well informed. Blocks of pure maple sugar, maple syrup put up in small pails and maple cream chocolates were also exhibited. Something which many noticed and remarked upon was the number of medals displayed by the manufacturers of Maple Leaf brand chocolates. Medals were there from Japan, Paris, Ottawa and many other centres, all gained over exhibits of the finest goods in the world, a fact which speaks highly for the Canadian manufacturing trade. The Canada Maple Exchange was established in 1851 and since that time its progress has been steadily upward until to-day it holds a front place.

Pure Food Show—Canada Maple Exchange, Montreal.

Lipton's Teas.

Laporte, Martin & Co. had an exhibit of Lipton's teas, which was a centre of activity during the two weeks of the fair. These teas have taken such a place in the trade that they need little comment. The teas shown at the booth were black and green and mixed in pound and half-pound tins. Lipton's coffees also occupied a place in this stand and were shown in one, two and five-pound canisters. Samples were served and in this way many were convinced of the quality of Lipton's teas and coffees. Sales, too, were numerous. The booth occupied by these teas was situated just opposite the refreshment stand and in consequence it could not escape notice. It was decorated in a most tasteful fashion in different colors and hung with Chinese lanterns. A noticeable feature was the number of excellent ad cards used for advertising purposes. Laporte, Martin & Company's booth was in charge of Mr. Auger, who did much towards making their exhibit a success through his unfailing courtesy and desire to explain everything in connection with the exhibit. Wiser's whiskies also occupied a place on the side of this booth and the display was a most creditable one. Laporte, Martin & Co. are selling agents for this line in the east.

Pure Food Show—Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal.

Improved Match Co.

Matches by the thousand were given away as samples by the Improved Match Co., Drummondville, P.Q. With its head office in the Board of Trade building, Montreal, and a factory at Drummondville, P.Q., the company is well able to take care of the business transacted with the trade. The several brands manufactured by the firm were to be seen in the prettily decorated booth used for this purpose.

J. W. Windsor's Booth.

A booth containing a great assortment in the line of groceries was that of J. W. Windsor, Montreal. Canned goods were to be seen in abundance and of the quality little need be said other than that it in all cases was first class. Monarch brand pure preserved fruits occupied a prominent place and they were demonstrated for the satisfaction of those visiting the fair. Another line noticed was Ice Castle Brand sugar cream corn. This corn is prepared most carefully and is packed the same day it is picked. Kippered herring of the same brand were also displayed. Samples were given away by the hundred and during the closing evenings of the fair it was next to impossible to get near the booth. Taken all round, the exhibit of J. W. Windsor was an excellent one and has been the means of placing their lines prominently before the public. Ice Castle brand of lobsters were displayed, while special attention was paid to Windsor's clams, and the clam chowder served was an appreciated treat.

Pure Food Show—J. W. Windsor, Montreal.

The Ozo Company.

An excellent exhibit was that of the Ozo Company, of Montreal. It occupied a central position and was artistically arranged. The products of this firm are many and varied. Vinegars, pickles, jams, polishes, inks, mucilages and other lines are manufactured by them. The pickles which are offered to the trade are superior, as regards flavor, crispness and selected stock. Grocers say that they find it very easy to keep a customer for Ozo pickles after the first bottle has been purchased. Priscilla brand sweet pickles are attaining great popularity, as are Crest brand sour pickles. The stove polishes are being sold in greater quantities every month, according to all reports. Ozo borax is selling well. The venture of the company into the manufacture of stove polishes, both liquid and paste, has been very satisfactory.

F. X. St. Charles.

Psyche at the spring, a statue prominently displayed in the booth of F. X. St. Charles, was a very striking feature of the fair. This stand was situated in front of the main entrance and was lit up at night. All the many brands of bottled goods for which this firm have the agency, were to be seen. Included in these were White Rock, Vve. Cliquot, Schlitz, Vichy Cusset, and also several lines of canned goods.

Pure Food Show—The Ozo Co., Limited, Montreal.

Viau Freres.

Biscuits aplenty were to be seen in the exhibit which occupied a place in the left of the entrance. Viau Freres were responsible for the showing, which was indeed a creditable one. Almost every variety of biscuit was shown, as this enterprising firm manufactures nearly everything in the line of biscuits. During the days of the fair thousands of samples were passed out.

St. Charles Condensing Co.

A most attractive booth was that of S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, whose exhibition consisted chiefly of St. Charles cream, and other products of the St. Charles Condensing Co., of Ingersoll, Ont. St. Charles evaporated cream has already an enviable place in the Canadian trade, as its quality has long since been recognized. Grocers are able to conscientiously recommend it to particular customers, when it is generally a case of "once used, always used." This cream is unsweetened, thoroughly sterilized, and absolutely free from microbes. It is put up in hotel size as well as in the ordinary size. "Silver Cow" condensed milk, "Purity" condensed milk and "Good Luck" condensed milk all occupied places in the spacious booth used. Ewing's celebrated Club coffee was used in conjunction with the St. Charles evaporated cream, and the combination was certainly excellent as any one tasting it would testify. To W. H. Halford, who has charge of the commission department of the St. Charles Condensing Co's agency, controlled by S. H. Ewing & Sons, is due, in a great measure, the credit for the really excellent showing made by the booth.

Kkovah Jellies.

A food fair without an exhibit of Kkovah jellies would seem incomplete, so well and frequently are these goods demonstrated at food fairs. G. H. Bradwell, manager of the Montreal office of Sutcliffe & Bingham, the manufacturers, was not slow to prepare an exhibit for the food fair in Montreal. And the exhibit was not at all behind others made by this firm, rather ahead of many. Kkovah brand jellies, marmalade, custard, were all demonstrated, and Creamo, Laitova and lemon curd were also shown. The latter is a line which is meeting with success on the Canadian market. Blanc mange, lime juice and lime juice cordials were displayed and attracted much attention. A corner booth was occupied by the firm and it was always an interesting corner to watch. The jellies were demonstrated and the public had a chance to judge their merits. The decoration scheme of the booth was in pink and yellow trimmed with blue and the effect was very pretty.

Norka Much in Demand.

Breakfast foods were much in evidence and one of the finest exhibits in this line was that of the Western Milling Company, manufacturers of Norka food. "The cooked oats, ready to serve," is the way in which Norka is described. Oats are regarded as one of the richest of all cereals for the building up of the human system, but heretofore they have usually been put on the market uncooked. In Norka the public have a scientifically cooked food combined with malt, which is a great tonic and aid to digestion. Norka is supposed to be served with cream and sugar, but may be served with fruits, eggs, and in many other ways, so that it is a food which appeals strongly to the variety-loving public. Samples were served at the booth and the tasty dish was very frequently a means of inducing a person to make a purchase. The attention accorded Norka by visitors augurs well for good trade in Montreal.

Other Exhibits Worthy of Note.

There were many other exhibits which were tastefully arranged.

Condensed milk was represented in more than one booth. The Truro Condensed Milk Co. made use of a very pretty stand and opportunity was given to visitors to sample it.

Many excellent lines of toilet soaps were represented in the display of the Atlantic Soap Co. Among the brands shown were Woodbury's Facial Soap, Jergen's Tonka Talpa, Marie Antoinette and Tubero Soaps. Woodbury's Dental Cream was also shown.

Nugget Shoe Polish occupied a unique little booth. This polish is rather out of the staid shoe polish line inasmuch as it is a waterproof polish, as was demonstrated during the weeks of the fair. It has been praised very highly by many of the Old Country trade journals. The company plan to introduce it to the Canadian grocery trade.

A guessing competition was the feature of the exhibit made by James Strachan. A piano was the prize to be awarded to the one coming nearest to guessing the number of loaves used in the exhibit of this firm.

The Standard Chemical Co. had a booth in which were displayed bottles of wood spirits and Columbian spirits. Their charcoal was also displayed.

Business Systems' exhibit attracted a great many business men. Many labor-saving devices were exhibited.

Other firms having exhibits were Jacquin Freres, Rowan Bros., Chas. Gurd, Standard Wafer Co., Quinquina, R. & W. Kerr and Brodie's Silver Polish.

WHAT WAS THE DISTURBANCE?

"Warnock, Belmont Co., Ohio, 5-24.
"Please send me sample copy of Canadian Grocer.
"Yours respectfully."

A post card containing this request was received at the Canadian Grocer office and would be complied with readily enough were that possible.

One is curious to know what took the writer's attention just at the critical moment of writing his name. Could it have been an echo of the Victoria Day celebration in Canada? Perhaps the telephone rang, or the wife called, or the baby fell and cut a tooth. Perhaps a street car left the track and killed a customer, or some one asked him to have a drink. Anyway, the disturbance has lost him the pleasure and profit of a sample copy of The Grocer.

MADE THINGS PLEASANT.

N. J. Legge, of Chaput, Fils & Cie., did a great deal towards making the recent visit of the Ontario Legislature and the press to New Ontario a success during the stay at New Liskeard. This town and Haileybury, further south, are progressing more rapidly than any other centres in Eastern Canada and Mr. Legge has developed a splendid connection with the trade there.

DRAWING THE LINE IN TRADE

Witnesses in Case Against Guild Officers Tell How Goods Were Refused Them at Wholesale Rates

(By Staff Correspondent)

The adjourned police court investigation into the charges of conspiracy in restraint of trade, preferred against seven officers of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, was re-opened on May 31 before Magistrate Jelfs at Hamilton. During a day and a half five witnesses were examined. Andrew McLean, of Kingston, and J. H. Curtis, of Port Hope, told how they were refused goods when they could pay cash and buy in large quantities. Both admitted that the retail departments of their businesses were extensive. That was the point Edmund Bristol, for the defence, sought to establish.

Andrew McLean started in business in Kingston fifty odd years ago as a retailer, but for a number of years back had been a wholesaler as well, and it had been his aim to gradually get into the wholesale business on a larger scale, but on account of the difficulty he had had in getting goods, through the guild's influence being brought to bear against him, he said he was restrained in this, although he could always pay cash. He had bought sugar in car lots from Redpath's refinery first in the 60's and continued to do so until 1888, when he was refused. In tobacco his experience had been similar. He once had bought from the manufacturers direct, but there came a time when he could no longer do that. He stated he had never been refused sugar or tobacco until the formation of the Grocers' Guild but after that his difficulties had commenced. Asked by the Crown Attorney if he had ever bought tobacco direct, witness said:

"I always bought direct from Macdonald and other makers."

"Were you eventually refused?"

"Yes, you have a letter there now from Sir William Macdonald stating he could no longer sell me tobacco."

The Crown Attorney read the letter wherein it was stated: "I consider that it is more favorable to the interests of my business as a manufacturer to confine the sale of my goods strictly to the wholesale trade, and think you will see the necessity of this in view of the conditions of trade."

"Were you a wholesaler at that time?"

"I was a rising retailer going into the wholesale business."

"Were your finances good?"

"Yes, I never bought unless I had the money."

"Was there any other reason why the Macdonald Co. should refuse you goods?"

"No. I saw their manager, who told me they were sorry, but in the interests of their business they must refuse to sell to me as they were constantly annoyed by those who did not wish me to get goods."

"Did you see them again?"

"Yes."

"What happened?"

Must Keep the Price.

"They said if I would sell tobacco at the same price as others I could have it."

"Did you get it?"

"Yes, I got it for two years more and was then cut off again. I asked their Kingston agent for a price list, but was refused. After that I did not try to get any more tobacco, but I wrote some personal letters to Sir William Macdonald."

"Did you get any satisfaction?"

"No."

"Did you ever speak to the president personally?"

"Yes. I knew him for years. He said he would like to sell me tobacco but could not as there were sixty against me."

"Sixty what?"

"Sixty wholesalers."

"That settled your tobacco business, did it?"

"No. I saw Sir William again, when he said he would sell me tobacco if I would fix it up with the other fellows."

"What other fellows?"

"The Grocers' Guild and others."

"Let's turn to sugar again. From whom did you buy sugar?"

"From Redpath and others."

"Did there come a time when you were refused?"

"Yes."

"By whom?"

"By Redpath and the St. Lawrence Co. Mr. Labatt, of the St. Lawrence, said 'we are satisfied with your account, but there are sixty others against you to whom we must sell and you are only one. We are trying to make money as well as you.' He told me to see the president of the guild."

"How much sugar could you have bought at that time?"

"From a carload to a train load, and paid cash for it."

"Did you ever attempt to get into the Grocers' Guild?"

"Yes."

"What happened?"

"I could not do it. I was cornered. They found out where I got my supplies and had me cut off."

"How do you know it was the Grocers' Guild prevented you from getting goods?"

"Well, it must have been them, for they would not let me in."

Similar questions were asked about rice. The witness said he was not refused rice, but the price was so high he could not buy it.

Kept Him Down.

"What has been the effect of all this upon your business?" the Crown Attorney asked.

"The effect has been that I have been kept down in trying to become a wholesaler. I am now 74 years of age and still fighting for it. It has kept me from getting to the position I am entitled to. I would have been a wholesaler long before had I not been treated this way."

Letters from the Goldstein Tobacco Co., and the McAlpin Tobacco Co. were also produced as evidence, the substance of which was that on account of objections from other dealers they could not sell him their goods. A letter from the Ontario Sugar Co., of Berlin, said the freight to Kingston would prohibit them from doing business, but intimated that were he a wholesaler they might be open to do business with him.

"Did you tell them you were a wholesaler?"

"Yes, but I did not get the sugar."

Cross-examined by Mr. Bristol, witness said he was a wholesaler and retailer. As he sold to the trade, he was a wholesaler. Mr. Bristol wanted to know if he were not more of a retailer than a wholesaler, but witness maintained he was equally a wholesaler.

"Where did you buy your sugar in 1888?"

"From the refiners."

In those days he had not kept a book, he said, so could not show correspondence with refiners. Asked how he sold tobacco, he said he sold it from two to three cents a pound lower than wholesalers in the guild.

"When you continued to sell at your own price you were refused tobacco?"

"Yes."

"Since 1890 you have had no dealings with the Macdonald Co.?"

"I wrote them, but got no reply."

"Did you see them since you were subpoenaed in this case?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"I didn't want to come here and went down to see if I could get out of coming to court."

"Did the refiners tell you to come here?"

"No."

"Did you sell sugar below the price the refiners set?"

"I don't think so. There was nothing in it anyway."

"Have you any letters from the sugar people in reference to their refusal to sell?"

"I saw them personally."

"Do you recollect what the difficulties were?"

"Mr. Labatt said the wholesalers were not making enough money and had to raise prices. He said there were sixty wholesalers they sold to and I was only one."

"Have you attempted to buy since then?"

"Yes."

"What happened?"

"Mr. Labatt said he would sell me if the guild were broken up."

"When you say you could not buy sugar, do you mean not at the same price that the wholesalers paid, but that you could at the retailer's price?"

"Yes."

"Then so far as sugar and tobacco were concerned you could buy at the same price as the retailers?"

"Yes."

John Curtis was next called to the stand. He was a wholesale and retail grocer. He was not a member of the guild.

"Are you familiar with the equalized rates on sugar?" the Crown Attorney asked.

"Yes."

"How does it operate in Port Hope?"

Mr. Curtis stated that by the equalized rates the freight to Port Hope was 22 cents per hundred on less than car lots and 15 cents for car lots, as against 15 cents and 9 cents, respectively, to Hamilton. Eastern firms, he said, could not buy sugar except from guild members. If they could, they could have it hauled by the Grand Trunk for 17 cents for less than car lots, and 10 cents for car lots, whereas, through the guild it costs 22 and 15 cents.

"Why do you not get it by the G. T. R.?"

"I could not buy the sugar."

"Why?"

"The guild controls the sale of it."

"Did you ever try to buy it?"

"Yes. I wanted to buy in large quantities for cash, but was refused as I did not belong to the guild."

Equalized Rates System.

"Does the equalized rate affect all points east of Toronto?"

"Yes."

"Do I understand," asked Mr. Bristol, "that if we were in the Grocers' Guild we could get sugar in Hamilton here at a cheaper rate than you in Port Hope can?"

"If you were in the guild you could get it here for four cents."

"Are you sure that is right?"

"Yes. The guild price is 9 cents here for car lots and off that there is 5 cents which brings it to 4 cents."

"What would the same car going to Port Hope cost?"

"Twenty-two cents less 7 cents."

"How does this affect you in Port Hope?"

"I cannot compete against this rate at all."

What effect does it have on prices?"

"It keeps them above what they should be."

"How long have you been in the business?"

"About 20 years."

"Did you ever buy sugar from the refiners?"

"No."

"Did you ever apply?"

"Yes, but their answer was, 'Do you belong to the guild? If not, we cannot sell you.'"

"Did they make any distinction between a wholesaler and a retailer?"

"No, they simply refused to sell me."

"Have you tried them more than once?"

"Yes. I was importing sugar from New York. The refiners sent me samples and I thought perhaps they would sell me, but when I asked them they would not."

"Did you have any trouble with tobacco?"

"When the Empire Tobacco Co. commenced manufacturing, they sold direct to retailers. After awhile I was cut off. I asked why this was and was told they were selling through the guild."

Salt and Starch.

"Were there any other goods you were refused?"

"Yes. Salt and starch."

"Did you get a letter from the Edwardsburg Starch Co. saying that, owing to recent arrangements made, they were unable to ship direct, and were you asked what wholesale house you would prefer to do business with?"

"Yes."

"What did you do about it?"

"I simply had to buck it."

"Had you been in the habit of buying starch direct?"

"Yes."

"Have you been able to do so since?"

"No."

"How about salt?"

"I got a commission of 7 1-2 per cent. for jobbing it, but after the guild was formed they cut off my commission and I had to pay the retail price."

"Did you ever apply for membership to the guild?"

"Yes. When I found that goods were going to cost me so much I called on Perkins, Ince & Co. They sent me to the Board of Trade building, and there I saw the secretary, who sent me to Col. Davidson. When I saw Col. Davidson, he said there was no chance of my getting in."

Blames the Railways.

Mr. Bristol then cross-examined the witness, and in referring to the equalized rates, said: "You have compared east of Toronto rates with west of Toronto rates, but are the conditions of competition not different between the railway companies?" Mr. Bristol's contention was that the difference between freight rates east and west of Toronto was not brought about by the guild, but by the railway companies.

"Were you ever asked if you belonged to the guild?"

"Yes. When I wanted to buy sugar."

By Crown Attorney:

"Was there ever a time when you could not pay cash?"

"No. I always paid cash."

Alfred Powis was called and he stated he was a broker representing, among other companies, the Macdonald Tobacco Co. and the Pacific Selling Co. Asked if he sold to any outside the guild, he said he made no distinction that way.

"Do you canvass those outside the Grocers' Guild?"

"No."

"Why do you only canvass members of the guild?"

"Because my business is with the wholesalers."

"Will you not sell to anyone who will buy?"

"I have never had any instructions to that effect."

"I did not ask you that. Why do you confine your business to the wholesale trade?"

"It has been my practice for 25 or 30 years."

"If Dan Peace here, came in and gave you a large order for tobacco, would you fill it?"

"I would submit it to the house."

"Why?"

"Because he is not a customer."

"Is it not because the Macdonald Co. would not fill the order?"

"Macdonalds sell only to their own customers."

"Are they all members of the guild?"

"I don't know. They do not sell to retailers. It would cause trouble if they sold to a wholesaler and then turned around and sold to his customers also."

"Are you agent for the Acadia sugar refinery?"

"Yes."

"Have you any letters from the Macdonald Co. refusing to sell to those who have given you orders?"

"I may have."

Has no Instructions.

"Have you any instructions from the Acadia sugar people about whom to sell to?"

"No."

"Do you sell to anyone outside the guild?"

"Yes. The Canadian Canners."

"Oh! They are in the conspiracy, too."

"You sell to members of the guild and to manufacturers; do you sell to retailers?"

"No."

"Ever been asked?"

"Yes."

"And you refused?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"They would not have been filled."

"Have you any instructions not to sell to retailers?"

"No; that is understood."

"Were you instructed to sell only to members of the sugar agreement?"

"I don't think I had any instructions in the matter."

"Had you not instructions not to sell to the Grocers' Wholesale Co., of Hamilton?"

"I don't think so."

"Did Mr. Zealand apply to you to buy sugar?"

"I don't think he ever submitted an order."

"Well, what happened between you and Mr. Zealand?"

"Mr. Zealand suggested that we write to the refinery and ask if his order would be accepted."

"What was the result? Did they say they would not fill the order?"

"The reply did not encourage taking his order."

"As a result you did not ask for Mr. Zealand's order?"

"No."

"Would you take his order?"

"I would submit it to the house."

"What does the Pacific Selling Co. sell?"

"Salmon, among other things."

"Did you sell a quantity to the Grocers' Wholesale Co. in 1904?"

"Yes."

"Was their business satisfactory?"

"Yes."

"Why did you refuse to sell them later?"

"I was so instructed."

"By whom?"

"By the Pacific Selling Co."

Letters were produced which passed between the Pacific Selling Co., Mr. Powis and the Grocers' Wholesale Co., the substance of which was that the Grocers' Wholesale Co. could not buy on account of objections made by other concerns.

"You had instructions to write as you did?" asked the Crown.

"Yes."

"Has Mr. Zealand tried since to do business with you?"

"Not since."

"Did any member of the guild committee see you about this?"

"No."

Would Follow Montreal.

Mr. Powis was then asked to look up any other letters that had a bearing on the case, and bring them after lunch. On taking the stand again he brought with him his letter book and some letters. One letter from the Pacific Selling Co. to Mr. Powis said if the Montreal men were willing to put the Grocers' Wholesale Co. on their list, they, the Pacific Selling Co., would also do so.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bristol, witness said he had never sold to retailers.

"Do you know anything about the wholesale trade complaining that the Pacific Selling Co. were selling direct?"

"No. They did not sell to retailers that I am aware of."

"Were your instructions to sell to wholesalers only?"

"I had no instructions to that effect, but I simply sell to wholesalers."

"Do you make distinctions?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"If we were to sell wholesalers and then turn around and sell to their customers it would make things disagreeable."

Another Day.

The court then adjourned until Friday morning, when W. J. Graham, a canner from near Owen Sound, was called. When Mr. Graham was put in the box, Mr. Bristol asked leave to make an explanation. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., he said, was unexpectedly detained from attending the investigation. Crown Attorney Washington was opening up an entirely new phase of the prosecution. It was touching on the canners' combine, and was going into an important and large question. The investigation had a wide significance, for if the Dominion Wholesalers' Guild were guilty, then there was not a banker or any other business man in Canada who was not equally guilty of restraining trade and enhancing prices. The effect of such a finding would be injurious to commerce. In view of Mr. Johnston's absence he asked for an enlargement at the close of the session.

Troubles of a Canner.

To the Crown Attorney, W. H. Graham said he had started business in 1901, his pack consisting of fruits, tomatoes and peas. He was at one time able to sell his stock in the open market, but there came a time when he was unable to do this, when those he called upon were bound by an agreement with the Canadian Canners not to buy from him. Asked what firms refused to buy from him, he named Eby, Blain Co., Perkins, Ince & Co. and others. Regarding the nature of the refusal, witness said he spoke with Mr. Eby, jr., the substance of the conversation being that they were sorry they could not buy his goods on account of his pack being limited, and that they could buy to better advantage by dealing with the Canadian Canners from whom they could get a complete range. Also that they had to buy all their goods this way or lose a discount of 10 per cent. Perkins, Ince & Co. told witness they were tied up so that they could not buy from him. He also had conversation with McLaughlin & Sons, of Owen Sound, along the same lines. They said they must abide by their agreement, and could not buy from him.

"Did you have any difficulty in selling since 1903?"

"Yes. My market has been limited."

"What was the effect of these refusals to buy from you?"

"The effect has been that I have had to confine my business to retailers and my business has been restricted.'

"What are your prospects now?"

"They are not very encouraging, and we have had to reduce our pack. Our 1905 pack we sold at cost."

Would not Sell Retailers.

J. M. Gwin, representing the Hornbury Oatmeal Co., of Buffalo, cereal manufacturers, was the next witness.

"Have you any agreement with the price committee of the Grocers' Guild?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"I do not know of any such committee and have no agreement with the guild."

"Did you see Mr. Beckett about prices?"

"Not any more than anyone else. Our people have insisted upon maintaining prices on all our goods in the interests of peace and harmony. We sell only to wholesalers who guarantee that the retail price will be maintained. That is the only agreement we have, and that is the agreement we have with everyone with whom we do business. I have talked that to everyone, not only to Mr. Beckett. That is my business."

"Do you sell to the retail trade?"

"No. We take their orders through the wholesalers and do not bill them."

"Then I could not buy your goods?"

"No, sir."

"Is there any agreement with the wholesalers to fix prices?"

"We insist upon them maintaining prices."

Considerable questioning along this line was done by the Crown Attorney, but the witness maintained that they had no special agreement. They had only their general agreement with all with whom they did business, not to sell below the regular price.

The question of not selling goods to W. H. Merriman & Co., St. Catharines, came up, but the witness said that in some places they sold only to one firm, and they reserved the right to say to whom they would sell.

"Did any person request you not to sell to Merriman?"

"No."

"Did Mr. Beckett see you about Merriman?"

"No."

"Did anyone ask you not to sell to them?"

"Yes. Mr. Parnell, of Ross & Parnell."

"Did you ever fill an order from the Grocers' Wholesale Co., of Hamilton?"

"No."

"Will you sell them goods?"

"No."

"Why?"

"I understand they are a combination of retail grocers and we will not sell to retailers."

Heard They Were Retailers.

"Did any person in Hamilton tell you not to do business with the Grocers' Wholesale Co.?"

"They asked me if I would sell to them; they did not tell me not to. I was informed that the Grocers' Wholesale Co. were a combination of retailers. Several houses to whom I sold goods told me this and upon information which I got to this effect I refused orders from the Grocers' Wholesale Co."

"Did Mr. Beckett tell you that if you did business with the Grocers' Wholesale Co. you could not do business with the wholesale grocers here?"

"No."

The point the Crown wished to establish was that by agreement with the guild he was unable to sell to the Grocers' Wholesale Co., or any other company out of the guild, but the witness held that his only reason for refusing to sell to some firms was that they would not sell to retailers direct, either individually or collectively.

Mr. Bristol moved for an adjournment until June 25, owing to the importance of the case and the necessity for E. F. B. Johnston being present. Crown Attorney Washington was averse to further postponement, but it was agreed that all parties should be ready to go on with the case by the 25th inst., and the court adjourned.

QUEBEC GROCERS IN CONVENTION

Desire More Latitude for Trade Organization—Favor the Price Contract Plan

In connection with the Montreal Pure Food Fair, there was held the first annual convention of the grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association of the Province of Quebec. Four sessions were held beginning May 23 in the rooms of the Retail Grocers' Association, 270 St. Catherine street east. P. Daoust, president, was in the chair and extended a welcome to the visiting grocers on behalf of the Montreal trade. J. A. Beaudry, secretary of the association, also welcomed the delegates and spoke of the work mapped out for them. Messrs. Carignan, Trempe and Chevalier, of Three Rivers, Sorel and Joliette, made replies.

Mr. Moyer, of Toronto, who was present, was asked to address the meeting. Referring to a convention he had attended in the States some time ago, he spoke of the unanimity of purpose of the eight hundred grocers in attendance. All were working for the general good. There were no selfish aims. Grocers' associations in Canada were now working in the same manner and were at every meeting discussing with benefit to the members, questions of great interest. Mr. Moyer spoke of the necessity of the the retail grocery store to the public, and of the dependence of the retail merchant upon the jobber and of the jobber's dependence upon the manufacturer. The three should work together, he continued, for the common good.

Better Understanding.

At the recent guild meeting of the wholesale grocery trade the retailers had explained how they were trying to work in unison with the wholesalers, and a better understanding now existed. It was to be hoped that this state of affairs would continue and improve. At present there was a law rendering it illegal for retailers to make an agreement with a wholesaler as to prices. This law should be amended. Mention was made of the benefits of the contract plan. Mr. Moyer closed his address with a reference to the relief experienced by the trade through the wiping out of the trading stamp nuisance.

Officers were elected as follows: President, P. Daoust; vice-presidents, J. A. Chabot, J. G. Chevalier; treasurer, U. Carignan; secretary, J. A. Beaudry.

Resolutions Carried.

The following resolutions were adopted after being favorably reported upon by a committee composed of the newly-elected officers:

Favoring an amendment of the criminal code to permit retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers to enter into price contracts.

Against handling goods which manufacturers persist in selling to price cutters.

In favor of the appointment of municipal fruit inspectors to operate under the direction of officers of the Dominion Fruit Inspection Act.

In favor of trade organization as follows:

"That it is the opinion of this meeting that the selling of merchandise, either wholesale or retail, is one of the most important features of commerce, and we believe that through lack of proper organization in the past, trade has become so degenerated and confused that it is difficult to do business legitimately; and to improve this unfortunate condition of affairs we believe that it is in the best interests of the trade and commerce in Canada, as well as in he best interests of the consuming public, to have a standing committee of three or more members appointed by the manufacturers, wholesalers and the retailers so that they may consult together and endeavor to enter into fair agreements among themselves as to what would bring about the best results to remedy present conditions both for themselves as well as for the general public, and recognizing this, we hereby appoint Messrs. P. Daoust, L. O. D'Argencourt and J. A. Beaudry a standing committee with power to confer with the manufacturers, the wholesalers, and the producers on all matters pertaining to trade improvements."

Favoring the price contract plan of handling goods.

Favoring the principle of the one-price system.

Two other resolutions were discussed relating to the injury to the retail trade by wholesale houses selling to hotels, etc. They were reported against by the committee and were finally laid on the table.

Wholesalers Did Not Attend.

In the afternoon a meeting was held in the Victoria Rink. Originally it was intended that the association should meet and confer with a delegation of wholesalers, but the latter were prevented from being present through unforeseen circumstances.

A. McGill, of the Dominion Inland Revenue Department, Ottawa, then gave a lecture, a more detailed report of which will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. McGill was to have given another lecture, but it was impossible to arrange it to suit the convenience of the grocers, who were kept very busy on account of the two feast days which occurred that week. After a final visit to the fair in the evening, the grocers left for their homes. Among those present were: J. G. Chevalier, Joliette; U. Carignan, Three Rivers; J. L. Durand, Three Rivers; M. Moyer, Toronto; A. C. Trempe, Sorel; J. A. Chabot, Quebec; P. C. Lemoine, Sorel; Thos. Pleau, J. A. Labonte, A. Bergeron, N. Chartrand, J. A. Maynard, P. Daoust, Montreal.

A MILLION NEARLY LOST.

Steamer Wacondah Causes Trouble—Freights and Charters.

From reports received, the shipping business during the past week has been better than for some little time back. Good loads have been shipped to various destinations and the export trade generally is in a healthy condition.

There seems to be a better shipping business in butter and cheese also, although export lots in either are not very numerous. Meats are moving but fairly well. The scarcity of hogs curtails the export shipments.

A good business is being done in flour and several large shipments have been made to England and Scotland. South Africa is also a point of destination for flour cargoes.

One day last week the small steamer Garnet, loaded with butter and cheese bound for Ottawa River ports, ran into the bridge over the Lachine Canal at Shearer street, Montreal. Very little damage was done to the vessel and the cargo was not injured. Shortly afterwards the boat moored in Montreal.

Allan liner Sicilian cleared for Glasgow on May 28, carrying a general cargo.

Ionian, of the same line, cleared on May 31 with a general cargo, including wheat and foodstuffs, bound for Liverpool.

On the same day the Lakonia, of the Donaldson line, left for Glasgow with cattle and a general cargo.

On a trip to Quebec the R. & O. steamer Montreal broke her steam stearing gear. The damage was not great.

The Nyassa, with a cargo of sugar from the West Indies for the St. Lawrence sugar refinery, came into port May 30.

The ocean record between Moville and Rimouski was broken by the Allan liner Virginian, which arrived at Rimouski May 31. She made the fastest passage in the history of the St. Lawrence route, the time being five days, twenty hours and forty minutes. This is eight hours better time than the previous record, which was held by the same boat. The Virginian arrived in Montreal on the afternoon of June 1.

A very serious shipping disaster was narrowly averted in Montreal the afternoon of May 31. Lock No. 2 of the Lachine Canal was carried away by the grain steamer Wacondah, which entered the lock from the harbor. It was the intention of this boat to continue up stream, but she was under such headway that she carried away the upper gates. The water began to rush out and the force of such a volume drew up by suction a stop gate lying at the bottom of the canal, just in front of the lock. This shut off the water and prevented a loss to the shipping trade which is estimated at one million dollars. The Wacondah was not much damaged. The injury to the canal will not amount to more than a couple of thousand dollars.

VETERAN TRAVELER PASSES.

N. H. Geary, of Ewing & Sons, Montreal, After Long Illness.

Travelers are but human, and the grim reaper's relentless scythe mows down "the boys" as regardlessly as it does the employers. Last week the sickle fell on a Montreal traveler, and N. H. Geary joined the majority.

The Late N. H. Geary.

The late Mr. Geary was one of the old school of salesmen, conscientious, hard-working, a six-day-a-week traveler, who made his employers' interests his own, and whose uniform kindness, courtesy and fine manner made him a welcome visitor with his customers. An unkind and disparaging word of a competitor is not on record against him, and he had only time to do his own business. For over twenty-five years he was connected with the firm of S. H. Ewing & Sons and the interests associated with the changes in that company, and during all that time his employers found him trustworthy, faithful and conscientiously scrupulous in all his work. As a member of the company expressed himself to The Grocer:

"Mr. Geary was always a true gentleman and an admirable character in every way and during his long connection with our house gave the most faithful services possible. I cannot voice adequately the regret we felt when illness compelled him to leave the road."

Some twenty months ago Mr. Geary was forced through an attack of Bright's disease to quit traveling, and it speaks highly of the firm's appreciation of his services to record that his pay went on just the same. The territory covered by the late Mr. Geary was the Province of Quebec, with occasional trips through Ontario as far as Toronto. Of French-Irish descent, he was conversant with both English and French.

The funeral, which took place on Friday, June 1, was held from St. Jacques Church, St. Denis street, to Cote des Neiges Cemetery, and was largely attended. Mr. Geary was one of the oldest members of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association and of the Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society.

ZIL COMPANY IN LIQUIDATION.

Judge Curran, of the Superior Court, Montreal, has issued a winding-up order for the placing in liquidation of the Zil Company of Canada. Liabilities are estimated at $1,000. This firm has been carrying on business as a soap manufacturing house. Samuel Duncan, manager of the company, demanded the winding-up order. He declared the firm was insolvent and consequently unable to pay its debts. In his petition he also requested that the proceedings taken against the company by Cannac Marquis, who obtained from the court an order to seize the goods and chattels of the company as security for a debt, be suspended, which was granted. It was also asked that the proceedings taken by one Guertin, who had taken action to obtain $197, be suspended, which request was granted.

TO AID SPRING HORSE SHOWS.

At the recent session of the Ontario Legislature, special votes were made in the interest of horse breeding. Minister Monteith has decided that $1,000 of the money voted shall be set aside to assist Spring stallion shows.

Detailed rules governing the distribution of the grant will be sent upon application. The grants will be divided immediately after June 15.

JOINT REVELRY.

Brantford and Hamilton grocers and butchers are arranging for their annual joint picnic at Niagara Falls. The Dufferin Rifles' band has been secured.

GLUCOSE AS A FOODSTUFF

The Chemist's Exactness — Corn Sugar held to be Wholesome by Experts Who Should Know.

When a chemist says an article is adulterated he may or may not mean what ordinarily the word would be intended to convey. Chemists are very exact people. The hundredth part of a hair's breadth may upset their whole calculation; and so they acquire a habit of mind which is not appreciated by ordinary mortals who read as they run.

For instance, a chemist takes down his dictionary and finds the definition for jam, old-fashioned, kitchen-made jam, "a conserve of fruits boiled with sugar and water." To the exact mind of the chemist, anything outside the narrow limits of that definition is either not jam or is adulterated.

Is that quite fair in this age of progress, progress even in the meaning of words? This may begin to look like an agrument. It is merely a warning against giving the free and easy, popular interpretation to the exact and closely defined statements of chemists, especially in the matter of adulteration. The popular idea of adulteration is the inclusion of some harmful or nasty ingredient; the chemist's idea is the inclusion of anything not named in the definition.

Most Misunderstood.

Probably the greatest sufferer from this free exchange of popular and chemical concepts is glucose, or corn sugar.

Glucose derives its name from "glukus," a Greek word meaning sweet. It is a liquid substance obtained from corn, sometimes called "cereal syrup," which in solid state is known as grape sugar, or "cereal sugar." In Europe it is chiefly made from potato starch. Men noted nature's process of changing the starch stored in the cells of plants into different forms of sugar. In the case of cane sugar (sucrose) they knew that the plant absorbs carbonic acid from the air; other acids from the soil; and by the aid of the sun's heat a chemical process is evolved that puts into the sugar plant sucrose or cane sugar, and into fruits and vegetables, fruit sugar, which is found more plentifully in the grape than in any other fruit.

The Chemist an Imitator.

"The chemist seeks to obtain sugar from starch by a somewhat analogous process and one similar to that carried on in the human system during the process of digestion when starch is changed into sugar. Cane sugar and fruit sugar as they exist in cane and fruits are natural products, but whether nature's order of combining the various articles composing the fruit sugar as found in fruits is the same order as the order of combination followed by the chemist in making sugar from starch is a puzzling and debatable question.

A Little More Water.

In the laboratory of nature the starch or gum ($C_6 H_{10} O_5$) which is formed in the plant is treated by carbonic acid taken from the air and by other acids absorbed from the soil and carried into the plant by the sap, and through the action of light and heat is changed into cane sugar (sucrose) $C_{12} H_{22} O_{11}$.

Art or chemistry takes starch from corn (maize), treats it with hydrochloric or other acid which is neutralized or removed by alkali, the resultant product being glucose $C_6 H_{12} O_6$, differing in its constituent elements from cane sugar in that it contains one more equivalent of water. If to $C_{12} H_{22} O_{11}$ (cane sugar) is added $H_2 O$ one equivalent of water, it becomes $C_{12} H_{24} O_{12}$, equal to twice $C_6 H_{12} O_6$, which is glucose.

"It remains," said a prominent manufacturer of glucose, "for some one to discover means for eliminating from glucose the one equivalent of water; and, that found, chemistry can make from starch an article the chemical formula for which is exactly like that of cane sugar. And somebody will some day stumble over the method."

About Its Wholesomeness.

As to the wholesomeness of glucose, Government Analyst A. McGill vouched for it in his address before the grocers in convention in Montreal, reported in another column. It was declared wholesome by the U. S. Government experts as far back as 1884 and their statement then could, because of improvements in the method of manufacture, be made with much more emphasis now. They said:

"The starch sugar thus made and sent into commerce is of exceptional purity and uniformity of composition and contains no injurious substance. Though at best having only about two-thirds the sweeting power of cane sugar, yet starch sugar is in no way inferior to cane sugar in healthfulness, there being no evidence before the committee that maize starch sugar, either in its normal condition or fermented, has any deleterious effect upon the system even when taken in large quantities."

Another Expert.

Dr. Wiley, chief chemist of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said to a Senate committee. "I have had occasion to make careful examinations of almost every variety of food that has ever been exposed upon our markets for sale. In my opinion glucose is not deleterious to health. It is wholesome, somewhat sweet, readily digested. I have always found, from the time I first begun to investigate food products, that the series of foods known as glucose or grape sugar, when properly made, are valuable food material and not injurious."

The production of glucose in the United States alone is over 200,000,000 lbs. a year.

PELEG HOWLAND DOUBTFUL.

Talks of Board of Trade and City Council Co-operation.

The suggestion of joint conferences of members of boards of trade and civic representatives to discuss matters of commercial and municipal importance, dealt with in two former issues, is meeting generally with approval. The Toronto Board of Trade is evidencing a revival of interest in municipal affairs, and its work reflects credit on its executive, and particularly on the president, Peleg Howland, who has given more than usual energy and time to it.

As to the advisability of forming a permanent joint committee composed of members of the Toronto Board of Trade and the city council, Mr. Howland when seen by a Canadian Grocer representative did not care to commit himself to an approval of the idea until it had been shown to be practical.

"The question in my mind," said Mr. Howland, "is, what virtue would there be in such a committee if it had no executive power? We already have an arrangement whereby we confer with the city council and offer and receive suggestions on such matters as the proposed Yonge street bridge, the city sewerage and other questions, but I hardly see that a permanent committee would make any difference in dealing with them. I am thoroughly in accord, however, with every movement that will bring representative bodies together on public issues affecting the general welfare of our city. Personally I am in favor of a continuance of our present plan of working independently, but conferring from time to time as necessity requires. We are not elected by the ratepayers, and therefore have no legislative power, except of course indirectly, where we have representatives on the harbor commission and other boards, and I am not sure that a joint committee could do any more than is at present done as a result of our conferences. However, the board of trade is always ready to lend itself to any movement that will help along our city's growth and prosperity."

BOARDS OF TRADE AND CIVICS.

President Peleg Howland, of the Toronto Board of Trade, in an interview with a Canadian Grocer reporter which appears elsewhere in this issue, while endorsing the idea of board of trade activity in municipal affairs, rather doubts the advisability of the Halifax plan, a joint committee of council and the board with the mayor as chairman. Mr. Howland may be right. The thing is to bring the aggregate business wisdom and acumen as represented by the boards of trade to bear upon municipal affairs.

The Halifax plan has the advantage of being systematic and there's a good deal to be said for pegging away at it. The revival of civic interest in the Toronto board is very gratifying, but during the past ten years the board has not much to its credit municipally. A standing committee avoids the necessity for someone exerting himself to bring the matter up every time a new municipal question comes to the front, or, what oftener happens, an old one is revived.

BRITAIN THE INVESTOR.

"A most tenacious superstition" is the descriptive synonym of the New York Journal of Commerce for "the balance of trade delusion." It was stirred to this pitch of literary indignation by a U. S. Government statistical bulletin pointing out that while Great Britain's average monthly exports were $143,574,000 and imports $241,330,000, the United States exports were $147,208,000 and imports $101,506,000. The inference was a scream from the stripe-panted eagle because of the U. S. preferred position on the "balance of trade" theory. How does it happen, the Journal asks, that Great Britain is not impoverished by having to pay for imports nearly a hundred million dollars a month in something other than exports? How does Great Britain hold the first financial position among the nations and draw gold to herself whenever she needs it? What makes London still the commercial clearing house of the world?

These are posers for which the Journal has one answer, which is that Great Britain's excess of imports over exports represents the proceeds of British capital an enterprise abroad. The answer is exemplified thus:

"The British are mining in Africa and South America; they are practically by their investments operating plantations, mills and transportation systems in various parts of the world; they are building and constructing for others; they are carrying merchandise over seas, insuring cargoes and other property, and conducting banking and exchange the world over, besides loaning to all borrowers with good credit and some without it. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, while not making the best use of its own resources on account of considerable monopolizing of land, is gathering tribute by its capital and energy and its business skill from the ends of the earth, and bringing treasures home by peaceful commerce. Thereby it is enriching the nation and not impoverishing it, adding to its prosperity a measure that could not be derived from its own soil and its home industries."

THE PORK PACKER.

Upton Sinclair wrote a novel portraying the horrors of the Chicago packing houses. President Roosevelt said to himself, "This man's a muck-raker" and sent a commission from the Bureau of Animal Industry to investigate. The report made him want to know more and he sent Chas. P. Neill, of another department of the service, and J. B. Reynolds, of New York, two expert investigators, to get the facts. Their report set the heather afire. Senator Beveridge introduced an act to provide for inspection from the hoof to the can. The packers got busy and were warned that if they didn't keep away the official investigators the report would be published. On the other hand there came a demand for the report on the ground that it was even more important to arouse the people than to secure legislation. The report came on Monday and it looks as if both objects would be attained.

Of a surety the British consumer is roused. One naturally says, this is the Canadian packer's chance. The trouble is, the Canadian packer can't supply the present British demand for his product. The hogs are not to be had. But the Canadian product should benefit by securing a much better relative position in regard to the American product on the English market. A visit to the largest packing house in the country convinced The Canadian Grocer representative that Chicago methods are not followed here. The packing house, while not a model or the realization of an ideal, is sanitary; consideration is shown for the comfort and welfare of the employes, and success is based on the excellence of the product.

At present the Government's only part in the industry is to educate the farmer to raise better hogs. Is that a safe position? In the interest of the farmer, the honest and ambitious packer and the consumer, shouldn't the Government exercise strict supervision? It is a question. The American supervision, instituted as an escape from the Spanish-American war "embalmed beef" scandal, has proven but a cloak for worse evils. Is it wiser to let the industry succeed upon its merits? Considering all conditions, efficient Government supervision would probably be the better course.

THE SAME OLD STORY.

The annual question of the adulteration of maple syrup and sugar is again before the public. In Parliament the other day Mr. Boyer, member for Vaudreuil, moved that energetic measures be taken at once to prevent the adulteration of maple syrup and sugar which is now being carried on to such a large extent, to the detriment of farmers who produce the natural syrup.

This is a timely motion and it is to be hoped that something will be done at once to enforce the law in this regard. For years the public have borne with the adulterated products, almost without complaint, and in consequence, those engaged in the manufacture of the spurious article are becoming bolder and bolder each season. If this adulteration continues, the day of the pure maple syrup and sugar will soon be over. Indeed, the pure products are almost things of the past now. Mr. Boyer declares that not more than nineteen per cent. of the maple syrup on the market to-day is the pure, unadulterated product. In this respect we are but little better than the republic to the south of us, where only ten per cent. of the syrup offered for sale is pure.

But surely, when the facilities for the production of pure maple products of both countries are compared, it will be apparent at once that Canada should be able to show a greater quantity of pure maple syrup. This will never be, however, until the Government takes steps to make more effective the law for the prevention of the adulteration of maple syrup and sugar. As it is, the concoctions adulterated by glucose and white cane sugar and flavored with common extracts and hickory bark, are put on the market at prices with which the producer of the pure article cannot possibly compete.

It is in the interest of every grocer, of every citizen, to have this adulteration stopped. The grocer will suffer through loss of trade in maple products, for eventually the public will refuse to be imposed upon. It is to be hoped that the Government will attend to this matter immediately ; if something is not at once done, the fast fading reputation which Canada at one time possessed for the production of pure maple products will soon be a thing of the past, and one of the finest industries open for development will be killed, for certain it is that if the manufacturers of impure goods are allowed to go on unmolested much longer, it will be next to an impossibility to revive trade in pure maple syrup and sugar.

LET THE FARMER TRY.

Because of the high and advancing prices on pork products in the English markets the Manchester, Salford and District Grocers' Guild has issued a circular announcing the necessity for an additional advance and urging consumers to meet the situation by lessening consumption. The Canadian farmer could do a great deal better for them than that by raising more hogs and increasing the supply.

TEA OF THE EMPIRE.

The world's consumption of British-grown tea last year was less by eleven million pounds than production. These figures show the export from countries of production and the total consumption :

	Export	Consump'on
1900	334,113,050	314,097,698
1901	327,138,679	334,662,954
1902	329,112,682	342,005,070
1903	354,488,547	349,454,004
1904	371,532,245	366,787,360
1905	381,918,106	370,800,597

In 1900 there was a surplus of 20 million pounds. During the next two years there were deficits of seven and twelve million pounds each. In 1903-04 and last year there were surpluses of five, four and eleven million pounds, respectively.

An interesting detail of the figures, which are supplied by Gow, Wilson & Stanton, London, is that while the importations to London increased slightly the direct shipments to foreign countries increased markedly. Allowing a million pounds for ship's stores, these are the figures :

	United Kingdom	Other Countries
1900	230,495,035	82,702,663
1901	238,875,254	94,877,700
1902	234,268,715	106,736,355
1903	229,273,614	119,180,390
1904	234,503,103	131,284,257
1905	239,916,347	129,884,250

WESTERN BOARD OF TRADE CONVENTION.

All the indications point to a very successful convention when the representative business men of the west meet in Edmonton on the 13th and 14th of the month at the sessions of the Western business men's parliament, the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada. While this organization is confined in its membership to the boards of trade of the two Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, representatives of leading boards of trade in Manitoba and British Columbia are invited to attend, thus making the gathering representative of the business interests of all Western Canada. One or two representatives of the Winnipeg Board of Trade will attend the convention.

This is the third convention of the Western Boards of Trade, the organization dating its existence from a meeting in Calgary in 1904. The convention in Regina last year was largely attended and its resolutions carried great weight because of its personnel and the serious fashion in which western business problems were discussed. This year all resolutions have to be in the hands of the secretary some time in advance of the convention and all delegates are being notified of the subjects to be discussed.

Realizing the importance of this gathering of western business men, this paper purposes publishing, as last year, a full report of the discussions and of the resolutions adopted.

THE WORCESTER SAUCE CASE.

As the article in last week's Grocer is liable to misinterpretation the trade should note that the courts held that Holbrook's Limited were entitled to use the words "Holbrook's Genuine Worcestershire Sauce."

NO SCANDAL IN CANADA

Brief Comparison of Packing House Conditions in Chicago and Here

Are Chicago packing house methods and conditions duplicated or even approached in Canada? Since the nauseating disclosures were made under the strenuous auspices of President Roosevelt, there has not been time to prosecute a thorough investigation, but the representative of the Canadian Grocer spent four hours on Tuesday inspecting the Toronto packing house of the Wm. Davies Co., the largest producers of hog products in the British Empire. If that packing house could be turned inside out and exhibited to the view of the United Kingdom it would be the best possible assurance to the British consumers that American uncleanness is foreign to the Canadian packing business. That can't be done here, and for the present some comparisons must suffice.

The charges against the American industry fall under three heads—the corruption and inefficiency of Government inspection, the unsanitary condition of the pacving houses and degradation of employes, and the use of putrid meat in the canned goods and prepared meat department.

The Official Statement.

The partial report by the President's commissioners sent to congress on Monday, deals principally with the second indictment. Following is a brief summary of the findings of Messrs. Reynolds and Neill:

"The yards are mostly paved with brick, laid with deep grooves between, which inevitably fill with manure and refuse. Such pavement cannot be properly cleaned and is slimy and malodorous when wet, yielding clouds of ill-smelling dust when dry.

"The interior of most buildings is of wood, and where water is used freely the floors are soaked and slimy.

"Workrooms are poorly lighted, in most of them artificial light being always needed. Many inside rooms where food is prepared are without windows, and may be described as vaults.

"Systematic ventilation was not found anywhere. In a few cases electric fans were used, but usually the workers toil without relief in a humid atmosphere heavy with the odors of rotten wood, decayed meats, stinking offal and entrails.

The Work Tables.

"The work tables upon which meat is handled, meat racks and meat conveyors, are of wood, in nearly all cases inadequately cleaned, and grease and meat scraps were found adhering to them, even after being washed and returned to service.

"Sanitary conveniences for both men and women are made by cutting off a section of the workroom by a thin wooden partition, rising to within a few feet of the ceiling, usually without proper ventilation. These rooms are sometimes used as cloak rooms, and often lunch rooms similarly constructed adjoin the privies.

"The worst feature of all was the frequent absence of washing sinks, soap, towels and toilet paper.

"New buildings have the same defects as old ones.

"The handling of meats for prepared food products is filthy and apparently without any pretentions to cleanliness. The men's clothes and aprons are unspeakably dirty, and no attempt is made to keep the meat from contact with them.

"Old canned meats are heated to liven them up and re-labeled, labels bearing the statement that the contents have been 'Government inspected.'

"The unsanitary conditions in which the laborers work and the feverish pace which they are forced to maintain inevitably affect their health. Physicians state that tuberculosis is disproportionately prevalent in the stock yards, and the victims of this disease expectorate on the spongy wooden floors of the dark workrooms, from which falling scraps of meat are later shoveled up to be converted into food products.

"Toilet rooms open directly into workrooms, and those for men and women frequently adjoin.

"Rest rooms for women were rare exceptions.

"No meal time provision is made for the men. In Summer their lunches are eaten on the street; in Winter or bad weather in the workrooms.

"The neglect on the part of their employers to recognize or provide for the requirements of cleanliness and decency of the employes must have an influence that cannot be exaggerated in lowering the morals and discouraging cleanliness on the part of the workers employed in the packing houses."

The Canadian Factory.

Consider now the Canadian packing house visited by the representative of The Canadian Grocer. The condition of the plant and treatment of employes stand out in the most vivid contrast to the above recital of wrongs. Following the same order, the yards are constructed of wood, with wooden floors and roofed and well drained. After a pen is emptied it is always cleaned before it is re-filled.

The interior of the packing house is fitted with wood, but every department is cleaned after the day's work, and at least once a week there is a thorough going over. The killing pen is floored and walled with concrete, and after each day's work a few minutes' hosing removes all marks of the slaughter.

Ventilated and Lighted.

Every workroom in the building is thoroughly ventilated, and all except the curing cellars and some of the cold storage rooms and pantries, are well lighted by windows. The apartment where the killing and dressing go on is not an appetizing place, but it is very light and airy. No one could slip into the grease and lard tanks because they are covered, having a hole just large enough to admit material.

The adjoining room where the hogs tarry for a natural cooling and sorting and cutting is done, is a very large, bright and airy apartment, with clean sawdust on the floors and whitewashed upperworks. In cleanliness it would compare favorably with the best butcher shops in the city.

The meat tables and carriers in the primary stages are of wood, but thoroughly scoured. In the sausage and pie rooms the tables are marble topped.

Treatment of Employes.

The two systems contrast even more strongly in regard to the treatment of employes. At the Toronto plant there has been erected, solely for the use of the men, a large three-storey brick building. On the ground floor are bicycle racks and modern lavatories, with soap, towels, and all conveniences. The next floor, comprising one big room, is furnished with tables and benches. It is the lunchroom for non-smokers. The room above is similarly fitted with the addition of spitoons for smokers. In these rooms the men leave their lunches in the morning, knowing they are perfectly safe. An old pensioner of the firm is employed constantly as caretaker, and at noon he supplies the men with tea or coffee. There are comparatively few women employes, but the few there are are provided for.

Substantial Bonus.

The company appropriates each year a bonus in which each employe of six months' or over participates. To benefit to the full extent an employe must be in the service two years. A foreman of one of the departments has paid for his house with his annual bonuses. It is only fair to state in passing that throughout the factory the employes are a superior type of working man. There is a well-equipped fire station, with three nicely decorated and furnished bedrooms. The members of the fire company get their rooms free and an extra dollar a week. In one of the rooms was a book shelf with a Bible and a score or more standard works of fiction—not a trashy one among them. That illustrates as well as anything could the type of man.

So much for the comparison.

There is no Government inspection of slaughtered animals in Canada beyond the casual municipal inspection in the larger places. The manager of the Davies Co., Dr. Smale, speaking to The Canadian Grocer representative, said they did not believe there was any cholera or trachinae among Canadian hogs. The rule they worked by was that what was not good enough for their own tables was not good enough to sell, and the assistant manager, Mr. Van Beaver, who accompanied The Canadian Grocer representative through the factory, declared he would eat anything turned out by the company except fertilizer.

Dr. Smale stated that he considered their packing house a fair average of what was to be found in Canada.

ANOTHER CO-OPERATIVE FAKE.

Arthur Smith, of Hillcrest Farm, Beachville, Ont., has been arrested on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences. His arrest discloses that the First National Co-operative Society of Woodstock have been advertising the sale of every edible and article of wearing apparel at cost. Inquiries led to Smith's arrest. No such company or office could be found in Woodstock, and an examination of the Beachville property showed no sign of the advertised goods. Farmers were taken in by the scheme in large numbers, but are averse to taking any part in the prosecution.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Quebec Markets.

Montreal, June 7, 1906.

A very good general trade has been transacted by grocery houses during the past week. Orders from the country districts have been fairly large in most cases, while the city business has been good. There has been nothing to distinguish the situation in groceries during the week. In fact, as far as prices go there have been no alterations in any line. Sugar is steady under the recent advance, but business transacted has not been of very large volume. Canned goods are unchanged. Dealers are expecting to receive quotations on California canned goods at any time. Japan teas occupy the attention of the trade at present. Reports from the primary market continue encouraging. Prices on teas of the better grades have been advanced one cent. Quotations on cheaper teas have not yet been received. It is thought, however, that these will sell at about the same figure as last year, although some reports received from the Orient would indicate that they will be a trifle cheaper. Molasses is unchanged. What business is passing is of the hand-to-mouth character. Advices from California are to the effect that fruit merchants there have refused to book orders for the smaller sizes in prunes. Larger sizes are at a premium. It is now stated that the apricot crop this season will be the shortest on record. Nothing new has occurred in coffee or spices. Evaporated apples are still very high and stocks are limited.

CANNED GOODS—Canned goods are moving along smoothly. The market presents no new features this week. Very good orders are being booked by wholesale houses. What business is being transacted is mostly in lines required for immediate use. Quotations are unchanged. Tomatoes are still selling very well, but there is no extra demand. Dealers are daily expecting quotations on California canned fruits. Some have already received prices on California asparagus. Reports from the coast state that the outlook for peaches, plums and pears is bright, which will insure a good supply as far as California goods are concerned.

SUGAR—Sugar presents no new features this week. Since the last advance recorded, the market has remained practically unchanged. At present it is about steady. Some houses report very good business, while others state that a quiet prevails, very few orders coming to hand. Taken all round, however, there seems to be a very fair business moving. Summer trade has not yet commenced, but the trade is looking forward to a good season.

TEAS—Japan teas are still the chief object of discussion among tea merchants. Better grades, according to advices received recently, will be about a cent higher than last year. Quotations on cheaper lines have not been received as yet, but tea merchants are inclined to believe that ruling prices will be about the same as last year. Reports from primary markets state that the teas as a whole are satisfactory, although in some districts unfavorable conditions have caused a falling off in the quality. Several inquiries have been received for Young Hysons the past couple of weeks, but none are to be obtained. Indians and Ceylons are slightly easier in the primary markets and buyers are holding off in consequence.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—California fruit merchants, according to latest reports, have refused to book orders for the smaller sizes in prunes. Larger sizes are at a premium. Advices received from one of the largest houses in the south state that without a doubt the apricot crop this season will be the shortest on record. This is not unexpected, however, and will create no surprise among the trade. A good crop of cherries is predicted. Peaches, pears and plums are also said to give sign of being plentiful. For currants a good demand prevails locally. Stocks are adequate to take care of all orders. Tarragona almonds are still advancing. Dealers are now quoting in the neighborhood of 13½c.

Fresh mackerel, which are being received in large quantities daily, are easy of disposal. New Restigouche or Gaspe salmon are now in season. Prices for them are lower this week, 15c. being the figure asked. Haddock and steak cod are plentiful and at prices quoted are selling freely. Different lines in lake fish are very much in demand. Toronto, June 7, 1906.

Business in the grocery trade has not been extraordinary this week, but it is very fair and there are no complaints. Collections have been a little slow, but probably not more so than at the same time other years. Anyway, an improvement is looked for immediately. It is not to be forgotten that the season is about two weeks behind schedule time. That accounts for the comparatively small movement of sugars to date. Canned goods continue in a firm position. There has been an advance in peas and even at the advance agents have been instructed to accept orders subject to confirmation. Dried fruits are very scarce. Some lines, such as tapnet figs and most sizes of prunes, are practically out of the market. Indeed, there is a firm market for practically everything in the grocery line. Sugar is quiet, following the stir occasioned as usual by the advance.

CANNED GOODS—The Canadian Canners at the end of last week announced an advance of 5c. on all peas in groups 1, 2 and 3, and the market is said to be firm at the advance. Many stocks of canned goods are said to be getting into very small compass. All lines of canned goods are passing rapidly into the hands of retailers.

SUGAR—The market for raws both in America and Europe has shown a steady improvement. The movement has been felt in refined also. Willett & Gray say: "An immense business has been done, buyers generally engaging a full month's supply ahead, being well satisfied that the sugars were a good purchase and anticipating, with improved weather conditions, an increased actual consumption throughout the country." Locally movement of sugars has been a little slow since the activity following the last advance. The world's visible supply is now 3,587,918 tons, against 2,613,166 tons a year ago, an increase of 974,752 tons.

TEA—The lower grades, both Pekoes and Orange Pekoes, offering in Ceylon at the present moment are exceedingly good value and considerable business has been done for importation. This might be called the normal condition of the market in June, which is usually the month of the heaviest production for Ceylon teas of this character. Later on the general crop diminishes in quantity and improves in quality, and under normal conditions the market is always considerably higher later in the season than during June and July.

Japan tea shippers report that this year's leaf does not lend itself well to the manufacture of stylish looking tea and this is of considerable importance to Canadian buyers, who pay more attention to style in Japan leaf than they do to cup quality.

COFFEE—The New York coffee market has been weaker without any noticeable change in the situation here. Willett & Gray, New York, explain it thus:

"The liquidation in the speculative options has continued until quotations have arrived at a point where the New York options to-day are 50 points lower than the same date last year, while the European options in Havre and Hamburg are at exactly the same prices as a year ago. Such a disparity as this is undoubtedly due to the liquidations of outside speculators, the price itself not seeming of much importance to them, notwithstanding that all grades of actual coffee (with the exception of No. 2 Rio and Santos and possibly No. 3 Rio) are from 30 to 150 points higher than the basis of option sales. There are a few shipments of special grades coming forward from Brazil, but apart from this the price in Brazil is impracticable compared with the market here, thus checking business between the consuming and producing markets.

"The constant liquidation has made the technical position of the market very much healthier, and in the face of supplies having decreased about 2,000 bags compared with last year, the difference in the price of to-day compared with a year ago is most noticeable, proving an unduly large discounting of the possibility of a large crop next season, and which, if realized, is not likely to have the influence that is attached to it to-day."

DRIED FRUITS—This market is almost bare of California prunes. Stocks are so small that it is scarcely worth while advancing prices. There are a few very good French prunes, small size, 110s. to 120s., to be had at 4 1-2c. Tapnet figs are also about done. Currants continue to work upward. J. L. Watt, of J. L. Watt & Scott, says of them:

"There is little change in the Patras market, but prices continue to harden, and 3d more has been paid for importation to Canada than the prevailing price last week. Some speculative offers of new crop have been made, but have received no interest from buyers, who are content to wait for quotations based upon actualities."

Valencia raisins continue to sell freely on spot. Prices are now fully a cent a pound higher than they were four weeks ago, but they are still a full cent below the cost of importation from any other market. Dates are in small compass and wanted on spot, but the London price is much higher than buyers' ideas here and they are simply dragging along without the goods, and this situation cannot be changed before the advent of the new crop in October.

NUTS—In regard to shelled walnuts, there has been weakness in France owing to the disposition to clear some stocks prior to the necessity of cold storing. The demands for the United States for walnuts in the shell for September shipment, otherwise would have had a very strengthening effect upon the market as the quantity remaining for the purpose of shelling is not large and the whole is practically controlled by Davenszen & Co., Bordeaux. They have, however, announced it as their policy not to attempt to force up prices; but, in order to reserve the necessary stock to supply the trade with shelled walnuts, they have asked buyers to anticipate their wants by making their contracts now in order to avoid possible disappointment. A short crop of Tarragona almonds is looked for and higher prices expected. Shelled almonds share that position. The new crop of filberts for October shipment has advanced 1-4c. during the past week. The conditions affecting this crop, and which have made the price many shillings above the average of other years, are not in any large measure related to the filbert crop itself, but to the scarcity of almonds, walnuts and other competing articles.

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., June 5, 1906.

Trade has been fairly good during the past week, considering the very backward condition of the weather. Rain fell continuously for several days, and very greatly hampered the farmers in their operations. Reports from the Annapolis Valley say that the trees are looking well, and that they are blossoming. If no heavy frost comes the trees give promise of a large yield of fruit. Retail trade in the city is exceptionally good, some of the dealers reporting business better than for years. This is probably due to the good demand for labor, and the steady employment given to all classes of artisans. Prices have not changed very materially. The sugar market is firmer and there has been an advance in the refined article, which is now quoted at $4.15 for barrels and $4.05 for bags of granulated. The demand is light at present, and it is expected to continue so for some time.

EGGS—The egg market is a little easier. First-class stock is quoted this week at 16c., and with the reduction there has been some increase in the sales. The receipts from local points have increased slightly, but shipments from Prince Edward Island are unusually light.

BUTTER—Receipts of butter are far below expectations. The farmers are not sending in any large quantities, but this is probably due to their being engaged in preparing their crops. Pasturage is now good, and the receipts should increase very soon. Quotations here are: Creamery prints, 24c.; small tubs, 22c. to 23c. for the choicest; solids, 21c. to 22c., and rolls, 19c. to 20c.

CHEESE—The market is very firm here, and it is stated that there is a good demand for it on the English market. Very few factories are yet running in the provinces, but it is expected that they will soon open up. Large cheese are quoted here at 12½c. and small at 13c. and 13½c. The stocks held are not very heavy. The New Perth, P.E.I., cheese factory began manufacturing cheese on June 1. This factory manufactured butter all Winter, the demand for which was greater than the supply. This factory is conducted on up-to-date principles by C. J. Cook. Mr. Vernon, who is to take charge of the cheese and butter making factory at Montague, P.E.I., has arrived. The factory will start to manufacture at once. This factory is now in first class condition for the season's work, having in addition to all the necessary machinery, a complete cold storage plant.

VEGETABLES—Stocks of good potatoes are becoming very light. Some recent receipts from Prince Edward Island were in good condition and found a ready sale. Calicoes are quoted at $1.25, and New Brunswick at $1.65. Turnips are scarce at $1.25, and the market is about cleaned up of parsnips and beets. Beets are worth $1.50 and parsnips $1.75. Plenty of good carrots are still obtainable, being quoted at $1.50, which price is reasonable for good stock at this season.

FRUIT, ETC.—Business is brisk and the jobbers are handling large quantities. Jamaica oranges are quoted at $6 and Californias from $4.25 to $5; Valencias, $4.20, repacked $5.50 to $6.50; bananas, $2 to $2.50; California cherries, $3 per box; American cabbage, $4 per crate; tomatoes, $3.50 per crate, and beans, $3.50 per bushel.

FISH—The fishing vessels are making only small catches on the banks, and no large hauls of mackerel have been made on the coast. Fresh mackerel are selling at 15c. apiece now. Salmon has dropped from 25c. to 18c. Lobsters are becoming scarce. They are now selling at $14 per crate in Boston.

On Friday evening of last week an enthusiastic meeting was held in the board room of the association offices in Winnipeg for the purpose of organizing the grocers of the City of Winnipeg. Some eight or nine years ago the Winnipeg grocers had an association of their own which, owing to various causes, died a natural death; but it did good work in its day and several of its members were the most enthusiastic in the work of organizing in Winnipeg a section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada.

Who Were There.

Among those present at the meeting were the following: E. B. Nixon, J. F. Hunter, Boissevain, president of Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada; S. Elliott, W. L. Scott, John Dyke, S. Ling, A. M. McKinny, W. J. Kennedy, J. R. Bardsley, J. Bloomfield, Geo. Hilton, G. B. Andrews, M. Chariton, H. Genser, M. Rose, C. Charrest, chairman of the Winnipeg Retail Butchers' Association; W. A. Coulson, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada, and F. R. Munro of The Canadian Grocer.

In opening the meeting, Secretary Coulson briefly explained the aims and objects of the association and then called on C. Charrest, chairman of the Winnipeg Butchers' Association, to tell of the work that had been accomplished among the butchers.

Mr. Charrest spoke briefly and to the point. The butchers' organization was now about three months old and the principal benefits seen so far had been in connection with the collection of bad debts. The association collection forms and the plan of listing bad accounts had worked wonders in Winnipeg. His own firm had already collected enough to pay their dues for a century. He also referred to the need of a higher license on peddlers and expressed the opinion that this could be obtained only by the united action of the retailers.

President Hunter reviewed the aims of the association and told of its origin in Boissevain, where the merchants had decided that it was poor business to cut each other's throats.

Butchers Glad of it.

E. B. Nixon was elected chairman pro tem and in an interesting speech he urged the advisability of the grocers meeting and learning to know each other better. There was too much enmity and too little co-operation among the grocers of Winnipeg. He hoped to see the association get after the Winnipeg fruit stores. These stores are allowed to keep open after six o'clock and they sell many lines which are handled by the grocers who are compelled by law to close at six. This was not right or fair.

After some informal discussion the gathering adjourned to meet again on Thursday night of this week, when officers will be elected and a permanent organization effected.

A VISITOR FROM ENGLAND.

E. D. Morton, of the firm of C. & E. Morton, London, England, while in Montreal recently expressed himself as pleasantly surprised at the progress being made by the wholesale grocery trade of the Dominion. Mr. Morton, who sailed for England a week ago Thursday on the Virginian, was in Montreal just finishing a combined business and pleasure trip around the world. He was gone six months and was accompanied by Mrs. Morton. During his visit to the Montreal trade he was introduced by Mr. E. B. Goodacre, of Watt, Scott & Goodacre, agents for Quebec.

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., June 4, 1906.

Business is good. Bills are being met with quite general satisfaction. Markets generally are firm. Perhaps the matter of chief interest is the new agreement in reference to the selling price of canned goods entered into by practically every wholesale grocer in the province. It is signed not only by those buying from the Canners' Consolidated, but by all the trade. It is much more binding than any previous agreement, a large cash deposit being put up by each signer. For almost a year prices have been open and by many it was used as an opportunity to cut prices.

SPICE—In ginger, much higher prices rule. Cloves are very firm at full figures. Peppers and cassia are unchanged. Nutmegs are still quite low.

OIL—As reported last week, dealers in burning oil are busy booking future business. Prices are rather higher than last year. Buyers are guaranteed against decline. In lubricating oils it has been a busy season. There is strong competition for this business. Quality is a large feature. Paint oils are unchanged; prices hold quite high. It is still too early for receipts of new cod oil.

SALT—In Liverpool coarse salt, there is good steady sale at this season. Prices are firmly held. A cargo of Mediterranean salt was received this week. This grade is largely used by packers of fish. In fine salt prices are unchanged; Canadian chiefly sold. With the opening of the dairy season there is improved demand.

CANNED GOODS—As reported, there is now a firm selling price among the wholesale trade. This means an advance in corn and peas. Tomatoes are firm at the advanced price. In fruits, strawberries and peaches are firm. Gallon apples are again higher. It is proving the best season in this line for years. In salmon, prices are firmer. Meats are low. In domestic fish the situation is unchanged, as this season's stocks are light.

GREEN FRUIT—Bananas are large sellers. There is a big sale for small fruit owing to price, but for best stock full prices rule. Valencia oranges are about out of the market. Jamaicas, Messinas and Californias are offered. Prices are higher. Lemons are also higher. Pines sell fairly well. Strawberries are still too high for large business. Rhubarb is lower.

DRIED FRUIT—The booking of future business is now an active feature. In California prunes quite full sales have been made at rather lower prices than last year. Of seeded raisins there have been fair sales. Prices are quite low. But few other raisins have been sold. Apricots are not quoted. Peaches sell in a small way; prices are high. Prunes and evaporated fruits are scarce. Figs are being booked; prices are rather higher than last year. Peel will be high. Spot dates higher; new goods will cost higher than last season. In currants, prices are unchanged.

SUGAR—The week shows no change in price, with rather improved sales.

MOLASSES— In Barbadoes, prices are rather higher. Imports of fancy have been large. Choice stock is rather light. Little business has yet been done in Porto Rico and receipts are very light. There are one or two cargoes shortly due.

FISH—Salmon are being more freely received, but prices are still quite high. This is our best fish; practically all are sold fresh. Very large quantities being shipped to Boston. The catch of shad has been very light. Gaspereaux is just a fair catch; this is a large business. Dried fish hold at quite full figures. Pickled fish are still scarce and high. Smoked herring bring a good average price.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL— In flour, prices are unchanged. The market is quite firm. Feed holds at full figures. Oats and oatmeal are firmer. Package oatmeal is being largely sold. There is active competition in cornmeal. Beans are still low; yellow eyes have been largely sold. Peas and barley are dull.

DEATH OF JAMES TEES.

Winnipeg business men sincerely mourn the death last week of James Tees, head of the big commission firm of Tees & Persse. All classes mourn his loss, but none more sincerely than the business men of Winnipeg, with whom for many years he was brought in daily contact. "The whitest business man in the west," he has often been called, and his right to the name has never been questioned.

Mr. Tees was born in Montreal in 1854, being a son of David Tees, a furniture manufacturer. When a boy he was employed by Jas. Robertson in the office of the Canada Lead Works, and in 1881 he was made office manager. In the same year he moved to Winnipeg as manager of the Canada Lead Works and in 1887 he resigned to found, with John Persse, the commission firm of Tees & Persse. In this business he attained eminent success, his firm representing in the west some of the strongest Canadian manufacturing concerns.

ROLLED OATS PRICES UNIFORM.

There was a rumor among the Toronto wholesale grocery trade this week that the oatmeal millers had got together again and either reformed the combination or come to an understanding about prices. Some of the larger millers have come to an informal understanding as to prices, but there has been no arrangement or agreement.

W. A. Strowger, secretary of the former combine, would know of any movement toward reorganization, and to The Canadian Grocer he positively denied that anything had been done. "The oatmeal millers have not met in months," he declared. "I don't believe there is any sort of understanding as to prices. At any rate, if there is, I don't know about it."

The rise in the price of rolled oats at this unusual time, when consumption falls off, is attributed to dearer oats. The uniformity of quotations received by the wholesalers is the reason for the supposed reorganization.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Walter Bate, grocer, Lakefield, Ont., has sold out to W. Hurl.

Geo. Dixon, grocer, Brooklin, Ont., has sold out and is going west.

Isaac Hord, of Hord & Co., Mitchell, Ont., took a few days rest attending a church convention in the west.

The fine team of horses owned by W. R. Cole, of Mitchell, ran away last week. The only damage was to the rig.

Mr. Couch, of Couch & Schneider, Mitchell, Ont., is contemplating a pleasure trip to the Pacific Coast in August.

Gray, Bernie & Co., Listowel, Ont., have bought a bankrupt stock of boots and shoes and are making considerable stir with it.

J. H. Maiden, commission merchant, Montreal, has removed to 425 St. Paul street, where he now occupies larger and more modern quarters.

J. H. Maiden, Montreal, has been appointed agent for the Eureka Refrigerator Company, of Toronto. M. Hooey, representing that firm, was in Montreal during the week.

Samuel Freeman, representing the Montreal Packing Company in the Lower Provinces, together with C. W. Bowman, manager of the company, and J. T. Cuddy, sales manager, were visitors to the Montreal offices of The Grocer this week. Mr. Freeman, whose headquarters are in Amherst, N.S., reports a satisfactory and increasing trade in his district in the products of the Montreal Packing Company.

GUARANTEE FIVE CENT SARDINES

The retail grocerymen's line of conversation at the present time relates largely to the Chicago packing house scandal. Many of them are of the opinion that, although trade in American canned goods may be handicapped for a time, the scandal will eventually be forgotten.

A prominent retailer, when asked by The Canadian Grocer to give his views, said that while it is outrageous, the public, if they would take time to think, would come to the conclusion that nothing else could be expected from certain lines of goods at least. For instance, he has numerous calls for sardines at 5c. a tin, and the customer wants him to guarantee them. He can hardly guarantee the quality of such an article. When you consider the expenses of canning, the canner's profit, the wholesaler's profit, the quality of the sardines is far from the best.

John—"Yes, every time we caught a fish we took a drink of Wiser's Red Letter Rye."

Walter—"Did you have much luck?"

John—"Luck! Why, after a while we were catching 'em two at a time."

FOOD ADULTERATION AND THE LAW

Most Frauds are Against the Pockets, not the Stomachs of Consumers. is the Experts' Finding

(By A. McGill, Government Analyst, Ottawa.)

A. McGill, analyst of the pure food branch of the Inland Revenue Department, was present at the provincial convention of retail grocers in Montreal and in an address on food adulteration and the law said :

Although national control and inspection of foods, as known in our day, is a matter of comparatively recent development, the fact of adulteration is by no means of modern origin. Pliny states that, among the Romans, bread was adulterated with a soft, white clay; the celebrated Falernian wines were mixed with others of inferior quality, and opium was fraudulently mixed with valueless gums.

England, France and Germany enacted laws against falsification of bread, beer, wine and spices, as long ago as the eleventh century. In England these laws were known as assizes, and the following quotation from an assize of 1634 (Charles I) is interesting :

In the Days of King Charles.

"If there be any manner of person or persons, which shall, by any false ways or means, sell any meal unto the King's subjects, either by mixing it deceitfully, or sell any musty or corrupted meal, which may be to the hurt and infection of man's body, or use any false weight, and so deceive the subject, for the first offence he shall be grievously punished, the second he shall lose his meal, for the third offence he shall suffer the judgment of the pillory, and the fourth time he shall forswear the town wherein he dwelleth."

Progress of Chemistry.

The methods available for testing the genuineness of articles of food and drink were at that time of the crudest nature. As an example we may cite the mode of detecting the fraudulent addition of sugar to ale. The inspector was instructed to pour some of the sample given to him upon a wooden bench, on which he sat while drinking the remainder. If, on rising, he found that his leather breeches stuck to the bench, this was taken as proof that sugar had been added to the beer, and the vendor was punished accordingly. It was not until the science of chemistry had developed under Boerhaave, Berzelius, Liebig, Boutron-Chalard, Chevallier, and others, that methods of testing became sufficiently refined to enable trustworthy conclusions to be reached.

A Modern Beginning.

The first modern Adulteration Act in England was passed in 1860, in consequence of exposures of the frauds found on the London market by Dr. Hassall, and made public through the columns of the London Lancet. A parliamentary commission was appointed in 1855, and heard evidence from importers, manufacturers, chemists and others, thus securing a basis for legislative action. The original act was greatly modified in 1875, and this act as amended in 1879 and 1899 is in force to-day.

Canada followed closely the example set by the mother country, and our Inland Revenue Act of 1875 contains some clauses which deal with the adulteration of food, but our Adulteration Act proper belongs to the year 1886.

Four analysts were appointed in 1876, the late Dr. Edwards, of Montreal, being one of these. The only one of the number still living is Professor Ellis, of Toronto. The Department of Inland Revenue has, from the first, been charged with the carrying out of the provisions of the food laws, and reports have been issued as appendices to the report of the Minister of Inland Revenue since 1876. Some extracts from these reports will serve to show how faithfully the department has sought to discharge this important duty.

Proved its Usefulness.

In 1877 the commissioner says : "The act has now been in force during a period sufficient to afford a fair test of its value, and it is not too much to say that the reports made to the department show conclusively that it affords the means of exposing dishonesty in traders, and of protecting the consumer against the adulterations of his foods, which if not deleterious, have undoubtedly the effect of imposing on him worthless articles in lieu of the genuine article for which he pays his money. This being the case, I submit that the time has arrived for bringing the whole of the Dominion under the operation of this law."

The First Chief.

In 1884 a chief analyst was first appointed, in the person of the late H. Sugden Evans, of Montreal. Referring to the new appointment, the commissioner says : "Hitherto it has been felt that the prosecution of parties for adulteration was undesirable on the single report of the local analyst. Under the amended act, however, one-third of each sample is required to be transmitted to Ottawa, where the test of the local analyst is revised by the analyst in chief, and in cases in which prosecution is necessary in the public interest, the evidence of these two specialists will doubtless be deemed conclusive." On the regretted death of Mr. Evans in 1885, he was succeeded by Mr. Thomas Macfarlane, who now holds the office.

A Hundred and Sixteen Bulletins.

Since 1887 the department has issued in bulletin form the results of the work done in its laboratory. Up to the present time 116 bulletins have been published, and any person interested may procure copies of these on application to the Deputy Minister at Ottawa.

PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

Nothing new is to be recorded in the provision situation. Packers' receipts of live hogs are still a long way short of their capacity, and the domestic market for products is still bullish in tone. This week has brought its usual number of advances in the list. It has been the same story for months. Despite the high prices the demand is reported to be good.

It is well understood that the choicest hogs as to weight and form are utilized for the export trade. The continued shortage has compelled the packers to be much more lenient in selecting so as to include for export lighter and heavier hogs than under normal conditions of supply. The effect must be to greatly decrease the supply for the domestic trade.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

The cheese market is decidedly easier and late country markets were about one cent per pound lower than a week ago. This is quite a decline, but present prices are still abnormally high for this time of the year.

Recent warm rains have done a great deal to improve the condition of the pastures and the cows are now getting plenty of good feed; the flow of milk is constantly increasing and so is the production of both cheese and butter. The ruling high prices, of course, are a great stimulant for the farmers to produce as much milk as possible, and according to section this increased production of milk is shown in a larger out-turn of either cheese or butter, and on the whole in both products.

It is not likely that either cheese or butter will sell at very low prices this year. There will be, of course, a natural decline in prices as the production increases beyond the immediate urgent demand, but with light stocks on hand every fraction of decline will stimulate buying and thus increase the demand.

Owing to the backward season we are as yet without really full grass butter or cheese in Montreal. A mixture of fodder and grass does not produce a good keeping quality, and goods now offered on the market for sale must go into immediate consumption at best obtainable prices. It will not do to put them into cold storage for speculative purposes. The scarcity of supplies makes the present high prices, but, regardless of cost, the goods must be sold.

This is a trying period for the merchants. They must have goods to supply their customers in order to hold their trade, and the customers care very little about the original cost of the goods; they want to buy them at lowest possible prices, knowing well that the merchants cannot and will not hold them. Meanwhile, therefore, declining markets must be expected until the quality of goods is of such a character that they may safely be held in cold storage for future demand.

So far the make of both cheese and butter shows a considerable increase over last year's make for the same period. The ruling high prices are undoubtedly the cause of this. The farmers have been getting high prices for their products for some years, and no doubt they are wide awake enough to "push a good thing along." They have increased their dairy herds and by extra feeding they have further increased their milk production. All this is good business and is to be commended. Our goods are wanted in Great Britain at paying prices and our farmers are sufficiently progressive to take advantage of it.

Regarding the future it is difficult to make any prognostication. At present the British markets are practically short of supplies. If our production of cheese and butter becomes larger than what the natural consumptive demand requires, prices must recede to induce increased consumption. We have had several years of high prices and it is not impossible that we may again see comparatively low prices when the production gets to a point beyond the natural consumptive demand.

A few days ago we had a very interesting experimental demonstration in paraffining cheese by D. M. McPherson with his newly invented paraffining machine in the warehouse of the D. A. McPherson Produce Company, in William street. The machine worked very well and seems to be a great improvement on the old dipping process. However, the temperature of the melted wax seems to be still an unsolved problem. It is said that the wax would crystalize at 250 degrees. The best temperature recommended was between 210 and 215 degrees. The temperature used by D. M. McPherson was about 212 degrees. It cannot be said that the experiment was a thorough success as the waxing was not even and it is contended that a higher temperature would cause a thinner coating of wax as well as a more even one and would also show the color of the cheese better. However, Mr. McPherson's invention seems a good one, and as soon as the question of the proper temperature of the wax is thoroughly settled there is no doubt that the machine will do its work well and be generally adopted. Paraffined cheese have been tried for years; their loss of weight is a trifle compared with cheese not paraffined, and the cost of paraffining, as laid out by Mr. McPherson, is infinitesimal to the cost of loss in weight of cheese held in storage for some time. Paraffining cheese is undoubtedly the right thing; the cheese cure better under a coat of wax and they lose nothing by shrinkage in weight.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

London, Eng., May 26, 1906.

Contrary to what might have been expected at this time of the year, colonial butters are meeting with a very ready sale, and prices are consequently on a firm basis. This state of affairs is due almost entirely to a shortage in British and continental supplies. Abroad, as well as in England, the wintry weather has had a bad effect upon pastures and crops. Agriculture generally is a month behindhand, and farmers regard the prospects with dubious anxiety. The New Zealand butter season being now practically at an end, importers here may not look to that quarter of the globe for further supplies except on a small and diminishing scale. Australian shipments, however, are continuing on a satisfactory scale, averaging, it is said, about 15,000 boxes a week. The bulk of these supplies come from Queensland. The state of the market for Australian butter may, therefore, be regarded as firm, with a tendency to become still more so. Australian "choicest" sells at 94s. to 98s., finest parcels a little lower. New Zealand butters are realizing about four shillings more.

A report states that "the exceptional character of the season is well illustrated by the fact that the Danish official quotation has never been raised in the month of May sonce the year 1889, when an advance of 2 kroner took place, and the quotation now stands at 92 kroner, which is the highest price reached since 1892. Notwithstanding the above facts, the make of butter in Europe and at

It is true that supplies may be expected on an increasing scale, but whether they will be sufficient for demand is doubtful. Altogether, the outlook for the coming Canadian season is bright, and it looks as though Canadian farmers will have yet another "golden" harvest.

According to one of our daily papers Canadian farm produce exports are to come direct to London. This is rendered possible by arrangements made between the Allan Line of steamships and the Surrey Commercial Docks. The latter party are now completing what will be the largest cold storage building in the United Kingdom, covering, as it does, about nine acres, and it is confidently expected that the increased facilities offered for unloading and storing Canadian produce will result in greatly augmented trade. It is quite certain that the new storage will enable Canadian produce to be preserved in better condition, a point which is of the utmost importance. It will also give Dominion shippers a very desirable advantage over their United States competitors.

Official information is to hand that Lovell & Christmas will combine with G. Wall & Co., of Liverpool, and Wall & Co., of Manchester, and thus form a huge provision combine with a capital of considerably over £1,000,000. The effect of such a combination upon the provision trade of the country will be great. The importing confraternity will be most concerned, but in spite of assurances to the contrary, the chances of the consuming public being affected through retailers are not small.

Stocks of cheese here in London are still on a small scale, and prices are steadily advancing. Both Canadian and New Zealand cheese are 2s. dearer than last week. Shipments afloat, however, are heavy, and the Rimutaka, from New Zealand, is expected to dock here about June 20 with 220 tons aboard.

BERLIN, CANADA

ENGLAND WANTS CANADIAN BACON

(By P. B. Ball, Canadian Commercial Agent at Birmingham)

A favorable increase of Great Britain's imports of Canadian bacon still continues, and there is every indication that the demand is likely to grow more and more. Commenting on the expanding nature and wide development of the Canadian bacon trade, the Grocer in its annual review remarked: "Most remarkable of all the imports into the United Kingdom during the year 1905 have been those of bacon from Canada, showing the greatest increase of any from other parts of the world, and this has had a restraining influence on the London market in keeping it from unduly rising, at first through the stationary, but subsequently more contracted, supplies from the United States and Denmark."

The official figures of the importations of bacon for 1905, together with the totals for the two former years, are as follows:

From	1905. Cwt.	1904. Cwt.	1903. Cwt.	Increase over 1904. Cwt.	Decrease from 1904. Cwt.
Denmark	1,471 687	1,723 884	1,496,101	.....	.....
United States	2,755,233	2,806,108	2,893,507	....	50,875
Canada	1,191,390	829,883	665,249	361,507	.....
Other countries	80,650	92,436	102,131	.....	11,786
Totals	5,498,960	5,452,311	5,156,988	361,507	314,858

This shows a net increase of 46,649 cwt. in the past year's imports of bacon, more than made up of Canadian selections alone. That this was not merely a temporary or fitful expansion in the consignments hither of Canadian bacon is clearly proved by the fact that Great Britain's imports for the first three months of this year were on the same enlarged scale as shown by the following official statistics:

From	1906. Cwt.	1905. Cwt.	1904 Cwt.	Increase over 1805. Cwt.	Decrease from 1904. Cwt.
Denmark	343,075	368,983	389,249	.....	25,908
United States	908,192	885,124	870,318	23,068	.....
Canada	255,621	161,301	140,347	94,320	.....
Other countries	12,512	19,575	16,917	.....	7,063
Totals	1,519,400	1,434,983	1,416,831	117,388	32,971

Here again Canadian bacon stands out prominently with an increase of 94,320 cwt. above the supply of last year to date, and so helps to secure a net gain of 84,417 cwt. on the aggregate arrivals during the first quarter of 1905. These are significant figures, and strongly indicate that the production, distribution and consumption of Canadian bacon are progressing at a faster rate than those of any other cure.

As the journal above quoted remarks: "True, as an exclusive trade the Canadian bacon trade still falls a long way behind that of the United States, but considering its comparative youthfulness it affords evidence of astonishing vigor and vitality, and must henceforth be reckoned with as an important factor in determining the probable course of the bacon trade."

COW TESTING.

A statement issued by the Dairy Commissioner's Office, Ottawa, giving the results of the Cow Testing Association at Princeton during April and May, shows that in April thirty-one cows gave an average of 540 pounds of milk with 3.3 per cent. of butter fat, and that in May 45 cows gave an average of 671 pounds of milk with 3.3 per cent. of butter fat.

According to the May table one dairy of four cows averaged 1,090 pounds. That was the highest. The lowest was a six-cow dairy with an average of 540 pounds. The second highest average was 762 pounds.

THE PIG IN ENGLAND.

The Grocery, an English trade paper, says: For some time past pigs have been scarce, and, as a natural consequence, bacon and all hog products have been rising in price. It is really extraordinary, considering how very prolific an animal is the pig, that producers in this country cannot do more toward supplying the steady and continually increasing demand for pig meat. It is a great reflection upon the enterprise of British farmers to consider that for this produce alone upward of 18,000,000 pounds sterling is sent abroad.

GLYCERINED EGGS.

The press in England and Canada, particularly in England, recently published items to the effect that in future glycerined eggs will take the place of pickled eggs entirely. It is difficult to say where the first rumor had its origin but many papers have made more or less of the question. Speaking to The Canadian Grocer on the matter, a prominent Montreal egg merchant stated that the glycerining of eggs will not in the least affect the pickled egg business. The glycerining process, according to this merchant, is very simple. Instead of washing the pickled eggs in water just before they are sold, the eggs are cleansed in a solution which has the effect of whitening the shell to a greater extent than does pure water. The glycerining process does not, however, affect the egg itself in the least. From this it will be seen that glycerined eggs are simply pickled eggs washed in a solution, instead of in pure water, just before they are sold. A few years ago these glycerined eggs were much in demand, and were sold at a price from 1c. to 1 1-2c. in advance of the price of "straight" eggs.

OTTAWA CHEESE SELLERS KICK.

Cheese factory owners, bringing their product to the Ottawa board, are indignant at the refusal of buyers to give prices as high as those ruling on other boards. One day last week all but three refused to sell, though the president, who is both buyer and seller, urged them to take the price offered. Next day he apologized and said he had been misinformed. That day the price advanced 3-4c. and most of the cheese boarded was sold, but later it was found that on other boards 7-8c. more had been secured.

The Harris Abattoir Co., of Toronto, is erecting an up-to-date cold storage plant in Sydney, N.S.

BOARD OF TRADE BUSINESS.

The Halifax Board of Trade recently went on tour, visiting other boards and fostering commercial good will. The chief subject of discussion was the development of the tourist business. At Lunenburg, W. L. Kane, of Halifax delegation, said that boards of trade should keep in touch with the tourist business. They should find out people who have houses to let. A large number of people could be housed in the country and the farmers would derive considerable money from this source.

W. L. Brown, grocer, Lawlortown, Ont., is erecting an addition, 40 x 50, to his store and will add dry goods to his stock.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—The feature of the market is the scarcity of live hogs. At present they are very strong on an advance of 30c. per hundred pounds. On the part of the packing houses there is a great demand, and this, coupled with the scarcity in the country, may account for the rise in prices. A good trade is being done in hams and bacon, and other lines are normal. Pure lard is having a fair sale.

BUTTER—The butter market is very unsettled and it is hard under the circumstances to give quotations which will everywhere be applicable. A fair average for choicest creamery seems to be from 20½c. to 21c., while for western dairy the majority of dealers are asking 17½c. to 18c.

Choicest creamery	0 2[illegible] ½	0 21
Western dairy	0 1[illegible] ½	0 18

CHEESE—Weak and easier summarizes the state of the cheese market this week. Prices are lower than they were a fortnight ago. Export trade, although not very heavy during the week, is bracing up and further improvement is expected.

Quebecs	0 11	0 11⅛

EGGS—Quotations furnished by dealers this week are half a cent higher than they were a fortnight ago. Seventeen cents is the figure asked. Prince Edward Island eggs are arriving by boat every second week now, and egg merchants hope for better things in consequence of the larger supply in the market.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The situation locally is unchanged with some higher prices. Long clear, small hams and shoulder hams are the lines on which prices are slightly advanced, and street lots of dressed hogs are fewer with a proportionate advance. The wholesale dealers all say there is a large consumptive demand despite the high prices. A lowering of prices is not looked for in the near future.

BUTTER—There is a weaker tone to the market, but prices are still maintained practically unchanged from last week. Everything coming now is grass butter. Apparently the supply just about meets the demand for home consumption, for prices are above an export basis except for a little creamery solids. The high price of cheese is said to be diverting a good deal of milk from the creameries. A year ago butter prices were from a cent to two cents below the present level.

CHEESE—Old cheese is nearly out of the market here and there is practically no demand. The price remains what it was, though some dealers show a tendency to get 1-2c. to 1c. more. The price of new cheese has declined 1-2c. and the demand is good.

EGGS—The market is even a shade higher than last week, but there is a feeling that a decline is due. Receipts are not quite as heavy as they were, but the commission men have put down now more than they did last year, so that the keen competition for eggs to pack is about at an end. A considerable proportion of the eggs coming now have to be selected, making a grade for bakers as low as 14 or 15c. a dozen, and the selected stock is selling as high as 18c.

PROVISIONS—In barrel pork higher prices rule. Beef is firmly held; there is but a light sale. Pure lard is rather higher. In refined compound the situation is firm with good demand. Smoked meats are high. Fresh meat sales are not active. At this season, with salmon coming in freely, beef in particular is affected. Fresh beef is quoted rather lower. Veal is higher, being scarce. Mutton has little sale. Lamb is still high. Pork is very firm.

MAPLE SUGAR CROP.

The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa has issued the following statement relative to the maple sugar crop: The sugar making season is now over, and while this province (Quebec) was not quite up to that of previous years, the season was a fairly good one, and in the other three sugar-making provinces was about up to the usual. Sugar and syrup are made in four provinces—Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia—and enormous quantities are turned out. In 1901 the product amounted to 17,904,825 pounds, the money value of which was $1,780,482. Canada supplies over three-sevenths of the output of maple sugar and syrup of the world, and is capable of furnishing six times the quantity of sugar and syrup she does if the owners of the maples would push the work as they could. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec and Eastern Ontario mark the northern and western boundary or limits of the sugar maple. It extends south into Vermont, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio, in considerable quantities, and a great deal of maple products are put out there. The sugar maple does not grow in Europe except in aboretums. The output of 1906 will almost equal that of 1901, the best authorities say, but the season having just closed no official figures are yet issued.

OLD VINEGAR FIRM'S NEW CARD.

A very neat and artistic show card just issued by Messrs. Purnell, Webb & Co., vinegar brewers and sauce and pickle manufacturers, of Bristol, England, portrays a very clear representation, in colors, of a bottle of pickles. It is a good specimen of lithographic work, and no grocer need be ashamed of providing for it a conspicuous place in his shop window. This firm was established in 1750, and has from that period up to the present maintained one of the highest reputations. As time has proceeded, there have been many developments at their works, and just recently there have been further and extensive alterations made in their vinegar grounds to meet the ever increasing demand. Not only has the vinegar department been made commodious, however, but their pickle and sauce works have been likewise extended. It is quite obvious that Messrs. Purnell, Webb & Co. are not lacking in enterprise.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The grain and flour market has enjoyed a week of comparative quiet. Following the Chicago break, Manitobas declined a cent and oats are a little firmer. Otherwise, quotations are unchanged.

A break of 2c. in Chicago was followed by a decline of 3-4c. in Winnipeg. A further decline in Chicago Tuesday was unrecorded locally. Stocks in Fort William and Port Arthur are a million dollars less than last year, but while last year only 40 per cent. could be classed as No. 1 or No. 2, this year 75 per cent. of the stock will so grade, and consequently the supply of good wheat is as large or larger than a year ago.

The Chicago bull "weather" crop campaign, which was in strong contrast to the crop reports of the railways, seems to have weakened. Thus far the crop prospects are satisfactory, with the exception that the crops are a week late.

CANADA FLAKES ABROAD.

The Peterborough Cereal Co., Peterborough, Ont., have just shipped to Sutcliffe & Bingham, Manchester, England, 644 cases or about 18 tons of Canada Flakes. Other shipments have recently been made to New Zealand, South Africa, Australia and Buenos Ayres.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

FLOUR—Excellent business is being transacted in flour this week. There is a strong demand locally and good sized orders are being shipped to all points in Canada. Export trade is also very good. Orders for South Africa and Great Britain have occupied the attention of the export department, although business with other countries has been going on also. Prices are firm.

GRAIN—Oats have advanced a cent to a cent and a half. The market is very strong. Stocks at country points are not large and demand locally is strong. Peas are scarce also, as stocks in the country are pretty well cleaned up. Corn is in good demand and the better quality is hard to obtain. Dealers in the west are holding off to see what the prospects for the coming crop will be. No. 4 barley has advanced half a cent.

ROLLED OATS — Rolled oats are firming up, and although there has been an advance of ten cents just recently, many are looking for a further rise in the near future. It is hard to tell what the stocks are, as no dealer seems to know how his neighbor stands. Nobody is very anxious to sell.

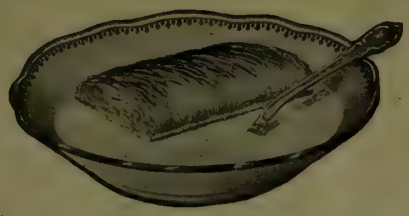
MARKET FOR ADVERTISED ARTICLES.

The difference between the market for an article that is advertised and a similar article which is not advertised, is a matter that ought to be better understood. Let us take rolled oats as an example, and consider the prospects of a firm undertaking to sell it in bulk in the old fashioned way. The sales would be limited by all the influences operating against the wide distribution of a commodity on which transportation charges figure up a very large percentage of the market value, and would be further restricted by the general connection which the firm might have in a more or less limited field. Consider next the prospects of the same firm if it were to put the same commodity in packages, give it a striking name, and apply generous advertising. The only limits of sale would be the bounds of the earth. Wherever people could be found susceptible to advertising argument, there would be found the trade that would make sales practically illimitable.

But this is only stating the first principle. Following the matter a little farther still, it would be found that whereas the man who is dependent upon the restricted field is subject to the influence of dull times therein, he whose field is widespread is able to maintain a better balance, unless trade depression should be very general indeed. This fact was brought home to a representative of the Merchant the other day while in conversation with a traveling man who had just returned from a field where a free lance competitor had been cutting prices, and as a result, getting big orders. He said it was the worst experience he had ever had, though he did not believe that his competitor gave good value and he was sure of getting his trade back. On being asked how it would affect a certain firm, who happened to be large advertisers, he said, without a moment's hesitation, that it would not affect them so much because there was a steady demand for their products and the dealer couldn't substitute. We thought his remarks a pretty strong testimony to the value of the advertised



"It's All in the Shreds"

SHREDDED WHEAT TALK

By AN UP-TO-DATE GROCER

Shredded Whole Wheat is the one staple cereal food better known than all the others.

You can grind up any old thing and call it a "breakfast food," but you can't make Shredded Whole Wheat that way.

It keeps better than any other cereal. It is not "treated" or "flavored" with anything and hence does not deteriorate.

It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve, requiring only a slight warming in the oven to restore crispness.

It is economical. Contains more nutriment than meat or eggs and costs much less.

The Shredding process makes it the most easily digested of all the cereal foods.

It is good for any meal any day in any season in any climate.

It has larger culinary uses than any other cereal food. Hundreds of dainty and palatable dishes may be made with it.

It is the purest and cleanest cereal food, made in the cleanest and finest industrial building in the world.

article. It is time there was a more general awakening among people who have the facilities for manufacturing to the fact that there is a field for them which they can exploit by naming the article they make and burning the name into the public mind. There is no reason why we should not have fifty Stanfields in the Maritime Provinces— not, of course, all engaged in the same line of manufacture, but for producing various lines in general consumption, made in the right quality and advertised.—Maritime Merchant.

INFRINGEMENT OF TRADE MARK.

O. Lefebvre, proprietor of the Ocean Mills, Montreal and Boston, has taken steps to prevent the Vermont Chemical Manufacturing Co., New Orleans, La., from using their trade mark, the familiar Chinese figure known to the trade. It is the intention of Mr. Lefebvre to try and compel this company to withdraw these goods from the United States market. A couple of years ago action was taken and won against a local concern which put out an imitation Chinese starch, using M. Lefebvre's trade mark. Another firm using this trade mark on their goods withdrew their product.

Evefything promises well for a good fishery. Some good catches are already reported, which is much earlier than usual.

Colonel A. Young, of Chicago, manufacturer of elevators, spent two weeks on the island. He made a host of friends while here.

B. J. McGarry, Boston, is at present on the island. He reports trade good. He leaves for Nova Scotia Sunday, well satisfied with his trip.

A. B. Morine, K.C., leader of the Opposition, is leaving the Colony and will locate in Montreal. He will resign his seat in the Legislature for Bonavista. Things politically will now be turned topsy-turvy for awhile.

J. Wildman, representing a large Bradford, England, house, has been visiting the firm's customers on the island. Mr. Wildman is on his way to England after a tour of the principal cities in the United States and Canada. He reports business extra good.

F. R. Gilman, representing E. W. Gillett Co., Toronto, is in the city. The goods his firm manufacture are the best advertised goods in this colony and the sale of them is large. This is Mr. Gilman's first visit to Newfoundland. He has already booked some fine orders.

W. J. Ashbourne has been in the city for a month preparing for the season's business at Twillingate, where he has the largest commercial establishment north of St. John. Mr. Ashbourne's energy and progressiveness have brought about a revival of business at that point. He is now opening a new branch at Herring Neck.

You will find that out of last season's sales you made your biggest profits on the Staunton lines. GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Summer seems to have really arrived after several false alarms, and the result has been to give the fruit and vegetable trade a big boost. The only trouble is, prices are too high and the fruit men are talking of it as "a lean year." The berry crop is short in the States and will be short in Ontario. The quality of much of the fruit being imported leaves much to be desired and for the best the wholesalers are getting as high as 20c. Oranges are also scarce and higher. This means a run on pines, which are now at their cheapest. "The fruit situation is very strong and a spell of hot weather would make it almost impossible to supply the demand," remarked one of the largest importers yesterday.

WILL NOT HAVE TO PAY.

A deputation of fruit merchants waited upon the market committee of the Montreal City Council last week and asked that the finance committee vote sufficient funds to pay for the fireproofing of certain chambers in Bonsecours market. These chambers are used for the maturing of fruit, and some time ago were ordered by the city to be fireproofed. It was originally intended that the fruit merchants should pay for the alterations, but on presenting satisfactory reasons as to why they should not, the expense was taken over by the council.

DEFINE THE BERRY BOX.

At the recent meeting of the B. C. Board of Horticulture, a resolution was passed requesting the Federal Minister of Agriculture to substitute weight for measure in the definition of a legal berry box, and suggesting that all so-called quart berry boxes shall contain 16 ounces of freight, a half box to contain 8 ounces. This is the system that has been in vogue in British Columbia for many years.

LOBSTER SEASON OPENED.

The lobster season is fairly opened on the west and south coasts, says the St. John's, Nfld., Trade Review, but the heavy sea and cold weather along the east coast has interfered with operations to date. A few cases of western lobsters have been sent to the city market, and a regular price for the season can now be gauged. The opening figures are $12.50 to $13 for "flats," while the half pound tins are quoted from $12.50 to $13.50. Future prices will depend largely on the size of the catch, which, if it does not turn out large, will send prices up to $13, or perhaps $13.50 for pound tins before the end of the season. Once again we would impress upon packers the necessity of putting their best efforts into their work, for anything below high standard goods is not wanted at any price.

APPLES FROM WEST AUSTRALIA.

One of the most important developments in our Australian colony, says the London Grocer, has just taken place in the western portion, between Albany and Fremantle, where the soil has been found advantageous for fruit culture. Especially is this so for apples, which is quite a new departure, for hitherto supplies of apples have come from South Australia and Tasmania alone. The enterprising settlers in the west have strongly held the idea that apples could be successfully grown in their district, and as the result of their efforts the first consignment of 140 boxes arrived in London by the steamer "Mongolia" on the 17th instant. These were displayed for inspection in buildings connected with the green fruit auction rooms on Tuesday last. The entire shipment gave shippers and buyers alike complete satisfaction. A choicer or more perfect collection of fruit could not be desired all kinds, viz., Cleopatra, Dunn Seedlings and Jonathans, being of high merit. Prices ranged from 15s. to 23s. per box, each containing about 36 lbs., of fruit.

GO AFTER THE CARP.

According to the sixth annual report of the Fisheries Department for Ontario the carp is increasing at an alarming rate. This fish is destructive to other and finer species, but the report points out that the growing commercial demand will be the means of lessening its depredations, and advocates allowing every implement or contrivance known to be used in its capture, so long as other fish are not destroyed thereby.

BIG RUN OF NORTHERN SALMON.

A. J. Buttimer, a Skeena River canner, has reported that there is an exceptionally good run this year of Spring salmon.

PLENTY OF FISH.

Cape Breton fishermen say all that is needed in a record season's catch is a plentiful supply of bait. The Banks are teeming with fish.

FRUIT NOTES.

It is reported as likely that the British Columbia canners will pay fishermen for salmon 25 cents in July and 20 cents in August. This would be an increase of 100 per cent. Last year the scale was 12 cents in July and 10 cents in August.

The lower Columbia Valley in the neighborhood of Windermere and Wilmer, B.C., is reported by R. M. Palmer, secretary of the British Columbia Bureau of Information, to have a great fruit growing future before it. The building of the V. V. & E. Railway is providing the needed means of transportation.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—Fruit dealers are kept busy at present and do not complain at all of lack of orders. Oranges have advanced in nearly all lines, but are selling well nevertheless. Lemons at prices quoted are in very good demand. Strawberries are up a cent or two but supplies are sufficient to meet all orders. Other lines are having good sale also. Cabbage and tomatoes are enjoying good sale also. Lettuce is arriving in larger quantities every day and is easily sold. Good orders are being received for various other lines. There has been an advance of ten to fifteen cents in potatoes. Dealers are now asking from 95c. to $1 per bag. ONTARIO MARKETS.

GREEN FRUIT—The market is exceptionally firm but business is very brisk. Some fruit men call it a "pineapple year." One firm sold 2,460 cases of pines within a week. But oranges are scarce; berries are few and dear and pines are plentiful and comparatively cheap. The Florida fruit is now coming in car lots and is said to be a little more reliable as to quality than the Cuban. The strawberry crop in Maryland, Kansas, Delaware and Missouri, whence supplies are now drawn, is short and the quality is not up to the average. A good many poor berries are coming on the market. Oranges are very scarce and higher. Lemons will be higher again next week. Canadian stocks are said to be exhausted with not more than 10,000 cases between Halifax and Vancouver. Bananas are in heavy demand, but the supply is adequate, of good quality and the price is unchanged.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

FIGHT FOR A TAFFY MAKER.

A legal case of much interest to manufacturing confectioners was recently tried at Toronto and judgment has not yet been given.

It was an action brought by H. L. Hildreth, of Boston, Mass., against the McCormack Manufacturing Co., of London, Ont., seeking to restrain the Ontario manufacturer from using a taffy pulling machine, the patent rights on which are claimed by the Boston man.

The machine is a wonderful labor saver in a taffy department and the principle of it is extremely simple. It consists of two upright iron posts, each supporting a revolving arm with a projecting tooth a foot long or longer at either end. The taffy is pulled on the teeth. The trick of the machine is that the revolving arms do not revolve on their centres. The pivots upon which they turn are considerably nearer one end than the other, with the result that two of the teeth pass outside and two inside each other. That's where the "pull" comes in. The machine will pull 80 lbs of hard taffy in six or seven minutes and do it much better than a man possibly could.

H. L. Hildreth charges a rental of $300 a year and collects, it is said, between $100,000 and 200,000 a year. To sell a machine outright, the price is $2,000.

The McCormack Mfg. Co. claim that Hildreth has not manufactured the machine within two years in Canada and that he will not lease or sell at a reasonable rate as required by the patent law.

The Robt. Watson Co. had one of the machines made for themselves before the Canadian patent was taken out and it cost for patterns and everything $100. There are only three or four of the machines in Canada. Like most candy machines there are other claimants to the patent rights.

PRIVATE CARS FOR BISCUITS.

The Mooney Biscuit Co., of Stratford, have now the distinction of being the only manufacturers of foodstuffs in Canada owning private freight cars. This is indicative of their progressive spirit, and insures clean transportation. The company have been in business only three years, but they have been years of phenomenal progress.

The new cars are of standard size and are painted in a rich cream color. To right and left of the doors is painted the familiar blue and purple brand of the Mooney Perfection Cream Sodas. On the doors themselves is the fac-simile of the famous Mooney chocolate chips. The cars have each a capacity of 60,000 lbs., and weigh 36,000 lbs. They will soon become familiar to the public as they pass along the leading lines of railway carrying the Mooney products throughout Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The Mooney factory has been extended each year since its inception owing to the demands of business, and this season the company have been compelled to build again, contracts having just been let for a building which will practically double their present premises.

THE WORLD'S COCOA CROP.

The world's cocoa crop amounted in 1904 to 146,552 tons, or 16 per cent. over that of 1903, according to figures just published by the German Cocoa Trade Journal.

The United States led the world in cocoa consumption, using 33,159 tons, Germany following with 27,101 tons, France with 21,799, the United Kingdom with 20,552, and Netherlands with 21,124 tons. Switzerland, using 6,839 tons, leads the remaining countries. Canada used 1,840 tons. Italy consumed only 479 tons in 1904.

The production of cocoa has steadily increased since 1901, when it was 105,720 tons. Ecuador, which is the largest cocoa producing country (28,433 tons in 1904), showed a 42 1-2 per cent. increase; Brazil, with 23,160 tons, made a 11 1-2 per cent. increase; St. Thomas furnished 20,526 tons, or a 4 1-4 per cent. decrease. Trinidad, which increased 25 per cent., to 18,574 tons, formerly shipped the entire crop to London, but now ships largely to Hamburg, Havre and New York by German and other steamers. Santo Domingo made a great stride in cocoa production, advancing 74 per cent., to 13,575 tons. Here the plantations are mostly in the hands of small farmers, with the exception of a few large estates, the most important of which belongs to a Swiss chocolate firm, and is fitted out with extensive agricultural machinery and narrow gauge railways. As suitable land is obtainable in Santo Domingo at a very low price, the crop may be expected to increase yearly. Hamburg is the principal market for Santo Domingo cocoas.

Venezuela was the sixth country in cocoa production, advancing 4 per cent., to 13,048 tons. Grenada was seventh, with 6,262 tons, a 1 1-4 per cent. increase, all of it going to England, where it is preferred. The Gold Coast in Africa made the greatest increase in the cocoa crop of 1904, marketing 568 tons, or 148 per cent. over the 1903 crop. In 1901 the Gold Coast produced only 196 tons. More and more cocoa plantations there are reaching the cropping stage, which requires five to six years. Cuba and Porto Rico together rank ninth as producers of cocoa, the yield in 1904 having been 3,266 tons, a 15 3-4 per cent. increase over 1903. In 1901 Cuba and Porto Rico produced only 1,750 tons. Hayti furnished 2,531 tons, an increase of 16 1-2 per cent., while Jamaica's crop of 1,605 tons was the same as the previous year. Martinique and Gaudaloupe sent their 1,215 ton cocoa crop as usual to France. The Germans increased the cocoa production 40 per cent. in their colonies of Cameroons, Samoa and Togoland, which was 1,100 tons in 1904.

TRAVELERS IN AUSTRIA.

In Austria every commercial traveler has to pay a tax and for this reason he is considered a regular tradesman, even though he has no particular place of business. Austrian commercial travelers refuse to represent a firm which is not well known throughout the country unless under special arrangement. They are a hard-working class and are economical in their habits. As a rule they travel third class when making a railway trip, although representatives of liqueur establishments often travel first class. They very seldom touch liquor, and a traveler who drinks habitually, although moderately, soon loses the respect of his fellows.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

WHEN A WOMAN BUYS CIGARS.

She was a plump little matron of some thirthy Summers, and when the showcase loungers in the corner cigar emporium sighted her steel-grey paddock in the doorway they all edged away from the counter and appeared to be suddenly interested in the Oriental lithographs that came with the Egyptian cigarettes.

"I would like to look at some cigars," she announced, as she placed her shopping bag on the glass case. "I want to make a little present to my husband."

"Yes, ma'am," responded the young clerk with a low bow. "What—er—is his favorite smoke?"

"How is that?"

"I mean does your husband prefer a mild, medium, or strong cigar?"

"I think he likes strong ones. Some of those he smokes after supper are so strong that the neighbors ask if we are burning leaves in the back yard."

"H'm! They must be strong. How would these suit him?"

Liked the Ribbon.

The clerk drew a box from the showcase and displayed a row of handsome cigars, each bundle embellished with a yellow ribbon.

"I like the pretty ribbon," said the fair customer, slowly examining the cigars with her gloved finger, "but I don't like the color of the tobacco. Besides, there are horrid yellow specks on them."

The clerk suppressed a smile.

"M-- dear lad--" he hastened, "don't you know that those little spots are just what connoisseurs look for?"

"No, never heard of such a thing. I believe the cigars have been damaged. Show me another box."

Didn't Like the Picture.

The obliging clerk reached for another brand and opened the box on the showcase.

"Here is something fine," he began, but the prospective purchaser shook her head.

"It is no use to show me those. I don't like the picture on the inside of the cover."

A Woman's Logic.

The clerk smiled, and reached for another box.

"Well, how about this make? Surely the picture pleases you this time. It represents an old Cuban fort by sunset. You can take it off with warm water and use it to decorate a screen."

There is a remote possibility that the fastidious customer may have decided on the old "Cuban fort" brand had she not glanced at the end of the box. But she did glance, and all the suave cigar clerks in town could not have made her purchase those cigars.

"It is no use," she said, firmly. "I see it with my own eyes."

"See what, ma'am?" asked the mystified clerk.

"Why, the word 'Colorado.' You know that Havana cigars should not be made in Colorado. I suppose you think women are green at buying cigars."

"But, madam—"

"It is no use of trying to convince me that those cigars were not made in Colorado. Why, isn't there the stamp on the box? Why don't you try to sell me some that were packed up in Connecticut, and then claim that they are imported from Porto Rico. Oh, it takes you men to try and gold-brick a woman when she enters a cigar store."

Found What She Wanted.

The clerk sighed. He collected the open boxes and placed them back in the glass case.

"I am sorry," he said in pepperish tones, "that we don't seem to have any cigars suitable for your husband. He must, indeed, be a fastidious smoker."

The overparticular patron did not reply to this hidden thrust. She swept up and down in front of the long glass cases and minutely examined every box of cigars on display. Suddenly she pointed her slender finger toward a long box with an expression of triumph.

"There is what I want," she exclaimed. "Those real long cigars. I know they are just the kind that Henry smokes. He will be tickled to death if I present him with a box of those."

The clerk followed the direction of her finger and then laughed so loud that the yellow cat, asleep on the snuff jar, awoke with a start.

"What is so laughable?" demanded the woman in the gray coat, rather sharply.

"Nothing particular, madam," hastened the clerk. "I was just thinking of a good joke I heard at the theatre the other night about a woman selecting cigars for her husband. Do you really want those?"

"I certainly do. Don't think that I don't know good cigars when I see them. I know Henry will compliment my judgment as soon as he smokes the first one. Wrap them up, please."

The smiling clerk drew forth the long box and quickly wrapped it up in pink paper and tied it with a blue cord.

"One dollar ninety-nine, ma'am," he said. "That's right. Thank you."

She gave him a two-dollar note and he returned her a copper in change.

"And now you admit that I know something about selecting cigars?" she said with a winning little smile.

"I do, indeed, ma'am," assured the clerk. "Very few would have selected the brand of smokes that you did."

She placed the box under her arm, and the next moment her steel-grey paddock had vanished in the crowded street. Then the chronic loungers turned away from the Oriental cigarette lithographs.

What Harry Got.

"What kind did she select?" they asked in unison.

"Stogies!" roared the clerk. "Upon my word, she selected a box of Pittsburg stogies. Preferred their looks to Havanas and Porto Ricos. Maybe it was the bargain counter price of $1.99 that attracted her. Say, I'd like to be around when the old man opens that box."

And the clerk grinned and threw a ball of tinfoil at the yellow cat on the snuff jar.

CUTTING TOBACCO PRICES.

Considerable discussion has arisen over an authoritative report being circulated in Montreal to the effect that some of the wholesale grocery houses are cutting the prices of Macdonald's tobaccos. In the trade there is a general feeling of dissatisfaction caused by this action.

LEAVES.

W. Bailey, tobacco and cigars, Ottawa, Ont., has admitted son into partnership; style now W. Bailey & Son.

Customs authorities at Montreal last week seized 50,000 cigarettes on the steamer Montreal. It is said there has been systematic smuggling of German cigarettes from Antwerp.

Upon the application of the American Tobacco Co., who claimed the tobacconist had left the city, an order has been issued placing in liquidation the estate of Jos. Desrosiers, Montreal. The liabilities are $1,000 and assets $500.

A big fire at Woodstock, N.B., last week wiped out 15 places of business, including two groceries, Holyoke & Brown's and Sullivan's. The total loss was $40,000.

LABOR'S HOSTS ON THE MOVE.

The Labor Gazette for May, the organ of the Department of Labor, Ottawa, reviewing the industrial situation for April, says:

"Employment increased very materially throughout Canada during April, as compared with March. Seeding was actively in progress among agriculturists over a wide area: the lobster and mackerel season opened on the Atlantic Coast; the lumbering industry had a very busy month in British Columbia, Ontario and the Eastern Provinces; the mining industry was exceptionally busy in almost every field; manufacturing establishments were working to full capacity, overtime prevailing in many branches, and the work of preparation for the unprecedented amount of railway construction to be undertaken during the present year was fully under way, many thousands of men, in addition to those employed on existing contracts, were expected to be at work within a short period. The beginning of building operations was in several of the most active centres on a scale never before equalled, and civic improvement work also gave promise at the close of the month of an exceptionally active season. Navigation opened on the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes during April, a week earlier at most points than last year, giving employment to large numbers of workmen. The influx of immigrants was unprecedentedly heavy. Compared with April, 1905, conditions were more active in every province, the improvement being especially marked in the case of British Columbia and the Maritime Provinces."

The Supreme Tribunal

The tea drinking public of Canada, after a trial extending over years and despite the frantic efforts of the opposing forces, have arrived at a practically unanimous verdict to the effect that on the following counts:—

I. Fineness of fragrance.
II. Purity and delicacy of flavor.
III. Refreshing and invigorating qualities.
IV. Absence of deleterious elements.
V. Happy combination of those qualities demanded by the Canadian palate.

Ceylon Tea, Black and Green, stands head and shoulders above all competitors.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

Quality Canned Goods

We don't want you to forget that the distinguishing feature about the Old Homestead Brand Canned Goods is their superior quality.

We did not go into the canned goods business in a hurry. We were not promoters anxious to put through a stock deal. We were not amateurs desirous of making an experiment.

The Old Homestead Canning Company

went into the canned goods business to stay. That's why we went to the expense of building our immense cement block and steel factory and warehouses, equipped them with the very latest and most improved machinery and put in charge the best processor that could be secured.

We are thus able to take care of all fruits and vegetables without delay while they are fresh from the field. They are put up under conditions of absolute cleanliness and open up the very acme of perfection. You can absolutely depend on Old Homestead Brand. If you sell Old Homestead, you will please the most particular. Insist on having Old Homestead.

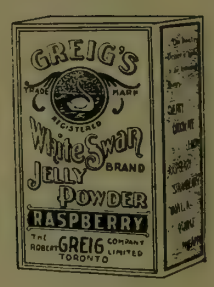
Did it Ever Occur to You to think how much money you could make in the course of the year just by pushing the sale of some of the smaller items of your stock?

Take Jelly Powders and Flavoring Extracts, for example. Goods that never aggregate much money in your stock, but which pay handsome profit in the selling.

Try it and see how many packages and bottles you can sell in a day just by suggesting it to the customers in your store. The result will be ever so much better profits than obtained from the same effort used in selling heavy goods on which your margin is so light.



PARTICULARLY SO if you push high grade lines like Greig's White Swan Jellies and Flavors. Their quality is such that your patrons want more. Your profit on these is especially attractive. Try a sample lot at our risk and see how they go.

'Tis Thus

All dealers that we have interested in the sale of "SALADA" Ceylon Tea (and that we still hope to interest) are those with their eyes wide open to the bald fact that in these keen competitive days, it's nothing short of "Commercial Insanity" to trifle in values.

Men who realize that to shave qualities here and there is a practice that none dare indulge in with impunity, as what might apparently be gained to-day is lost tenfold to-morrow in declining trade, dissatisfied customers, and a stock which shows an obstinate inclination to "stick."

THE "TOP NOTCH" QUALITY AND VALUE OF "SALADA" IS PAST ALL DEBATE.

You must look into the by-ways and hedges of the past for convincing proof that "quality" tells in the long run—there are financial wrecks there without number. And the figure of the grocer who was tempted to buy doubtful goods for a little saving on price looms up like a lighthouse in a dense fog. It pays to buy standard goods like

Pure, White, Crystaline

Windsor Table Salt, because it is all salt every single time. No impurity in it, because it is sifted, not ground. No "caking," because every drop of moisture is dried out of it. Remember the wrecks of the past when tempted to buy salt said to be "just as good as Windsor."

"For Breakfast, Dinner, Luncheon or Tea, Queen Quality Sweet Pickles are the best for me."

That the average person tires of the average pickle is pretty well conceded. Indigestion usually follows indulgence, and this simply augments the ranks of adherents whose dogma is: "Pickles are no good, anyway."

In

Queen Quality Sweet Pickles

we have been fortunate in striking a lucky recipe. We are able to produce a pickle that has all the delicacy and palatableness of an appetizer and besides the substantiality of a food—the kind of pickles that invalids and men of muscle, alike, relish.

Grocers, we want Queen Quality Pickles to sell in your district.
Will you write us for particulars?

BRAND NEW MACHINERY IN A BRAND NEW FACTORY

We hate antique methods. We run from antique machinery. We have got the "up-to-date" germ in our veins.

We have erected an elegant factory down here at Wellington, put in the latest machinery, and gone to more pains for an ideal sanitary system than half the canners ever dreamed of. But, you know,

RIVERDALE BRAND CANNED GOODS

had to be the best. There was no avoiding it.

Our processor says our place is the best he ever worked in. He ought to know. He says "Riverdale Brand" will "take." He ought to know.

"A Brand New Brand" will interest you.

TROUBLE GALORE!

The daily papers of Detroit, Mich., report Alice D. Clement has just brought suit for $15,000 damages against a firm in that city for selling her, as she alleges, a preparation for cleaning stoves which exploded when she used it, burning her severely. No storekeeper can afford to take the chance of selling inferior, dangerous, inflammable stove polish. The courts may hold the seller responsible for the resulting accidents which often bring horrible disfigurements, if not death, to the users. Remember, RISING SUN Stove Polish in cakes and SUN PASTE Stove Polish in tins are now and always have been absolutely safe in the hands of the user.

BOARDS OF TRADE AND CIVICS

What is Being Done in Montreal—Vice-President Caverhill Tells The Canadian Grocer.

Mr. George Caverhill, vice-president of the Montreal Board of Trade, when interviewed by a representative of The Canadian Grocer regarding board of trade activity in municipal affairs, and the Halifax plan of a joint committee of the board of trade and council, said :

"I fear there is no hope for the adoption in this city of a scheme similar to that in force in Halifax, nor do I believe that it would be to the best interests of the city that such a system should be adopted. There are many objections which occur to me at once, and doubtless there are others even more serious which would develop in the carrying out of the scheme of having a joint committee from the city council and the board of trade. In the first place, if the business men of the city are consulted on certain matters it follows that other interests should be consulted in the same way when subjects in which they are concerned come up, and while the aldermen may, if they desire, unofficially consult such bodies as occasion arises, it would be impracticable to have them properly represented on any committee.

Tie Aldermen's Hands.

"Again, should such a committee be organized, the aldermen are almost forced to follow its recommendations or, in other words, a body composed of some members at least who are not directly responsible to the citizens would have undue power in the transaction of the city's affairs, a principle which I do not think would meet the approval of citizens generally. So far as I can see the only hope we have of economical and businesslike administration of the city's affairs is in the active personal interest of every citizen in the choice of representatives on the city council. If the proper men are chosen for this office they can be relied upon to secure advice from those with more knowledge than themselves on any subjects requiring special knowledge which may come before them, but if this type of men is not chosen we can hardly hope that, even assuming that they received the best of advice, they would be disposed to follow it.

Government by Commission.

"The alternative of this is government of the city by a small commission. This proposal would, I am sure, meet the hearty approval of all business men, but, unfortunately, it is extremely unlikely that citizens generally would accept it.

"While I believe that the charge is generally made that the business men of Montreal do not take a proper interest in municipal affairs individually, I do not think that the same can be said about business men collectively, as the Montreal Board of Trade, the most thoroughly representative business organization of the city, has always taken an active interest in the larger questions which have come before the city council, and have lost no opportunity of giving the city council the views of the business men on such subjects. During the last two and a half years the council of the board of trade has taken up many municipal matters. I refer especially to this period, as having been a member of the council for that time I have been more familiar with its work than formerly.

Done in Montreal.

"In 1904, while the Act to amend the charter of the City of Montreal was before the Quebec Legislature, the board of trade council, which, by the way, appoints each year a special committee on municipal affairs, went most thoroughly into the provisions of the proposed amendment and made representations on all clauses which, in its opinion, required alteration, and was largely successful in securing a number of changes which would commend themselves to every thinking citizen. In the same year the city council had before it the subject of the much-needed increase of civic revenue, and appointed a special committee thereon. This committee very sensibly advised the council of the board of trade that it would be pleased to consider suggestions on the subject, and we went into the matter most fully, communicating to the city's finance committee our opinions on the whole question in detail.

Various Suggestions.

"In 1904, also, on two different occasions, the board brought to the attention of the city council the need for cleaner streets and sidewalks, the board also making recommendations with reference to the smoke nuisance. In connection with public franchises resolutions were communicated to the city council regarding the contracts between the city and the Montreal Street Railway Company and the Gas Company—this during the year 1905. The council of the board of trade took action also to prevent the intrusion of electric railways into Mount Royal Park.

"Quite recently the question of the desired extension of Western Square to Sherbrooke street was the subject of a memorial addressed to the city council, which memorial, upon being referred to the parks and ferries committee of that body, resulted in its decision to secure estimates as to the cost of such extension, which estimates will be presented to that committee shortly, and I trust the desire of the board of trade and citizens generally in this matter will be acceded to.

Better Fire Protection.

"One other question which has, and is still, receiving attention, is the need for improved fire protection service. As citizens we can hardly claim any special credit for taking such an interest in this matter, as it affects our pockets as business men, but at the same time it is a matter in which every citizen of Montreal has a direct interest. As I said, this matter is still receiving attention at the hands of the board, and the council expects shortly to receive a report on the subject from a very strong committee appointed early in the year.

"I could mention many perhaps smaller matters on which the city council have had the advantage of advice from the board of trade, but these will suffice to show that, as I said, collectively, the business men of the city, through the board of trade, have been fully alive to the citizens' interests.

"I do not see that any advantage would accrue to the city by the adoption of the scheme now in operation in Halifax, as explained in The Canadian Grocer, whereunder the board of trade appoints some of its members who, with a certain number of the city council, form a joint committee to deal with important civic matters. If in the election of representatives on the city council the individual citizen sees to it that none but reliable and capable men are chosen, we will have a considerable improvement in the administration of civic affairs."

MONTREAL GROCERS' PICNIC.

A meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association took place in their rooms, 270 St. Catherine street east, on Thursday, June 7. The meeting was called to make arrangements for the annual picnic, which is to take place this year on July 18. P. Daoust, president, was in the chair. Some fifty members were present. All the necessary committees were formed to take charge of the sports, refreshments, tickets and other arrangements. It was not definitely decided at what time the excursionists should leave Montreal, but it is thought that it will be by G.T.R. leaving at 9 a.m. or 9.15 a.m., which goes to Ile St. Amour, where the picnic is to be held. Only one train will be used by the association.

WHOLESALERS FOR PURE FOOD

Form National Organization at Buffalo—Marks a New Epoch With the Retailers Across the Line.

What promises to be an epoch making meeting for grocery trade of the United States was held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week, at the Iroquois Hotel, Buffalo. It was a gathering of wholesale grocers from all sections of the Union, and they organized the National Wholesale Grocers' Association of the United States. The paramount issue was pure food, but equally, or more interesting, was the desire to restrain the manufacturers of foodstuffs from selling direct to the cream of the retail trade, from giving premiums with package goods, and from bribing wholesalers' travelers.

The constitution recites that the association is formed for the purpose of fostering: First, friendly relations among grocers; second, the work of securing national legislation on pure food; third, the unification of state food laws to facilitate interstate commerce; fourth, restraint of manufacturers from giving premiums; fifth, abolition of the abuses of manufacturers in subsidizing jobbers' salesmen; sixth, such other legislation as shall meet the needs and requirements of the jobbers.

Not a Combine.

The association, it is provided in the by-laws, is not to interfere in any way with legitimate competition. It is not to restrain trade nor is it to act in the matter of limited prices. It is distinctly stated that the association will not be understood as a combination.

This convention was the outcome of a state convention of grocers at Milwaukee a year ago, when a committee was appointed to formulate a plan for national organization. This plan was submitted on the second day by the chairman of the committee, Wm. Judson, Grand Rapids, Mich., later elected president of the new association.

Nearly a forenoon was given to discussing the annual fees. The plan submitted was a scale between $10 and $1,000, according to the volume of business. A flat entrance fee of $25 and $10 a year were adopted.

Adopted Two Resolutions.

Two resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That this convention is in favor of the enactment and enforcement of a national pure food law, which will tend to the introduction of uniform state laws, the purpose of which shall be the prevention of the manufacture and sale of food which is injurious or deleterious, and the safeguarding of the public against misrepresentation or deception, and that the executive committee be authorized to so legislate.

Resolved, That we oppose the subsidizing or corrupt influencing of jobbers' salesmen by manufacturers in the shape of cash gifts, premiums, or corresponding with them for the purpose of influencing the salesmen, the principle of which is not only wrong but which practice is contrary to law in some states.

Selling by manufacturers direct to the larger retailers was roundly condemned, but action was referred to the executive.

There was strong protest against the parcels post, and the stand of the retailers on the subject was generally indorsed, but the national association did not put itself on record in the form of a resolution against it.

The Retailers' Position.

John A. Greene, president of the National Association of Retail Grocers, addressed the wholesalers on the first day. He argued that the wholesaler had more than the passive co-operation of the retailer, and said in part:

"We are here to help the jobber organize and improve conditions. The question is often asked: 'Why should I join an organization?' In answer I would say, for comparing views, debating questions of vital importance and formulating laws of trade action as will tend to elevate our business, eliminate fraudulent practices, promote fraternal regard, and by a higher standard of commercial ethics benefit every man engaged in the retail business. We have no desire to throttle legitimate competition, but we do wage merciless war against unmercantile methods engaged in for the purpose of attracting trade.

"We do not ask you at any time to cease extending limited credit, and I use the word limited after due consideration, for I do not hesitate to say that the unlimited credit extended to irresponsible merchants has done more to disrupt trade conditions, both wholesale and retail, than any other thing. We do ask you to see that the goods and credit extended are not used to cut prices and demoralize trade. This has been done, and is being done, in all branches of trade. And I am sure that if this fact is brought to your attention we shall see less of it in the future.

Centralizing Tendency.

"One of the important facts that confronts us at the present time is that of a rapid and ever increasing movement toward centralization of capital and consequent centralization in every department of industry.

"This must be met by co-operation or organized opposition on our part, for it is by and through organization that we can best hold our own against evils that confront us on every hand. The retailers are much interested in a Pure Food Bill, the Parcel Post Bill, and the premium evil. If we could have the assistance of the organized jobbers of the United States it would not be 24 hours before a settlement of the premium question could be had.

"I make an appeal that the wholesale grocers now in convention help us retailers to destroy this gigantic evil, and just as surely as the trading stamp was relegated to the rear, so surely will premium giving be done away with.

"There is no question at the present time so important as that of pure food. It is not a question by many manufacturers as to what is necessary to preserve food, but rather what cheap concoction can I produce that will bring to me large returns.

Held Responsible.

"We, the distributors, are held responsible. There never was a more unjust proposition in the world than that the innocent distributor should be held responsible for the distribution of goods put up or manufactured by the producer and we having no means of knowing their contents."

New York's President.

Perhaps the most impressive feature of the convention was an address at the opening session in advocacy of a national organization, by F. W. Hannah, president of the New York association. Some of the things he said were:

"The wholesale grocery business has encountered many changes within last ten years, and it is clearly demonstrated, as in other lines of trade, that intelligent organization on broad and equitable lines, can minimize and eliminate abuses which have crept into the business."

"The foundation of the proposed organization must be based upon confidence and good will to our competitor and neighbor."

"Our compensation as distributors for the manufacturer, in notable instances, does not provide the cost of doing business."

"Who is to blame? The wholesale grocer. Natural and unavoidable conditions have increased the cost of conducting business, yet some of us seem unmindful or ignorant of the fact that we must so regulate our business as to keep abreast of the times."

"Mail-order houses, chain stores, buying exchanges and combinations, which are being formed in some parts of our country are entitled, not only to your serious consideration, but to that of the retailer."

Fair or Equitable?

"Is it fair or equitable for the manufacturer to supply ten per cent. of a desirable class of retail trade direct, in competition with the jobber, thereby not only discriminating against the wholesale grocer, but against 90 per cent. of the retail trade, who cannot buy at first hands?"

"There was never a time in the history of the wholesale grocery business when proper organization, in the interest of the retailer, wholesaler and manufacturer, was more necessary than the present."

"The consumer is entitled to wholesome food and our laws should be so drawn and enforced as to fully protect him."

"Another error which we should strive to correct at this convention is the subsidizing of our salesmen by some manufacturers, which has grown to an alarming extent."

Cheapness a Boomerang.

"The old-fashioned way of doing business and trying to sell goods so cheap that our neighbor cannot stand it, generally results in not standing it ourselves."

"I venture that at least 65 per cent. of the retail grocers would have to give up business were it not for the aid and help of the wholesale grocer, who carries a stock of all lines called for."

"Let each of us determine that we will not favor any manufacturer's goods who discriminates against 90 per cent. of the retail grocers, whom it should be our duty to protect, and also see to it that no goods are sold by our houses that do not bear a margin above the cost of the goods, plus the cost of doing business, and a different balance sheet will be developed."

Selling Sugar.

"It has been the policy of what is known as the sugar trust to manage their business in such a way that the distributor, whose sales of sugar amount to 20 or 25 per cent. of his business, have to be made for about the price he pays for the sugar, which is a dead loss to the rest of his business of whatever it costs him to do the business."

"Experience has proven that if we give proper attention to our business, it is not necessary to sell large lines of staple goods at less than the cost of doing business."

"Is there any reason why we should all work ourselves to death and sit up nights trying to distribute sugar on this basis? Would it not be better to let the refiner distribute the sugar?

The sugar trust has denied Mr. Hannah's impeachment.

Abandon Private Brands.

A representative of one large manufacturer of cereals told The Grocer that if they wished the manufacturers not to sell direct to retailers they (the wholesalers) should stop putting up private brands and pushing them to the detriment of manufacturers' goods.

At a banquet tendered the visitors by the Buffalo wholesalers, covers were laid for 180 guests.

It is said the association has an assured membership of 1,000. Headquarters will be in New York.

FOOD ADULTERATION AND LAW

Most Frauds are Against the Pockets, not the Stomachs of Consumers, is the Experts' Finding.

(By A. McGill, Government Analyst, Ottawa.)

The Adulteration Act provides for the publication of the names of manufacturers and vendors of fraudulent goods, as well as their punishment by fines. The fine may be, at the discretion of the Minister of Inland Revenue, merely the cost of procuring and analyzing the sample; and in recognition of the fact that the Adulteration Act marks a new departure in legislation, the fines heretofore imposed have been no larger than this amount. But the act also provides that a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars for a first offence, and from fifty to two hundred dollars for subsequent offences, may be imposed.

Absence of Standards.

One of the main difficulties in defining adulteration has been the absence of standards of quality for most food products. A committee has been appointed by the Department of Agriculture at Washington to investigate and define these substances and one of the chemists of the Inland Revenue of Canada has been nominated to this committee. Many foods have already been defined and limits set for their variability, such standards being made legal by Act of Congress in the United States, and it is likely that similar action will ere long be taken in Canada. The reports of the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, from 1891, contain frequent reference to the need of establishing such standards.

Protection for Retailer.

The most important amendment to the act is that of 1898, when a form of warranty was legalized by which the retailer may protect himself and place the responsibility for the purity of his goods upon the manufacturer or wholesale dealer. This warranty must be produced in court, in case of a prosecution for sale of adulterated goods.

Decrease of Adulteration.

In order to show the effect of the Adulteration Act upon the quality of food, it is only necessary to examine the following statistics, in which the number of samples analyzed in each year and the percentage of adulteration found is given:

Year.	Samples Analyzed.	Percentage Adulteration.
1877	488	51
1878	813	33
1880	1043	28
1882	1122	26
1884	1520	32
1886	1142	18
1889	1062	40
1891	934	30
1894	1021	15
1896	1265	9
1898	879	10
1899	805	11
1900	756	24
1901	881	20
1902	883	9
1903	541	7

Some Goods More Liable.

Some allowance must be made for the fact that the same articles are not collected every year, and certain classes of goods are more liable to adulteration than others. If we take special kinds of food, the improvement will be more apparent. In the case of milk, the percentage of adulterated samples is reduced from 58 in 1876 to 16 in 1902. In pepper from 89 per cent. to 27 per cent.; in coffee from 90 per cent. to 41 per cent.; and in spices, other than pepper, from 88 to 32 per cent.

It will be readily seen that there is still room for improvement, and it is at least gratifying to know that existing adulteration is rather a fraud against the pocket than a menace to the health of the consumer.

New But Wholesome Foods.

The progress of chemistry has added several wholesome articles of food to those already known to our fathers. We may mention glucose, a product of the action of acid upon starch; cotton seed oil and stearin, which are quite valuable food substances closely resembling olive oil and lard respectively. Very brilliant and probably harmless dyes have largely replaced the expensive vegetable coloring matters of former days.

It is not the use of these things that constitutes adulteration; it is their unacknowledged substitution for more expensive or better known substances. When glucose is sold under the name of sugar, or maple syrup, or honey, we have very apparent adulteration. Just in the same way adulteration occurs when cotton seed oil is sold as olive oil, or oleomargarine as butter. It is apparent that not only has the consumer a right to complain in such a case, but the honest manufacturer has equally a grievance.

Nutritive Values not Considered.

It is to be noted that the Adulteration Act does not deal with the question of nutritive values, except as an indirect issue. Neither does it require that the relative qualities of food substances should be investigated, except so far as a direct claim by the manufacturer may constitute a ground of action against him, should his claim not be made good. For example, coffee may be genuine, and yet be of a very poor quality; wine may be technically true to its name, and yet have very little value.

Some work has nevertheless been done in the laboratory of the department having for its object the ascertainment of relative values among food substances; and it is to be hoped that this highly important investigatory work will become more and more prominently a feature of our reports. In the United States two large laboratories, one in Connecticut and another in Pennsylvania, are specially appointed for carrying out work of this character.

PERSONAL.

C. D. Cowles, traveling representative of St. Charles Condensing Co., Ingersoll, was in Montreal this week on his return from a three months' trip through the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland. Business was most satisfactory and several carloads were booked by Mr. Cowles for the Newfoundland trade alone, while the New Brunswick and Nova Scotia trade was a pleasant surprise to him owing to the volume of business booked.

Wilfred A. Archambault, of Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, is receiving the sympathy of many friends in the trade because of the loss of his wife this week. Mrs. Archambault has been in ill health for some years and although everything physicians and careful nursing could do to restore her to health was done, she succumbed. Her husband is left with three small children.

LARGE ORDER OF FRUIT.

Medland Bros., King street east, Toronto, have got in a thousand cases of canned fruit. This firm is one of the most energetic retailers in the provincial capital, and believe in doing trade in a large way. Every member of the firm is ambitious.

O. C. Whitney, Goderich, Ont., was on a combined business and pleasure trip to London last week.

GROCER IN A HIGH PLACE

H. N. Kittson a Member of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

Henry Norman Kittson, appointed last week by the Whitney Government to the new Railway and Municipal Board of Ontario, has for years been a prominent figure in the grocery trade. His appointment will be a source of satisfaction to readers of The Grocer, both from the fact of the recognition given thereby to the business and shipping interests, and because of Mr. Kittson's personal fitness for a position requiring the highest integrity and a mind schooled in the handling of affairs.

The board, as a new creation, has largely its own position to create. The chairman, a lawyer, Mr. Ingram, a practical railroad man, and Mr. Kittson, a shipper, constitute a personnel of no little strength. The public will look to these gentlemen to protect them from the devious devices by which the municipalities in the past have been over-reached by the traction corporations. In discharging their functions with an eye single to the interests of the province they will reap and deserve the lasting gratitude of their fellow countrymen.

Henry Norman Kittson,
Member of New Railway and Municipal Board.

Mr. Kittson, whose genial countenance is portrayed on this page, while born at Sorel, in the Province of Quebec, came to Hamilton as a small boy, and has been one of the factors in the upbuilding of the Ambitious City.

His entry upon a mercantile career dated from his arrival at Hamilton, when he became a junior in the firm of T. C. Kerr & Co., wholesale dry goods merchants. In 1879 he joined the wholesale grocery firm of W. H. Gillard as accountant, and five years later was taken into partnership. Mr. Kittson has always been the financial man of the firm, and his talents in this respect are held in high esteem.

It is hardly necessary to say that Mr. Kittson is a Conservative. He is the kind of a man who enters heart and soul into anything he undertakes, and his genial nature and keen insight made politics for him a congenial field. He was considered as high an authority in the councils of the Conservative party in Hamilton as any other of his fellow townsmen. It is not so extraordinary, therefore, that in this case the office should have sought the man, for Mr. Kittson had made no application for the position and was genuinely surprised when the offer of it came.

Besides his interests with the firm of W. H. Gillard, Mr. Kittson has been associated with various other industrial enterprises in Hamilton. He has filled the office of president of the board of trade for two terms of two years each, has been president of the St. George Benevolent Society; is also a prominent Mason, having been worshipful master of Temple Lodge for two years. Nor have athletics failed to interest a man of Mr. Kittson's wide sympathies. Indeed he has been a supporter of most of the clubs that have flourished in Hamilton. An enthusiastic oarsman and yachtsman, his hand has not yet lost its cunning in guiding the white-winged unstable craft.

Mr. Kittson is a married man with a family of two daughters and one son.

KINGSTON BOARD OF TRADE.

Kingston had a board of trade in 1872, but it tired by the way. The younger business men have seen that it is not good for Kingston to be without a board of trade and a new one has been organized with 120 members and two honorary presidents. The officers are: Honorary presidents, Hon. Wm. Harty, M.P., E. J. B. Pense, M.P.P.; president, W. T. Minnes; treasurer, W. B. Dalton; secretary, J. E. Cunningham; council—C. Bermingham, J. M. Farrell, L. L. Henderson, D. G. Laidlaw, C. A. Macpherson, Hugh Macpherson, J. A. Minnes, E. C. Mitchell, R. J. McKelvey, H. W. Richardson, T. J. Rigney, E. T. Steacy, and J. S. Turner.

Kingston, with its situation and historical associations, ought to be the centre of a big tourist trade. The board might see to it.

WINDOW AND INTERIOR DISPLAY.

The Window as an Advertising Medium not Appreciated—Cleanliness the Beginning of all Things.

What grocer, by taking thought, could not add attractiveness to his window?

Increased attractiveness in any grocer's window will add business to the store.

This is a fact, though there are many grocers who do not believe it. That is because they have not given the subject the consideration it deserves. If grocers could get away from their own stores occasionally and see how people are attracted by an interesting window display they would better appreciate this department of store keeping.

Don't begin to cite exceptions. I know there are a few. I know a store that does probably the biggest grocery trade in a capital city and its windows would not do credit to a village merchant. But it has been established a great many years and many of its best customers seldom or never see it. They order by telephone or their orders are called for. It is not in a business part of the city that is much frequented by the multitude of shoppers. So you see that store proves nothing contrary to my argument. And most of the so-called exceptions will upon examination be found to be exceptions in other ways.

* * *

No, the window is usually an index to store character that will attract or repel the trade of a great many people.

If the grocer who dresses his window as a mere matter of course, just for the sake of decency, and finds it a weekly or fortnightly drudgery, would get interested in the work, he would surprise himself. There's a lot to be learned in window dressing. New ideas are ever pleasant and exhilarating. But there is more than knowledge, there is art concealed behind the veil of indolence and don't-care that hides the possibilities of window dressing from so many grocers.

* * *

There are schools of window dressing. That fact itself should set a good many men thinking. Go out and take a look at your window and try and imagine what figure it would cut in a school where people are taught the art and practice of window dressing. Would you like to recommend it as a model?

* * *

The first thing to learn about window dressing is cleanliness—no dead flies, or live ones, if you can help it, but mind, no dead ones, no dust, no dirty window glass or mirrors. A shop window is much like a woman. She may be plain and her clothes poor but if she and they are neat and clean she is attractive, though perhaps not winsome.

A BULL IN A GROCERY.

The Scottish Trader, of Glasgow, Scotland, gives this illustration of window dressing:

Originality in window dressing is now considered one of the professions. Shopkeepers well know the value of an attractive or striking display of their goods, and some men have quite a genius for pleasing the eye or arresting the attention of the passerby, even though the material at their command may not in itself be beautiful. At the grocery establishment of Mr. McQueen, Hillhead, just now, pedestrians are at the first glance being startled into the belief that a bull is standing gazing at them out of the grocer's shop window. But it is only the art of the window dresser. The head of the ox is genuine. and the skin so arranged in conjunction with cunning touches of paint as to bring out the perspective of the body so effectively that it is hard to throw off the impression that it is not a real beastie looking out of his byre. Pots of bovril laid out to advantage make the commercial actuality.

A MERCHANT'S POINT OF VIEW.

A prominent Chicago merchant said in a newspaper interview:

"Among the many methods that the merchant has to use for advertising the most direct, best, and attractive means is the show window. For this reason the art of window dressing has advanced to a marked degree in so far that the window dresser has to use all available auxiliaries for producing the best effects in his window and the more individual and unique his display the greater the impression on the outside public.

"The success of a tastily arranged window is best manifested by the interest which it produces in the passer-by. One person looking and staying before a window will invariably draw others, and soon we can see ring after ring of curious onlookers watching the ensemble and details, admiring the peculiar ideas of the window dresser, speaking about some original, charming and novel effect, and going away to talk to others about it, thus unconsciously advertising the merchant and bringing him new customers. Thus is seen the importance of having modern ideas in dressing a window."

MONEY VALUE OF WINDOW DISPLAY.

Telling of the value of window display as advertising, an English advertising magazine says:

To appreciate their value you should do a little figuring. How many people pass your place in a day? If the average is ten a minute in the eight busiest hours of the day 4,800 people would pass your window. This number, 4,800, represents what, in newspaper parlance is called "daily circulation." Now, your show window occupies, say, 100 square feet surface, and in it you can display attractively quite a line of goods, changing the display as often as you wish. In a daily newspaper, with an actual circulation of 4,800, 100 square inches (not square feet) would cost approximately £2 per day, and in this space you can put only illustrations of the articles themselves, and, as a rule, the illustrations but imperfectly represent those articles. Now, your window space presents a surface 144 times as great as your £2 newspaper space, has depth, in addition to surface, and in it can be displayed the articles themselves, true to life as to color, size, shape, and everything, and, furthermore, they are seen at the entrance to your establishment, inside of which a salesman stands ready to give additional information and exercise his ability in making a sale. This window space is yours every day and all day, it presents wonderful possibilities as an advertising medium, and it's up to you to get those possibilities out of it. If newspaper space, properly used, is worth its cost (and we are firmly convinced it is) how important it is that so valuable an advertising medium as the show window should not be neglected.

CANADA SHOULD KEEP AHEAD.

Already the Chicago packing house scandal is fading from the public mind and what is being done to improve the opportunity opened for the Canadian industry? Probably the packer says: "We can't get hogs now to supply export demand for our products. What's the use of our getting excited?" The Government naturally wants to be shown what to do. Canadian newspapers and politicians have been talking about the wonderful opportunity. It begins to look as if the advantage would be snatched by the Americans. The Chicago packers are cleaning up. Their haste was almost ludicrous. A telegraph despatch says: "The surroundings of the workers in three big plants were improved fifty per cent. in one day." They will spend millions if necessary. The inspection law will be passed; the president will approve and the packers will go to Great Britain with a clean bill of health and a Roosevelt guarantee and advertise their product as the cleanest and best in the world. The stain will be blotted out and where will Canada's opportunity be then?

The Dominion Government had better get busy right away on a plan of supervision that will be efficient. The Canadian plants are sanitary; the packers' methods are clean. They have been building the industry on merit. But the plants are not perfect; improvements are possible. The packers should study and plan for the betterment of their plants. Working together, the Government and the packers can save the Canadian industry from the American experience.

It is worth while.

Here are the figures showing Canada's exports, practically all to Great Britain, of meat products during the last fiscal year:

Bacon and hams	$12,558,075
Canned meats	3,546,050
Meats (all other) and lard..	702,308

While urging wise action by the Government and the packers, it must be borne in mind that the present conditions of the Canadian industry are clean and sanitary. The problem is to maintain our superiority.

TELL THE PUBLIC.

The pure food agitation will result in a good many manufacturers taking the public into their confidence. Adulteration is one thing, a substitute foodstuff is quite another. Oleomargerine is a cheap, wholesome, nutritious substitute for butter, but it is dishonest to sell it as butter. Cotton seed oil is a clean and wholesome substitute for lard, but a lard or compound composed mostly of it should not be sold as pure pork fat. There is to-day a big demand for maple flavored syrup, and it is pure and wholesome, but it should not be sold as the unadulterated, concentrated juice of the maple, what people usually mean when they say pure maple syrup.

Such substitute foods as these are useful and necessary, are in large demand and would be purchased just as readily, perhaps more so, if people were rightly informed of their true character. There is no justification for deception; people resent it and it is not good business. Surely everyone has a right to know what he eats! Then let the manufacturer of good food substitutes take the public into its confidence. The public will respect him and his products.

NEEDS TRADE AGENTS.

Canada during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, imported from the United Kingdom for home consumption, goods to the value of $60,342,704, and from the United States goods to the value of $152,431,626. The London (Eng.) Miller draws attention to the fact that the United States have in Canada 189 consular and trade agents, and continues:

"This country has no agents in Canada, and offers no official assistance to our exporters to that colony. A condition of things almost as bad prevails with regard to Australia, South Africa and India, and it is time a reform were instituted. We do not advocate sending a number of highly-paid, expensive and useless officials to these colonies, to idle away their time in attending receptions and balls, but we do need in our colonies a staff of capable and shrewd men, with a grasp of business possibilities, to assist home manufacturers and exporters. It is surely possible to find a number of such men in our country, and we hope that the question will be brought to the front in the next session, so that the existing reproach can be removed."

MAPLE FLAVORED SYRUP.

If a manufacturer takes corn syrup, a pure and wholesome product, and flavors it with the juice of the maple in some form and sells it as maple flavored syrup we maintain he is engaged in a perfectly legitimate business. That is an entirely different undertaking from adulterating maple syrup and maple sugar and selling them as pure. The difference is between honesty and fraud.

A large manufacturer of maple compound or maple flavored syrup has written taking exception to an article in last week's issue headed "The Same Old Story," calling upon the Government to prohibit the fraudulent adulteration of maple products. A more careful reading of the article would show that the objection is not well founded. The maple flavored syrup is a perfectly legitimate article and absolutely necessary if the mass of people who must get along on limited means are to know aught of the flavored sweetness of the national tree.

BOARDS OF TRADE AND CIVICS.

Vice-President Caverhill, of the Montreal Board of Trade, has the right idea about improving civic government—get the individual citizen to take an interest. If that could be done the great problem of local government would be solved. Except spasmodically, because of some scandal or well-organized effort for reform, it has not yet been done. Some fellow is shown to have boodled and he is kicked out by an irate electorate. That's all; a worse man or an incompetent succeeds, and the game goes on. But in Canada there is very little municipal graft. The evil is incompetence riding on the shoulders of indifference. The business men make up most of the aggregate indifference. They keep so far away from municipal affairs that they are not in touch with the methods of the gentlemen who make a business of civics and usually a mighty poor business from the standpoint of the citizens' welfare. When they do drift into close proximity they are apt not to enjoy the experience and decide thereafter to "stick to business."

Lack of civic pride is at the bottom of it all. Patriotism should begin at home, but it doesn't. If men had pride in their city, town, village or township, they would be interested in the management of its affairs.

It will interest Grocer readers to learn what is being done by the board of trade in Montreal. Mr. Caverhill may be right about the Halifax plan. But it is not the plan that matters. To every board of trade we would say: "Get interested and you'll make your own plan."

GETTING UNDER THE FLAG.

J. Y. Griffin & Co., of Winnipeg, have sold out their pork and beef packing establishment. Swift & Co., of Chicago, are reported to be the purchasers, by which means they hope to capture British trade.

THE PORK PACKERS

Canadian Factories Pass Health Office Inspection— Answers to Questions— Situation at Washington.

The Chicago packers have been cleaning up, Congress is still wrestling with the meat inspection bill, and the week's researches by health authorities in Canada have resulted in further substantiating the claim that the packing industry in this country is conducted upon cleanly and sanitary lines.

This inspection has been mainly in Toronto. There the board of health took the matter up and instituted an investigation of all the places where animals are slaughtered, and curing, packing or canning is carried on. An exhaustive report, including statistics, has been promised. Meanwhile the statement is given out that things generally were found to be very satisfactory.

Some Pertinent Questions.

The Grocer addressed a series of questions to Canadian packers. Here they are with the replies of George Matthews & Co., of Hull, Quebec, which fairly represent the others :

Q.—Kindly state your experience and views regarding wood as material for interior fitting of a packing house.

A.—Wood is a good material for interior fitting of a packing house.

Q.—How is your factory ventilated and lighted ?

A.—Windows, ventilators and power fans.

Q.—What is the nature of the sanitary conveniences in your factory ?

A.—Good.

Q.—Where do your employes eat their mid-day lunch ?

A.—Ninety per cent. go home; dining room is provided for those who bring their dinners.

Q.—How do you deal with animals that arrive dead or diseased ?

A.—Render into soap grease.

Q.—What method have you adopted for detecting disease in slaughtered animals ?

A.—Thorough inspection by competent men.

Q.—What classes of prepared or canned meats do you put up ?

A.—All classes of cooked meats but no canned meats.

Q.—From the standpoint of protection for the consumer, what is your view regarding Government inspection in the manufacture of foodstuffs, and especially in regard to meat products ?

A.—Not necessary. The amount of business is too limited.

Q.—The present situation offers an unparalleled opportunity for the expansion of the Canadian produce industry where it comes into competition with the American product. Can the Dominion Government do anything to assure the foreign consumer as to the quality and cleanliness of the Canadian output ?

A.—To expand the business the Government should educate the farmers to raise more cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry. The packing houses being isolated, should be inspected under Dominion regulations, but by local authorities.

Good Terms With Employes.

The company add :

"From our knowledge of the business, we would say the packing house work in Canada is well done; not having the dirty foreign element that exists in American cities, it is much more easy to do our work better, as there is, we think, generally speaking, a very kindly feeling between employers and employes, which is quite a contrast to the feeling that exists on the other side of the line."

Provincial Officer's Opinion.

Dr. C. A. Hodgetts, chief medical health officer for Ontario, in a statement to the press said :

"Slaughter houses throughout the country, in which cattle are slaughtered for domestic purposes, should be strictly inspected by the local authorities under Government supervision ; should be under direct Government inspection, and every house should pay a certain fee to meet the cost of that supervision. I am glad to say that the packing houses I have seen in Canada are pretty clean, and their operations are seemingly carried out under proper conditions."

Useful Interference.

The question of inspection was raised in the Canadian Senate last week and advocated by Senator Bernier. Sir Richard Cartwright in reply said the attention of the Government had been drawn to the astounding disclosures of American packing methods, and the Government was prepared to deal with the question of meat inspection. He thought it would be rather a case of enforcing existing laws and regulations than of enacting additions to them. He did not know how much power was left to the federal authorities or how much was assigned to the municipalities and provinces in the matter of inspection. However, he believed there was an opportunity for useful interference.

He thought the disclosures referred to furnished Canada and other British colonies an opportunity for extending their dressed meat business.

A Packer's View.

A reporter who accompanied the Toronto Health Department inspector to the plant of Park, Blackwell & Co., and found it in splendid shape, wrote :

"The branch of the business in which opportunities for abuse would occur would be in the killing and cutting up department, where it might be possible to use animals suffering from disease, or the carcasses of animals which had died en transit. Mr. Blackwell says, in connection with this, that it would not pay the packers to adopt such a course as they brand all their products with the firm name, and could not afford to risk their reputation. Animals which die from natural causes, he says, are used for the manufacture of fertilizer."

This pretty well represents the attitude of the Canadian packer towards inspection. They think it is not needed, but if the Government should think differently, very well; they have no objection so long as the Government pays for it.

Consumption Falls Off.

Reports, wherever available, are to the effect that the consumption in Canada of American canned meats has for the time, at least, practically ceased. The total value of canned meats imported into Canada in 1905, the last year reported, was only $109,696.

Mr. Osborne, a Hamilton grocer, said customers of his who had been large users of canned meats had expressed their intention of eating them no more. Expressing an opinion, he said the exposure would drive the trade to cooked meats which the dealer would cut in his own shop, and which was a home product.

Doings in Washington.

The Beveridge Inspection Bill is making slow progress at Washington. On Monday the court handling it got through only 4 of the 19 clauses, and decided upon only one alteration, to eliminate the provision for the dating of canned goods labels.

What Will Happen.

The New York Times, forecasting the probable course of the bill, says it will probably be amended in some respects. First, as to who shall pay the cost of inspection. The bill says the packers. The packers say the Government. A representative of the National Live Stock Association asks that an appropriation be made and the secretary of agriculture be empowered to levy upon the packers if more is required. A fourth plan is the reverse of the third, to levy on the packers a small fee and appropriate the balance needed. It is said the stockmen's suggestion will prevail.

The bill is to be made constitutional in keeping with the advice of Solicitor McCabe, of the Department of Agriculture, to the effect that Congress has power to deal only with products for interstate or export business.

May Use Preservatives.

The Beveridge bill prohibits the use of preservatives, chemicals and dyes. It will be changed to provide that no preservatives or other chemicals shall be used which will in any way render the product unwholesome or unfit for human food.

The dating of inspection labels is already stricken out.

The bill calls for the total destruction of condemned carcasses. They will be allowed for fertilizer or grease. The use of parts of carcasses hurt in transit will be provided for.

Farmers and small butchers are to be exempted.

Strong for Packers.

The packers are not without friends in this fight. The National Provisioner, the leading organ of the provision trade, led off last week with this flare headline, "Meat trade demands fair play. Not the Roosevelt brand of 'square deal' but a verdict based on facts instead of misrepresentation." And here is a sample of what follows :

"A simple reading of the President's message will reveal the intemperate and intolerant attitude of its author. He strikes a direct and open blow at an export trade which amounted last year to over a quarter of a billion dollars. He threatens, unless Congress shall pass the inspection bill he approves, that he will withdraw inspection labels from all American packing-house products—which would mean the entire wiping out of the foreign trade.

"Indeed, he has by his threat done as much harm as though he had withdrawn the label, for by his words he gives notice to the world that it is his own opinion that under the present law no American packing house product is fit to be exported.

"Of course he does not mean any such thing, but it is only another illustration of the dangerous Roosevelt temper and the reckless Roosevelt pen. It is incidentally additional evidence of the Roosevelt animus against the meat interests in the United States.

"Both the message and the report are striking illustrations of the character of the campaign being waged against a great American industry — a campaign based on hearsay and surmise and ignorance."

The Butcher's Advocate makes its attitude clear thus :

"The latest attack on the packing industry is more unfair and reckless than any that have preceded it. With very few exceptions the newspapers have published lies of the most malicious nature."

J. Ogden Armour is reported from Paris by an interviewer as saying :

"The whole of these so-called revelations have been directly engineered by Mr. Roosevelt. The truth is that Mr. Roosevelt has strong personal animus against the packers of Chicago and is doing and will do everything in his power to discredit them and their business."

The National Live Stock Association have taken the position that they want a bill the President will approve, and want it at once.

PINE APPLE PROFITS.

So many pine apples were never before consumed in Canada as this year. Florida is now being drawn upon largely. From Delray two companies are shipping a thousand crates a day each.

Skilful and experienced hands are at the bins, between 50 and 75 at each of the shipping houses, packing on an average of a hundred and twenty crates a day each. Young boys, at the age of fourteen, make from $2 to $3.75 per day, preparing crates for which they are allowed a cent and a quarter a piece.

From the six hundred acres in bearing at Delray, the probable yield will be about 175 crates to the acre, or 125,000 crates in all. The pines sell at an average of $1.50 per crate during the season, thus bringing into Delray for this fruit alone, $157,000 in the season.

There will be left $123,420 to be divided between the eight or ten growers, as clear profit for the season.

SPRING SALMON RUN SMALL.

The catch of Spring salmon on the west coast of Vancouver Island this season has been a light one. It is believed that there have not been more than 30 tons in all taken. The Spring salmon are used in the mild curing process, and last year there was an abundant run. The season for them is now past and the canneries on the west coast are preparing for the cockeye run.

BROKER MARRIED.

Wm. Field, of the firm of McFarlane & Field, grocery brokers, Hamilton, was married on Saturday last to Miss Mabel Agnes Milloy, of that city. The Grocer wishes the young couple long life, happiness and prosperity.

Jas. B. Campbell, of the Acme Can Works, Montreal, stopped off at Toronto on his return from the west to attend the funeral of his friend, the late A. A. McMichael.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

QUEBEC MARKETS.

FLUCTUATIONS—
Corn—Advanced 5c.
Fish—Revised.

Montreal, June 14.

Trade in groceries is improving. Jobbers report receiving larger orders from country as well as city points. Farmers are no longer spending money on seed, feed, and other necessities of early Summer, before grass begins to be fit for pasturage, and they are realizing on their dairy produce, thus putting more money into circulation, at least as far as groceries are concerned, this being apparent from the orders coming in. The grocery situation this week presents no particularly distinguishing feature. Ruling prices have been steady. Canned goods are moving in a healthy manner. Peas have been advanced five cents. Corn is steady, and from indications will be plentiful next season as the crop outlook is most pleasing. Strawberries are not available at any price. Sugar is unchanged, practically. In New York there is some talk of an advance, but nothing has been done as yet. Should an advance occur there, it is probable that the price here would be put up also. Very good business is being transacted in teas. More inquiry is reported for China greens. It is said that the new leaf teas are not so good as were those of last year. Molasses is normal. Coffee and spices are unchanged. Cleaned currants are in very good demand and the market is becoming rather bare. Quotations are being received on future evaporated apples. Other lines are about normal.

CANNED GOODS—Canned goods generally are moving out quite freely. The trade may be said to be in a healthy condition. An advance of five cents has occurred in peas. From appearances at present it is not likely that peas will be so low again during the season. Corn is steady, very fair business passing. Present outlooks are for a very good supply for the coming season as crops are very encouraging. It is generally known that no canned strawberries are available at any price. In fact all lines of canned fruits are being cleaned up. Plums and cheap pears are two other lines, for instance, which are pretty well sold. Tomatoes are plentiful enough, it is thought, and there is not likely to be any dearth in this line. Prices are not expected to be any higher than they now are.

SUGAR—Since last report very little has occurred in sugar which is interesting to the trade. Orders received by jobbers are mostly of the hand-to-mouth character. In New York there is some talk of an advance of ten cents, but nothing has been done towards this end as yet. In some quarters locally it is stated that the state of the raw material market is such as to have the effect of inducing refiners to buy; others state that they are buying no more than usual.

TEAS—A very fair business is passing in teas generally. There has been more inquiry this week for China greens, such as Young Hysons, and lower grades. Ceylon greens are firmer and a little higher than they were last week. Ceylon blacks and Indians are about the same. Japans are still of considerable interest on the market. It may safely be stated that there is more inquiry for old teas than for new crop, and the former are slightly higher this week. A Montreal firm received June 11 a cable from its head office in Yokohama which read: "No teas available under sixteen cents. Medium grades scarce and dear. First crop is about finished." The leaf teas (new crop) are rather disappointing this year, having no life in them. Fairly satisfactory orders are reported by Japan tea houses.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—Business in molasses is moving along steadily. There has been nothing out of the ordinary as regards prices or the state of the market during the week. Locally business is in a healthy condition. Orders received from country points are mostly for goods to be used immediately.

Corn syrups are being sold in quantities usual at this season.

As far as conditions in Quebec are concerned there is nothing new. Business with merchants in country points is improving, while city orders are also getting larger.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—Cleaned currants are pretty well sold up locally. There has been an excellent demand for them, and jobbers have filled all orders received, and are, as a consequence, none too well stocked at present. Reports from Greece say there is no change in the present situation, but state that owing to unfavorable weather conditions there will be a smaller crop than usual this year. Dealers are inclined to think that this is a little exaggerated. Tarragona almonds are firm. Shelled walnuts show little change. The demand for them has fallen off somewhat. Seeded raisins are moving out quite freely.

EVAPORATED APPLES — Lower prices in evaporated apples are expected shortly. With the advent of rhubarb and strawberries on the market there has been a falling off in the slight demand which existed for the evaporated apples. As if to insure a decline, future crop is being quoted by packers as low as 7c., they evidently expecting a good season. At present, however, jobbers are asking 12½c. to 13½c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—An advance of one-half to one cent has occurred in tapioca. This is the distinguishing feature of the market this week. At the figures asked, trade is well-nigh prohibitive. Very few orders are being filled. Rice remains unchanged. Since the advance recorded some little time ago, good business has been carried on.

Toronto, June 14.

Business is reported by the trade here as fair, with quiet spots here and there. The canned goods situation continues strong. Some firms are advancing their price on tomatoes to $1.30. Some report an active demand, others that the movement is rather slow. A prominent broker said this week that tomatoes were weaker and that there would be plenty to go round till the new pack comes in. The wholesalers give no hint of it. Dried fruits continue to firm up and prices are gradually advancing. Sugar has been quiet this month but the advance of 10c. is expected to liven up the demand, coming at the beginning of the berry season. Teas are in fair demand and quality is in demand. Canned salmon is very firm and while prices have not advanced this week everything points to a good, strong market.

CANNED GOODS—Some firms report a big demand for all kinds of fruits and vegetables, others claim their customers are pretty well stocked. Several firms advanced the price on tomatoes this week from $1.25 to $1.30. That does not look much like a weaker market, yet a broker stated yesterday that some speculative holders were anxious to unload. One western man held 6,000 cases in Toronto which he wanted buyers for. The broker said he could have got more a little while ago. Wholesale prices, however, are firm at $1.25 to $1.30. The situation in peas and corn is firm. Salmon also is in a very strong position.

SUGAR—An advance of 10c. on all lines was made by the refiners Wednesday forenoon. This is expected to stimulate the movement which has been very quiet this month. It would probably have that effect at any time, but coming at the opening of the busy season it is pretty sure to. The advance followed a similar move in New York. But the refiners there continued to book orders at the old price.

Cable advices from the Barbadoes state that raws advanced there 10c. last week and from Demerara that there is a forward tendency.

Cuba is now in a position to take care of the rest of its stock and interest centres in Europe. Last week the European price of beet receded to 7s. 11 1-4d, but recovered this week to 8s. 0 3-4d. In Cuba 68 centrals are still grinding against only 17 this time last year. The world's visible supply is 932,802 ahead of last year.

TEA—The market here has not been very active this week. Teas of quality are firm.

COFFEE—The disparity between the New York and Brazil markets has been very pronounced. Seaboard stocks in the States are 500,000 bags less than a year ago and invisible stocks also are smaller. Willett & Gray estimate the world's consumption now at 17,000,000 bags and say that at that rate the largest crop stories from Brazil are not a menace at the present level of prices. "The coffee world at large," say Willett & Gray, "desires a low price at the commencement of a new crop and is firmly calculating on it. But it seldom happens that what all expect and desire concerning a speculative article is accomplished. The very fact that so many wait for it, defeats its very purpose."

"The New York coffee market," says an exchange, "sets all experience, all expedients, and all statistical facts as valueless in its present situation. Statistics of coffee show a decrease in the supply of 2,000,000 bags, as compared with the corresponding period last year. Notwithstanding this decrease coffee options on the floor of the Coffee Exchange are fifty points lower than for May and June, 1905. It is also a well understood fact that actual coffee is from 40 to 150 points higher than the present basis of option sales. It is also well known that there have been no such fluctuations in coffee options at Havre and Hamburg, for quotations there are about the same as last year."

DRIED FRUITS—There has been no break in the firming tendency in all lines. Locally, prices are gradually approaching the level demanded by the cost for importation. With some houses 19c. is the lowest price on citron peel. For California apricots and peaches in 25-lb. boxes, 16c. to 17c. is asked and they are very scarce. With most houses the bottom price for Filiatra currants is now 6 1-4c.

N. B. MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., June 11, 1906.

The Spring has been wet and rather cold, but we are now having finer weather and there is generally a good feeling among the trade. There is nothing of startling interest, but the shipment of quite a quantity of eggs to Montreal was at least unusual. Two cargoes of Porto Rico molasses arrived during the past week. This, with the exception of one cargo, is the first Porto Rico to be received this year. With the first of June the Saturday half-holiday has gone into effect in several lines of business, such as the hardware trade, etc. They do not, as do the wholesale grocers and a few others, observe the half-holiday all the year. A few only have it for July and August. The retail grocers found, after one season two years ago, that it did not work to advantage, at least so they thought. The green fruit business, particularly in strawberries, interferes.

OIL—Just at present business in burning oil is slack except the booking for future shipment. As prices are expected to advance dealers are booking orders quite freely for Fall. In paint oils, sales, particularly in linseeds, have not been as large as usual. Because of the very low prices last season large stocks were bought and quite a quantity carried over. Prices at present are unchanged. There is a good steady sale for lubricating oils. Some little new cod oil has been received, but it is too early to tell how prices will rule.

SALT—Liverpool coarse salt is being freely received. There is considerable afloat shortly due. This is the active season. That arriving goes quickly into consumption. Quite full prices rule. Fine salt now sells freely and a certain quantity of Liverpool factory filled is being imported. Particularly in the small bags and boxes, Canadian has the demand. Also in barrels.

CANNED GOODS—As reported last week, the wholesale trade are all practically selling under fixed prices. This shows rather higher figures for corn and peas. These were being sold very close. Tomatoes are firm at full figures. Salmon are more firmly held. It is thought for new goods higher prices than last year will be quoted. Meats are in fair demand. Prices are low. New pineapple is offered. In domestic fish new finnan haddies are being received. They come on a bare market.

GREEN FRUIT—Oranges are higher. A few Valencias are still seen. For best fruit California navels are sold. Lemons show quite an advance. Bananas have large demand. Competition has brought in a lot of small fruit. Dealers find importing strawberries unsatisfactory; quantity received is still light.

DRIED FRUIT—In prunes, new California goods, Fall business has been largely booked. Spot stocks are very light. In raisins spot prices are unchanged. New goods will cost lower than last season. It looks as if selling prices would be about as at present. New prices on Malaga layers are rather higher than last year. Loose are not yet quoted. Dates are higher. Figs rather above last season's price. Peels are high. Bermuda onions continue to arrive. Quantity is small and quality fair. Egyptians are unchanged.

SUGARS—Prices are still low. No change yet this week. Fair sales are reported.

MOLASSES—Two cargoes of Porto Rico were received this week. The quality is fine. Prices are firmly held. Barbadoes is also held firm at the advance. Sales have been good.

FISH—The gaspereaux catch has not been large. Quite full prices have ruled. Shad were a small catch, and the season is over. Salmon are just beginning to come in freely. Prices are rather lower. Our fish are much better than the western and should sell more freely in Ontario and Quebec. Boston is our best market. In dry fish the price is unchanged, but hardly as firm. Pickled herring are high and the sale small. Smoked herring are rather dull.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL — The price of flour is unchanged. The fact that Ontario millers are putting more Manitobas in their flours is not appreciated by many. Feed is but a fair sale. Oats are firm. Oatmeal is dull. Beans are firmer. Yellow Eyes have been very low. Parsley sells slowly at rather lower prices. Cornmeal is unchanged. Sale of seeds is about over. A fair season is reported.

N. S. MARKETS

Halifax, N.S., June 12.

The grocery markets are in a satisfactory condition and business, generally speaking, has been good during the week. There has been no change in prices worthy of special note. Dried fruit is becoming very firm as the stocks are being reduced. There is a slight advance in the cost of raisins. Evaporated apples also show an upward tendency. They are quoted at 13½ to 14 cents with very few offering.

FISH.—There is an abundant supply of fresh fish on the market. Halibut, salmon, cod and mackerel are very plentiful. Some good catches of mackerel have been made along the coast during the week. At Prospect, some 17,000 were taken in the nets in two days. The fish are retailing here at two for 25 cents. Large shipments are being made to the American markets, the fish being iced and packed in barrels. Salmon are very plentiful in Lunenburg County, where they are selling at 10 cents per pound. The close season for lobsters in some districts is now on, and in consequence the receipts are falling off.

BUTTER.—There is very little improvement in the receipts of butter, and the price still keeps up. The farmers are not sending very much to market. Extremely wet weather throughout the whole province is having a very bad effect on the markets. Prices are firm at last week's quotations.

EGGS.—The receipts of eggs continue fair. They are not coming in as plentiful as the jobbers desire. Prices are firm at 16 and 16½ cents, with a good demand.

CHEESE.—The market in cheese is quiet and steady, quotations here being 12½ to 13 cents.

FRUIT.—All seasonable fruit is in fairly good supply. Oranges have advanced. Valencias are quoted at $6 for ordinary, 420s, and $6.50 for large repacked. This is an increase of about 50 cents. California navels have also taken a jump, being quoted at $5 and $5.50. Jamaicas are steady at $6. California cherries have dropped 10 cents, being quoted at $2.90. Tomatoes are $4 per crate. Cabbage have dropped to $3 per crate. Very few strawberries are being imported here from Boston now, the quality of the last shipment being very poor. Bananas are fairly good. They are quoted at $2.50 for large bunches, and $2 for small.

The grocery, provision and produce business which has been carried on for several years by Messrs. J. R. Larkin & Son, on George street, Sydney, has been purchased by Messrs. McLean & Holman. The latter comes from Prince Edward Island, but for the past five years he has been a resident of Cape Breton, first in the employ of the Larkin firm, and later engaged in the produce business between Sydney, Glace Bay and the island. Mr. McLean is a very capable, energetic young man with a wide experience in business. The new firm intend carrying a complete line of groceries, provisions and produce, and will make a specialty of all Prince Edward Island products in a wholesale as well as a retail way.

ONTARIO GUILD'S ANNUAL.

To Deal With Manufacturers Selling Direct—Sugar Cutting—T. B. Escott, President.

The Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild held its annual meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week in the Board of Trade council chamber, Toronto. The attendance was the largest yet recorded and very important matters were discussed. Cutting on sugar and tobacco was one of the livest issues, but it was said that the price cutting stories were exaggerated, and on a showdown nearly every one present said he was not the man. It is understood, however, that a stricter agreement will be attempted with regard to price cutting.

Travelers' holidays were taken up, and it was decided that all houses should let their west of Toronto travelers have their vacations simultaneously from the 4th to the 18th of August, and that no drumming of any kind, not even over the 'phone would be done during that time.

The matter which engaged the most earnest attention of the wholesalers, however, was the practice of manufacturers selling direct to retailers. Members seen after the meeting vehemently declared that they had never tried to prohibit the selling of goods to those outside the guild. They said they do try to stop selling to retailers, but that any wholesaler, whether he be a "guilder" or not, could get all the goods he wanted.

The following officers were elected: T. B. Escott, London, president; W. J. Craig, Kingston, 1st vice-president; James Gilmore, Brockville, 2nd vice-president. The secretary is not yet elected.

Committees to deal with questions that come up will be appointed by the president from the district nearest the place where the grievance arises.

According to the guild custom, press representatives were not admitted.

WESTERN WANTS.

Board of Trade Resolutions for Edmonton Convention.

Resolutions to be submitted to the convention of Western Boards of Trade at Edmonton, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, which will be fully reported in next week's Canadian Grocer, were required to be sent in beforehand and were then issued in phamphlet form to enable careful consideration being given them. The resolution that the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada continue as at present constituted for the year 1907, came from Regina, which city also asks that deputies of the receiver-general be appointed for the two new provinces, that the postal service be made commensurate with the growth of the country, and that the passenger rate on railways be lowered and excursion rates to the east be given in the Summer.

Wetaskiwin wants a C.P.R. land office opened up north of Red Deer and stricter inspection of settlers' effects coming in from the States in regard to dutiable articles. Edmonton urges the necessity of uniform commercial laws in the two new provinces, the removal of the cattle embargo, better roads, the adoption of the metric system, the restriction of bonusing, municipal ownership and better postal service.

Calgary asks for better commercial legislation and the establishment of an intelligence bureau in connection with the Department of Agriculture.

LATEST JAPAN TEA CABLE.

Montreal, June 14, 1906.

A cable advice received by a Montreal Japan tea house to-day says: "Crop is estimated much below normal season. Suitable offerings scarce. Market advancing.

Lethbridge also wants better commercial laws that will limit the garnishee to $25 in any one month, and provide for the arrest of absconding debtors; that claims for lost or damaged goods must be settled within 60 days by railway companies and that all shipping bills should be signed in triplicate.

Moosejaw suggests the better payment of school teachers, and the support of hospitals from public funds.

Strathcona asks that imported goods be marked in Canadian standards, that a fruit inspector be appointed, that bonusing be restricted and municipal ownership encouraged.

Wapella wants the municipal year to commence not later than February.

Raymond wants the encouragement of Albertan sugar.

North Battleford proposes that the laws relating to exemption from seizure be amended so that no provisions of the law shall defeat a personal promise to pay.

Charles King, grocer, of 325 Gerrard street, Toronto, met with a street car accident on Wednesday by which he may lose his left foot.

BOUGHT VICTORIA PARK.

Mr. H. P. Eckardt, wholesale grocer, Toronto, purchased at auction on Saturday last Victoria Park on the lake front at the east end of the city, for the sum of $33,850. Mr. Eckardt's residence is in the vicinity of the park and it is understood that in purchasing the property he was actuated partly by a desire to prevent the place falling into undesirable hands. The park is considered good property at the price.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS.

Prospects Seem Pretty Good—Some Authoritative Reports.

Among replies received this week to inquiries by The Canadian Grocer of well-informed persons regarding the vegetable and fruit prospects in Ontario, the following are interesting:

Niagara District—The tomato acreage will be slightly greater than in previous years, but I am inclined to think that the plants are not up to the mark, so that possibly there will not be any more bushels of tomatoes than in previous years. Strawberries promise a heavy crop; raspberries and blackberries also look well, and I see no reason why we should not have a good crop of these. Peaches look like a moderate crop, pears a heavy crop, plums a somewhat light crop, sour cherries a heavy crop, sweets moderate. Strawberries are said to be only fair in some places on the north side of Lake Ontario.

Essex County—The outlook for the tomato crop is fair so far, but a great many of the plants that were set out on low ground were drowned from the heavy rain. If the growers can get the water off the ground in time we may have a crop equal to last season. I would think the price regarding the new pack will be higher than last year. We are having nearly a famine for getting tomato plants on account of the heavy frost so late in the season killing so many plants. I think every canning factory in this section is short of tomato plants.

Prince Edward County—Regarding the crop of vegetables for the coming season, I would say it is altogether too early to prophesy. Tomato plants have only nicely been gotten out, corn has just been planted, and beans the same. So it is too early to make any estimate of the coming crop. Fruits—We may say we do not think there will be a heavy crop.

An authority on the general situation replied: The present outlook for tomatoes and all other lines of fruits and vegetables is good. The season, of course, is scarcely advanced sufficiently to give any positive information, but up to the present everything looks flourishing.

Quebec—The outlook for tomatoes and other vegetables is about as usual. If the season is favorable they will be abundant. The price on the new pack will, I think, be higher than last year. The price here will be based on that in Ontario.

PROFITS $400,000 A YEAR.

A change has recently been made in the personnel of Park & Tilford, the big New York grocers, and $3,000,000 6 per cent. debenture sinking fund gold bonds have been issued. A million dollars' worth was taken by interests identified with the corporation and the other two millions were taken by a New York brokerage firm, who are now offering a balance of $400,000 at 107. At that price they will net the purchaser if held until maturity 5½ per cent.

The average net income of Park & Tilford for the past twelve years has been in excess of $400,000 annually and the firm has always enjoyed a very high standing as dealers in groceries, cigars, etc. At the present time it operates five stores in various parts of the city and has over 40,000 open accounts on its books.

REVOLUTION IN SUGAR.

Cuba, not Hamburg, will Fix Price for United States.

Under the caption "Revolution in the Sugar Trade," Willett & Gray's Sugar Trade Journal, New York, says:

"A somewhat remarkable change has been going on recently in the attitude of the United States towards the European beet sugar world which involves the stability of the Dingley sugar tariff and also the regulation of the world's price of sugar.

"For a generation and more it has been considered without question that the price of beet sugar in Hamburg made and controlled the price of sugar in the United States.

"It has also been taken for granted that the duty of 1.685c. per lb. assessed by the Dingley law represented the protection afforded the home sugar industries.

"Both these assumptions have recently been disproved and the new conditions established that Cuba controls the price of sugar in the United States for all other countries, and that the 1.685c. duty protection is reduced to a varying amount from 1.685c. down to 1.348c. as decided by the Cuban price.

"Cuba to-day sells her sugar in New York at 3.45c. per lb., or 22c. below the Hamburg price and all sugars coming in over the tariff wall must conform to the Cuba price. This revolution has been brought about by the concession of 20 per cent. of the full tariff rates made to Cuba by the reciprocity with that island. This reciprocity stimulated the production to an extent which excluded nearly all the full duty paying countries, Java being about the only important sugar producing country to continue to compete to any extent for a part of the United States market. A year or two hence, with further natural increase in the crop of Cuba, the conditions of the revolution going on in the sugar world will be even more manifest and may very likely lead to an agitation for the annexation of Cuba to the United States. As it is now Cuba makes the price of raw sugar in the United States. During the first four months of the campaign she fixes price at the bare cost of production, giving away the full 20 per cent. allowance of reciprocity, a little later she raises her price and secures a part of the allowance, and as the season progresses she finally raises prices to nearly or quite the full allowance. This process is going on now. Cuba has passed beyond the necessity of taking the extreme low limit of prices and has commenced to demand a portion of reciprocity allowance. This means that for this campaign Cuba will control prices in the United States on an advancing scale. It may be a slow rise, but the rise is just as sure to come.

"The present difference of .22 below the parity of beet sugars is sufficient to warrant this statement and expect its fulfillment, hence there is every reason to consider, as far as the U. S. is concerned, a firm, steady market with advancing tendencies for the remainder of the campaign in raw sugars.

"The situation in refined sugars is equally significant and important. Just now contracts exceeding a million barrels of refined have been placed with grocers by the several refineries."

The article goes on to say that these buyers have the best possible assurance that the market will not go against them because the market is at rock bottom and that every future rise will be maintained.

Douglas & Co., Montreal, state that they are having good results, in the way of sales, with the products of Sir Robert Burnett & Co., London, England, whose agents they were appointed at the beginning of the year. TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER.

Reorganization of Balfour & Co., Hamilton—Fred T. Smye Becomes Senior Member.

Thirteen years ago the late St. Clair Balfour, in a short character sketch of his leading traveler, in the Fall number of The Canadian Grocer, used the words: "The future is full of promise for Fred T. Smye."

That prophecy is being fulfilled at the present time, for within a few days Mr. Smye will become the senior partner of Balfour, Smye & Co., which succeeds the old firm of Balfour & Co., for the last few years a branch of the Canada Grocers, Limited. The new members of the firm along with Mr. Smye are St. Clair Balfour, son of the late head of the firm, St. Clair Balfour, and Chas. H. McIlroy, for years a traveler with Balfour & Co.

The firm has a long and honorable history running away back into the last century, and is one of the oldest wholesale grocery houses in Canada. The original name of the firm was W. P. McLaren & Co. It later became Brown, Gillespie & Co., of which Adam Brown, postmaster, Hamilton, was the senior member; then successively Brown, Routh & Co., Brown, Balfour & Co., Balfour & Co., and now Balfour, Smye & Co.

The firm were among the pioneers in the Northwest trade. Mr. Balfour, father of the present member of the firm, was one of the first traveling salesmen to go to the Northwest in the early days of Fort Garry. At that time you went in by way of Chicago and goods were taken from the border to the interior by pack train.

In the export trade the firm has also an old connection, having early developed a connection with Germany and Holland for dried and evaporated apples, which they exported and still export in large quantities.

The only surviving member of the firm in the old days is Mr. Adam Brown.

The senior member of the reorganized firm, Mr. Smye, is typical of the successful traveler. He began early at the age of about 17 with the firm of Alexander Harvey & Co., afterward Stuart Harvey & Co. He was about the youngest traveler on the road, but with his natural aptitude for business, courteous and affable demeanor, he got business and friends at one and the same time. When Balfour & Co. bought out the stock of Stuart Harvey & Co., Mr. Smye in spite of tempting offers stayed with the ship on the bridge of which he now stands in command.

Mr. Smye early became associated with the Travelers' Association of Canada, and has held the highest executive office in Hamilton by acclamation. He is president of the Hamilton Grocers' Guild, has pulled a good oar in his day and is a leading spirit in the social life of the traveling fraternity of the Ambitious City.

Mr. St. Clair Balfour is a son of the late head of the firm and is regarded as one of Hamilton's rising young men. He has been on the road for the firm for about four years, covering the Northwest and British Columbia, where he has built up a large and increasing trade.

Mr. Chas. H. McIlroy, the other partner, entered the firm with Mr. Smye and the two have worked up together from the days of Alex. Harvey & Co. Mr. McIlroy is a prominent Mason and as a traveler covers the Niagara peninsula. Among the boys and on his route he is highly regarded.

The new firm is a strong combination, all young men and hustlers. They should be heard from.

Fred T. Smye,
Senior Partner of Balfour, Smye & Co.

Balfour, Smye & Co. will retain control of Tartan Brand teas, canned fruits and vegetables, groceries, etc., in which they have a fine connection all over Canada, and also considerable export business to the Old Land and the West Indies. The firm take particular pride in their Tartan Brand fruits and vegetables put up in their own factory in the fine district of Grimsby, also in their Tartan Brand tea under the Rob Roy, McLeod, Gordon and Royal Stuart tartans.

Mr. Smye undertakes that a high standard will be maintained in all goods packed under Tartan Brand.

The management, although under the new style, will be practically the same as since Mr. Balfour's death. Mr. St. Clair Balfour and Mr. McIlroy will continue to make their usual trips.

CALGARY JOTTINGS.

New Flour Mills—Turner & Co. to Sell —Clerks Getting Half Holiday.

The Western Milling Co. have recently completed the erection of a fine flour mill, and they are reaching out rapidly for trade. The Dominion Brokerage Co. are their selling agents.

The Brackman-Ker Milling Co. are building a large cereal mill in Calgary which, when completed, will be one of the best equipped mills in Canada.

The Standard Soap Co. of Calgary are doubling the capacity of their plant, and will devote increased attention to a line of toilet soaps.

Owing to the dissolution of the Canada Grocers, Limited, Jas. Turner & Co. will probably sell their branch business in Calgary. Business men in Calgary believe that the stock will be taken over by L. T. Mewburn, who for many years has managed the business for the Hamilton firm.

Calgary clerks are agitating for a half holiday every week during the Summer months, and it is likely that an arrangement will be made to close all the retail stores in Calgary on the afternoon of the same day. The manufacturers find that it will be impossible to join in the movement, but the wholesale and retail establishments will undoubtedly close. At the present time there is a disagreement as to the day of closing, the wholesale establishments preferring Saturday afternoons and the retailers pointing out that Saturday is an impracticable day for them, It is probable that separate days will have to be chosen.

BUSINESS NOTES.

J. A. Campbell, late of Toronto, but formerly of Orangeville, has opened a grocery and flour and feed store in the latter place.

Louis Volk, representing the Fred Miller Brewing Co., Milwaukee, Wis., was in Montreal last week and appointed Laporte, Martin & Cie. agents for the firm in the Province of Quebec. Mr. Volk was able to get around to see the trade a little, and with his hearty manner made many friends.

Those at the head of the Trent Valley Sugar Co. state that prospects are good for the establishment of a sugar factory in Peterborough. It is understood that about $40,000 has been subscribed, and a proposition is being considered to buy a Michigan plant.

E. Berube, who for some time has been successful as a clerk in the Oxford Restaurant, has decided to go into the grocery business on his own account and opened this week a nicely fitted store at the corner of Duluth avenue and St. Andre street, Montreal. Mr. Berube has the good wishes of many friends.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

News of Shipping Interests at Montreal—Schedule of Current Ocean Rates.

As the shipping advances, excellent trade is being transacted. To date, the arrivals and clearings are ahead of those of last year. Cargoes leaving port during the past week were pretty well along usual lines Shipments of flour have continued good, while butter and cheese is being sent out in increasing quantities. Other lines of Canadian products are being shipped in moderately large quantities, but the three lines named still hold a great part of the export trade.

An arrival from Hamburg on June 8 was the Nordvahlen with a general cargo. This was the first arrival from Germany since the season opened.

The Turcoman, of the Dominion line, arrived from Bristol the same day, also carrying a general cargo.

Reports presented to the Harbor Commissioners of Montreal recently showed that there had been a substantial increase in the revenues of the port over the previous season from the opening of navigation up to June 1. This year the revenue amounted to $33,369 against $27,202 for the same period last year.

From the present trend of events it is thought that the sailing day of Canadian mails from British and Canadian ports will be Friday. A reply has been received by the butter and cheese merchants of Montreal, who some time ago wrote the Post Office Department urging the necessity of having a mail leave Montreal not earlier than Saturday morning telling them that at present the deputy postmaster-general is in England interviewing the Imperial authorities. He has been informed of the views held by the Canadian Government and instructed to do all possible towards concluding satisfactory arrangements.

Shipping merchants are more than ever anxious for the Government to take up the matter of dredging the Crane Island flats. Constant instances of the trouble they give in causing serious delay to outgoing boats keep the matter hot. The most recent example was that of the Ottawa, of the Dominion line, which was compelled to anchor for six hours owing to low water there.

Considerable interest is being displayed in shipping circles over the launching of the new C.P.R. steamship Empress of Britain. Her trial trips have been eminently satisfactory. The boat will be a splendid addition to the fleet using the St. Lawrence route.

The Puritan left for London and Hull with a general cargo, June 8.

Canada Cape, of the Donaldson line, left for South Africa June 6 with a general cargo including a large shipment of flour.

NO INTENT TO DEFRAUD.

Arthur Smith, of Brockville, Ont., charged before Magistrate Comfort, of Woodstock, with obtaining money under false pretences, was acquitted on Friday last and that without any evidence being taken for the defence.

The reference to the matter last week was based on misinformation. It had nothing to do with the First National Co-operative Society. Mr. Smith was selling seed potatoes imported from England. A carload sent via New York went astray and some orders were necessarily delayed. One purchaser laid information without seeking an explanation.

The Co-operative Society was undertaken by Mr. Smith last year. In December 1,200 circulars were sent out and some newspaper advertising was done. On January 15 the barn containing Mr. Smith's stock was burned, entailing a loss of $7,000 without insurance. He could not proceed with the co-operative scheme and instructed the postmaster to return all mail matter. He states that 2,000 pieces of mail were returned.

NEW STYLE FOR OLD FIRM.

Mr. Turner, Sr., informed The Canadian Grocer that he would throw most of the responsibility on the young men who have been with the firm for years.

The Calgary branch of the firm, which for some time has been under the management of Mr. L. T. Mewburn, will be taken over by the latter and run under the style of L. T. Mewburn & Co., Limited. The stock in store at the Calgary branch will be taken over by the old firm, who will continue to cover the western field. The firm of L. T. Mewburn will not carry liquors.

PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

During last week the cheese market was very weak, and prices in Montreal declined a good deal below country cost, but at the close it was found that there was a demand in excess of the supplies, and while country markets showed a decline of ¼c. per pound from the previous week's prices the tone was very firm, and prices paid at country points were higher than what was generally expected.

It is generally believed that there is a big make of cheese at present. Our season this year is from two to three weeks late; prices are unusually high, and it is but fair to expect lower markets.

According to board of trade figures, our receipts last week were 74,475 boxes of cheese and 24,973 packages of butter, as compared with 77,305 boxes of cheese and 27,682 packages of butter for the corresponding week of last year. Since May 1 our receipts of cheese were 257,960 boxes, and of butter 86,772 packages, against 224,400 boxes of cheese and 92,714 packages of butter for the corresponding period of last year.

Unfortunately, these board of trade figures are notoriously incorrect, but we must assume that they are proportionately correct or, rather, incorrect. We find, therefore, that the receipts of cheese this year are about 33,500 boxes in excess of last year's receipts for the same period, and the receipts of butter are about 6,000 packages less than last year. This is largely due to cheese being the more profitable product of milk on account of prevailing market prices, but we must consider cheese an article of necessity and butter an article of luxury.

Prices of cheese are abnormally high for this season of the year. The reason, or reasons, for this is that Great Britain started the new season practically without any supplies, and the recently developed Chicago canned meat scandals have undoubtedly increased the consumption of cheese in the U. K.

There is no doubt, however, that the great canners of meats will do everything in their power to overthrow the present prejudice against their products and, as canned meats have really become an article of necessity and great convenience for many purposes, it is not thought probable that the present prejudice against them will be of long duration.

What the people want is a pure article of food. If the canners of meats can convince the public that their goods are wholesome they will regain their trade, meanwhile there is no question of the wholesomeness of cheese, and people will buy it in good faith as a pure article of food.

Regarding our exports of cheese and butter, we note that our last week's shipments were 66,413 boxes of cheese and 10,663 packages of butter, as compared with 70,347 boxes of cheese and 13,507 packages of butter for the corresponding week of last year, or a total since May 1 of 258,110 boxes of cheese and 31,857 packages of butter this year, against 230,860 boxes of cheese and 34,567 packages of butter for the corresponding period of last year.

As mentioned before, cheese at present prices is still the better paying product of milk, and our farmers will prefer to deliver their milk to cheese factories rather than to the creameries, although the by product of butter is useful for feeding their stock.

The pastures are now mostly in very good condition, and the cows are giving plenty of milk, but while the number of dairy cows has been increased in many sections, it is claimed that the yield of milk per cow is less this year than last year and, after all, we may look for only a normal production, although prices may be high and, from present outlook, there seems to be no chance of low prices for either cheese or butter this year.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

London, June 2, 1906.

Very little change has come over the position of the London produce markets and quotations remain without any noticeable alteration. The Whitsun holiday will interfere to a greater or less extent with transactions, and attempts were made, with but moderate success, to increase the volume of transactions before the vacation exodus to the various holiday resorts. All the great London railway companies are booking outward orders by the thousand, so it seems probable, in spite of doubtful weather, that the holiday crowd will be bigger than ever.

While the rainy weather is being regretted by the general public, farmers all over the country are highly gratified. It is exactly what they most require. It was almost necessary to save their crops. The atmosphere has, perhaps, been somewhat too cold, but the rains have been gentle, and already pastures are showing a considerable improvement.

Now that the Canadian butter and cheese season has opened, importers over here are looking forward to the first shipments before very long. It is with very mingled feelings, however, that the future is faced. But this much is quite certain; there exists universal confidence in the continued good quality of the new season's make, for importers are mindful of the last year's visit of Mr. Ruddick to this country and of the careful scrutiny of trade requirements he then made. Moreover, as has been said before in this column, the new buildings at the Surrey Commercial Docks, will prove of the very greatest assistance to Canadian exporters in their attempts to put their produce on this market in the best condition. Right here, all praise must be given to exporters for the improvement in last year's shipments. The number of complaints was noticeably smaller, and importers, although they made very little money in handling it, were the first to speak up on behalf of its good quality. There is room for improvement yet, however, and if both shippers and farmers have taken to heart the sound advice offered by the Canadian commercial agents on this side and noted the remarks for improvement, which have been gladly offered in this column from time to time, the coming season should prove a record one in the matter of quality. Last year was a record both in the matter of price and quality, and we understand over here that larger shipments will likely be the order of the day, although we understand that up to the present the flow of milk is not quite what it should be. Importers are hoping that the profits in the Canadian produce business may be somewhat more evenly distributed this year, and if, as may well be supposed, Canadian farmers spent a large percentage of their last year's gains in increasing their stock, it may be that the consequent increased supply of produce will bring a little more money to their pockets. It must be confessed that they have, up to the present, been working for the most part for the benefit of farmers. On the other hand, Canadians have the advantage of knowing that warehouses are more or less bare on this side, and supplies of fresh produce will likely be small from Ireland and the continent. At any rate, they will be late.

With regard to the matter of all Canadian produce being shipped direct to London, the statement which appeared in the last London letter as a rumor must be taken with a grain of salt. It seems highly improbable at first sight, and no doubt before long further light of a more certain kind will be obtainable.

Stocks of cheese are low, supplies being only about 17,000 boxes in warehouse in London. These are not as fresh as might be.

PRODUCE MERCHANTS VISITING CANADA.

W. G. Whitehead, of Walter Lawrie & Co., Glasgow, Scotland, and Price Jones, of Marples, Jones & Co., Liverpool, England, are two gentlemen engaged in the produce trade in the Old Country who were in Montreal last week. A representative of The Grocer had the pleasure of seeing them at the Windsor. They are just concluding an extensive trip to the produce centres of Canada and the United States. Both gentlemen speak very enthusiastically of conditions in Canada.

TO START BIG CHEESE FACTORY.

Three New Yorkers, representing substantial financial interests, were in Ontario last week looking for a suitable place to locate a cheese factory on a large scale similar to some already in operation in the New England States, where as many as 400 hands are employed in a single factory. This may portend a radical change in the dairy industry of Ontario.

To a Toronto man one of the party said:

"If we can get a suitable site and good transportation facilities, it is very probable that the industry will be established here. During a visit to this country recently one of the gentlemen now interested in the venture was impressed with the opportunities for the establishment of such an industry on a large scale. He was surprised that, so far as he could ascertain on inquiry, there was not a really up-to-date cheese-making factory on a large scale in the entire Province of Ontario. On returning to New York he immediately discussed the matter with some other capitalists, and the result is we are sent out to look over the ground."

PROVISIONS—A few changes are noticeable in the quotations on pure lard this week. Fairly good business is being done in this line. Demand is not large in some quarters, but is better than usual in other sections, thus counterbalancing the effect of the first. American short cut is a little lower this week. Hams and bacon are moving along quite well. Very little export business is being done owing to the unfavorable state of the markets in the Old Country.

EGGS—Since last week there has been practically no change in the egg market. Eggs are costing slightly more in the city, but the prices to the retailer are not affected materially, 17c. still being asked. The quality is not the best, although very good for this time of year. On account of the hot weather at present prevailing, dealers are forced to candle.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—Good demand with a firm and upward market tells the story of the week in the provision trade. Some dealers are asking 12 1-2c. for long clear, but last week's quotation maintains generally. The lowest price on breakfast bacon has moved up 1-2c. and backs are bringing a still higher price Mess pork also is firm at last week's top quotation. Lard is unchanged. Yearling lamb is down a cent and veal from 2c. to 2 1-2c.

CHEESE—After a weakening flurry last week the market has somewhat recovered its tone, but there is still no marked firmness to it. Dealers are selling cheese now they bought at higher prices. They would like, however, to see a further decline. Notwithstanding the price, there is an unusually good demand for local consumption. There is practically no old cheese on this market.

BUTTER—Last week's expectations of cheaper butter were not fulfilled. Instead, the price here has advanced. Receipts are large too, but the demand is heavy. It is claimed the high price of cheese is forcing an unusual proportion of the milk into that product. Some dealers still look for lower prices, but most of them are in doubt.

EGGS—Buyers are paying less for eggs in the country, but the price here is firmer if anything. This is because of the increased shrinkage owing to warm weather. As many as four dozen bad eggs have been taken from a case and the loss is shared by the farmer and consumer. Fresh eggs retailed in Toronto this week at 24c. Lower prices are looked for in the country, but that is not expected to lower the wholesale rate here.

PROVISIONS—Pork is higher, but there is very light sale. While beef shows little change, there is very limited business. Pure lard is again higher after a slight decline. Refined compound is firmly held at the advance; it is still well below pure. In smoked meats there is just limited business. Fresh meats are not active at this season. Beef is rather firmer, but mutton and veal are both easier. Lamb is still small and high. Pork is unchanged.

HOG INDUSTRY IN ONTARIO.

Results of an Exhaustive Inquiry Prosecuted by the Department of Agriculture.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture has made an exhaustive inquiry regarding the present condition of the hog-raising industry throughout the province. The detailed results are contained in a bulletin and a summary also has been issued. It is as follows:

The following questions were sent to several thousand carefully selected correspondents, and from the replies received, a report is given in detail by counties, together with a summary for the province as a whole:

1. What breeds, grades or crosses of hogs appear to be most popular in your district?

2. Has there been any general tendency to change from one breed or type of hog to another during the last two or three years?

3. If there has been any change in the kind of hogs fed, please describe the nature of the change.

4. Are grade sires used in your district?

5. What is the general feeling among farmers in your section as to the hog production this year? Do they show a disposition to increase their output and to what extent?

6. About how many breeding sows were kept by the average farmer of your section in 1904? How many in 1905? How many this season?

7. What is the average number of pigs to reach weaning age in Spring litters this year? Has the percentage of loss been greater than usual?

8. How will the delivery of hogs between now and September 1 compare with that of 1904 and 1905?

9. What do you consider the average cost of production of bacon hogs fitted for market (a) Summer feeding; (b) Winter feeding?

Breeds.—The Yorkshire is the most popular breed. In 33 out of the 42 counties reporting it gets first choice, and in 7 others it is a tie with some other breed for first place. Berkshires come next in favor, followed by Tamworths and Chester Whites in the order named. Duroc Jerseys and Poland Chinas receive but little mention outside of the Counties of Essex and Kent.

Crosses.—While many crosses are used, the most popular is that between the Yorkshire and the Berkshire. In the western portion of the province there is a tendency to use the Berkshire more than formerly in crossing, while in the eastern half the trend is more toward the use of the Yorkshire.

Sires.—Pure-bred sires are used almost entirely in twenty-five per cent. of the counties, while grade sires are used to a limited extent in about twenty per cent., and to a still greater extent in fifty-five per cent. of the counties, while in a few sections grade sires are still used almost entirely. The district taking in the north-western peninsula will be found to be freer from the use of grade sires than any other section of the province, although there are individual counties elsewhere from which reports are just as favorable. Grade sires appear to be in most use in the more eastern counties.

Production. — The general tendency throughout the province is to increase production slightly. In many of the eastern counties it has been the custom for farmers to depend upon breeders in their locality for their supply of young pigs for feeding, and it has been noted that the demand this Spring considerably exceeds the supply, the breeders who usually sell their pigs retaining them on account of the good prices for hogs. Considerable caution, however, is observed among many individual breeders and feeders not to go into the business too extensively, for fear that overproduction might bring prices down to an unprofitable point.

Breeding sows.—The number of breeding sows was decreased considerably in 1905 over 1904, while 1906 shows an increase in the number compared with both 1905 and 1904. Comparing 1906 with 1905, thirty-five counties report increases, while only two counties report decreases, and five counties no change in the number of sows. Reports indicate that the eastern part of the province is relatively increasing production much more rapidly than is being done in Western Ontario. In all parts of the province the demand for brood sows appears to exceed the supply.

Litters.—The percentage of loss of young pigs is greater than usual in a large proportion of the counties, which will have its effect upon the Fall deliveries. The average number of pigs in Spring litters reaching the weaning age is estimated at 7.61, as compared with a normal litter of 7.77 pigs at weaning time.

Cost of feeding.—The average cost of Summer feeding is placed at $4.51 per cwt., and of Winter feeding, $5.38 per cwt. In very few cases, however, do correspondents state definitely that the figures given are the result of actual experiments, but where these are reported it is almost invariably noticed that the cost of both Summer and Winter feeding is considerably below the figures already mentioned. A number of correspondents, especially in Western Ontario, state that with comfortable quarters and roots the cost of feeding is no greater in Winter than in Summer.

Hon. A. C. Rutherford, Premier of Alberta, while in Ottawa announced that seven new creameries would be established in Alberta this year, under provincial guidance.

Dr. Orr, manager of the Industrial Exhibition, has just closed negotiations with the Linde British Refrigerator Co. for the installation of an electric cold storage plant in the dairy building at the Exhibition grounds to replace the steam cold storage plant. The change will effect a saving of $260 a year, as only one man will be engaged instead of four.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Higher Prices for Grain in Sympathy with Chicago and Little Business Doing—Flour and Cereal Steady.

Grain markets in Canada have responded to the advance in Chicago, where the annual crop-killing has been in progress. A humorist who is also a broker remarked, "They have to do it while the crop is young and not able to defend itself." Supplies in Canada are ample and the prospects for the next crop are good. Flour prices are unchanged. There is good consumptive demand in Ontario and considerable export shipments are reported at Montreal. Oats are slightly advanced but cereal products are quoted as last week. Demand is fair.

WANT CANADIAN FLOUR.

Mail advice of May 18 from Gordon Grant, Trinidad, says: "There is a good demand for superfine flour at advanced rates in consequence of the higher prices cabled from New York, but bakers' and extra flour are moving slowly. Imports of Canadian flour continue on a restricted scale and dealers in consequence have to fill their requirements with American marks."

FOR BETTER SEED.

The first of a series of 72 seed and weed meetings throughout Canada, under the joint auspices of the seed branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the farmers' institutes, was held near Hespeler, Ont., at the farm of C. W. Shaw, president of the local farmers' institute, and was attended by a large number of farmers, who not only listened with interest to the speakers, but took a lively part in the discussions.

Montreal grain men will urge the Government to go on with the proposed undertaking to build a two-million-bushel elevator at Port Colborne.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

FLOUR—Flour continues in good demand and the volume of trade passing is large in consequence. Export business is in keeping with the local transactions, orders being shipped to different parts of the globe being of good size. Five Roses is quoted at $4.90 per barrel. Considering the state of the wheat market at present, it is not unlikely that there will be an advance shortly.

GRAIN—Prices are up here in sympathy with Chicago, but there is practically no business doing. Crop prospects in Canada are good and there is plenty of wheat to go round till the new crop comes in, so that conditions here do not justify the rise. Oats are higher.

The Canadian Oil Co. are erecting a new distributing warehouse at Ottawa.

S. J. Mathewson, of Mathewson's Sons, Montreal, left for Little Metis, Que., to enjoy the Summer sea breezes and salt air at his Summer residence during the next two months.

Mr. Terry, representing Jos. Campbell & Sons, soups, New Jersey, was in Montreal last week and in company with Mr. Hendry, of Rose & Laflamme, agents for these soups, made several calls upon the trade.

Richard Roberts, late of Garden River, Ont., has purchased the business of A. G. Smith & Co., wholesale jobbers in fruit and provisions, Port Arthur. Mr. Roberts will go largely into the commission business at his new location. He sold his stock in Garden River and the building there is being used as office and warehouse by Burton Bros.

BISCUIT COMPANY GROWING.

The accompanying ilustration shows the Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co's factory in Stratford, as it will appear when the large addition now under construction is completed. The building will then extend from Falstaff to Milton streets, 260 feet, and be 70 feet in depth. The addition will conform in height with the present building, and be five storeys, including basement, and will give a floor space of between 150,000 and 200,000 square feet.

This is the third extension the company has been compelled by increasing business to make since its establishment in 1903. This last extension will double the working capacity and make the factory one of the most up-to-date in the confectionery and biscuit line in Canada. The growth of the company's business is largely attributed to the excellence of its product.

NEW FACTORY FOR OIL TANKS.

S. F. Bowser & Co., the only manufacturers of self-measuring oil outfits in Canada, whose factory is now located at 530 Front street west, Toronto, have just awarded contracts for the erection of a very fine office and factory building on Fraser street, one block south of King street west. It will be a two-storey and basement brick building, 50 by 125 feet. The office and machine shop will be on the first floor and the finishing department on the second floor. The motive power will be electricity with individual motors for the various machines. Factory and office will be steam-heated.

In connection with a large and well line of adjustable measure cabinets for lubricating oils has assumed large proportions within the last few years.

GROCERS SELL PATENT MEDICINE.

Before the Parliamentary Committee on Deleterious Medicines sitting in Ottawa last week, R. W. Williams, of Three Rivers, Que., druggist, affirmed that the patent medicine business had gone to grocers in recent years. He thought patent medicines had a legitimate place in trade. Generally they gave good results, he said.

J. E. Tremble, president of the Pharmaceutical Society of Quebec, stated that he did not think more than 5 per cent. of the druggists in Canada would dispense injurious drugs. He combatted the evidence of Dr. Dube, of Montreal, who said druggists were too eager to get cheap goods regardless of their quality.

Mr. Tremble was of the opinion that

WHEAT, STEERS, OPPORTUNITIES, CLIMATE.

The Calgary Board of Trade is a live one and it would have to be to keep up with the city. The board has issued a brochure entitled, "The Famous Calgary District, of Central Alberta, Canada—The Land of Golden Wheat, Fat Steers, Industrial Opportunities and Unrivalled Climate." If anyone wants one he can have it by addressing a request to the secretary.

Calgary's population, according to the brochure, is 17,500 and the assessment went up from $1,994,300 in 1896 to $3,221,000 in 1902 and jumped to $7,817,400 this year. And see what they have out there: Eleven churches, twelve banks, clearing house, seven newspapers and reviews, two theatres, five bookstores, twenty-one hotels, eight shoe stores, eight dry goods stores, thirty-eight grocer shops, seven drug stores, appointed office there will be a display room. The building will have a plate glass front, affording plenty of light. This location is superb for factory purposes. It is right across from the ball park, is in full view of King street and has railway accommodation.

This move has been rendered necessary because of the inability of S. F. Bowser & Co. to anywhere nearly take care of their business in the old location. One reason for the increase of business is probably found in the fact that the insurance regulations in regard to the storage of oils of different kinds are becoming more rigid and it devolves upon the users of oils to provide storage which the insurance companies will recognize as being safe under all conditions. This applies not only to the grocers and automobile owners, but to the manufacturers as well, and that branch of the Bowser business which covers a

FIGHTING THE STAMPS.

The members of the Merchants' Anti-Trading Stamp Association of Philadelphia, which was recently organized for the sole purpose of fighting trading stamps, have begun a campaign to educate the consumer into a realization of the fact that the stamp scheme is a snare and a delusion. During the past week tens of thousands of circulars have been delivered to householders all over the city, setting forth the fallacy of the trading stamp from the consumers' viewpoint.

FRUIT, FISH AND VEGETABLES

Ontario Strawberry Season has Begun — Vegetables Arriving More Freely— Notes of News.

This week marks the opening of the berry season in Ontario this year. Next week the crop will be moving in car lots. There is still a heavy demand for pineapples, but with the advent of the Canadian strawberry at reasonable prices consumption will change to the smaller fruit. The season will soon be too far advanced for shipping pines, anyway. As it is they have now all to be repacked. Oranges are advancing rapidly and so are lemons. The banana trust keep their prices steady. California peaches, plums and apricots will be received in the east this week.

Vegetables are moving more freely and a fine line of tomatoes are arriving from Texas. They are put up in four-basket crates. All vegetable prices are moving lower except for old potatoes. The $1.25 point for Delawares foretold weeks ago in The Grocer has been reached.

FRUIT SALE IN MONTREAL.

On June 11 at a fruit sale in Montreal three cars of pineapples sold at prices ranging from $2.40 to $2.75. Some of the stock was slightly under quality.

PROSPECTS.

The latest crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture contains the following:

Camden, Kent: I can notice no bad effects from the Winter except on the peach crop, which appears to be totally destroyed in this vicinity owing to a few warm days in February, when the buds made too much growth for the season of the year, and were destroyed by the frosts following—although these frosts were not so low as in previous years when the fruit came on all right.

Stamford, Welland: There was reason to think that when the weather was so mild and warm in January that the fruit would be injured, especially the peaches. But they came through all right, and the buds are in excellent condition.

Vaughan, York: Fruit trees have stood the Winter well, and I think the prospect at present is that fruit will be as plentiful as usual, if not more so.

Sidney, Hastings: Fruit-raising is on the increase in the Bay of Quinte district.

Saltfleet, Wentworth: Some vineyards in this section have not missed a crop of grapes in forty years, and the prospects for a good crop were never better than they are this year.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—Very good business is passing in green fruits. Orders being received are of good size, as a rule. Quotations on oranges (Messina) show an advance this week. It is expected that all lines will advance shortly. Pineapples are expected to be sold at lower prices next week. Fifty thousand crates of pineapples were sold in New York the beginning of the week at reduced prices, and this will, it is thought, have an effect on the Canadian market to the extent of lowering prices. Egyptian onions are slow at prices quoted.

VEGETABLES—In vegetables there has been a downward tendency in prices and as a consequence many lines have declined to very low prices. Probably the increased arrivals of green vegetables have something to do with the falling prices. Very good business is being transacted in the different lines offered. Cucumbers are moving freely at 50c. to 75c. a dozen, or $2 a basket. Lettuce is selling very well at lower prices than were quoted last week. New potatoes are down fifty cents a barrel and fair trade is passing in them. New beets and new turnips are still high, $1.50 per dozen being asked. At this figure some trade is done by those catering to the high class of customers, but lower prices must rule before a good trade with the general public can be worked in these lines.

FISH—In consequence of the increased arrivals of Gaspe salmon, prices this week are a little lower. The salmon season is now at its height, while the prices ruling are about the lowest to be expected during the season. Quotations on British Columbia salmon, which is also on the market in good quantities, are very low. Halibut is selling quite freely. One Montreal firm received this week a car of fresh halibut direct by express from the Pacific coast. These fish arrived in Montreal in first-class condition, having been shipped fresh from the water. Coming by express they only took four and a half days to make the trip. Fresh mackerel continue plentiful and prices are very much lower than they have been for a long time.

Sea fish, haddock and cod, are also in good supply. Lake fish, including trout, whitefish, pickerel, or dore, as well as pike, are all in good supply. Brook trout, however, are not so plentiful, and dealers often find it difficult to fill orders.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—Canadian berries began to arrive this week and large shipments are expected next. The quality is fair but will improve. The importing season is practically over. Prices from now on will be a matter of daily, even hourly, revision. Oranges are advancing rapidly in price, and $6 is mentioned for next week.. Lemons, too, are higher. The season for pines is nearly over, but prices this week are a little lower. The first car of California fruits, peaches, plums, apricots and cherries, is expected in a few days. The first car of Florida watermelons arrived this week.

You would think so if you could get a pair of eagle eyes on all the bottled turnip pulp, hayseeds, glucose, etc., which if you please is labelled jam—and actually sold for eating purposes.

Some of this "poison" is perhaps in your store and of course it will soon "kill" your trade.

Candy Consuming Season is Starting—Candy Making in Bigger Hands.

THOS. McCORMICK DEAD.

Prominent Manufacturer Succumbs on His Way Home.

Thos. McCormick, president and founder of the McCormick Manufacturing Co., London, Ont., died last week on his way home from California, where he spent the Winter in search of health. He was accompanied by a nurse and the end came suddenly the other side of Kansas City. The body was removed from the train for embalming upon arrival at that city.

Deceased was born in Dungannon, County Tyrone, Ireland, July 1, 1830. When 19 years of age he came to America and settled in Buffalo. Later he came to London, worked as grocery clerk a few years, when he returned to Buffalo and married Miss Catherine Armstrong, who predeceased him six years. In 1858 he went into business for himself in an old building on the site of the present large factory. This was the beginning of the McCormick Manufacturing Company. He prospered in the confectionery and candy business, and became one of London's richest and most prominent citizens. He served in the city council and on the hospital trust for several years, and gave largely to charity. He built the McCormick Home for Aged People in London, and at the time of his death he was building a cottage for poor consumptives at Gravenhurst, Ont. It is said he intended to visit this cottage upon his return to London. Mr. McCormick was a lifelong Methodist, and in politics a Conservative. He is survived by four sons and one daughter.

CANDY EATERS' TIME.

December and November are the two big candy consuming months, but next come the hot Summer months. Picnics and outings and holidays seem to make people candy-hungry, give them time to think of their sweet tooth.

COCOA WILL BE HIGHER.

The Port of Spain, Trinidad, Commercial Review (Gordon Grant & Co.), under date of May 18, says of cocoa:

The damage to the cultivation consequent on the severe drought experienced since the beginning of the year is proving even more serious than expected, and although recent rains will remedy some of the injury it is now generally realized that even under most favorable atmospheric conditions no important deliveries will be forthcoming until the last quarter of the year. In this position a substantial advance in prices in consuming centres is confidently expected and meantime current quotations for the little lots offering have advanced to $11.50 to $11.75 for ordinary to good red grades and $12 to $12.25 for Estates produce.

BEET SUGAR FACTORY FOR LONDON.

The Keystone Sugar Co. are negotiating with the manufacturers' committee of London Board of Trade with a view to establishing a factory there. Should the company locate in London they will build a plant to cost about $200,000, to aid which they ask a loan of $75,000. This is the same proposition that was turned down in Chatham a short time ago by forty votes. Supporters claim the by-law was defeated on account of the circulation of erroneous rumors.

MORE SUGAR BEETS.

The raising of sugar beets in Ontario is on the increase. The experimental stage is passing and although there have been many setbacks in this industry, it is making progress. The Ontario Sugar Co., of Berlin, have 2,199 growers on their list for 1906, whose contracts call for the cultivation of over 5,000 acres. Last year they contracted for 4,176 acres. The Wallaceburg Sugar Co. have contracted for about 7,000 acres, and the Mt. Clemens sugar factory is also taking a lot of Canadian beets. The Wingham district has 768 acres under cultivation, owned by 365 farmers. The yield last year was 1.6 tons per acre greater than in the previous year.

TRINIDAD COCOA.

The exports of cocoa from Trinidad between October 1 and May 18 have decreased from 162,332 sacks in 1902-3, to 146,465 sacks in 1905-6. A more curious feature of the business is that while the quantity sent to England decreased steadily from 60,000 bags to 21,000 bags, the exports to France increased from 38,000 to 52,000 bags and to America ing for the sockeye run.

A VALUABLE BOY.

The employer was bending over a table looking at the dictionary. The new office boy slipped up quietly and poked a note into his hand. The surprised employer opened it and read:

"Honored Sir—Yer pants is ripped."

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," said she, "that it is very dangerous to get near to and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" replied little Willie Jones, promptly.

"Haste Breeds Delay"

Biscuits that come out of the oven too quickly usually fill in the time on the grocer's shelves.

And biscuits left in the oven the right time, but put in the tins at the wrong time, are no better.

In each case so much of the possible excellence is subtracted.

Avoid both these pitfalls.

Our bakers and our packers know their business.

Perfection Cream Sodas

are baked and packed on an unerring system.

The regular sales are proof of this fact.

"Veda" Oatmeal Biscuits

are the best oatmeal biscuits made. This isn't simply our own opinion, it's the verdict of thousands of regular consumers in many parts of the world.

These highly nutritious, palatable, and remarkably digestible biscuits have an entirely unique and delicious flavour, peculiar to themselves, which will, undoubtedly, be much appreciated by everyone. They are made from the celebrated "VEDA" Oat Food, which is prepared entirely from the finest oats, by a special process, which, while conserving and improving the whole food value of oatmeal, converts the high percentage of insoluble carbohydrates in the oats into soluble food material, resulting in an article sixteen times more digestible than ordinary oatmeal. "VEDA" is so highly digestible that its use often cures indigestion, greatly improves the general health, and increases the vigour of mind and body. Containing, as it does, the whole, admittedly high, nutritive qualities of the finest Oatmeal in so highly digestible a form, "VEDA" becomes quickly assimilated into the blood, which it enriches, and builds up brain, bone and muscle.

We have the exclusive rights of biscuit making from the proprietors of "VEDA" Oatmeal.

Our usual grocery assortment is 1,000, but we realize that some of you grocers who have never sold cigars shy at "four figure" orders. You don't want to try 1,000 cigars, but you would consider a "500" offer.

And we have come along with the offer—in time for summer trade, too.

In the assortment there will be a quantity of PEBBLE and PHARAOH Cigars, which, as you know, are being advertised throughout the Dominion.

With the shipment goes the famous Payne Proposition, to take back, at the end of three months, at invoice price, all of your stock unsold.

TOBACCO AND CIGARS

Production Increasing in Essex and Kent—Notes of Interest for Sellers of the Weed.

DICE AND CIGARS IN THE WEST.

The important part played by the dice box in the retail cigar trade of the far west must seem strange to the eastern dealer. The Seattle Retail Grocers' Association, for instance, has adopted the following schedule for the regulation of this method of trading: 25 cents for 25 shakes. The player gets one cigar for a throw of 15 or less; 23 to 25 brings him two cigars; 26 to 28 four cigars; 29 to 30, eight; and 31 or more, 16 cigars. In San Francisco various schedules for the regulation of trading by slot machines and dice box have been devised at times by the local cigar retailers' organization, but they do not seem to have been very effective, owing to the competition of the various schemes employed by the United Cigar Stores Company. It seems a pity that such methods should be necessary in a legitimate industry, but according to the unanimous testimony of dealers on the coast, attempts on the part of the municipal authorities to put a stop to the practice have been followed by disastrous consequences to the trade.—U. S. Tobacco Journal.

BIG INCREASE IN PRODUCTION.

The stamp returns for the month of April just out show again an unbroken increase in the products of American tobacco and cigar industries. In full-fledged cigars the increase amounted to 12,476,447 in a total production of 545,480,850 as compared with a total output of 533,004,403 during April, 1905. Little cigars show an increase of 10,146,389 in a total output of 72,737,500 as against a total output of 62,591,111 of last year, while cigarettes have gone ahead 69,706,333 in an output of 311,074,009 as against 241,367,676 of last year. In manufactured tobacco the increase was 766,976 pounds in a total production of 27,730,752 as against 26,964,776 pounds in April, 1905. The snuff output increased by 201,333 pounds in a production of 2,062,422 pounds as compared with 1,861,089 pounds manufactured during the month of April, 1905.

GROWING INDUSTRY.

The annual report of the North Carolina State Labor Commissioner shows that the capital invested in tobacco industries has increased from $7.[illegible]8 in 1900 to $36,076,997, which is the most remarkable showing made by any branch of manufacturing in the state. The increase in the salaried officials was from 491 to 531. It is worthy of note also that salaries decreased with the growth of business. Salaried officials got $593,378 in 1900 and only $584,494 in 1905. The average number of wage-earners increased from 6,582 to 7,293, and their wages from $906,904 to $1,457,378. The cost of material used increased from $4,312,102 to $10,149,351.

TOBACCO A HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

Two twists of tobacco and a book on birds, which were wrapped in papers dated 1806, were found between the plastering and weatherboarding on the farm of West Lowe, near Bowling Green, Ky. The tobacco must be at least a hundred years old. It will be sent to Louisville for Home Coming Week.

WILL MAKE CIGARETTE PAPER.

Alex. MacLean, Canadian commercial agent to Japan, says regarding cigarette paper:

"The raw material for what is known as 'rice paper,' the kind used for the wrapping of tobacco in cigarette form, and which heretofore has been altogether imported, the native press states has been discovered by a Japanese expert in Formosa, and is about to be largely cultivated. With the view to its manufacture, a company has been formed in Osaka with a capital of $175,000, with provision for early increase to $250,000, under the name of the Oriental Paper Manufacturing Co., having as the basis of its operation the supply of the Government tobacco department, heretofore an importer of this article. Of course the company will have the export trade in view also; and Canadian cigarette manufacturers may inquire of this commercial agency, should it appear to them that further information might be an advantage.

Mr. M. Schalek, Canadian representative of G. Falk & Bro., is in the city, says the U. S. Tobacco Journal of New York, and will leave shortly for Canada with a full line of their new and old Sumatra tobacco, the former from their recent purchases at Amsterdam.

EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

A department devoted to the improvement of Retail Advertising. The editor of this department will be pleased to answer questions on advertising and review any advertisements submitted to him.

A COMPETITION AD.

Herewith is shown another of the competition ads which was adjudged to be fair.

The chief weakness of Mrs. Harkness' ad. was its lack of continuity. Too many breaks, consequent on too many items, made a direct appeal on any one thing impossible.

* * *

The ad. might have been limited to dairy produce or to hams and bacon, or to teas and coffees with more hope of success.

* * *

Then, as regards typographical matters, certain changes would have been beneficial. For instance, "Best Display" is far too large and "Dairy Produce" far too small. "Creamery and Dairy Butter" and "September Cheese" also should have been displayed.

* * *

Here is how the ad. should have been set:

The divisions in advertisements of any great size can often be made clearer if the items from each department are carefully separated.

Mrs. C. E. Harkness

Rule box effects sometimes serve to make a display line more prominent, or to make a certain item stand out more than others around it.

Outside of these uses which we have mentioned there are a few others, but usually when utilized for any other purposes than those mentioned rule work detracts greatly from the clean display and force of the advertisement.

Take what you consider to be the most forceful and best displayed advertisements from the best stores and see how much rule work is used outside of borders, divisions, boxes and panels. White space is often more valuable than rule work. When the department paragraphs have been separated so that the reader can easily comprehend the divisions the display of these paragraphs should be secured by having the more important set in a style of type that is easily read and a size that is plainly seen. Oftentimes rules used under display lines would better be omitted. By setting these lines in the next larger size of type with plenty of white space above and below the same space is often made more valuable.

The eye of a reader takes in every part of the item or paragraph being read. Every rule, ornament, and useless work must be investigated by the eye just the same as the text, and this labor tends to confuse one. Did you ever note the contrast between ladies' hats on the street? One is simple—not much trimming, but what there is is put on properly. It stands out neat and clear cut and greatly adds to the personal appearance of the wearer. Another hat may cost more, may carry flowers, feathers and vegetables galore, and yet it may be decidedly flat and unattractive, simply because there are so many varieties of useless trimming. The same principles apply to ad display.

The Best Display of RULE WORK.

Rule effect is valuable when properly worked out. Some very clever and striking border effects can be secured by intelligent manipulation of rules.

Next time you prepare an ad look over the first proof carefully, cut out every rule, ornament and bit of trimming not necessary to make something stand out more clearly. If the addition of an ornament doesn't make an ad better it makes it worse.

Try going over your advertisements, cutting out every rule that you think is unnecessary and note the wonderful change in appearance.—Selected.

* * *

Do you make much profit on the match business? Do you sample the various brands? Have you ever considered that the number of matches used each year warrants attention on your part?

Some grocers actually allow their supply to run out for weeks. They claim the business is to them what stamps are to the druggist—a concession to customers. This obviously is a mistake.

It's unwise also to imagine that a new line of matches will not sell and therefore should not be given a chance.

As you are aware, in the largest grocery stores of a big city, most of the orders are received over the telephone. That he may give entire satisfaction to his customers the "big" grocer keeps in perfect touch with the market, watches for new lines and should he not happen to have a certain article, at least knows something about it and how soon it can be got.

Don't commit the blunder credited to a western grocer. One of his patrons had been reading certain tea arguments in the newspapers and when the grocer called she asked for a package of ——— tea. The grocer replied: "I would't believe everything I read in the newspapers. Anyway, my own blend is best."

Look at your order sheet and see if it's up-to-date.

FOR TOURISTS AND SPORTSMEN.

The New Brunswick Tourist Association, under the auspices of the St. John Board of Trade, has issued a folder entitled "The Tourist and Sportsman's Paradise," that will be interesting to anyone contemplating a holiday. It is richly illustrated with views of scenic attractions of the Maritime Provinces. From end to end Canada is an ideal holiday land, but the Maritime Provinces think they have the best of it and the people down there like to tell about nature's liberality with them. They have enterprise down by the sea. They believe in publicity and in going after business. They want more tourists and Summer visitors and they are going the right way about getting them.

REASON TO REJOICE.

Vancouver and New Westminster grocery clerks have united in a celebration to commemorate the concession by the employers of a weekly half-holiday.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

The Turned-Down Corners

Here and there in the Ledger of Life you have turned down the corner of a page for remembrance sake—you'd forget something if the turned-down corner wasn't there.

To-day, turn down a corner deep and wide to remember this one sure fact: "Quality is remembered long after price is forgotten." Every time you come to that particular page—remember. Every time you try to sell inferior quality, think of the turned-down corner—what it stands for, and what it really means to your success.

This Fact stands out clearly

JAPAN TEAS are absolutely and inimitably in a class by themselves. The teas of other countries may have certain properties which appeal to the taste of a common palate but for teas possessing the finest attributes as regards flavor, aroma, richness, healthfulness and invigoration of the system there is nothing that can approach

JAPAN TEAS

It is the duty of every up-to-date grocer who has the interests of his customers at heart as well as his own to buy

JAPAN TEAS.

To satisfy the taste of the tea-drinking public of Canada the grocer

The proof is clear as daylight.

Ceylon Teas, Black and Green, have swept all competition out of the way. Once used, the superior merits of Ceylon Teas win them the enthusiastic support of the consumer.

Our whole aim is to give the clerks the best value we can secure.

"For all Fish, either boiled or fried, Perry's Sauce should be tried."

Fish is usually a tasteless dish. It has an odor, but that's not taste. A little of applied to fish gives it the spark of palatableness—the relish par excellence.

Perry's Worcestershire Sauce

The average Worcestershire Sauce robs the fish of its "fishness." Perry's Sauce doesn't! It just helps the fish to impress upon the tongue that it is fish.

Your customers have been waiting for a sauce just like Perry's. It is now obtainable in Canada.

More Than Forty Years Ago

we began the manufacture of Stove Polish at our present works in Canton, Mass., and the plant has steadily grown until it now covers four acres. The success of our RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish with increasing sales demonstrate the wisdom of our policy of making only high-grade stove polish. We never allow the use of any materials in our manufacture which will deteriorate the quality of our goods. We make them right and that is why the storekeeper likes to pass RISING SUN or SUN PASTE over the counter. They please the customer. You know that a customer pleased gives you more credit for selling him our Stove Polish than he does us for making it. He is coming back to you.

WHAT ABOUT THE PROFIT?

When you sell a line of goods in a class by themselves your profits are bound to be larger than when your trade is divided over a number of lines pretty much alike.

Mrs. Rorer's Saratoga Chips

are in a "special" class. A grocer can order them in goodly quantity because he knows "just-as-good" arguments are out of the question.

There is nothing that tastes like Mrs. Rorer's Saratoga Chips, and there is nothing that sells like them.

His Old Tank was Good Enough

CUT No. 19.
First Floor Outfit—one of fifty.

In January, a grocer in Michigan told one of our salesmen that his oil tank was all right, and he didn't need a better one—it had done him for ten years and was good for ten more.

Inside of three weeks that man lost three barrels of oil because his tank sprang a leak. This oil went all over the floor, into the stock and down between the walls, causing a loss of several hundred dollars.

Then he bought a Bowser.

Are you absolutely secure against similar loss?

Are you entirely satisfied with your method of handling oil? If not, send for catalog.

Our faith in this doctrine is manifested in the great success we have met with in the sale of "SALADA." We have served the public well; not well to-day, passably so to-morrow, and well enough the next day—but always "good" alike. That we have "fetched" the people, there is no gainsaying.

Trade is won and held by the sale of meritorious goods. Evidence of this fact is not far to seek.

Our often-expressed conviction that "SALADA" Natural Ceylon Greens would displace Japans is coming true rapidly—you can pin your faith to our dogged devotion to these Teas. "They are all right."

A GOOD GROCER?

No, he is not a good grocer who tries to win trade by selling cheap goods, as cheap goods, in nearly every case, means poor goods.

The aim of a good grocer is to make quality his first consideration, as a pleased customer is his best ad.

My aim is to please my customers by selling them RED ROSE TEA, which I know "Is Good Tea."

Its phenomenal success proves beyond doubt it is a line he can safely recommend to his best trade, knowing (if he has used it personally) that he is recommending a trade-winner.

Most grocers are selling RED ROSE TEA. A large number are showing keen business foresight by pushing it. If you are one of the few who have not stocked RED ROSE TEA, one of your best investments would be to do so now.

Packed in pound and half-pound packages, Black, Green, and Mixed. Freight prepaid on 65 and 100-lb. cases.

CANNERS AND THE GUILD

Conspiracy Case Again on in Hamilton—Interesting Evidence by R. L. Innis—Press Reports Objectionable.

The preliminary investigation before Magistrate Jelfs at Hamilton of the charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of section 520 of the criminal code, laid six months ago, against last year's officers of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, was resumed on Tuesday. The adjournment, a couple of weeks ago, was until the 25th inst., Monday next, but because E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., counsel for the defence, wants to go to Europe, the case was brought on earlier.

W. G. Graham, treasurer of the Owen Sound Canning Co., who was examined at the last session by Crown-Attorney Washington, was recalled for cross-examination by Mr. Johnston. The line of examination adopted by the defence was to show that the consumers and the retailers had not suffered from the Canadian Canners' agreement with the wholesalers, and that there were other reasons why the Owen Sound Canning Co. could not sell to certain wholesalers.

Witness was asked the extent of the Owen Sound business, but would not give the amount. He admitted, however, that it was over $10,000 a year.

Had no Refusals.

"Were your peas refused during 1904 or 1905 because they were bad?"

"No. They were all right. There were no complaints against them."

Witness had seen Mr. Eby, jr., of Eby, Blain & Co., and was informed by him that he could not buy from the Owen Sound Canning Co. because they could not supply all lines.

"Why did you not sell your goods to the retail trade?"

Mr. Graham said it was too expensive and that selling through a wholesaler was the more satisfactory.

"You found that unless you could do business through the wholesalers you could not make a profit?"

The witness stated that such was the case. He had spoken to brokerage firms and had been told that the Canadian Canners had things tied up. Some wholesalers had also told him that they were at the mercy of the canners and could not buy his goods. McLauchlan & Co., of Owen Sound, said they would lose the discount given by the wholesalers if they bought from his company.

Could not Sell to Retailers.

James Irving, representing W. H. Dunn, of Montreal, and a salesman for Babbitt's soaps, was next called and to the Crown Attorney stated he had sold to the Grocers' Wholesale Co., but later refused to do so as he was told by Mr. Beckett that they were a combination of retailers.

Cross-examined by Mr. Johnston, Irving said it was more satisfactory to sell to the wholesalers as it saved traveling expenses, bad debts, etc. To the Crown Attorney the witness admitted that if he sold to the Grocers' Wholesale Co. he would lose the rest of the wholesale trade.

"And you wanted to do business with them but could not because you were afraid of losing other trade?"

"Yes."

Did not Know How it Worked.

"You said the manufacturers were not losing anything; the wholesalers are getting a little more and the retailers are not losing. It must be the consumer who is paying, then?"

"I don't know how that works out."

To Mr. Johnston witness stated that at present an agreement to fix prices was under way with Mr. Beckett, but up to this time prices were made in New York by the manufacturer.

The court then adjourned till 2 o'clock, when R. L. Innis, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Canners Consolidated, was called.

Would Get a Rebate.

He did not know of any agreement to limit the pack of the Canadian Canners, nor of any agreement with the wholesalers except that if they bought all their canned goods from the Consolidated Canners they would get a rebate. Any one could come in under this agreement. It was not restricted to guild members.

The Crown Attorney produced a letter from R. & J. H. Simpson, of Guelph, in which it was said: "We agree to confine our purchases of goods to your company (the Canadian Canners) and are willing to sign an agreement to that effect."

"How many of these letters did you get from wholesalers?"

"Between 120 and 140."

"What percentage of the wholesalers of Canada would that be?"

"About 80 per cent."

"Do you sell only to wholesalers?"

"We try to confine our trade to them exclusively."

"Did you ever sell to the Grocers' Wholesale Co. "

"Yes. We sold them in 1903 and and 1904."

"Did you have any agreement prior to 1905 with the guild?"

"No."

"You were incorporated in 1903 and in 1905 refused to sell?"

"Yes. Except to wholesalers."

"Was that on account of the guild?"

"No. For other reasons."

Refused to Sell.

"Why did you refuse to sell the Grocers' Wholesale Co.?"

"At that time the question came up to whom we would sell and we decided to sell only to wholesalers."

"Why did you refuse the Grocers' Wholesale Co.; are they not wholesalers?"

"Because they are a combination of retailers. I understand they do not pay dividends on capital invested the same as other companies do, but have a system whereby the shareholders, being retailers, get a rebate off purchases of a certain amount."

"Who put those ideas into your head?"

"Our business interests."

"Did the guild tell you all this?"

"I don't think so."

"Did you ever have any conversation with the guild about selling to the Grocers' Wholesale Co.?"

"Yes."

"What did they say?"

"They said we must confine our trade to wholesalers."

"Do you mean to say if you could sell a carload to Mr. Zealand's company you would not do it?"

"I mean that we must not antagonize our customers by selling to retailers."

"Did the guild tell you not to sell the Grocers' Wholesale Co.?"

"No. They cannot dictate to us as to whom we shall sell."

What is a Wholesaler?

Crown-Attorney Washington here asked if the Grocers' Wholesale Co. were not wholesalers, and wanted to know what a wholesale business means. "Mr. Zealand's company have no retail counter. How do you make them out retailers?"

The witness said they were retailers because they sold retail the goods they bought in their individual stores. He said he understood it was a scheme by which retailers bought direct from manufacturers.

"How about Graham, of Owen Sound?"

"He sold all his goods."

"Yes, but at cost."

"We have often done that."

"When did you refuse the Grocers' Wholesale Co.?"

"In the Spring of 1905."

Fixed Prices.

"You fixed prices at which your goods were to be sold?"

"Yes."

The rebate was given only to those who kept this selling price and who did no business with others outside the agreement?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever have any discussion with the guild as to selling the Grocers' Wholesale Co.?"

"I don't think I did."

"What else do you can besides fruits and vegetables?"

"Poultry, tongue and a little sauce."

Will Sell New Lines.

"Would you sell these goods to the Grocers' Wholesale Co.?"

"Yes, if they would buy them."

"Why would you sell these lines and not others?"

"They were new and we wanted to introduce them. We went to the retailer direct."

Mr. Johnston: "Have you sold to retailers at all during the last two or three years?"

"Yes. At the retail price."

"Will you sell the Grocers' Wholesale Co. at the retail price?"

"Yes."

"What is the best medium through which to sell your goods?"

"The wholesale house."

Higher Prices.

"If you could not sell to the wholesaler would your prices be any higher?"

"They would necessarily be. We would have to employ travelers and perhaps have some bad accounts."

"You said you discovered that the Grocers' Wholesale Co. was not a bona fide wholesale firm but a combination of retailers. How does their scheme work out?"

"It is a scheme by which the retailers try to get the wholesalers' profits."

"Did all the guild members buy from you?"

"No. Some did not."

"And are there some canners who are not in the consolidated?"

"Yes. A number of them."

"Could you compel wholesalers to buy only from you?"

"If they did not buy altogether from us they could not get the rebate."

"Suppose a man in Winnipeg bought a quarter carload and another man bought a whole carload, how would their prices be affected?"

"In shipping in small lots the freight would be higher, perhaps 35 cents a case."

"Then you could not sell in full cars and in small lots at the same price?"

"No."

"Then in selling in small lots instead of in wholesale lots, the price to the consumer would be enhanced?"

"Yes."

"You think it would cost him 10 per cent. more?"

"Yes."

No Unreasonable Profits.

"How do your prices compare with American prices?"

"With one or two exceptions we are lower."

"Then you do not make an unreasonprofit?"

"No."

"How many other canners are there in Canada besides you?"

"About 28 or 30."

"Then competition is quite keen?"

"Yes."

"And there is no monopoly?"

"Not yet," said the witness, with a smile.

Mr. Johnston's questioning was intended to bring out that there was no monopoly and that prices to the consumer were lowered instead of increased by the agreement to sell at wholesale prices to wholesalers.

Mr. Washington asked the witness where he got his information that the Grocers' Wholesale Co. was not really a wholesale firm.

The witness said he had got a list of their shareholders in Toronto, and had found out from a man in Aylmer.

To Cheapen Goods.

"I suppose the real object of your agreement with the wholesalers is to give the consumer cheap goods?" the Crown Attorney asked ironically.

"Well, perhaps that figures in it."

"Why was such an agreement not necessary 50 years ago?"

"There were no co-operative or departmental stores then."

"Do you make a greater profit now that you have a combine?"

"No. I don't think so."

"You don't, eh? Well, that's too bad. A very unhappy state of affairs."

To Mr. Johnston, witness said the combine enabled them to buy their materials cheaper and dispense with travelers, thus being able to sell cheaper.

The court then adjourned until Wednesday.

Newspapers Unfair.

Before leaving Mr. Johnston took exception to the reports that had appeared in certain papers. He read a number of scare headlines he had clipped and said the court proceedings were improperly recorded with a view to prejudicing the defence case, and unless it was stopped some of them would have a counsel's fees to pay. The magistrate agreed that such was the case and that the defence had but to apply to the court for redress.

Did You Get Rebate?

George Robertson, of Kingston, was the first witness on Wednesday. He had been a wholesaler since 1859, and for years after that bought sugar from refiners, but there came a time when he could not buy and get the rebate that was given guild members. He was asked to join the guild, but did not do so, for agreements he entered into before with wholesalers had not been kept.

"In 1898 were you refused sugar?" asked Crown Attorney Washington.

"No. I got sugar but no rebate."

"Would you have got it if you were in the Guild?"

"Yes."

"What was the effect on your business?"

"I finally entered into the sugar agreement and got the sugar."

"Suppose you had not agreed?"

"I would have got no sugar, except at list prices."

"Was there any other article you could not get."

"No."

The crown attorney produced a letter to Mr. Robertson, from the St. Lawrence Starch Co., which Mr. Johnston objected to as evidence, but the magistrate allowed, as having a bearing on the case. The letter spoke of the necessity of a re-arrangement of starch prices, and asked the witness to sign a declaration to maintain prices, and stated the discounts, etc., that would be allowed those who signed. A similar letter was produced from the Edwardsburg Starch Co., and one for syrup.

"The starch to stiffen his backbone and the syrup to sweeten his palate," commented Mr. Johnston.

Kept Agreement.

"Did you observe the starch agreements?" asked the crown attorney.

"Yes."

"Have any trouble?"

"No."

"How about tobacco?"

"I was told to keep the fixed prices, and I did so."

"Did you get a circular letter from the guild stating that a new agreement was coming into force regarding tobacco prices?"

"Yes."

WINDOWS AND INTERIORS

The Window as a Trade Getter—Putting Stuff Outside—Cut Flowers Pay and are Attractive—A Novel Idea.

Something was said here a week ago about the value of the store window as an advertising medium. It was all right, too. Now a word about the window as a trade getter. The right kind of advertising is always a trade getter, but there is a department of retailing that comes more particularly under this classification, trade getters. Some grocers, on the sprat and whale theory, give things away. Others buy cheap stuff and make a bargain sale. Some give premium tickets, though that foolishness has pretty nearly run its course. There are numberless other schemes, and they all cost money. An attractive window costs only the time taken in fixing it up. That is worth remembering.

An Inviting Window.

Numberless people have changed their grocers because of an attractive window. Next to cleanliness in the conduct of his business there's no "trade getter" the grocer can devise like dressing his window well and dressing it often.

A WINDOW THAT TALKS.

The accompanying illustration shows the window of W. H. Armitage, Carleton and Gerrard streets, Toronto. Wouldn't it look better if the material on the bench outside were taken in? To the writer the window looks attractive, and the outside stuff is a torn frill on a handsome skirt, or a hair in the gravy. But forget it, and the window is one to be proud of. The display is skillfully and artistically arranged, and suggests to every passing purchaser of foodstuffs "That is a good store."

INTERIOR ATTRACTIVENESS.

The wide-awake grocer is always on the lookout for new ideas that will enable him to further cement the feeling of good-fellowship between himself and his customers. In the first place, he must convert them to the idea that his grocery is the best in the town. In order to bring this about he will take every care to have the interior as neat and attractive as possible, the service prompt, and new features from time to time not only to brighten up the place but to lend additional interest to shopping, and give an impetus to business, which is apt to get into a rut when the old routine is adhered to year in and year out without variation.

A DELUSIVE CRACK.

A novel idea in window "dressing" was shown at a store in St. Paul this week. To the casual observers the window had a big hole in it, and cracks apparently radiated from the aperture in all directions, while inside were a few pieces of broken glass, and a rock labeled, "This is what broke it." Upon close inspection, however, the beholder discovered that the window wasn't broken at all. Some old pieces of glass had been ingeniously pasted on the inside of the window.

A similar display was made by Ira Farr, who, however, made the representation to resemble a window through which a 2 x 4 had been thrown. It was so realistic that the owners of the building sent an insurance adjuster around to adjust the "loss."

FLOWERS PROFITABLE.

One feature that has been successfully worked out by many grocers is the stocking of cut flowers. If anything will attract a crowd to a grocery store it is a display of cut flowers. Once a customer has been secured for even half a dozen carnations, it rests entirely with a salesman whether her purchases are to be increased or not. City grocers are unanimous in saying there is a nice margin of profit in cut flowers, and that they more than pay for themselves in brightening up the store and attracting additional trade.—Grocer, London, Eng.

KEEP ON GROWING.

Keep on growing. Never be satisfied, because once you are satisfied, endeavor will cease and the first thing you know you will be on the retrograde.

It does not pay to be satisfied. This is the age when the hustler wins trade, and, if he is a man who keeps his word, he will hold that which he gathers in.

Do not let up; plan ahead and continue efforts to improve.—The Hardware Trade.

S. J. Douglas, of Douglas & Ratcliff, has left on a two weeks' trip to the Winnipeg branch of his firm.

T. Ellis, of T. F. Ellis & Co., Mount Forest, Ont., whose happy smile is the joy of many customers, is contemplating a holiday trip to the Old Country.

F. T. Hill, of Hill & Co., general merchants, Owen Sound, Ont., has returned from New York, where he was making purchases in some lines of dry goods. He had an enjoyable trip.

CANNERS' CROPS AND PRICES

Advices from Three Principal Districts—Some Views as to Prices—Crop Outlook and Prices to be Higher.

The canning industry in Ontario is in a general way located in three districts—the Picton and Belleville, the Niagara Peninsula and Essex and Kent Counties. These might be termed the eastern, middle and western districts.

Continuing the crop outlook and price inquiry begun last week, the following advices will be interesting :

In the East.

"The fruit crop in our section is looking very fair. It looks now as if it would be an average crop, but plums are about a failure in this locality. Vegetables are looking well."

"The prospect for peas in our locality is bright at the moment of writing, but the acreage is very limited. Tomatoes are late in starting and have sustained some injury from frost, but on the whole the outlook at present is for an average crop. Corn is also backward and area planted limited. Berries are very limited in acreage and plots badly injured by the Winter."

"At present peas, corn and tomatoes are looking fine, although it is much too early in the season to make any reliable statement as to the outcome. Strawberries are scarce, owing to the plants being killed by the open Winter. Raspberries will be a fair crop, provided we get the necessary showers. Plums will be very scarce, but the prospects for pears and peaches are very good. Early apples will be a fairly good crop, but late varieties will be comparatively light."

Centre.

"The outlook for apples, pears and cherries is a full crop. Vegetables are not grown in any quantity for market in this district. It is too early yet to say anything regarding prices for this year's crop, but the chances are that they will be very fair."

"Apples, pears, cherries, grapes, peaches and berries promise fairly well. The bloom on the blackberries is particularly heavy, while the roots of strawberry plants have apparently suffered and will not mature a full crop unless the weather continues showery. Tomatoes were planted in large quantity and the plants are doing very well. Corn looks well."

And West.

"The fruit prospects as a whole are very fair in this district. The tomato crop for canning purposes will be less than last year by perhaps 25 per cent. from drought. The recent heavy rains came just too late to save many of the newly set-out plants. Strawberries will be a medium crop and plums very light, peaches nearly as heavy as last year; pears and cherries a heavy crop. Neither strawberries nor raspberries will be very cheap owing to the fact that the canning factories are buying all they can at prices in advance of those paid for at least the last ten years."

"The outlook for tomatoes is only fair. While the acreage was larger than last year to start with, the late frost and later the tremendous storm of a fortnight ago, has much reduced the total, and perhaps 75 per cent. of last year is now all that is looked for in our district. In apples the crop outlook is much better, and there should be a full crop, except where the storm struck us."

"All kinds of small fruits seem to promise well so far. Cherries are fair. Plums and pears promise well. Grapes are good, and so are peaches, but the latter are not much grown here. Apples promise an abundant crop. They were a lamentable failure last year. We could not purchase in the county anything like what we wanted, but this year we expect a large crop of all kinds."

A western canner seen by a Canadian Grocer representative stated that some of the farmers in his district had planted out their tomatoes three or four times, but with favorable weather conditions they looked now for a large crop.

Prices of New Pack.

The question of the prices at which the new pack will open is not a matter of meets and bounds. On the market district lines are obliterated. The determining factors in the price, assuming fair competition, aside from crop results, are cost of raw material and cost of labor. These have advanced, and the indications now are for higher prices, especially as the new pack will come upon nearly bare markets in all lines.

Here are some packers' opinions :

"There is no doubt that the ruling prices for fruits and vegetables will be much higher this season than last for several good reasons. A general increase in all wages, the abnormal price of tin and solder, along with an increase in the cost of raw material, will assuredly affect the opening prices of canned goods."

"Regarding the opening price of new pack, we are not in the confidence of those who have most to say in the making, and as their ideas might, considered from a supply and demand standpoint, be regarded as somewhat erratic, of course it keeps us guessing. However, we think that they, having an eye to material things, will probably forego the gratification of sentiment and fix the price somewhat in advance of last season on many lines."

Asked regarding the evaporated apple market, a canner replied :

"The market seems quite bare of evaporated apples, and should open strong. Our agents and correspondents in Manitoba, England, Holland, Belmarket for dried apples. Since June 1 we have received many inquiries."

MORE EXHIBITION PRIZES.

The prize list of the Canadian National Exhibition, to be held in Toronto, Ont., Aug. 27 to Sept. 10, which is now being distributed, is materially increased in nearly every department. In the horse department classes have been added for Welsh, Shetland and hackney ponies, and the prizes in the first section of the breeding classes have in several instances been doubled. It has also been decided to award the premiums in the trials of speed on the three-heat plan, each heat to be considered a completed contest and the money to be divided according to the place won in each heat. The Dominion Short Horn Association having increased their grant for prizes to $2,000 the exhibition management have responded with a like amount; so that there is considerable expansion also in the cattle department. In the sheep division wether sections have been added to each breed of sheep. In this connection it might be mentioned that the management are making arrangements that will enable sheep to be judged under cover. In the poultry department a number of sections have been added and the list has been increased by an extra number of specials.

Several changes have been made in the dairy department and the building is to be supplied with improved cold storage. In the floral division a prize is added for the best and most original floral design. Several sections recommended by the Ontario Beekeepers' Association have been added to the honey classes. Several sections have also been added to the women's and children's departments. The total increase all round amounts to close upon $4,000, which means that the aggregate sum given in premiums by the Canadian National Exhibition is approaching the $50,000 mark. Entries are set to close on August 4.

FIGHT FOR WOOL.

At Chesley a contest is on between Halliday & Stinson, the wool buyers, and the mills. Last week the price of washed wool reached 38c.

STORE METHOD AND AD WRITING

A Successful Tobacco Department— Keeping Goods that can be Recommended—A Good Advertisement.

The accompanying advertisement by Taylor & Hunter, of Sudbury, is a good one. It's better than that. Any resident of the Soo who has to buy tea would be interested in it at once, and because of the fine style in which it is set up there's not much chance of his or her missing it, no matter how hurridly he or she skims through the local paper.

It is written by one who knows what he is talking about, and the way those prices stand out simply makes the tea-buyer read it. If one has a fancy for tea—and there are very few who have not when they get it good—that ad will make them want to sample Taylor & Hunter's.

If every retailer in Canada would set his mind to it and get out ads as good as this, advertising would be on a much higher level than now.

A CATCHY SIGN.

The writer recently entered Stennett Bros. grocery in that favored section of Toronto known as "The Beach." The attraction was a sign in the window reading :

I SELL
TOBACCO AND CIGARS

Questioned about this department, the grocer said it brought him quite an extensive trade. A case containing the goods was situated where it could not be overlooked, and the proprietor invited an inspection of it. This "silent salesman" was not very large, about 2 x 2 x 3 feet, and had three divisions. On the top shelf was an assortment of pipes. In the centre compartment no less than ten different brands of cigars were shown, and below was a variety of package smoking tobacco.

The case and everything in and about it was scrupulously clean and neat as a pin. The goods were arranged with a first-rate idea of display. The case was placed where it could not escape the notice of anyone entering the store.

Stennett Bros. know how to handle tobacco, and, as is usually the case, their progressive method is applied throughout the store. The visitor noticed a very fine display of canned and bottled goods, and asked if —— brand of jam was kept. The reply was : "No. That's a good line. But I am stocked up with ——."

"Do you have any call for it," he was asked.

"Not particularly. When I said it was a good line I meant I knew the quality was reliable and, therefore, I could recommend it to customers who didn't stipulate any brand, just as I do with the line I carry."

A customer entered the store and asked for a tin of salmon. The Grocer demonstrated his method by quoting three prices, and adding of the last and highest, "I can recommend that line."

That is the way a firm gets the confidence of its customers. That is progressive retailing.

HEADINGS.

So many advertisers do not realize the value of headlines in advertising. The headlines of an advertisement should always be so constructed as to enable the reader to form some idea of the nature of the advertisement at a glance. In small ads, of course this is often impossible, but these small ads of a few lines are quickly read, while an ad of two, three or more inches are passed unless the reader is enabled to form some idea of their nature through the headlines. So many ads are so worded that the reader must read clear through to the bottom before he is able to tell what the advertiser is driving at. By this it would seem that the advertiser thinks that this is the best policy in order to get people to read his ad, but this is a great mistake. But very few are going to take time to wade clear through a long-winded advertisement to find out what it is all about. The advertiser should remember that his ad is to attract only a certain class of people, those who are likely to be interested in his particular line, therefore he should try his best to make the headlines attract the eye of these people. A person is interested in a certain line and sees an ad in which the headlines tell him the ad is along the line in which he is interested, he will stop and read it through, while if the head lines fail to tell the nature of the ad it is skipped over and it matters not how strong or how well written and effective the ad may be, it fails because it does not have a chance to prove its worth, as one cannot tell at a glance what it is driving at.—Selected.

BLOTTER ADVERTISING.

A little scheme that is profitable in the blotter line is that of issuing a blotter regularly once a month on the first, the blotter bearing a calendar for the coming month. This makes the blotter a distinctive one and gives it a merit above that of most of its fellows. The calendar blotter, if it is as good as the rest, will be the one to be used longest.

Then let your blotters be the best obtainable and do not put too much reading on them. A few clearly printed lines or pointed facts will present themselves in their entirety to a man every time he looks at the blotter. A long dissertation that taxes the limits of the blotter is not likely to be read even once. Another thing; don't send out blotters without the ink being dry on them. A man won't be pleased at getting his fingers all black when he rubs them over the back of your blotter.

"White space" counts in advertising, but not in a yellow journal.

Some advertisers use large space for small expressions. Judicious advertising is the happy medium between silence and uproar.

W. J. Irwin, of Clinton, Ont., is contemplating a holiday trip in the west where he has two sons, one at Moose Jaw and the other at Calgary, both doing well. Mr. Irwin is very much impressed with the possibilities of the west.

"J. S. Ireland the crockery king of Mount Forest, Ont.," said a jovial traveler to The Grocer this week, "says business is fully up to expectations, but he is still bent on bettering things and is fixing up his store for still bigger trade."

Chas. Gardiner, of Mt. Forest, occasionally takes a holiday trout fishing. He recently had a very successful outing, and a traveler who passed that way and dined on some of the trout has great admiration for the merchant's skill with the rod and line.

In Montreal recently the Smart Bag Company took out a building permit for the erection of their new factory. The building will be situated on Mullins street, is to be a three-storey structure and the estimated cost is $50,000. The building will be 125 feet by 75 feet.

The Robert Greig Co., Toronto, have changed their representative in the Lower Provinces, T. J. Gallagher, of Moncton, N.B., will henceforth look after their interests there. He has been on the ground for a number of years and has established a first-class connection. No doubt the company's business in the east will respond accordingly.

Mr. J. H. Gaffney, of Brockville, has accepted a position as traveling salesman for Mayell & Co., wholesale dealers in spices and grocers' sundries, of Toronto. He will represent the firm in Eastern Ontario with headquarters in his home town. Mr. Gaffney has every qualification for a successful salesman and The Canadian Grocer wishes him every success.

The other Monday morning a G.T.R. freight train met with an accident near Fergus and delayed the passengers a couple of hours. When Palmerston was reached the train they should have connected with had gone and fifty commercial travelers spent the day there. It was just one of those annoyances of the road the Grand Trunk might remedy if it would.

About 4 o'clock on a recent Friday afternoon a doctor's horse in Uxbridge took fright at some papers blowing about the street. When the doctor put his strength into the lines the bit broke and the horse dashed towards J. F. Brownscombe & Co's plate glass front as if it would go through. Two of the young women clerks in the shop fainted. One came around all right, but the other had a weak heart and two doctors worked over her two hours before she was able to be sent home. The horse was stopped short of the window.

OLD ACCOUNTS EXCEEDED STOCK.

Sold Out and Went Collecting—Started Cash Store.

Think of a grocer giving up business to collect his outstanding accounts! It seems funny, too; but it is a fact. A grocer started business on Queen street west, Toronto, over 30 years ago, did a large credit trade and found after some years that the accounts that had got behind amounted to more than his entire stock in trade.

He thought it was time to quit; so he sold out and spent the next two years collecting the old accounts. They amounted to $2,700 and he recovered $2,000 of it.

The loss was more than a quarter of the gross business represented by the accounts. That was the merchant's lesson. He started business again on a strictly cash basis and has a good store to-day.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Forty-eight half chests of No. 4 Condor Japan tea have been received by the E. D. Marceau Company, of Montreal. These teas are of the finest quality, the flavor being unsurpassed.

Laporte, Martin & Cie., Limited, are now taking orders for vermicelli, macaroni, etc., for a prominent French firm whom they represent.

It would be a good plan for the grocer to obtain Laporte, Martin & Cie.'s prices on Roquefort cheese before buying elsewhere.

Minto Bros., Toronto, of Melagama tea fame, are issuing a handsome new showcard advertising their specialty. Customers and intending customers are requested to send their addresses, when one will be mailed them with the greatest of pleasure.

Laporte, Martin & Cie., Limited, are selling agents for the famous Buffet and High Life brands of Milwaukee beer, put up by the Fred Miller Brewing Company.

TWO TIMELY TWISTERS

"Query" Asks Questions not Easily Disposed of—Who is Wholesaler and Who Retailer in Grocery Business?

The following letter, addressed to the editor of The Canadian Grocer, is from a gentleman of long experience in trade, and few are better qualified to discuss the issue he raises :

Dear Sir :—Perhaps through the medium of your columns two questions will be answered to the satisfaction of a large number of your readers.

1. What is a wholesale grocer ?
2. What is a retail grocer ?

I ask these questions not in a controversial spirit but simply to endeavor if possible to settle a point about which at the present time there is much discussion amongst the grocery trade generally. Repeatedly during the police court investigation being held in Hamilton, Ont., matters bearing on the question have come out in the evidence, but up to the present nothing has transpired which could be taken as drawing the line between "wholesale" and "retail" and definitely settling which is which.

Quite recently I have put the first question to three so-called wholesale grocers and in each case got a different answer. The first said that a retail grocer was one who sold to consumers, therefore a wholesale grocer was one who did not sell to consumers direct. If this is correct, how many strictly wholesale grocers are there here or elsewhere ? Is not an hotelkeeper a consumer ? And if so, is not the big hotelkeeper with an average of one or two hundred guests in his house just as much a consumer as the small hotelkeeper who lays a table for eight or ten people only ? How about lumbermen, boarding-house keepers, public institutions, etc. ?

The second wholesale grocer whom I asked gave this reply : "A wholesale grocer is one who has no retail counter in his store or warehouse." But does this answer the question ? And does the answer coincide with the first answer ? Nothing is said about consumers here.

The third gentleman to whom I put the same question replied that a wholesale grocer was one who sold groceries in wholesale quantities to the retail trade and not to consumers—that any connection with the retail trade direct or indirect disqualified him from being legitimately "wholesale"—that if a company, or any of its stockholders, should be retail merchants the said company could not be recognized as "wholesale."

Such an answer as this makes the whole question appear more than complex. A large number of the wholesale grocery companies doing business in Ontario are joint stock companies. Who is to know who the shareholders are — whether they are retailers or what they are ? And does one retail stockholder in a company make the company a retail grocery company ? If not, how many will it take to make it retail ? And so on ad infinitum.

Sir, it appears to me that if there is any definite line between the wholesale and retail trade it is high time that those occupied and interested in the trade knew where to draw it. In Great Britain the question very rarely arises ; in fact, the leading English manufacturers publish price lists showing a special discount for quantity—in other words, the man who buys a large quantity for cash gets his goods at a lower price than the man who buys a small quantity for cash and at much lower prices than the man who buys a small quantity and wants time to pay for his purchase.

In conclusion, let me ask another question : If I have £1,000 which I want to invest in tea, should I not reasonably be expected to make a purchase on just as favorable terms and at just as low a price as anyone else ? Would it not be immaterial whether I was a wholesale or retail grocer or a consumer, provided of course I knew value in tea and the right source to buy it from ?

Yours truly,
QUERY.

EDMONTON'S CALL FOR FACTORIES

History's Lesson for the Manufacturers of Eastern Canada—Transportation, Market, Raw Material.

Edmonton offers to the Eastern Canada manufacturers some very attractive inducements to follow the movement westward and establish in the Alberta capital branch factories, which in less than a generation will probably be as large as, or larger than, the present size of the parent factories in the east. Edmonton is calling for industries, a large and rapidly increasing market in the vicinity of Edmonton is calling for manufactured goods; and Edmonton's call will not long remain unheeded, the Alberta market will not always be supplied with manufactured goods from the east. Manufacturers will appreciate the opportunities in Edmonton and they who "get in on the ground floor," those who are first to commence operations, will reap the largest benefits. If Canadian manufacturers do not seize the opportunity others will.

The Lesson of History.

Perhaps the Canadian manufacturer who reads this will remark that it is an old story, that the market is limited and he can very well continue to supply it from his eastern factory, that Edmonton is an over-boomed town, that there is bound to be a crash sooner or later, that the time isn't yet ripe for branching out in the west.

But what is the lesson of history? From the very first, Western Canada has suffered (and the east has also suffered) from the timidity and lack of confidence of the people of Eastern Canada. It was only after a bitter political struggle that the building of the C. P. R. was accomplished. Probably only a few of those who supported Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Charles Tupper in the fight for the building of the first transcontinental really had any measure of their enthusiasm and confidence. The personal magnetism of the leaders and loyalty to party—these were the factors which had the most potent influence in securing the support of the vast majority of those who voted for the construction of the C. P. R.

The great majority of both political parties lacked faith and were wanting in those powers of imagination without which men can accomplish very little constructive work.

The Initial Boom.

When the C. P. R. was building adventurous and restless spirits from the older provinces moved west, and very soon their hope of agricultural, commercial and industrial possibilities became profound conviction. They began to tell their eastern friends of the great opportunities in the new Canada beyond the lakes.

The boom of the early '80's, an east-Canadian boom almost wholly, rose and fell, enthusiasm waned, faith turned to doubt and for ten years the east lost interest in the west. The dauntless spirit of those whom the prairies had adopted kept up the propaganda and a few responded to their call.

But Eastern Canada merely shrugged its shoulders and laughed at the enthusiasm which seized every man who moved west. It was plainly hinted that the western air was hard on truthfulness and the west was jokingly referred to as

"That bourne from which no truthful traveler e'er returns."

Eastern Canada lacked faith!

Still Wanted Men.

The west still called for Ontario farmers and there still traveled eastward the same stories of the fertility of the western soil. Two Ontario counties, Huron and Bruce, responded to the call, but for the most part the invitation came to too cautious or unheeding ears. There could be nothing but "western blow" in the stories he heard of western opportunities. So the eastern farmer stayed where he was, in many cases to eke out a scanty existence on a stoney 50 acres when he could have had for the asking 160 acres of the most fertile soil in Canada.

The Eastern Canada farmer lacked faith!

No one now doubts the agricultural possibilities of the west for they have been proven by a succession of golden harvests, and thousands are moving into the land of promise. The appeal to Eastern Canada had for years fallen upon deaf and skeptical ears, and the west then turned to the United States with its story; and the result was that in two years more settlers came from the United States than had come from Eastern Canada in the preceding ten years.

The Manufacturers' Testing.

Will the Eastern Canada manufacturer be wiser than was the Eastern Canada farmer from 1885 to 1900? Just as insistently as the west called to the east for settlers it is now calling for manufacturers, and with stronger claims, for while there is still plenty of land for the newcomer, the manufacturing trade, once secured, will be held, and those that get in now will grow with the country.

Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton and other centres present strong claims upon the serious attention of the eastern manufacturer and it remains to be seen whether he will profit by the lesson of the last two decades, or whether he will wait for the American manufacturer, with his optimistic aggressiveness, to show him the way. Does the Eastern Canada manufacturer also lack faith? The next two years will answer the question.

American capital has reaped the largest profits from land speculations, and there is now very little land remaining which can be obtained by capitalists en bloc; but American faith in the future of Western Canada is growing stronger every day and there is nothing more sure than that if the Canadian manufacturer does not soon awaken to his opportunities, American capital will very shortly build large factories in the farthest west. People will not forever be content to send 2,000 miles east for their goods, and the manufacturers who first commence to supply Alberta with goods "made in Alberta" will be apt to secure and hold the Alberta trade. The market is already a large one, but it is only in its infancy. A generation from now it is more than likely that the population west of the lakes will be larger than the population east and the western market will be larger than the eastern! Will it be served by Canadian manufacturers who have established their factories in the west or will it belong to the alert Americans?

What Edmonton Offers.

What, then, are the special advantages which Edmonton offers to the manufacturer? Cheap power, abundance of raw material, good transportation facinties for the assembling of raw materials and for the distribution of the finished products, and proximity to a good market—these are the principal requirements of a good manufacturing town, and all of these Edmonton has to offer.

Cheap Power.

Is there any other place in the world where abundance of good coal may be had at $1.50 per ton, where expensive mining operations are not required, but where the coal may be loaded directly into barges and wagons? This is what Edmonton has to offer in the way of cheap fuel and consequently cheap power, and apparently she can offer it in practically unlimited quantities. For miles in all directions from Edmonton there is abundance of good coal at a very small depth below the surface of the ground. Extensive mining operations have not yet been attempted; no shafts have yet been sunk, all the mining being done on the level. The coal has practically all been obtained along the high river banks into which the miners dig and load their coal directly into barges. Until a short time ago coal was selling in Edmonton at $1.50 per ton; at the present time, owing to temporary circumstances, the price is a little higher. Practically the whole cost is transportation, and as teamsters are now commanding wages of $4.50 to $5 per day, as compared with $3 a short time ago, the price of coal has been slightly advanced. With mining operations on a large scale and up-to-date methods of delivery, coal will be less than $1.50 per ton. This coal is well adapted for both manufacturing and domestic purposes, and there are great opportunities for the development in Edmonton of an immense coal mining industry.

Coal being so cheap, little attention has yet been paid to the development of water power; but Edmonton is rich in "white coal" as well as in black, and should the supply of the latter ever be exhausted there is any amount of the former now going to waste. The city now has its own electric light and water plants and is prepared to assist small industries by supplying cheap power, water and light.

Transportation Facilities.

Abundant raw material for various industries is also close at hand, but as this phase of the situation can be best treated by example it is discussed below in connection with specific industries. Equally important is the question of transportation. Two railways, the C.P.R. and the C.N.R., now serve Edmonton and a third, the G.T.P., is assured in the very near future. While the plans of James J. Hill are not yet definitely known, it is unlikely that he will overlook Edmonton. It may therefore be safely assumed that in the very near future Edmonton will be served by four different railroads.

The Market.

What of the market for Edmonton-manufactured goods? Not so large yet as it very soon will be, but nevertheless a market of respectable proportions. Moreover, it is a market with larger proportionate buying powers than a market in the east. Westerners make money more easily than easterners and they spend it more readily. At the present rate of immigration it will be a very short time until there are as many people west of Winnipeg as east. The manufacturer first in the field will possess a very considerable advantage. Some manufacturers somewhere will very soon appreciate the possibilities of profit in supplying western people with western-made goods. If the Canadian manufacturers do not seize the opportunity others will.

Opening for Packing Houses.

The farmers in the Edmonton section of the west do not, like their fellows in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, devote all their energies to the growing of wheat, but go in for mixed farming and the raising of stock. There would be large profit in the raising of hogs if an adequate market were provided. The majority of the farmers come from the corn states of the republic and have been accustomed to raising hogs. Alberta can grow the best of barley and, as everyone in the business knows, the Canadian barley-fed bacon is much in favor on the English market. The natural pasture is also well adapted to feeding hogs, and clover and alsike are easily grown. Scores of American farmers living in Alberta have told the secretary of the Edmonton Board of Trade that they would raise hogs if they had a market. Within 100 miles, or easy shipping distance, of Edmonton there are, at the very lowest estimate, 15,000 farmers. When the industry was established a million hogs a year would not be too much to expect from them.

As a home market the industry would have from Manitoba to the Pacific, now largely supplied with American products, and on goods for export the C.P.R. is prepared to quote a rate from Edmonton to Liverpool only one-half cent per pound higher than the rate from Eastern Canada. The lower cost of raw material would more than counterbalance this disadvantage.

Soap Makers.

As a consumer of by-product the soap factory is a natural adjunct of the packing industry. At the present time there are two soap factories in the west with a third projected in Saskatoon. These factories can not supply the rapidly growing western market. Eastern-made soap is sent in by the carload. A factory in Edmonton would be in a splendid position to compete for western business.

Although Edmonton is a milling centre of considerable importance, every pound of biscuits consumed in Alberta is brought hundreds and thousands of miles over railroads which have already hauled east the wheat or flour of which the biscuits are made. Is it reasonable to suppose that this will continue indefinitely? There can be but one answer, and again the question arises whether the industries of the Edmonton to be will be built by Canadian or by American capital.

Coal Mining near Edmonton.

Flour and Cereal Mills.

Already the flour milling industry of Edmonton and the neighboring town of Strathcona has reached large proportions, but it is capable of great expansion and the production of cereals has scarcely commenced. Oats weighing 40 pounds per bushel are ordinary in Alberta and 48-pound oats are not uncommon. In many quarters the impression seems to prevail that the only Winter wheat section in the west is in Southern Alberta but this is a mistake as it has been demonstrated that the best Winter wheat in the world can be grown in northern and central Alberta. It is now being grown successfully in the vicinity of Edmonton but it has attracted comparatively little attention. Sanday & Co., the Liverpool grain firm, who purchase probably more actual grain than any other firm in the world, were so much impressed with the superiority of the red Winter wheat grown near Edmonton that as an experiment they bought 16,000 bushels at an advance of 4 cents per bushel over the price of No. 1 northern. This is equal to an advance of 1 cent per bushel over No. 1 hard wheat. There are three mills in Edmonton and seven in the vicinity.

There is a heavy demand in the west for building material, including paint, and consequently a large market for linseed oil, which makes the opportunity for linseed oil mills at Edmonton. The Alberta climate is admirably adapted for the growing of flax.

Beauty Spots in Edmonton.

Pressed Brick Works.

The manufacture in Edmonton of pressed bricks is already a very considerable industry and the product is entirely consumed in the home market. Orders have come unsolicited from as far east as Winnipeg, but Edmonton manufacturers are not yet able to fill them. This industry is capable of large expansion.

Edmonton is also a lumbering centre of some importance, the mills cutting about 20,000,000 feet of lumber last year. A new mill is now being built which, it is estimated, will increase the output 50 per cent. The timber is brought down the Saskatchewan River and the supply will last for many years to come.

An integral part of the lumber industry is the planing mill and sash and door factory, and they are on a large scale in Edmonton. These manufacturers are branching out and are now making a fine line of bank and office fittings as well as store fixtures, etc.

Manufacturers Coming.

In three months' time the Canadian Manufacturers' Association will come west to their annual convention in Winnipeg. Following the convention there is to be a tour of the west, and Edmonton is among the points to be visited. Manufacturers will then have opportunity to see for themselves the solid advantages which Edmonton has to offer. They will appreciate the opportunities offered by cheap power, unsurpassed distributing facilities and a rapidly growing market. They will also appreciate the equitable system of taxation in force in Edmonton, for the city has practically a single tax. Land values only are taxed and a manufacturer is not fined by the city, by way of increased taxes, when he erects valuable buildings. Moreover, the rate of taxation is not high, the average for several years having been about 16 mills.

When they consider all these advantages, it is confidently believed that many Canadian manufacturers on their western tour will decide to establish branches in Edmonton. One thing is certain, industries Edmonton must and will have; whether Canadian or American remains to be seen.

COMPANIES INCORPORATED.

The Beamsville Preserving Co. has obtained a provincial charter. The provisional directors are E. D'I. Smith, E. A. Armstrong, T. E. Owens and J. F. Beringer. The head office is at Beamsville, and the capital stock is $60,000.

The Sutcliffe-Edmison Co. have been granted a charter to manufacture, buy, sell and deal in goods, wares and merchandise. The capital stock is $50,000, and the head office is at Toronto. The provisional directors are J. A. Sutcliffe, H. H. Edmison and J. W. Cowan.

EDMONTON, THE GOLDEN

A Century's Slow Growth and Recent Rapid Rise—What is Behind it?—Its Trade and Commerce.

Magnificently situated on a high bank overlooking a curve in the North Saskatchewan, it is small wonder that from the earliest visits of adventurous white men wandering far from the remotest confines of civilization, Edmonton's location has impressed all who visited it as a spot marked by nature for the site of a great city. The first impression of a visitor to Edmonton to-day is the natural grandeur of its situation.

It was more than a century ago, when the American Republic was still in swaddling clothes, when "Canada" meant Quebec and Montreal—in 1795, to be exact—when the Hudson Bay traders founded a trading station on the north bank of the upper Saskatchewan River and called it Fort Edmonton. Tradition has it that Edmonton was built to compete with Fort Augustus, a fur trading station which had been founded in 1788 by a rival concern known as the Northwest Trading Co. There is also a story to the effect that there was a third trading post in the vicinity known as the X. L. Trading Company, and if this be so it would seem that the rival merchants of a century ago were agreed as to the commercial advantages of the Edmonton location as a centre of communication. The railways of to-day seem to bear witness to the sagacity of the early traders.

Temporary Government Buildings, Edmonton.

Coming of the Boom.

It was almost a century after the Hudson Bay trading post was established that the "boom" struck Edmonton, following the building of the C. P. R. line north from Calgary. But the railway stopped short at the river, hesitating at the heavy expenditure a bridge across the broad Saskatchewan would entail, and the northern terminus of the road was, and is, the town of Strathcona on the south bank of the river. Until the entrance of the C.N.R. main line last Fall, Edmonton was without a railway, although freight trains were run across the bridge originally designed for vehicular traffic and foot passengers only.

The Gold Seekers.

It was not until the days of the Klondike rush that Edmonton attained to any particular importance as a business centre. A good proportion of the multitude of gold seekers outfitted in Edmonton. Experience proved that the route north from Edmonton was a very unwise one to take, but it is from the days of the early Klondike rush that Edmonton dates its present commercial importance.

The New Edmonton.

The little trading post is now a substantially built city of at least 11,000 inhabitants. Real estate men estimate a larger population, but the conservative, hard-headed business men say there are at least 11,000 people in the city. Every train coming in from the south and east is crowded with newcomers and the growth of population has so completely outstripped the building operations that hundreds of people are living in tents. It is no speculator's dream that next Spring will probably see a population of 20,000.

Perhaps the best evidence of conservative business belief in Edmonton is the number of chartered banks that have located branches there. There are now eleven and others are projected. The banks already in Edmonton are the Montreal, Molsons, Merchants, Commerce, Hamilton, Imperial, Traders, Northern, Dominion, Union and Nova Scotia.

What is Behind it?

The growth and prosperity of Edmonton depend upon the resources, developed and undeveloped, of the surrounding country. Perhaps in all Canada there is no district possessing more forms of natural wealth. For miles in all directions there is an immense area of arable land capable of sustaining great agricultural and live stock industries. The town itself is built on a vast coal bed extending for miles up and down the river. On the banks of the Athabasca River there are known to be immense petroleum beds, expected to rival many of the largest in the United States. To the east of the Athabasca River are salt mines of very large extent. Practically every real estate office in Edmonton—and their name is legion—displays samples of gold, copper, zinc, lead, iron, silver and galena brought by trappers and travelers from Northern Alberta.

Up the Saskatchewan are timber limits of great extent as yet scarcely touched by the Edmonton mills, and north and west millions of spruce and pine in a country not yet even explored. Farther north is the fur-bearing country, a heavy consumer of Edmonton goods.

The Fur Trade.

The fur trade, which was the first to be developed in Edmonton is still, perhaps, the first in importance. For years it was the practical monopoly of the ancient and honorable Hudson's Bay Company, who, with their chain of trading posts, had an unequalled organization for handling this large and profitable business. But of late years opposition has appeared and the fur trade is shared now by Revillon Bros. and McDougall & Secord. Coming into the field only some half dozen years ago, the big French house of Revillon Bros. has already established a chain of trading posts and has become a formidable rival of the Hudson's Bay Company.

The writer believes he has discovered the secret of the wonderfully rapid success of Revillon Freres. The other day when being shown through the firm's big wholesale warehouse he was introduced to the young Mr. Revillon, who is at the head of the Edmonton business. He found him, not in his private office, but down in the fur-packing room, lending an efficient hand in an emergency in the none too pleasant work of packing muskrat skins in bales. This young man, an heir to the Revillon millions, shows the spirit which animates the Revillon family and has made of their immense business in Europe and Canada the great success that it is to-day.

Wholesale Houses.

In addition to their big fur trade, Revillon Bros. have established in Edmonton a big department store and a wholesale dry goods, grocery and hardware business which is doubling every year. A visit to their wholesale warehouse is a revelation to the visitor, who never dreams of finding in Edmonton a wholesale establishment rivalling in every respect the big warehouses of Winnipeg and the east. He soon sees nothing impossible in the ambition of the firm to build up a wholesale trade that will rival that of the largest Winnipeg and eastern houses.

The wholesale grocery trade in Edmonton comprises. Revillon Bros., the Hudson's Bay Co., Kenneth MacKenzie & Co., and the A. Macdonald Co. In the wholesale fruit and produce business there are Oscar Brown & Co. and the Edmonton Fruit & Produce Co. The packing industries there are the Gallagher-Hull Packing Co. and a branch of P. Burns & Co., of Calgary.

Revillon Bros., the Hudson's Bay Co. and Ross Bros. are extensive jobbers of hardware and heavy goods. Starting away back in 1880 as tinsmiths, Ross Bros. have steadily extended their trade until they have now one of the finest wholesale hardware establishments in the west.

Edmonton's wholesale interests are as yet only in their infancy, but they give promise of a great development in the early future.

SEEING THE CUSTOMERS.

Frank Sloan, of John Sloan & Co., Toronto, called on the firm's customers east and north of Toronto in company with the travelers on the two routes. A couple of days he spent with C. S. Parsons meeting the trade in Barrie, Orillia, Midland and intervening points. Later he accompanied Mr. Tait on the Port Hope, Cobourg, Oshawa, Bowmanville trip. This is a kind of enterprise in a firm that customers appreciate and Mr. Sloan was very cordially received.

BUSINESS MEN'S PARLIAMENT

Saskatchewan and Alberta Boards of Trade in Third Annual Convention— Uniform Commercial Law—Cheap Power.

It is two years since the first convention of delegates from the boards of trade of Western Canada was held in Calgary on the invitation of the Calgary board, and largely as a result of the enthusiastic and persistent efforts of C. W. Peterson, the secretary. Mr. Peterson is an optimist, but probably even he did not expect to see the organization of which he is the father attain, in so short a time, its proud preeminence as the business men's parliament of Western Canada. That this pre-eminence has been attained by this organization in so short a time is due entirely to the high class of intelligence which, at all three conventions, has represented the western boards of trade, and to the serious way in which the delegates have always entered upon their duties, always remembering that weight would be attached to their decisions by the public men of the provinces concerned and by the general public. As was remarked in this paper one year ago in connection with the report of the convention held in Regina, it is an easy matter to understand the rapid development of the western towns when one has seen their business men.

A Majority of the Delegates.

A Single Association.

This association of boards of trade was formed before autonomy had been granted the western provinces and it was, accordingly, named the "Associated Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories." A year ago it was known that there were to be two new provinces carved out of the old Northwest Territories, and owing to the vast extent of territory included there was at first a strong movement in favor of the division of the organization along provincial lines. Happily this was averted by a narrow vote, the result being in great measure due to the strong speech by the then Premier, F. W. G. Haultain, who, at the banquet, urged upon the convention that although there were to be two provinces, their commercial interests would always be much the same, and that accordingly it was greatly to be desired that there be some one body in a position to speak for the business men of the two provinces. The vote was close a year ago, but there was no opposition whatever in the convention last week to the resolution offered by the Regina Board of Trade in favor of continuing the present organization for another year. The Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada will still continue to represent the commercial thought of the two provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

It is unfortunate, perhaps, that some other name was not chosen, for the term

"Western Canada" is usually taken to mean the whole territory from the western boundary of Ontario to the Pacific coast. Manitoba and British Columbia are not included in the association, and the name is, therefore, slightly misleading. In the convention discussions Manitoba was, however, ably represented by Andrew Strang, the president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, who was present by special invitation and who was accorded all the privileges of the convention except the right to vote.

Vice-President's Address.

Owing to the lamented death some months ago of President Thomas Tweed, of Medicine Hat, the chair was taken by First Vice-President R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary. In opening the convention Mr. Hutchings spoke as follows:

"Gentlemen: It is with a great deal of pleasure that I rise to open the proceedings of the third convention of boards of trade delegates. At the same time this pleasure is mixed with regret; as I look over the faces of those who are present to-day, I am once more reminded of the irreparable loss which our convention has sustained in the death of our late president, Mr. Thomas Tweed, of Medicine Hat. Those of you who, like myself, attended the first convention at Calgary, and the second convention at Regina, at both of which Mr. Tweed was unanimously chosen president, will be able to realize, in a measure, the extent of our loss.

A. T. Cushing, President Edmonton Board of Trade.

The New Arrivals.

"Since we last convened at Regina a great many changes have taken place in our country. Thousands of people who were then residents of various parts of the world are now good citizens of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and our country has gained such widespread publicity that hundreds of thousands of eyes are at present turned towards our great Canadian west. The present good crop outlook is the means of making our country more favorably known than ever before. The rapid agricultural development of the new provinces during the past few years has been truly wonderful and has established a record never approached elsewhere. Our crop production has doubled and trebled, and everything points to an even more astounding development in the future.

"The only cloud on the horizon seems to be the continued depressed condition of the beef market, and it is to be sincerely hoped that this convention may be able to take steps that will lead to a better understanding and the restoration of confidence. I am pleased to see that a resolution is to come before the convention on this subject.

Question of a Name.

"Our old name, 'Associated Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories,' has outlived its usefulness as a consequence of the granting of provincial autonomy to Alberta and Saskatchewan, and it will be necessary for you to decide upon a new name, or names, as the case may be, before the convention adjourns. This perhaps will involve a consideration of the future scope of the organization.

"You have all no doubt received a copy of the memorandum of resolutions which will be presented to the convention, so that it is unnecessary for me to comment upon the large amount of business which is before you, the resolutions numbering about forty-five. The fact that there are so many subjects to be dealt with is ample evidence of the usefulness of this organization. At the first convention 67 delegates convened; 74 representatives attended the second convention, and if all attend who promised to come we shall have fully 100 at the present meeting.

Value of Getting Together.

"It appears to be almost impossible to estimate the value of an annual convention of this nature, representing as it does the business interests of this vast country. It must necessarily establish a strong bond of fellowship between the various towns and cities represented and materially assist us to acquire a broader, more intelligent and more sympathetic view of the commercial and economic conditions as they exist throughout the country, and I feel confident that the result of the deliberations of this body from year to year will have a very material effect is establishing a good, sound commercial and social life in our fair Canadian west.

"It is with very deep regret that I announce to you the unavoidable absence of Mr. C. W. Peterson, secretary of the Calgary Board of Trade, on account of the very serious illness of his esteemed wife. Mr. Peterson, I may say, may be called the father of this organization, as it was through his efforts that the first convention was so successfully conducted. I am sure that you will all join with me in extending him our deepest sympathy in his present trouble, and hope that Mrs. Peterson may be speedily restored to health again.

Hope for Harmony.

"In conclusion, I trust that this convention may be characterized with the same spirit of harmony as that which prevailed at Calgary and Regina, and that your deliberations on the various important questions that will be brought before you will be of lasting benefit to the country. I also desire to take this opportunity of thanking you for the honor you have done me in appointing me chairman of this important gathering, and to express my hearty appreciation of the efficient manner in which the organization work of this convention has been carried out by the Edmonton Board of Trade.

"I wish you all unbounded prosperity and a safe return to your homes."

At the conclusion of Mr. Hutchings' address a vote of thanks to him was carried on motion of Andrew Strang, of Winnipeg.

A Good Man Gone.

W. C. Ives paid a glowing tribute to the late Thos. Tweed's many admirable qualities of head and heart, styling him a true representative of the best qualities of the men of Western Canada.

On motion of Hugh McKellar, of Moose Jaw, a letter of condolence was ordered to be sent to the relatives of the late president.

The New Officers.

A finance committee consisting of Messrs. Short, of Edmonton, Pearce, of Calgary, and Laird, of Regina, was appointed, and the convention then proceeded to the election of officers, which resulted as follows :

President—R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary.

First vice-president—Thomas Copland, of Saskatoon.

Second vice-president—P. McAra, of Regina.

Secretary—F. T. Fisher, Edmonton.

Alcohol Duties.

Cheap power is the object for which most western municipalities are striving and one phase of the question was brought up by the Regina board's resolution submitted by A. E. Boyle, secretary, who sees great possibilities in wood and grain alcohol. The resolution stated that the question of fuel was a serious one, that the cost was steadily rising ; that the United States Congress had removed the duty from denatured alcohol ; that alcohol could be manufactured for 10c. a gallon from many by-products in Canada ; therefore be it resolved that the Dominion Government be urged to abolish all taxes levied on denatured alcohol.

Fight With Standard Oil.

Mr. Boyle explained that denatured alcohol meant pure alcohol diluted with methylated spirits to make it unfit for use as a beverage. The action asked for was not new, as it had recently been adopted by the United States Congress and Senate after a long up-hill fight in which the measure was opposed by the Standard Oil Co., who saw in it a blow at their monopoly, since the alcohol could be used instead of oil for fuel.

"The taxes at the present time really amount to about $3 per imperial gallon," explained Mr. Boyle, "whereas alcohol can be manufactured from grain at a cost of about 25c. per gallon and diluted with wood alcohol (made from sawdust) costing about 7 cents per gallon to produce. At this cost of production denatured alcohol can be economically used as fuel for the production of heat and power, whereas under the present taxes its use is prevented except in a very limited way. By removing this tax we can have at our doors the most economical fuel that it is possible to have in Western Canada.

R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, the New President

From Waste Material.

"Moreover, this fuel may be obtained from materials which, at the present time, are entirely wasted. Decaying vegetables, frozen wheat and other vegetable matter now a total loss can be used to make grain alcohol and this grain alcohol can be then combined with wood alcohol made from sawdust that is now entirely worthless."

Mr. Boyle concluded his remarks by reading an extract from the Scientific American of June 2, in which it is stated that denatured alcohol furnishes an inexhaustible and economical supply of fuel.

The Drink Danger.

The motion was seconded by P. McGently, as very few of those present understood the differences between the various kinds of alcohol. He thought it would be dangerous to have this alcohol in the country and in support of his contention referred to the recent death of a number of Indians from drinking Florida water. He thought the whole matter should be referred to a body of scientists to be dealt with.

A. S. Noble, Medicine Hat, said the speech of Mr. Copland reminded him of the objections urged against the locomotive, that it would kill the cattle. Stevenson had replied, "So much the worse for the coo" ; similarly he would say that if people drank denatured alcohol, so much the worse for them.

Progress in Germany.

"Germany," continued the speaker, "is the great centre of modern scientific research and for years the best minds of that country have been looking into the question of cheap power. They have investigated the briquette (made of peat, sawdust, etc.) and they have found it unsatisfactory. Finally someone suggested alcohol and various experiments were accordingly made. It was found that the much despised potato will produce great quantities of alcohol and a very profitable market for the potatoes of the German farmer has accordingly been found. By intensive cultivation he can grow 300 to 400 bushels of potatoes per acre, which is double the Canadian production.

"For the use of this alcohol Germany has evolved the most economical motor in existence and cheap power has been attained thereby."

Hugh McKellar, of Moose Jaw, thought the supporters of the motion were dealing in mysteries about which the delegates knew nothing, and he therefore opposed the resolution.

T. A. Lines, Edmonton, thought this the most important question before the convention and he was surprised to hear it referred to as a mystery. The recent passing of an act in the American Senate abolishing the taxes was the result of a long up-hill fight against the Standard Oil forces, and he thought that this fight was pretty well known.

"Gallon for gallon," he continued, "denatured alcohol is almost as good for motive power as is gasoline. I have this on the authority of the Scientific American. It can be produced at much less cost than gasoline as it is produced from refuse which otherwise would be wasted entirely. The arguments against the resolution are purely sentimental."

On a vote the resolution was carried,

Hugh McKellar, of Moose Jaw, alone dissenting.

Law Amendment.

The meeting then received the report of the law amendments committee appointed last June. The report stated that owing to the creation of the new provinces it had been thought well to divide the committee, and Hon. Ex-Chief Justice McGuire of Regina and H. F. Mylton, of Regina, had devoted their attention to Saskatchewan and R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary, and Wm. Short, of Edmonton, to Alberta. The report of last year's committee on law amendments had been printed separately and sent to the members of the provincial legislatures. Messrs. Hutchings and Short and Barrister L. M. Johnstone, of Lethbridge, had interviewed the Premier and the Attorney-General of Alberta to urge upon them the enactment of legislation to carry out the convention's recommendations. The proposals had been considered reasonable but it being the first session of the new legislature the ministers did not think it possible to bring in the legislation desired this year. The deputation had suggested a commission to consider suggestions for consolidation and amendment of the statutes. The only result thus far was the enactment of a provision requiring the registration of a caveat to enforce an agreement of sale. The committee therefore recommended that last year's report be again adopted.

Need for Uniformity.

Regarding uniformity of commercial law in the two provinces, the committee recommended that a joint commission be appointed by the two governments to report upon the consolidation and amendment of the laws. In that way uniformity would be secured. The appointment of a committee from both provinces to arrange concerted action by boards of trade and the presentation of views at the various centres where such a commission if appointed would sit in order that the views presented might be on fairly parallel lines, was recommended.

Of the First Magnitude.

In moving the adoption of this report William Short, of Edmonton, said that nothing more important could come before the present convention. The new provinces were starting with a clean slate, as no vested interests had grown up around legislation; consequently it was important that a wise start should be made. The committee therefore suggested the appointment of a strong commission from the two provinces to take in charge the codification of the commercial law and to receive suggestions from the various boards of trade as to the amendments desired.

The adoption of the report was seconded by K. W. MacKenzie in a brief speech, and after a short discussion participated in by W. C. Ives, Wm. Short and D. H. McKinnon, the convention adjourned, on motion of Thomas Copland, until 2 p.m.

Corking the Natural Gas.

When the convention met again Chairman Hutchings suggested that, in order to expedite business, the mover of a resolution should be limited to 10 minutes, and all other speakers to 5 minutes each; and this was agreed upon, a formal motion being offered by Wm. Pearce, Calgary, and K. W. MacKenzie, Edmonton.

Mr. Hutchings then briefly reviewed the report of the standing law amendments committee. The main feature was the recommendation that the Governments of the two provinces should appoint a commission whose duty it would be to codify the existing commercial law and consider amendments offered by the boards of trade. This, he thought, was a good suggestion, as business men might spend a month on the matter and be little further ahead. It was suggested that the boards of trade act in concert in placing recommendations before the commission, should it be appointed.

The Late Thos. Tweed, Last Year's President.

The report was then adopted.

Present Organization Continued.

P. McAra, jr., of Regina, then brought in the following resolution on behalf of the Regina Board of Trade:

"That the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada continue as at present constituted for the year 1907."

Mr. McAra said there were many reasons for continued unity and no good reasons for division. Looking down the long list of resolutions, he was sure that the two provinces were equally concerned in them, and it was important that there should be some one body competent to speak on behalf of the commercial interests of the west. It would be noted that the resolution spoke only of 1907; that was because the time might come yet when division on provincial lines would be advisable, but that time had not yet come.

When the motion had been seconded by H. W. Laird, of Regina, Andrew Strang, president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, raised the question of the name given the organization, claiming that it was misleading as the two provinces of Manitoba and British Columbia are not included. Messrs. Copland and McKellar did not see it that way, and after a short discussion the question of name was dropped and the resolution carried.

Canadian Measure Standards.

In championing the resolution from the Strathcona Board, "That the Dominion Government be requested to pass legislation compelling all imports of goods to be marked according to Canasian standards," J. H. Macdonald said it had reference particularly to liquids. "We use the Imperial measure in Canada," he said, "while the wine measure is used in the United States. The result is that a comparison of quotations is always to our disadvantage, as only a few consumers are aware of the difference. Lubricating oils are sold in large quantities by American firms to the foreign population in the Canadian West, who do not appreciate the difference in standards of measurement. As a remedy it was, therefore, suggested by the Strathcona Board that all packages be marked by the customs authorities showing the quantity in Canadian or Imperial measure." The resolution was seconded by another Strathcona delegate.

M. Barford, of Lethbridge, contended that the provision asked for was already on the statute books, although, perhaps, not enforced very strictly. After some further discussion by Thos. Copland (Saskatoon), Hugh McKellar (Moose Jaw), and Andrew Strang (Winnipeg), the motion was finally amended and adopted as amended. In its final wording it reads as follows:

"That the Dominion Government be requested to enforce legislation compelling all imports of goods to be marked according to Canadian standards of weights and measures."

Redemption of Bank Notes.

P. McAra, jr., Regina, seconded by W. Cousins, of Medicine Hat, moved:

"That the Dominion Government be asked to nominate, in each of the new provinces, a point of redemption for bank notes, and appoint deputies of the receiver-general to reside at such points."

After a short discussion this resolution was lost on a vote.

Commercial Legislation.

On motion of R. R. Earle, North Battleford, and Wm. Short, Edmonton, the following resolution was, after a short discussion, carried unanimously.

"Resolved that it is desirable on behalf alike of mercantile interests and of those people who are obliged to struggle to establish and maintain homes that the laws relating to exemption from seizure should be amended in such manner as to render a personal promise to pay a debt incurred for actual necessaries a more valuable security than it now is, by providing that none of the provisions of such laws shall be available to defeat any such claim, and that the executive of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada be requested to urge favorable consideration of this resolution upon the legislative bodies concerned."

The preamble to the resolution set forth that the present law made it imprudent for merchants to give credit without requiring a pledge of personal property otherwise exempt; that thereby competition was lessened for a class that should be benefitted by it, and that experience had shown that the present operated more as a hindrance than as a help to those it was designed to benefit.

Teachers' Salaries.

E. M. Saunders, Moose Jaw, strongly championed a resolution in favor of a higher scale of remuneration for teachers, in order to obtain a higher degree of efficiency in the public and high schools by securing and retaining the best teachers in the profession.

In support of his resolution, Mr. Saunders stated the maximum and minimum salaries paid to teachers in a number of centres in Alberta and Saskatchewan, easily establishing his contention that salaries are ridiculously low. He thought this one of the most important resolutions under consideration, as it could not be expected that such salaries would retain the right class of teachers, and the west was vitally interested in the sound education of its children.

The resolution was seconded by Hugh McKellar, of Moose Jaw.

J. A. Gregory, of North Battleford, pointed out two practical methods of raising salaries. The first had been adopted in North Battleford, where the trustee board, when advertising for a teacher, now stated the salary offered, and no longer followed the old practice of putting teachers up at auction. The second remedy, a more radical one, was for the Government to fix a scale of salaries.

K. W. MacKenzie, Edmonton, sympathized with the underpaid teacher, but was not sanguine as to the results of fixing salaries by legislation. He was convinced that few ambitious men or women would stay in the teaching profession, no matter what the salary paid, and a good salary would retain in the profession a few who would be a disgrace to it.

D. H. McKinnon, Strathcona, supported the resolution, citing the case of his native Province of Nova Scotia, which had been compelled to adopt a minimum scale of salaries fixed by law.

The resolution was carried.

Cattle Embargo.

T. W. Lines, Edmonton, introduced a strong resolution dealing with the embargo on Canadian cattle entering the British Market. It pointed out that the statement that Canahian cattle were infected with contageous diseases had been repeatedly refuted; that countries of Continental Europe zealous in protecting their cattle herds had not put an embargo on Canadian cattle; that it had been alleged the embargo was for the protection of United Kingdom cattle raisers from Canadian competition rather than for protection from disease, and that such authoritative condemnation of Canadian cattle worked a serious injury to one of Canada's most profitable industries. The resolution then calls upon the Imperial Government to make definite official declaration as to the reasons for maintaining the embargo. The resolution continued:

"If it should be declared that those regulations are solely for the purpose of protection against the introduction of contagious diseases, then His Majesty's Government should be urged, as a matter of equity, to the appointment of a commission of veterinary experts chosen from the United Kingdom, from Canada, and from other self-governing colonies, who will investigate the matter, and whose conclusions will determine the maintenance or repeal of the regulations complained of. If it should be stated that such embargo is maintained only as a protection against Canadian competition, then the injury now done to the reputation of Canadian cattle would be removed, and the right of the United Kingdom to adopt such fiscal policy as seems best to His Majesty's advisers would not be questioned."

Government's Plain Duty.

Mr. Lines said there were only two questions to be answered. First, "Is there good and sufficient reason, because of disease, to keep out our cattle?" and, second, "If this reason does not exist, will the British Government remove the embargo?" There should be an investigation to show whether or not there was disease among Canadian cattle. He was confident that expert evidence would show conclusively that there is no disease, and in that case it was the plain duty of the British Government to remove the embargo or to acknowledge that it was imposed for protective purposes.

A. T. Cushing, Edmonton, seconded the resolution.

J. R. Cowell, Red Deer, said he would speak from the viewpoint of the Englishman. He had spent the greater part of his life in the British Isles, and he knew it was absolute gammon to pretend that the English Government kept out Canadian cattle because of disease. "No one over there," he continued, "thinks for a minute that Canadian cattle have pleuro-pneumonia. Everyone understands that the embargo is there for protective purposes. It is simply a dose of the protection we have here, the only reason for the embargo being a desire to protect the British farmers. That is all, and it is well understood. As a life-long free trader, I regret the embargo, and believe that it is very injurious to the best interests of Great Britain. But we have no reason to complain, as we are simply getting a dose of our own protective medicine."

Andrew Strang, Winnipeg, agreed with the last speaker that the real reason for the embargo was a desire to protect the British farmers. The matter had occupied the attention of the Winnipeg Board several times, and the Ottawa Government has made repeated representations on the subject to no avail. The resolution had the sympathy of the Winnipeg Board.

Cattle Shippers Unfair.

W. C. Ives, Lethbridge, in a stirring speech, said that he had a resolution from his board which related very closely to this subject. His resolution was in favor of the Government of Alberta taking up the export of live stock on behalf of the people of Alberta. The Alberta cattle men were in the hands of two large buyers, one in Calgary and the other in Winnipeg, and they didn't get a fair price. Those cattlemen who shipped to England themselves obtained much higher prices. He would ask the mover of this cattle embargo resolution to incorporate the Lethbridge resolution in his own.

Mr. Lines was not willing, and the subject was dropped.

Canada Not an Exception.

W. Dowsett, Edmonton, brought up the point that cattle from all countries are under the embargo. Canadian cattle are not singled out.

Wm. Pearce, Calgary, said he was in sympathy with the resolution, but he did not agree with the statement that serious injury was being worked the Canadian cattle trade. In so far as the embargo resulted in the establishment of Canadian packing houses, it was not a bad thing for Canada. He would move that the resolution be referred back to the resolutions committee.

J. A. Jackson, Ponoka, seconded the motion of Mr. Pearce, adding that "all we can do is ask the British Government to remove the stigma of disease from our cattle."

The motion carried and the resolution was referred to the resolutions committee to be re-drafted.

Fruit Inspection.

W. J. Cluff, Strathcona, brought in a resolution from his board that the Dominion Government be requested to appoint a fruit inspector for the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. At least this is the form in which the resolution was finally passed; in its original form it applied only to the Province of Alberta.

Mr. Cluff said the people of Alberta and Saskatchewan were large consumers of apples and other fruit, and frequently they suffered from the poor quality of fruit supplied them. There was a fruit inspector in Vancouver, but he can not do justice to the big territory in his charge; the two provinces needed an inspector of their own. The resolution was seconded by O. Bush, of Strathcona.

Wm. Pearce, Calgary, thought the resolution should be amplified a little, but was in sympathy with its purpose.

The resolution was carried.

Good Roads.

T. W. Lines, Edmonton, introduced an important resolution, which proved of a contentious nature. It related to good roads, and after pointing out the importance of means of communication, the fact that present methods were temporary, and that permanent improvements would effect a great saving of public funds, resolved:

"1st. That the Government should be requested to provide for the appointment of good roads commissioners throughout the province, under whose direction all local improvement taxes should be expended, and

"2nd. That a comprehensive plan be adopted with a view to providing by means of debentures charged upon the lands benefited, such roads as shall be permanent and shall be available in any season of the year and in all seasons, irrespective of rainfall."

Good Work Had Been Done.

Mr. Lines said he was merely seconding the efforts of the 1904 convention, at which a similar resolution was passed and following which the various boards of trade throughout the west had taken the matter up with good results in many localities.

Hon. Ex-Justice McGuire, Retiring 2nd Vice-President.

He urged that there was an absolute necessity for immediate scientific effort, and he was firmly of the opinion that the work should be under the control of the Government, as the present system of statute labor had proved an utter failure.

In purely grain-growing sections there was an immense loss to the farmer because of bad roads. The average farmer, in order to market 1,000 bushels of wheat, had to make an average of 16½ trips and travel say 165 miles; that was, he was unable to carry a full load because of bad roads, and the aggregate loss was something immense. Ontario had probably the best roads in Canada, and yet it was estimated that the annual loss in that province from bad roads was at least $19,000,000 per year. In all provinces the movement for good roads was pronounced. Statute labor having proved a failure, the road making should be undertaken by the Government.

Railroads Versus Common Roads.

Wm. Short, Edmonton, seconded the resolution and in doing so said he had followed carefully for several years the discussion of this subject in the magazines and newspapers. It had been said that the United States Federal Government had spent $150,000 for common roads and $400,000,000 for railways; and about the same proportion would be true in Canada although 10 men used the highways directly for one who used the railway directly.

"There can be little doubt," continued the speaker, "that most of the money and labor spent on road-making is wasted under the present system. Very little more expenditure per annum would be required to give us good roads if the money were wisely spent by a special committee of experts. And just think of it, gentlemen, a really good road will last forever, as we can see from the durability of the old Roman roads in England. That being so, we can afford to spend money in road-making. Suppose we spend $50 per quarter section, why, it would come back to us almost immediately in the increased value of the land. But if you want that money spent wisely you must have it spent by an expert who understands road-making."

Specially Constructed.

Wm. Pearce, Calgary, offered a suggestion that the resolution be amended to read "specially constructed" instead of "paved" roads and this was agreed to by the mover.

B. Young, Raymond, called attention to the advisability of a recommendation in favor of the use of wide-tired vehicles. These would preserve good roads indefinitely.

O. Bush, Strathcona, didn't believe in road commissioners. "The experience of the Province of Ontario," he insisted, "shows that the money spent by commissioners is wasted in graft and doesn't go to the roads."

Replying to Mr. Short, he pointed out that Alberta lacked stone and gravel and therefore could not make Roman roads. It would be a good road that would last five years. In Ontario the best results were obtained by having short stretches of road built by Government experts as an example to the farmers. Lectures on road-making were also a great assistance.

Any Change Would be Better.

T. W. Lines, Edmonton, admitted the possibility of graft but didn't think it should be considered very much. At all events nothing could be worse than the present system. Wm. Short pointed out that it was not intended to have the commissioner spend the money himself; he is merely to direct the expenditure into proper channels.

Thos. Copland, Saskatoon, rose with a very pertinent inquiry. Did the convention propose to ask the Government to say how people in municipalities are to spend their own money? Surely this was contrary to British practice.

"If people pay taxes," he continued, "they have a perfect right to make blunders with their own money if they want to. People wouldn't stand for Government dictation in a matter of this sort. Either let the commissioner act entirely in an advisory capacity or let the Government take over road-making altogether."

W. C. Ives, Lethbridge, took objection to the last clause in the resolution as being quite impractical and finally the whole matter was referred back to the resolutions committee with instructions to report at the evening session.

Law of Agency.

W. Short, Edmonton, moved that because of the great amount of business transacted in the west through agents, the measure of whose authority there was no convenient method of ascertaining, therefore "it is desirable that, on the one hand, corporations and others doing business in the west should be compelled to give protection to the public by clear disclosure of the extent of the agent's authority, readily accessible to the public at large, and, on the other hand, that the agency should be laid down by positive legislative enactment, and to this end the law of agency should be codified."

Mr. Short spoke briefly in support of the resolution, urging the importance of dealing with agents who had power to bind the corporations they represent.

After a short discussion the resolution was carried.

Markets for Agriculture.

Wm. Pearce, Calgary, introduced a resolution looking to better marketing of agricultural products. It set forth in preamble that the west depended solely upon agriculture; that the opening of markets was not keeping pace with production; and that prices were decreasing while cost of production was increasing. The resolution then urged upon the Dominion and Provincial Governments the establishment of bureaus of information and statistics relating to agriculture. The duties were thus classified: (1) Gather and compile statistics; (2) investigate and report upon values of agricultural products in foreign markets; (3) compare foreign with domestic values and estimate the profits of middlemen; (4) investigate alleged inadequate transportation facilities and excessive transportation rates; (5) inquire into improved methods of placing agricultural products on the market.

In support of his resolution, Mr. Pearce spoke in part as follows:

"The resolution which I have been requested to introduce is under the head of markets for agricultural products. I think that might well be broadened so as to include all the necessaries required by the agricultural population; at least to obtain statistics as to their cost and selling price. I would include among such necessaries fuel, building materials of all kinds, clothing, and the prime necessaries of life such as meats, flour, sugar, etc., etc.

A Practical Age.

"This age has been termed by many a practical age. To be practical we require knowledge; the more comprehensive and concrete our knowledge, the more practical will we be. All the great commercial nations of the world are continually gathering statistics relating to commerce. The Germans, who have perhaps made greater strides in the way of trade and commerce since 1870 than any other nation, are, par excellence, a people of statistics.

Wm. Trant, Regina, Retiring Secretary.

"One cannot conceive how the best possible progress in amelioration of grievances or in the development of the country can be attained without full and complete statistics.

"The other day in Calgary I was told that the price of mutton by the hind quarter was 18c. per lb. With a discount of 5 per cent. for cash, this is about 17c. per lb. Probably that is not an undue profit, but it would be interesting to know how much of the price the grower of the mutton received, what went for slaughter, sale, etc. The same question arises regarding beef, pork, veal, eggs, poultry and many other things which enter into daily consumption.

Publicity a Corrective.

"Coming now to the large question of exports, it is plain that the same data are required. In the case of meat shipments we need to know what the producer receives, what the transportation companies receive and what the dealer receives. With such data at our command, we can at once discover the cause and probably apply the remedy if there is anything wrong with the handling of the trade. Without such data one is groping in the dark.

"Publicity is an effective remedy for most evils. Once having the facts collected and a good system adopted for illustrating them, the maintenance of the bureau outlined in this memorial would not be very expensive; but no matter what it cost it would be well worth while."

At the conclusion of Mr. Pearce's speech a resolutions committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. Pearce, McDuffie and Laird. The convention then adjourned for dinner.

At the opening of the evening session President Hutchings congratulated the convention on the businesslike way in which it was getting through the program of resolutions.

Cattle Embargo Again.

The committee on resolutions then presented an amended cattle embargo resolution which read as follows:

"Whereas, for some years past the introduction of live cattle from Canada into the United Kingdom has been forbidden, except for slaughter within ten days after arrival on the soil of the United Kingdom, for the alleged reason that Canadian cattle are affected with contagious diseases, although such assertion has been repeatedly refuted by those who are believed to be qualified to give a correct opinion and the honesty of whose opinion has never been questioned;

"And whereas, from the utterances of several leading public men in Great Britain and from the debates in the Imperial Parliament it would appear that the embargo is intended for trade protection rather than for protection against the spread of disease;

"And whereas, it is asserted by many that this condemnation of Canadian cattle works serious injury to Canada;

"Therefore be it resolved, that the Imperial Government be requested to appoint a competent commission to inquire thoroughly into this matter, care being taken that every interest that desires may be represented so that it may be known that if the embargo on cattle is really intended for protection the charge against the health of Canadian cattle may be removed."

Would not Admit Protection.

In presenting the amended resolution Wm. Pearce, Calgary, said that in the recent debate on the question in the Imperial Parliament the Government took no positive stand, while the Irish members frankly defended the embargo as a measure of protection urgently required by the Irish grazing interests. The object of this amended resolution was to furnish material for the Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire which is to meet very soon in London, England.

"We want to get the Government," concluded Mr. Pearce, "to say frankly that it is a measure of protection, for very many people are of the opinion that before the British Government would make this admission it would withdraw the embargo altogether."

Mange in the West.

W. C. Ives, Lethbridge, said this resolution was merely playing into the hands of the British people. "There is mange in our western herds," he said; "it is contagious, and if there is an investigation by experts they will find it; and if they find it, it will serve as an excuse just as well as pleuro-pneumonia with the important difference that there will be something in it."

Thos. Copland, Saskatoon, was sorry to find the words "from Canada" in the resolution as cattle from all countries come under the embargo and one might infer from the resolution that there was some discrimination by the mother land against Canadian cattle. There was not. "We are asking for a discrimination in our favor," he asserted.

After some further discussion the resolution was carried in the amended form.

Hon. W. T. Finlay.

At this juncture President Hutchings noticed in the gathering Hon. W. T. Finlay, Minister of Agriculture in Alberta, and invited him to address the convention.

Mr. Finlay is evidently impressed with the responsibilities of his portfolio, for he expressed the opinion that the Department of Agriculture was the most important in the Government: the most important because all realized that the prosperity of the farmer was the foundation of the greatness of the Canadian West.

Outlining the work of his department, Mr. Finlay said that it had taken over from the Dominion Government the operation of the Government creameries in Alberta. Last year these creameries had manufactured about 2,000,000 lbs. of butter, for which the farmers had received, roughly speaking, $500,000. The Government creameries were popular because they realized such a handsome price for the farmer, and extensive enlargements of the plants were urgently required.

"Last year," continued the honorable gentleman, "we shipped 50,000 lbs. of butter to Japan and sent a large shipment to the Yukon. These shipments relieved the local market and helped those who were not selling cream to the Government creameries to get a good price for their butter."

The speaker reviewed the possibilities in hog raising and the Winter feeding of cattle. For all the various products of the province extensive markets would have to be found very soon. It was for the business men to assist the farmers in finding these markets.

Good Roads Again.

At the conclusion of Mr. Finlay's address, the resolution committee brought in their amended good roads resolution. No change was made in the preamble, but the resolution proper was amended to read as follows:

"That the Government be requested to provide the legislation that will best give effect to the construction and maintenance of good roads, keeping in view an equitable basis of taxation to give effect thereto."

In explanation of the change, Wm. Pearce, Calgary, said the resolution had been so amended in order to avoid the question of taxation without representation. The methods might well be left to the Government.

No Mortgage for Him.

W. C. Ives, Lethbridge, was not willing to support the debenture plan. "A debenture, long or short, is a mortgage on my farm," he exclaimed. "You propose to mortgage my farm to pay for the construction of a road which a man living six miles behind me may use as much as I do, and yet pay nothing for."

A. T. Cushing, Edmonton, didn't believe the municipalities would go into debt to build roads. They had the power now to incur liabilities to the extent of $8 per quarter section, but few, if any, had done so.

B. Young, Raymond, replying to Mr. Ives, pointed out the great increase in the value of lands caused by good roads and said he failed to see the force of objection raised by the Lethbridge delegate.

The resolution was carried as amended.

The Metric System.

K. W. MacKenzie, Edmonton, moved that because of the development of international trade having made the metric or decimal system of weights and measures more desirable, and having given general satisfaction where tried, therefore "the Government of Canada be urged to take the necessary steps to have this system made compulsory in Canada, securing at the same time the greatest possible co-operation on the part, both of the Imperial Government and that of the Government of the United States."

In the course of a very able and incisive speech, Mr. MacKenzie explained the metric system, and dwelt upon its many advantages with telling emphasis. He considered the objections to it to be sentimental and not practical. A. T. Cushing seconded the resolution.

A. Strang, Winnipeg, congratulated Mr. MacKenzie on his lucid exposition of the system, and said the Winnipeg Board of Trade had endorsed the metric system some time ago. Until Great Britain and the United States made the change, Canada could only play a waiting game.

Respect Our Ancestors.

D. H. McKinnon, Strathcona, was inclined to be conservative, and he depreciated the folly of being wiser than our ancestors.

J. R. Cowell, Red Deer, retorted in a brilliantly sarcastic and humorous speech, in which he ridiculed the present system.

A. S. Noble, Medicine Hat, offered an amendment urging merely education of the people to the advantages of the metric system, but after a long discussion it was thrown out and the original motion was adopted.

The convention then adjourned, having done a big day's work.

THE SECOND DAY.

Resuming on Thursday morning, the first business of the convention was the appointment of a standing law amendments committee for the coming year. The old committee, consisting of ex-Justice McGuire, Prince Albert; W. F. Mylton, Regina; R. J. Hutchins, Calgary, and Wm. Short, Edmonton, were re-appointed.

Aid to Hospital.

Hugh McKellar, Moose Jaw, moved that "It is advisable that all local improvement districts or municipalities be given the option of levying and collecting a special hospital rate, not exceeding one per cent. per acre, the proceeds of such tax rate to be granted to any hospital or hospitals, as the council of the municipality or local improvement district levying such rate may direct."

Mr. McKellar said the matter had been brought up last year and the Saskatchewan Legislature had increased the per diem grant per patient from 25c. to 50c. per day. He made a strong plea for public aid to hospitals, and the resolution was seconded in an able speech by E. M. Saunders, of Moose Jaw. After a short discussion the resolution was carried.

Inspection of Settlers' Effects.

V. C. James, Wetaskiwin, championed the following resolution: "That a much stricter inspection of cars containing settlers' effects coming into Canada from the United States be enforced, to prevent the importation of dutiable goods as settlers' effects."

K. W. MacKenzie, Edmonton, opposed the resolution. He thought that in general the inspection of settlers' effects was pretty thorough; if the Wetaskiwin board had any special grievances they should take the matter up with the Government themselves. It would not be fair for the convention to cast a reflection upon the whole inspection service on such slight grounds.

The convention agreed with Mr. MacKenzie, and the resolution was defeated.

Municipal Bonusing.

W. C. Ives, Lethbridge, referred to the evils of municipal bonusing, and moved the adoption of the following resolution for the protection of municipalities from the greed of railway corporations:

"That the convention recognizes the advisability of legislation restricting the bonusing of railways, corporations and industries by cities, towns, and municipalities."

The resolution was seconded by M. Barford, Lethbridge, and carried unanimously.

Postal Service.

In a strong speech, Mr. McCausland, Regina, moved that in view of the enormous influx of settlers into the two new provinces, the large amount of railway construction now in progress or under contemplation, and the rapid development of the country generally, the convention urge upon the postmaster-general the necessity of endeavoring to maintain the postal services on the basis which the progress and development of the country require.

He regretted that it should be necessary to introduce such a resolution. It was not necessary to particularize as from one end of the two provinces to the other there had been a constant outcry at the inefficiency of the postal service.

"Our friends living in Ottawa," he continued, "move more slowly than we do; they don't understand our situation here. We urgently require an official in the west—a deputy postmaster-general, if you will—to devote his whole time to improving and extending the western service. The centre of the postal system is too far away from the circumference; that's where the whole trouble lies."

Eighteen Miles in Eight Months.

Thos. Copland, Saskatoon, seconded the resolution and was followed by W. G. Pettingell, Regina. The latter cited an instance of a letter taking eight months to go rom Regina to a post office only 18 miles away.

P. McAra, jr., Regina, characterised the postal system of the west as a disgrace to Canada.

W. Dowsett, Edmonton, agreed. "We can get goods shipped by freight over the C.N.R. and the new branches of the C. P. R. and have them delivered 10 days before our invoices will reach our customers by mail. The Edmonton post office would be a disgrace to Fort MacPherson or Siberia. The Government need take no credit to themselves for their big postal surplus while they are starving the service in the west. I hear the surplus is larger than ever this year, but the service is steadily growing worse."

The resolution carried unanimously.

Sugar Resolution.

B. Young, Raymond, then introduced the following resolution, plainly intended as an endorsation of the Raymond refinery as opposed to its rival the B. C. sugar refinery:

"Resolved, that the members of this convention be pledged to use their influence wherever possible to promote the use of sugar grown and manufactured in Alberta in preference to that grown in foreign countries and which is refined only in British Columbia and certain other provinces in Canada."

In an eloquent and forcible speech Mr. Young urged that it was the "religious duty" of every loyal Albertan to support home-grown products and particularly Raymond sugar. He stated that there had been an investment of $500,000 in the Raymond refinery in 1903, that the production in that year had been 800,000 lbs.; in 1904, 1,300,000 lbs., and in 1905, 4,600,000 lbs. of refined sugar.

A Home Industry.

"This is a home industry," he continued, "yours and mine; and it becomes us as patriotic citizens to support our own. It is the extent of our production that measures our strength in this country. It is our religious duty to support what is for the benefit of our own country."

H. W. Laird, Regina, strongly opposed the resolution on the ground that it would be a vicious principle to pass a resolution referring to any one industry. "We might as well mention Regina flour as Raymond sugar," he said.

"I cannot believe that this is a struggling industry," he continued. "Raymond sugar sells at 10 cents per cwt. less than B. C. sugar and we know that the 'sugar barons' are making a great deal of money, probably more than those in control of any other industry. There is no greater monopoly than the sugar business, there are no greater robbers—and I use the term advisedly—than the 'sugar barons' and surely the Raymond people, selling so near to the price of the big refineries, have no need for pap. I am prepared to accept a general resolution in favor of the purchase of goods manufactured in the west, but I will not designate Raymond sugar."

The convention agreed most emphatically with Mr. Laird and the following amended resolution was finally passed:

"That the members of the convention be pledged to use their influence in favor of products manufactured in the west in preference to those manufactured in other parts of the country or in foreign countries."

Government 'Phones.

O. H. Bush, Strathcona, introduced a resolution re-affirming the principle of Government ownership of telephones, as set forth in a resolution passed a year ago.

The resolution was amended by the addition of the word "municipal" so as to include municipal as well as Government ownership; it then passed unanimously.

Condolence to Mrs. Tweed.

H. W. Laird, Regina, then read the following resolution of condolence, which the special committee had prepared to be sent to the widow of the late President Thomas Tweed:

"That we, the delegates in attendance upon the third annual convention of the Boards of Trade of Saskatchewan and Alberta, hereby record our deep sense of regret upon the death of our late greatly esteemed President, Thomas Tweed, Esq., of Medicine Hat, who, during the past two years, bore a leading part in the formation and establishment of the annual convention now assembled. We gladly embrace the opportunity of acknowledging his distinguished services during that period; his unflagging interest in the success of our association; his wise counsel and sound judgment; his manly qualities and kindness of heart. And we regret that death has removed such a commanding figure in the commercial life of Western Canada."

Timber Preservation.

William Short, Edmonton, next brought to the attention of the convention an important resolution dealing with reforestration and the preservation of timber. It pointed out that in the Province of Alberta, along the eastern slope of the mountains and in the foothills and for a considerable distance eastwards, there formerly existed a large area of merchantable timber of excellent quality; that this timber has been largely destroyed by forest fires; that from the 49th parallel to the 54th parallel this timber area is estimated to comprise upwards of 25,000,000 acres capable of producing, at a low estimate, 3,000 feet of lumber per acre; that there are other portions of the two provinces such as the Cypress Hills, where the strongest reasons for promoting timber growth might be urged; that new timber, if protected and preserved, would in 30 or 40 years grow naturally; that in the matter of climate and water supply the value of forest areas is very great.

The resolution asked that the Dominion and Provincial Governments be requested to take such action as will tend to promote and preserve the growth of timber upon those areas which otherwise would not have any considerable economic value; that this convention heartilf endorses the action of the Dominion Government in setting apart various areas as permanent forest reserves; in the fire ranging system carried on by the forestry branch of the Department of the Interior, and in the assistance given by the same department to settlers towards tree planting on the prairies; that the Dominion Government be requested to embody in the homestead regulations provisions for retaining on wooded lands and for tree growing on prairie lands from 20 to 30 acres of wood per quarter section.

The resolution was seconded by Wm. Pearce, Calgary, and carried unanimously.

The convention then adjourned for lunch.

Townsites.

Resuming after lunch, the first resolution was introduced by A. T. Cushing, president of the Edmonton Board of Trade, and referred to townsites. It pointed out that a large number of townsites would, in the course of the next few months, be laid out in respect of the Grand Trunk Pacific, Canadian Northern, and Canadian Pacific Railway lines, in the Province of Alberta.

The resolution continued: "Be it resolved that the Government be requested to provide that no townsite should hereafter be laid out in the province until the location has been approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, a proper plan has been submitted and approved, providing for drainage, water supply it any available, and parks and public squares, and that the plan should comply with proper standards to be laid down in that behalf and that any addition to any townsite now laid out, subject also to the foregoing, be made to harmonize as to streets and general plan, with the original plan."

Feature of Medicine Hat.

A. S. Noble, Medicine Hat, first took occasion to remind the convention of the natural gas to be found at Medicine Hat, and then opposed the resolution strongly on the ground that to give such powers to a Government would be to open the way for unlimited graft.

J. A. Gregory, North Battleford, in a strong speech supported the resolution in its entirety, and referred in scathing terms to the action of the Saskatchewan Valley Land Co. respecting townsites.

The resolution was finally adopted in the following amended form:

"Therefore, be it resolved that the Government be requested to provide that no townsite shall hereafter be laid out in the provinces except in conformity with general Government regulations providing for drainage, water supply if available, etc."

Railway Claims.

W. C. Ives, Lethbridge, moved the adoption of the following resolution referring to claims on railway companies:

"That in the opinion of this convention all just claims against railway companies for lost and damaged goods be settled inside of sixty days, and that steps be taken to have this matter brought to the attention of the railway commission."

W. G. Pettingell, Regina, seconded the resolution, saying that his business experience of 23 years had taught him that claims against a railway company might just as well be put in the stove as presented to the company.

The resolution was carried.

Another Railway Resolution.

The following railway resolution was also adopted, on motion of W. C. Ives:

"That in the opinion of this convention all transportation companies should be compelled to issue and sign shipping bills in triplicate, each of which should be as efficacious for proof of claims as any of them, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Board of Railway Commissioners."

J. H. Wilson, Prince Albert, undertook to champion a Government railway to Hudson Bay. His resolution was as follows:

"That in the opinion of this convention the future prosperity of this great western country, and of Canada as a whole, largely depends on cheap transportation, and that as the Hudson Bay is the natural outlet, and in our opinion is a perfectly feasible route, the Dominion Government be requested to build a road from some point on the North Saskatchewan River to Fort Churchill, as a national undertaking."

A Hard Critic.

A. S. Noble, Medicine Hat, spoke of the natural gas wells of his town, and then opposed the resolution in a speech of great clearness, force, and weight of testimony and argument. Metaphorically speaking, he knocked the project down and then stood upon it.

"I know a little about that northeastern country," he said.

A voice—"Very little."

"I was born in Newfoundland," he continued, "and I ought to know. Now what is the extent of our knowledge of the Hudson Bay route? Simply that vessels can get into Hudson Bay and that they can get out. That is all..

"We might build our railway and then find that the Hudson Bay route is utterly impracticable. Let us first learn something definite about the route. If we want to spend money, suppose we spend it in having a half dozen ships make repeated journeys from the bay to Liverpool. They will learn whether or not the route is practicable."

"We all know the troubles with the St. Lawrence route and how the insurance companies charge such high rates. Now the dangers of the Hudson Bay route are 100 times greater, and it would be impossible to get any insurance at all."

A Substitute.

Wm. Pearce, Calgary, and D. H. McKinnon, Strathcona, also opposed the resolution in strong speeches, and finally the following amendment was carried:

"That the Dominion Government be requested to continue its investigations as to the feasibility of the Hudson Bay route, and, if that route be found feasible, to build a railway from some point in the west to Fort Churchill, as a national undertaking."

Hands Off Jim Hill.

President A. T. Cushing, of the Edmonton board, then introduced the following resolution, plainly intended as a reproof to the few newspapers in the east which have opposed the entrance of the Great Northern into the Canadian West:

"Whereas there are in Western Canada many millions of acres of land of great economic value still unsettled and unproductive, owing principally to the lack of transportation facilities,

"And whereas, owing to the great distance of those western communities already settled from the seaboard and from the great industrial and commercial centres, the success and prosperity of such western communities is dependent in an extraordinary degree on the sufficiency of transportation facilities for the expeditious handling of traffic at the lowest possible cost,

"And whereas the extraordinary rapidity with which the newer portions of Western Canada are being settled promises to cause such an increase in the volume of traffic as is likely to overtax the capacity of existing means of transportation, even with the addition of new systems now under construction,

Most Effective Control.

"And whereas, experience has proved that the most effective control of freight rates is healthy and active competition for traffic,

"And whereas, it does not appear that the producers and consumers of Western Canada are yet enjoying the lowest rates of freight compatible with successful operation of existing railways,

"Therefore be it resolved, that in the opinion of this convention the Dominion Government should be strongly urged to afford all reasonable encouragement to any proposition looking to the increase of transportation facilities in Western Canada, and that no legislative obstacles should be placed in the way of any railway wishing to build lines in any direction."

The resolution was seconded by K. W. MacKenzie, Edmonton, and carried unanimously.

Passenger Rates.

H. W. Laird, on behalf of the Regina board, moved that in view of the growth of trade and traffic in the west the time has arrived when passenger rates should be reduced to the scale prevailing in other provinces, and that the Federal Government should take such steps as will result in the removal of the present discrimination.

He pointed out that rates are 3½c. to 3¾c. per mile on the main lines, and 4c. per mile on the branch lines in Alberta and Saskatchewan. This was unjust.

The resolution was adopted.

Tuberculosis Among Indians.

J. A. Gregory, North Battleford, secured the adoption of a resolution calling upon the Dominion Government to establish sanitariums for the treatment of consumptives where there are Indian industrial schools. There are eight Indian reserves within forty miles of Battleford, and consumption among the Indians is rapidly increasing.

Summer Excursion Rates.

W. G. Pettingell, Regina, secured the adoption of a resolution calling upon the railways to grant Summer excursion rates from Western to Eastern Canada.

A resolution introduced by the Edmonton representatives in favor of the control of municipal undertakings such as street railways, water, light, etc., by commissions, was finally laid on the table for consideration next year.

Prince Albert Chosen.

The next convention will be held in Prince Albert. This was finally vecided after two ballots had been taken, and the aspirants for the honor of being the next convention city were Prince Albert, Medicine Hat, Moose Jaw and Saskatoon.

It was also decided that the next convention is to last three days.

The convention then adjourned, after giving three cheers for the president of the association and for the Edmonton Board of Trade.

THE BANQUET.

The convention was brought to a close by a brilliant function in the Thistle Rink, where the visiting delegates were tendered a dinner by the Edmonton Board of Trade. No expense had been spared in fitting up the banqueting hall, and the decorations attracted the attention of all present. President A. T. Cushing, of the Edmonton Board of Trade, presided, the vice-chairmen being Wm. Short and T. W. Lines. The menu and toast list speak for themselves :

CONVENTION NOTES.

Prince Albert a year hence.

Three days next year.

No city could have been more hospitable than Edmonton. Her citizens and board of trade officials did all in their power to entertain the delegates and visiting press representatives.

On Tuesday morning the representative of this paper had a delightful drive for several miles south and east of the city in company with the presidents of the Edmonton and Winnipeg Boards of Trade. The drive was an eye opener as to the varied resources of the Edmonton district. Not the Calgary brand of "Eye Opener," either.

Much of the success of the convention this year was due to the fact that the delegates were nearly all notified in advance of the subjects to be discussed.

Is there any delegate to the convention who doesn't remember the town from which First Vice-President Copland hails ?

Too much credit cannot be given Secretary F. T. Fisher, of Edmonton, for his hard work during and before the convention. He was untiring in his efforts to render all possible assistance to delegates and press, and unfailing in his courtesy.

How many times did A. S. Noble remind the convention of the natural gas at Medicine Hat ?

Those Raymond men were orators. B. Young nearly carried the convention off its feet in his eloquent advocacy of his sugar resolution. Had it not been for the speech of H. W. Laird, of Regina, it is possible that the resolution might have been passed unamended.

Many times during the convention there were feeling references to the late Thos. Tweed, whose loss was so widely deplored in the west.

The privileges of the Edmonton Club were accorded the delegates to the convention, a courtesy which was very much appreciated. The representative of this paper also wishes to express his appreciation of the courtesies extended to him by the club during the days of his stay in Edmonton.

President Hutchings made an admirable chairman ; had it not been for his watchful control of the debate, the long list of resolutions could not possibly have been disposed of in two days. As it was, all received adequate consideration.

Several of those prominent at last year's convention were missed this year. Among these might be mentioned W. F. Mylton, of Regina ; Secretary Wm. Trant, of Regina ; G. K. Smith, of Moose Jaw ; Ex-Justice McGuire, of Prince Albert ; C. W. Rowley, of Calgary, and Secretary Peterson, of the Calgary Board of Trade.

Wonder if the people in Edmonton know where Strathcona is.

Municipal and government ownership were not debated in the convention ; they were taken for granted.

For several of the Edmonton illustrations used in this issue, this paper is indebted to the courtesy of the Edmonton Board of Trade.

AUTOMOBILE'S PLUNGE.

Streetsville Merchant and Toronto Traveler Narrowly Escape.

C. S. Parsons, the genial and able traveler for John Sloan & Co., Toronto, had a very enjoyable automobile trip last week, which he will remember principally because it brought him and his companions very close to a sudden severing of worldly relations. A customer of his, F. W. Morgan, Streetsville, Ont., asked him on Wednesday of last week if he wouldn't like, instead of driving to Port Credit, to make the trip in an automobile. Mr. Parsons readily assented. The merchant got round his auto and Floyd Graydon accompanied them.

The excitement came early. Meadowvale was the first objective. Not far out of Streetsville they had reached the bottom of a hill when a cow sauntered across the road almost at the entrance to a small bridge or culvert. Mr. Morgan avoided the cow, but as he was regaining the road the stearing gear refused his control. The machine struck the railing on the culvert, demolished it and plunged into the ditch 10 feet below. By a miracle of good luck none of the three occupants was hurt.

A farmer's team got the auto again on the highway and, strange to relate, the only injury it had sustained was a damaged front and demolished head lamps. The travelers got in and made the journey to Meadowdale in good time. The route then lay by Churchville, Huttonville, Brampton and Cooksville to the Credit. From there Mr. Morgan returned home and Mr. Parsons took the train to Toronto. In these days of rural unrest and constabular alertness, it's not safe to boast about automobile speed, but Mr. Parsons assured the Grocer representative he enjoyed the trip very much.

MAYOR EKERS OPPOSED.

To Halifax Commercial Committee Plan for Montreal.

Montreal, both municipally and commercially, is opposed to the plan of a joint board of trade and city council committee, with the mayor as chairman, as worked out in Halifax and there termed the commercial committee. Last week the views of Vice-President Caverhill, of the Montreal Board of Trade, disapproving of the plan, were given. This week a representative of The Canadian Grocer interviewed Mayor Ekers and he, too, is against it for Montreal. Mayor Ekers said :

"I do not think it would be in the interests of the city to form a commercial committee such as there is at present in Halifax. While it might be possible to carry out the idea in a smaller place, in Montreal the results would be disastrous to all concerned.

"The people are supposed to elect men to the council who are in every way capable of looking after the interests of the city, commercial and otherwise. If they are not satisfied with the men they have elected, at the end of two years they have a chance to elect other men whom they think would be more successful in the administration of the affairs of the city. Should a committee of this description be formed, it would, in a way, limit the powers of the council, and the result in the end would be a general mix-up. Business and politics would interfere with each other. It would be hard to define the length to which this committee would be warranted in going. If it had power in one matter and acted, there would be little reason for it not to act in other matters which came up for discussion before the city council. In this way the men elected by the people to govern the city would often be ruled by the action of the commercial committee. No, I do not believe such a committee as this would be a success in Montreal.

"The city is going ahead under the present arrangement. If a deputation from the board of trade waits upon the council and presents the views of the board on some matter of commercial importance to the city, which is very often the case, they are courteously received and their suggestions are carefully considered, and very often bear weight with the council when coming to a decision. We find this a good plan and I do not think it would be bettered by the formation of a commercial committee."

CASTILE SOAP HIGH.

Owing to the high price of oil, castile soap continues firm and advancing. As it is at present, manufacturers are shipping at a loss, so that in all probability there will be a general advance in the near future.

MERCHANTS SEEING EUROPE.

Hamilton Men Disguised as Natives—A Pleasant Tour.

A party of four Hamilton people, two of whom were John McCullough, traveler for Wood, Vallance & Co., wholesale hardware merchants, and Campbell S. Turner, of James Turner & Co., wholesale grocers, returned in May from a three months' tour through Southern Europe, Asia Minor and Northern Africa, the countries visited including Great Britain, France, Spain, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Palestine, Egypt, Algiers and Morocco. The travelers climbed Mount Vesuvius just before the recent violent eruption and had a most enjoyable trip throughout.

In the group picture shown, Mr. Turner is dressed in Turkish garb, he wearing a turban and holding an old-time musket in his hand. Mr. McCullough, in the upper right hand corner, is in the costume of a Bedouin, the photo being taken at Jerusalem, this being a favorite form of extorting money from travelers adopted by the photographers of that country. The tourists felt "creepy" while in the rented costumes, but as a result of their experience they have the photo which we reproduce.

A Group of Tourists at Jerusalem.

Constantinople's dog scavengers were one of the most startling things seen by the Hamiltonians while on the trip. Thousands of wolfish and ownerless dogs run wild through the streets, with a penalty of several years imprisonment for the killing of one of them, the penalty being half as severe as for the killing of a human being. The only service the dogs perform is to act as scavengers in disposing of the city's sewage and carrion.

Messrs. McCullough and Turner are back at work again, liking it fine and better because of their pleasant memories of far away and strange scenes.

W. Snyder, of St. Jacobs, Ont., recently spent a week about Ayton, trout fishing.

QUEBEC TRAVELERS' TAX.

A further amendment to the sliding scale tax on foreign commercial travelers doing business in the Province of Quebec, in the form of a six months' license, has not received adequate publicity, and the full import of the change is, as a consequence, not appreciated.

The sliding scale which took effect last March provided for the abandonment of the straight three hundred dollars yearly tax on all foreign travelers except those soliciting for liquor firms, and the substitution of a tax of one hundred dollars yearly on travelers selling only to the wholesale trade, two hundred dollars for those calling upon both wholesale and retail, and four hundred dollars for those selling consumers. The six months' privilege, in effect since May 1, provides for a license from 1st May to 1st of November, or from 1st of November until the 1st of May following, by paying one-half the amount of the full yearly tax. Thus a traveler for a firm outside of Canada calling on the wholesale trade in the Province of Quebec, instead of paying $100 pays only $50 for a six months' license, and a traveler calling upon the wholesale and retail pays $100, while one selling consumers pays $200, instead of $200 and $400 respectively.

This latter provision is decidedly more equitable as it practically cuts in half the obnoxious tax. To avoid taking out more than a six months' license foreign travelers must arrange their trips so as not to overlap the dates mentioned. Thus a traveler might enter the province in October and stay after the 1st of November, which would necessitate him securing another license good until the 1st of May following. Even where the retail trade is called upon, dry goods travelers never spend as long as six months in the province. While the principle of the tax, as has been pointed out in these columns many times, is in restraint of trade, the amendment which really halves the tax has been received with favor because it points in a measure to the final repeal of this revenue-making tax.

Foreign commercial travelers still make strenuous objections to the tax, but the Provincial Revenue Department is closely watching its collection, and evasions, which were at first effected, are now impossible. When interviewed in Montreal, the collector of Quebec provincial revenue outlined clearly the exact interpretation of many dubious points. For instance, a firm outside of Canada desiring to send a traveler to work the Province of Quebec, to avoid paying the tax must have a bona fide place of business in the province at some centre where stock is carried and books kept. A favorite form of evasion, which is useless in this respect, is for a foreign firm to establish an agent in either Montreal or Quebec. While the resident agent has not to take out a license, a traveler from the headquarters of the firm, or any of its foreign branch offices, coming to the province to call on the trade with the agent, must pay the tax.

MORE SHED ACCOMMODATION.

Existing wharfage conditions in Montreal are such as to arouse considerable comment among business men, particularly those interested in the shipping trade. Lack of shed accommodation is the thorn in the side of the shipping trade at present. Goods are strewn all along the harbor front awaiting shipment or cartage to their destination in Montreal. Casks, cases, bundles, in fact packages of every description, are to be seen, sometimes roughly covered by a tarpaulin, but very often exposed to the weather. These cases, or packages, contain a variety of merchandise and, very often, being stored in the open has the effect of damaging the goods. In any case, exposure to inclement weather cannot benefit the goods. Again, merchandise scattered along the wharves hampers the work of carters, and deliveries are thus delayed. Were there proper shed accommodation it would be possible to handle these goods with much less trouble, and the loading and unloading of vessels would be facilitated. Montreal's port is growing. Of that there is no doubt. Revenue returns alone would justify this statement. The goods ever lying on the wharves for lack of shed room also supports the statement. This fact may, in a measure, excuse the lack of proper temporary storage, but action is necessary at once in order to ensure the proper handling of the immense traffic which will be passing through this port a few years hence. The present congestion of merchandise is but a sign of what is to come if proper measures are not taken to meet the new conditions sure to arise. True it is that work is at present going on towards the erection of a certain number of steel sheds, but further accommodation will be required in all too short a time. Those responsible cannot take up this matter any too soon if the growth of Canada's national port is to be considered and encouraged.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION.

In every respect the Western Boards of Trade Convention, held in Edmonton last week, was a striking success. There was a large attendance of the best business men of Western Canada, the subjects discussed were of live interest in the west, and the delegates brought to their consideration a trained intelligence and a detailed knowledge which were the result of long familiarity with the problems in question. Moreover, every delegate seemed to remember the responsibility of his utterances, and in no case was a resolution rushed through without proper consideration. The convention is recognized throughout the Dominion as the Western Business Men's Parliament, and it was never once forgotten that weight will be attached to the soberly expressed opinions of the solid business men of the west. In a word, the delegates remembered that they were engaged in serious business.

While the functions of this gathering are purely advisory, it is, nevertheless, the case that their decisions are bound to have considerable effect upon the commercial legislation of the two new provinces. They are rash legislators who think they can afford to ignore the conclusions of the Western Business Men's Parliament.

GOOD ROADS IN THE WEST.

The subjects dealt with by the western merchants in convention at Edmonton were all important and none could be singled out as of first magnitude or remote interest, but the question of good country roads is probably the largest and longest lived of them all. In a country where the wealth is agricultural, where the coming and going of the farmer is to the body politic and commercial as blood circulation is to the human organism, the importance of road building and maintenance can scarcely be over estimated.

To get the situation close at hand, imagine a great city with its concentrated commercial activities doing business on mud roads. A wet day comes and everything would be tied up, a wet season and trade would be ruined. Each of the new western provinces will in a few years represent many cities rolled out and spread over the prairies, millions of people who unless the good roads apostles prevail will waste their energy on water-logged highways in wet seasons and rough and dusty ones in dry. There is no deliverance for the country that will not improve its roads. The merchants are directly interested. The millions of treasure good roads would save the farmers would go to swell the volume of every department of trade.

If the ways of the east prevail in the west the losses of many big cities with mud roads will be borne by the farmers and merchants of the prairie provinces. Of course they won't look so big because so spread out, but the losses will be there and will be an incessant drain upon the business and industrial life of the country.

MUNICIPAL SPIRIT.

Montreal men are against the Halifax plan of board of trade and municipal cooperation so far as their own city is concerned, but they admit the necessity for board of trade interest in municipal affairs. The latter is the real issue ; the question is how to realize the desired result. Spasmodic effort is useless. Continuous effort is obtainable only by some sort of organization or plan. Municipal administration is weak largely because business men do not give it the attention they should. Patriotism begins at home and there is need for it in every municipality in this country. A right development of municipal spirit would solve many vexed issues of federal and provincial politics.

SPIRITED ACTION AND SLOTH.

Manufacturers and traders on this continent have a habit of talking about the antiquated business methods and slowness of the Old Country business man. Here is a little light.

The revelations before the select parliamentary committee in England, to inquire into butter adulteration, stirred the British butter trade. The Grocers' Journal, London, June 2, has a page article headed, "Spirited Action by Messrs. Cary and Grimsdell." The spirited action is outlined in the opening paragraph :

"Being desirous, in connection with the searching inquiry which has been entered into by the House of Commons Select Committee on butter adulteration, to vindicate the fair fame of Dorset butter, and also their own reputation in the placing on the market a pure and thoroughly reliable article, Messrs. Cary and Grimsdell, of the Dorchester Butter Factory, well-known throughout Dorset, Somerset and the whole country, recently invited the leading butter merchants of Dorchester and the officers and committee of the Milborne St. Andrew and Winfrith Farmers' Clubs to lunch with them at the King's Arms Hotel, Dorchester, to discuss the question and pass a resolution in favor of the much-needed Butter Bill, following up the event by an investigation of their factory on the Wareham road. A thoroughly representative company assembled."

President Roosevelt's revelation of Chicago meat packing methods created the opportunity of a generation for Canadian packers, First, because they compete with the American product in the British market; second, because considerable quantities of American canned meat are sold in Canada, and, lastly, because the average English mind is not very clear about American geography, and everything from the western continent is regarded as of the same origin.

Well, what's been done? Nothing! Not the faintest effort has been made to inform either the Canadian or English consumer regarding the superior methods and conditions of the curing and canning of meat in Canada.

A curious example of demanding a low standard and getting it comes from India. English millers have been complaining about the dirt with Indian wheat. A London Times India correspondent explains. The recognized proportion of dirt allowed by English millers is five per cent. In India, unlike Canada and other wheat producing countries, the wheat is threshed by being trodden out under the feet of oxen in the open field, and, consequently, must have a large admixture of field dirt. When the Bombay merchants get it they test it. That having over 5 per cent. of dirt is cleaned, and the exact 5 per cent. of dirt is then added. The cure, says this correspondent, is for the European millers to reduce their allowance of dirt until it is abolished altogether. "As long as millers in Europe," he concludes, "deduct 5 per cent. for dirt, so long will they get it."

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

QUEBEC MARKETS.

FLUCTUATIONS—

Sugar—Advanced 10c.

Fish—Revised.

Montreal, June 20.

Favorable weather during the week has been conducive to fairly good business, as taken all round there is not much ground for complaint over the existing conditions in the trade. While business is not abnormal, a good, healthy trade is passing, and most grocery lines are in steady demand. Canned goods this week are featureless. Some talk there is of a weakness in tomatoes, but as prices are kept up this rumor lacks confirmation. Prospects for a good crop in California continue encouraging. Sugar has advanced 10 cents since last quotations. The rise was not entirely unexpected as the New York market has been very strong of late. Summer business has not yet commenced in earnest, but the trade expect to have a profitable season. Teas generally are firm. Reports from Japan state that the market is still advancing owing to the rumor of estimated shortage in crop, and the fact that there is a good demand for the new teas. Molasses is steady. Nothing new has developed in the coffee situation, while spices, according to advices received from the primary market, are becoming firmer. Dried fruits are moving along quite freely. Valencia raisins have been in good demand. Evaporated apples are almost cleaned up, it being very hard to obtain such small quantities as are wanted. Honey is quiet.

CANNED GOODS—Canned goods continue about steady. Jobbers report no special call for any particular line. Peas are still selling well, the last advance apparently not much affecting the sale. Corn is in very good demand. There is talk in some sections of a weakness in tomatoes, but prices are very well maintained. Californian crop reports received state that apricots this year will be much higher, which was expected, owing to the failure of the crop. Plums are said to have turned out fairly well and it is thought they will be quoted on the old basis. It is yet a little too early to speak of peaches and other fruits, but quotations are expected to arrive any day.

The usual quotations are held over for this issue and will appear again next week.

SUGAR—Since last report was made herein there has been an advance of 10 cents in sugar. Coming as it did, the rise was not unexpected in some quarters. Business has been very good right along, the advance apparently having little effect upon the market as regards sales. The rush of business has not yet commenced, but jobbers are looking forward to a good season.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—No new features have developed in the molasses market this week. Orders received by jobbers are normal. Prices have not experienced any change, and it is not likely that there will be either an advance or a decline, since conditions are such as to leave the market without much interest.

For corn syrup there is a good demand at figures quoted.

TEA—The tea market this week has been about firm. Pinhead gunpowders, in China greens, which were sold last year for 27c., are now quoted at 31c. (new crop). Other lines are advanced in proportion. Ceylon greens are unchanged. Offerings are not many. Blacks are plentiful, and some very good values in medium Ceylons are offered. Indians are about the same as usual. Reports from Japan say that the home market is very strong, and the market still advancing on account of the estimated short crop and the brisk demand. Locally dealers report more inquiries for old stock than for new teas.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—During the week there has been a good demand for Valencia raisins, and the market is rapidly being cleaned up. Prunes have shown some activity also. Seeded raisins are being sold in fair quantities in many sections. Reports from Greece state that weather conditions are about the same as last report, but it is hard to say how much of the information contained in these despatches is genuine. However, even though the crop this year be small, there will be a sufficiency to supply all demands, on account of the holdings here. Conditions for a good crop in California continue favorable, but the recent rains may have harmed the crops more than is yet known. Quotations have been received on California figs. Walnuts are firm. Reports are being received from Sicily to the effect that filberts are advancing. It is not thought that this is a fact, however, and the market is not much influenced by the rumor.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Evaporated apples are now practically out of the market. One large jobbing house in Montreal stated that it was found necessary to send out of town to obtain two cases to fill an order. Prices are, in a way, nominal. The goods are so scarce that there is hardly a price for them, but 12½c. to 13½c. still covers the situation.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

ABBREVIATIONS—

Dried fruits—Firm and higher.

Canned goods in demand.

Produce markets—Firm.

Toronto, June 21.

The grocery business has been good this week past. A Toronto firm reported more orders at the end of last week than they could handle. Canned goods, especially corn and tomatoes and salmon, are going freely into retailers' hands. The whispered weakness in tomatoes seems to be just a reaction from the enthusiasm of six weeks ago when some people had dreams of $1.75. There will probably be enough to go round till the new pack comes in, but that's about all. Dried fruits are still advancing and stocks are very light. Currants and nuts continue to advance. Sugar is firm but no further advance is anticipated here. Rice and tapioca are firm. Collections are not too satisfactory. A good many merchants are carrying heavy stocks of Winter dry goods and as one jobber put it, "the wholesaler has to carry the merchant." There is not, however, any complaining, but if one digs under the surface he finds a feeling that collections might be better.

CANNED GOODS—The demand for vegetables is very good and prices are firm at present quotations. Some jobbers report the movement of corn especially heavy and others say they never saw the demand for tomatoes so large. Peas, too, are firm at the advance of a little while ago. Corn is said to be now all in second hands. Salmon is moving in quantity. A good many retailers are buying in anticipation of an announcement Saturday of prices on this year's pack at a considerable advance. The better brands of Fraser River Sockeye are getting very scarce on this market. There are no changes of quotations in the canned goods list this week.

The usual quotations are held over for this issue and will appear again next week.

SUGAR—A firm tone prevails in the raw cane market and an advance of 1-32 to 1-16c. has been established, heavy shipments having recently transpired through New York refiners both for nearby delivery and for later shipment, including about 100,000 bags Cuban for July at 2½c. cost and freight New York basis, 95 degrees test, equal to 3.57½ duty paid basis 96 degrees test. Compared with beet quotations 8s. 2¼d. f.o.b. Hamburg for 88 per cent., which is equivalent to 3.70 duty paid New York for 96 degrees test cane sugars, it will be seen that Cuban canes have a differential of 19c. per 100 lbs. in their favor, and as long as this advantage is maintained United States refiners will not likely take any interest in beet sugars.

As against that the supplies of nearby cane sugars, such as Cuban and other West Indians, will become gradually less for some months to come. In Cuba at latest reports there were only 29 central factories grinding as compared with 68 the previous week, while stocks in the island amount to only 87,000 tons as compared with 339,000 tons at the same time last year. Total stocks in Europe and America at latest uneven dates amounted to 3,100,416 tons as against 2,253,880 tons at the same time last year. The increase of stock is 846,536 tons as compared with an increase of 907,802 tons last week. Willett & Gray say the Cuban crop must be considered as practically completed because of heavy rains throughout the island, and it is probable that much cane will remain in the fields to be ground early in December.

Europe after declining to 7s. 11¼d. recovered to 8s. 3d. per cwt. and at the close is quoted at 8s. 2¼d. Some attention is now being paid to Java sugars, which are apparently following the course of beet markets and for the present are out of reach.

Locally the demand is only fair, though one refiner reports very heavy movement. The heavy consumptive demand has not yet set in, but the indications are for fairly large crops of small fruits and a good consumption of sugar is anticipated. There are no changes in quotations locally. There is a good demand for New York refined.

TEA — Cables from Ceylon report shortening supplies and a slight advance in prices which shippers believe will be accentuated as the season advances. London mail advices tell of continued firmness of prices for the better sorts of India and Ceylon. A strong tone for medium and fine kinds characterized the opening auction in Calcutta. "One of the most healthy signs recently noticeable in the market," says one London letter, "has been the better demand for good useful liquoring teas, a demand which has been more pronounced since the duty was reduced. Should this improved condition at home find its echo in the production of better class tea and the avoidance of coarse plucking, material benefit to the industry may result."

COFFEE—The situation is unchanged and quiet. The Brazil receipts for three seasons from July 1 to June 16 have been, at Rio, 1903-4, 3,963,000 bags; 1904-5, 2,477,000 bags; 1905-6, 3,180,000 bags; at Santos, 1903-4, 6,270,000 bags; 1904-5, 7,315,000 bags; 1905-6, 6,831,000 bags; total, 1903-4, 10,235,000 bags; 1904-5, 9,792,000 bags; 1905-6, 10,011,000 bags. The total crop was: 1903-4, 10,408,000 bags; 1904-5, 9,968,000 bags; 1905-6, not complete.

DRIED FRUITS—The market for import shipments is very firm and prices are continually hardening. It is thought that with the advent of fresh supplies when the new crop comes on the market in August that the pressure of farmers to sell will cause some concession in price, and anticipating this the new crop is being offered in a speculative way for September shipment at a shilling per cwt. below the current price for old crop and buyers are in some cases disposed to take advantage of these offers.

The fig crop is reported shorter by 10 to 20 per cent. than last year's, but the prices named do not show a corresponding advance.

Valencia raisins are said to be pretty well cleaned up on this market, and the demand was never better at this season. Prices are slowly moving up. Wholesalers are buying apricots from retail-

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, June 21, 1906.)

Wholesalers report a good week's trade with the demand for all staple lines active. Price changes are few. Sugar, which recently declined 10c. per cwt. for refined grades, is still quoted at the lower level, but the market shows a stronger tone and the trade here is looking for an early advance to the old level as a result of the firmer feeling at New York. Dried fruits are firmer. Valencia raisins are up 25c. to 30c. and Silver prunes 1-2c. higher. Shelled nuts are also some firmer and in the canned goods list peas are quoted at a 10c. advance. Advices from the Pacific Coast state that the new pack of sockeye will bring from $1 to $1.50 a case more than the present stock, while prices for old stock are expected to advance 50c. to 75c. a case. None of the new stock is expected to be on the market until September. New apricots are quoted at from 19c. to 20c. per pound, about double the usual price, owing to the shortage of the crop. Old honey is practically all cleaned up, but the new article is expected soon upon the market. Canned strawberries and lawtonberries are not on the market, old supplies being disposed of. The new stock of the former will be in about the early part of August, while lawtonberries will not be on the market until September.

The arrangement which the management of Force made with the western trade, viz., nine packages with three cases, 18 packages with five cases or 36 packages with 10 cases, with freight paid to all points, was terminated on June 15.

CANNED GOODS—Pacific Coast advices state that very little of the best sockeye salmon will be packed in tall tins this season, the reason being that the demand outside Canada is almost entirely for the flat tins. Prices for the new run will also be considerably higher, about $1 to $1.50 per case. Old stock is now firmer and an early advance is looked for. Strawberries and lawtonberries are not now on the market. Canned peas are up 10c. Other lines firm, but unchanged. We quote:

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS

Halifax, June 20, 1906.

The fresh fish markets are now attracting considerable attention, due principally to the poor catches of the American mackerel seiners on the Nova Scotia coast. Of the fleet of 70 vessels now operating in these waters, not more than ten of them have secured catches, the largest of which were about one hundred barrels. Some of the Nova Scotia fish dealers were hit hard recently by the slump in the price of mackerel on the American market. When the latter was bare of fish these dealers shipped hundreds of barrels, and just about the time they arrived some of the American seiners came in with their fares, and the enormous quantities flooding the market at one time caused a drop in the price. The market has since improved, and better prices prevail. One Halifax dealer who anticipates a big shortage of mackerel on the American market has bought up all the fish that he could procure, and has 60,000 in cold storage.

H. S. STRATHY, General Manager.

The accompanying statement shows the result of the business of the bank for the year ending 31st May, 1906; also its financial position as on that date.

The business of the bank continues to show satisfactory progress. The net profits, 13.21, are in excess of the previous year, when they were 11.34.

New business of a most desirable character continues to be offered, and in order to take advantage of the large and growing business offering in the Northwest, and especially at Winnipeg, where results have far exceeded the best expectations of the management, your directors considered it was in the best interests of the bank to increase its capital, under the authority given at a special meeting of the shareholders held on the 17th of April. An allotment of two million dollars was therefore made on the 21st of May in the proportion of two new shares for each three held at the close of business on the first day of June. This allotment was made at 40 per cent. premium, being slightly below the proportion the Rest then bore to Capital, and, while it is only two weeks since the allotment was made, it has been most gratifying to the directors to find that subscriptions have already been received for nearly one million dollars, a large proportion of which has been paid, and with still many shareholders yet to hear from.

At the special meeting of shareholders above referred to the date for holding future annual meetings after the present one was changed by by-law to the fourth Tuesday in January of each year, and as our stock is held almost entirely as investment, it is proposed that dividends hereafter shall be paid quarterly, and in order to bring those into even quarters for the year a dividend for four months will be paid on the first of October and quarterly thereafter on the first of January and each succeeding three months.

Your directors hope to welcome the shareholders at the annual meeting in January next in the new and commodious bank premises now nearing completion on Yonge street. The bank has provided for ample accommodation in the building for future growth and expansion, and your directors have pleasure in stating that the demand for offices is quite equal to the most sanguine expectation. The vault accommodation will furnish absolute protection to the bank's securities, and it will be gratifying to know that every precaution has been taken in this respect to guard against loss by fire or otherwise.

During the fiscal year just closed nineteen new branch offices have been opened, viz.: thirteen in the Province of Ontario, two in Manitoba, including Winnipeg, three in Alberta, including Edmonton and Calgary, and one at Regina, Saskatchewan.

The different offices of the bank continue to receive the usual careful inspections.

C. D. WARREN, President.

The usual resolutions were moved and adopted.

The scrutineers reported the following gentlemen duly elected to act as directors for the ensuing year, viz.: C. D. Warren, Hon. J. R. Stratton, C. Kloepfer (Guelph), W. J. Sheppard (Waubaushene), C. S. Wilcox (Hamilton), E. F. B. Johnston, K.C.

The meeting then adjourned.

PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

The cheese market is very much unsettled at present; there are "bulls" and there are "bears," and their different arguments are most conflicting. It is our duty to describe the actual situation regardless of either "bullish" or "bearish" interests.

Prof. G. G. Publow, chief instructor for the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, in his address at the Brockville board last Saturday stated that the present make of cheese is phenomenal, but he also regrets to state that owing to the prevailing high prices of cheese, the goods are shipped out so closely that there are practically no cheese left in the factories for his inspectors to examine. This is to be regretted, as the cheese are leaving the factories in an uncured condition, so green that it is impossible to cut them for consumption, and once boxed they will not cure as well as they would do if properly handled on the factory shelves.

This clearly demonstrates that there is a very strong demand for cheese at present, and it also means that the factorymen know they are getting very high prices for their product and they are shipping their goods out close to the hoop for fear of a serious break in prices in the near future.

Now, admitting a large make at present, we must also admit a demand fully equal to the supplies, as there are no goods carried over, in spite of the high prices now ruling, and under these conditions it is next to impossible to get prices down to more moderate figures. At the beginning of the season there were hardly any cheese of last season's make left. The new cheese started at high prices and the British markets continued to buy. Our season is fully three weeks late and as long as there is no accumulation of stocks there can be no serious break in prices.

Receipts of cheese last week, according to the Montreal Board of Trade figures, were 93,152 boxes, against 90,652 boxes for the same week last year, and since May 1, 351,112 boxes as compared with 315,052 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Receipts of butter last week were 29,266 packages, against 31,162 packages for the same week last year, or 116,038 packages since May 1, as compared with 123,876 packages for the corresponding period of last year. This shows an increase of about 36,000 boxes of cheese and a decrease of about 7,800 packages of butter in the receipts this year as compared with last year. Cheese, being the better paying product of the milk, shows the increase, while the production of butter shows an almost corresponding decrease.

From above figures it would not seem that there is a larger production of milk this year, especially when it is taken into consideration that the cheese are being shipped out so close to the hoop that there are none left in the factories for the inspectors to examine, and this bears out our argument of last week, that the individual cows do not yield as much milk as they did a year ago.

The exports of cheese and butter are also interesting by comparison. They were last week 103,645 boxes of cheese and 18,363 packages of butter against 74,149 boxes of cheese and 17,665 packages of butter for the same week of last year, or a total since May 1 of 361,755 boxes of cheese and 50,220 packages of butter, as compared with 305,009 boxes of cheese and 52,222 packages of butter for the corresponding period of last year. Here is again an increase in the shipments of cheese and a decrease in the shipments of butter.

As pointed out before, the receipts, as board of trade figures go, are not reliable, and we can only use them for comparison, as we must presume that they are as much out one year as they are another, but the export figures are nearly correct to the package, as they are taken from the steamers' manifests as entered at the custom house.

The future of the market, while still doubtful, is as yet not encouraging for much lower prices. For speculative purposes our prevailing prices are undoubtedly too high, but as long as the consumptive demand is able to absorb all our supplies, there is not much chance to get prices lower.

PRODUCE SITUATION.

"Nothing but losses for the last ten or eleven weeks and everybody's been scared out," was the way the head of a big packing house explained the reduction of the price of hogs this week in the face of a rather better feeling on the bacon market in England, and the stronger feeling with some substantial advances in the hog product situation in Canada.

Last week the Davies Company paid for hogs $7.35 f.o.b. country points. This week the price is $7.25, or $7.75 at the factory, and the drover gets 10 or 15 cents of that. The offerings appear to be about the same and there is no hint yet of the increased supplies expected in the Fall. Other Toronto packers are paying even less. The Harris Abattoir quote $7.15 to $7.25 f.o.b. country and $7.25 to $7.30 at the city market, fed and watered. Weighed off the car the price would be $7.50 to $7.60.

Five hundred hogs arrived at the Toronto cattle market during the first two days this week, and that was about the same for the same period of last week when the six-day total was 2,400.

One reason why Canadian bacon is costing so much to produce is that the factories are running about half their capacity or less.

IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax, N.S., June 20.

Dealers here are complaining of the great scarcity of smoked meats. Good hams and bacon are very hard to obtain. One jobber says that he placed an order with a large Canadian packing firm for hams and bacon, and he has since been advised that they cannot fill it, owing to the scarcity of hogs, their output having already been bought up. There is a good demand for both hams and bacon here now, and in fact all pork products, and the jobbers do not know where to look for a supply. Hams and bacon sell here from 18 to 20 cents per pound.

Jobbers report a marked decrease in the sales of American tinned meats since the scandal in the United States. Usually at this season of the year sales are heavy and in consequence the jobbers stocked up. These firms are now at a loss to know what to do with their stock, as it is not likely that public confidence will be restored for some time. One jobber is endeavoring to have the packers take the stock off his hands.

BUTTER—The fine weather has had the effect of improving the receipts of butter, but they are far below what they should be at this season of the year. The quality of the butter is good. The farmers are not sending in as much butter as the jobbers expected, and in consequence the price keeps up. There is a good demand for small tubs of fresh made butter. They are quoted at 23 cents, pints at 23 to 24 cents, dairy rolls up to 20 cents, and tubs about the same. It is expected that after the farmers get their crops in the receipts will greatly improve.

EGGS—The egg market is not calling for much attention at the present. The receipts are not very heavy, and there is only a fair demand. Some of the jobbers have pretty heavy stocks on hand, and owing to the high prices sales are not as rapid as they should be. It is claimed that a reduction in the price is about due, but there is no indication of any slump, either in the Nova Scotia market or the Prince Edward Island market. They are jobbing here now at 15 and 16 cents.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

In dairy produce the local supply of butter continues to expand and to nearly meet the local demand, though prices remain steady for local creamery at 25c. to the trade. Local dairy, fresh, is from 20c. to 25c. in a small way. Eastern butter is in very small compass in the market.

Fresh eggs, local, are in fair demand, with price about 26c. Eastern fresh case stock is in good supply at 22c. per dozen.

In the cured meat market there is a slight falling off in demand, but no fluctuation in prices is noted. Nearly the whole supply comes from the big U. S. packing houses.

ANOTHER MEAT COMPANY.

A charter has been awarded the Clayton Meat Co., of Toronto, to take over the four Clayton butcher shops in Toronto and a butcher, grocery, provision, abattoir, packing, canning and cold storage business. The share capital is $50,000 and the provisional directors are H. H. Hopkins, accountant; O. M. Hudson, accountant, and Mark Bredin, manufacturer. The other original shareholders are Thos. Clayton, Geo. Clayton and T. A. Clayton.

DENMARK'S BUSY FARMERS.

Denmark exported $8,642,000 worth of agricultural products during January. "Very satisfactory," writes C. E. Sontum, Canadian commercial agent to Northern Europe, for a country with 3,000,000 inhabitants. The commodities in pounds were: Butter, 17,366 000; bacon, 13,909 670; mess pork, 883 000; salted beef, 465,630; fresh beef, 4,037,000; fresh pork, 221,760; lard, etc., 5,069,900; cream, 1,350,140; milk 918,720 and 22,893 cases of eggs.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS — Prices in provisions have been very well maintained. Lard is being sold fairly well. Bacon, although the prices are on the high side, is enjoying better sale than might be expected. Owing to the scarcity of hogs and the fact that stocks are none too heavy, it is not likely that this line will be sold at lower prices for some time to come. As the hot weather advances ham sales are increasing. Other lines are moving along freely.

BUTTER—Butter this week is very quiet. Responses from England are very few, but high prices are still being paid in the country, in fact higher than can be realized on the local market. Trade generally is unsatisfactory owing to this first high cost, which English importers refuse to pay.

CHEESE—The market is a little firmer this week than last, but the undertone is much weaker, and lower prices are expected any day. Shipments last week were very heavy, and consequently stocks cannot be very large, but this may be counterbalanced by the very heavy make at present.

Ontarios	0 11⅛ 0 11½
Quebecs	0 11 0 11⅛

EGGS—The egg market is not in such good condition as when last reported. Arrivals of Prince Edward Island eggs by boat have weakened the market considerably. The eggs now arriving are generally pretty well heated before they reach the dealers' hands and their preservative qualities are thus, in a way, lost. Prices are a little lower, ranging from 16c. to 16½c.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—A firmer tone is felt in all hog products this week. Roll bacon is up half a cent and medium hams the same. Heavy mess pork has advanced $1 a barrel, and short cut $1.50. Lard is very firm and a slight increase is not improbable shortly. Yearling lamb is no longer lamb, but mutton now, both of which are selling at from 9 to 11 cents. Spring lamb is selling for 18 and 19 cents.

COW TESTING RESULTS.

The North Oxford, Ont., Cow Testing Association bulletin for 30 days ending May 21, shows a great difference in the average yield of butter fat in the 18 herds tested, ranging from 21.1 to 32.4 lbs. per cow. Fifty-two individual cows gave over 1,000 lbs. of milk and 75 yielded over 30 lbs. of fat in the 30 days. The highest yield of a single cow was 1,440 lbs. of milk and 43.2 lbs. fat. It was one of a dairy of 17 cows. There were five cows out of 209 that yielded over 40 lbs. of fat. The average yield for the 18 dairies and 209 cows was 873 lbs. of milk and 27.9 lbs. of fat, 3.2 per cent.

The results of the St. Edwidge, Que., Association's testing for 30 days ending May 10, show: Dairies, 31; cows, 161; average yield milk 543 lbs., fat 19.3 lbs., 3.5 per cent. The lowest average was 310 lbs. milk and 12.2 lbs. fat, the highest, 27.3 lbs. of fat and 702 lbs. of milk. One head averaging 741 lbs. of milk gave only 22.3 lbs. of fat. The highest yield of an individual cow was 32.8 lbs. of fat from 800 lbs. of milk. The highest yield of milk was 810 lbs., with 31.6 lbs. of fat.

improved if the following three suggestions were rigidly carried out:

The day, month and year in which the cheese is made, and the weight should be branded on the cheese itself, and stamped on the package.

In an interview he said:

"It is important that the date on which the cheese is made should be branded on the cheese itself, in addition to the package containing the same, as it is a common occurrence for British importers to palm off on the unsuspecting retailer, July and August made cheese, as substitutes for the better and higher-priced June and September makes. In fact, I have had May fodder cheese palmed off on me for Junes.

"In this way, I have not only lost money, but ran the risk of injuring my trade to a very large extent."

NEWCASTLE WANTS "SQUARE SHOULDERS."

A Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, prominent importer of hog products has written to J. B. Jackson, Canadian commercial agent at Leeds:

"From Stockton right up to Newcastle, there is only one style of hog cut for which there is a brisk demand, and that is the 'square shoulder,' and were Canadian hog packers to cater for the big industrial masses in and around Newcastle in this, their favorite cut, there would always be a sure and profitable market for their goods. To give it a trade expression, Newcastle is a 'cheap place' and its people require 'cheap things,' thus they buy the 'square shoulder' seeing that it is the 'cheapest' part of the beast, and also the leanest.

"It is common knowledge that 60 per cent. of the hog meats which are sold in and around Newcastle is the 'square shoulder,' and importers here are always ready buyers of this cut, knowing that they have a sure market for it.

"Outside of this, we have, of course, to cater for the better classes in other styles of cuts, but if Canadian packers intend to seriously compete with the Chicago houses, it is incumbent upon them to change their present system of exporting their hog meat in only one style 'the Wiltshire cut'; and to imitate other packers in sending hog products across here in the various ways used."

A Grey County correspondent of the Ontario Department of Agriculture says in the current crop bulletin: "I find that the best farming method is to run a good dairy farm, which, with best care and attention given to the cows, should without any fear, prove a success."

Canadian Grain Men Busy Watching Chicago—Home Market Quiet—Oats and Products Higher in Toronto—Flour in Fair Demand.

The Canadian grain markets are very quiet, but prices are responsive to the speculative movements of Chicago. Watching the emanations from the "pit" is about all the occupation the grain men here have just now, after the hand-to-mouth demand of the local millers is supplied. Flour is in fair demand everywhere, and Montreal reports considerable export movement. Oats are higher and there has been a marked upward movement in cereals in Ontario.

BIG CALGARY MILLING PLANT.

Western Milling Co. Turning out 300 Barrels of Flour Daily.

The modern plant of the Western Milling Co., Calgary, is now in operation; 300 barrels of flour have been produced every 24 hours from the start and the firm expects to continue to manufacture this volume steadily.

The splendid mill and elevator is located at the intersection of the Edmonton branch and the main line of the C.P.R. The building is of such dimensions as to attract first attention in that section of the city that is so rapidly filling up with giant manufacturing industries. William Carson, the pioneer mill man, is manager of the company, and the firm is composed of William Cochran, of Mosquito Creek; H. B. Alexander, William Carson and T. S. J. Skinner, of Calgary, and R. W. Cowan, of Cochrane.

Manager Carson is regarded as one of the most practical millmen in Canada. For seven years he was connected with the Calgary Milling Co., and his experience in the west dates back to 1879.

It was in 1905 that the contract for the construction of the mill was awarded, with a provision for very rapid work. The interior fittings are of the very latest design, and no expense has been spared in securing the best equipment for the production of the highest grade of flour on an economical scale. Seventy thousand bushels of grain is the capacity of the elevator and the mill turns out exactly 300 barrels daily.

Because of the automatic equipment in the various departments the force required to operate the plant is small, but the highest skill is employed in the development of the fine grade of breadstuff manufactured. As an evidence of the rapidity with which the work is conducted, a car of wheat is unloaded, weighed and transferred to the elevator in exactly fifteen minutes.

The Western Milling Co. have all the facilities for a very fine terminal elevator system on the site in the western part of the city. Only slightly more favorable transportation rates are required to centre a milling industry in Calgary second only to that of Minneapolis in volume.

Manager Carson explains that his first quality brand is the "Rising Sun," the trade mark of which is a flaring sunburst, with a wheat field in the foreground. The "Snow Drift" is the second quality. The product of the big mill will be consumed in Alberta and British Columbia, though the question of exporting the Western Milling Co's surplus product to the Orient is already being figured on. The very finest quality of Alberta and Saskatchewan wheat is used.

SMUT IN WHEAT.

Experimental Work Urged—Get Smut-Resisting Wheat.

(The Miller, London England.)

Canada has done great things in the world of wheat, and bids fair to do still greater things. The Miller has been, and will continue to be, very jealous of her honor wherever wheat is concerned. The high standards must be maintained at all costs. In this connection we should like to speak yet once again. The loss from smut is an item which figures more or less prominently in Canada every year, and the causes of this are worth finding out. Some few of the growers contend that the inspection towards the end of the season is too severe, and that wheat which would have graded first-class in the early part gets rejected later on. We are pleased to note that the general question of smutty wheat is receiving special and close attention at the present moment, and we would offer a few suggestions—suggestions which might also be more or less useful to farmers in all parts of the world. Put tersely, wheat has two principal enemies, rust and smut. The former is not so regular in its appearance, nor so general in its presence as the latter, and we throw out the idea that more concentration should be placed upon the fact. Canada, for instance, should try to produce a smut-resisting type of Hard Fyfe wheat, and to have a smut-resisting wheat the Canadian experimentalist should breed for immunity from smut pure and simple. To accomplish this would mean for Manitoba alone in one year the cost of the experiments one hundred times over. If thoroughly smutted wheat were used for samples, and from the grain grown therefrom a pure perfect plump grain could be evolved, and that selected for succeeding years for, say, five in succession, the whole problem would be solved for a generation to come. The problem has not yet been solved at all, and there are great possibilities attending upon it. British farmers could also do something in the matter, and the members of Home-Grown Wheat Committee might add it to their curriculum as well.

AGRICULTURE IN GERMANY.

According to the census 18,501,300 persons now live by agriculture in Germany. In the course of the last 20 years the area under cultivation of cereals and potatoes has changed very little; as regards wheat and barley it has remained practically the same. The staple breadstuff—rye—claimed in 1884 an area of 5,850,000 hectares (about 2 acres), which increased to 6,040,000 hectares in 1894, and, after falling below 6,000,000 hectares in the following years and passing it again in 1902, stood at 6,145,000 hectares in 1905, i.e., about 5 per cent. higher than in 1884. The area under oats increased from 3,780,000 hectares in 1884 to 4,190,000 hectares in 1904, equal to an increase of 11 per cent., and the area under potatoes from 2,910,000 to 3,290,000 hectares during the same period, or an increase of 13 per cent. During the two quinquennial periods of 1893-98 and 1899-1904 the area cultivated with wheat, rye, oats and barley increased on an average by 1.56 per cent., and the yield by 12.86 per cent. Calculating the average value of these four cereals at $31.60 per ton, cultivators realized in the last five years about $87,480,000 more, excluding the valuable straw.

H A. Mulhern, manager of the Central Milling Co., Peterboro, who has been seriously ill since last April, is now rapidly recovering, and expects to be at business in a couple of weeks.

SHREDDED WHEAT TALK

By AN UP-TO-DATE GROCER

Shredded Whole Wheat is the one staple cereal food better known than all the others.

You can grind up any old thing and call it a "breakfast food," but you can't make Shredded Whole Wheat that way.

It keeps better than any other cereal. It is not "treated" or "flavored" with anything and hence does not deteriorate.

It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve, requiring only a slight warming in the oven to restore crispness.

It is economical. Contains more nutriment than meat or eggs and costs much less.

The Shredding process makes it the most easily digested of all the cereal foods.

It is good for any meal any day in any season in any climate.

It has larger culinary uses than any other cereal food. Hundreds of dainty and palatable dishes may be made with it.

It is the purest and cleanest cereal food, made in the cleanest and finest industrial building in the world.

From what can be learned, there seems to be an excellent general business passing in flour. Locally the demand is very good from all quarters. GRAIN—Prices are firmer in Manitoba wheat, but there is no appreciable increase. All the trade that is being done is local. There is no wheat for export in any quantity and until the new crop begins to move, or unless weather conditions become unfavorable in the west, there will be no stir in the wheat market. H. C. BECKETT AT BUFFALO.

The Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild was represented at the recent Buffalo convention of wholesale grocers from all parts of the Union by H. C. Beckett, of Hamilton. He was invited to address the convention, and did so at some length, telling of the difficulties encountered in Canada in the work of organization and in the interest of business reform. The lack of a proper appreciation of business conditions was a serious obstacle, he told the Americans, and forced the organizers to act as educators.

Mr. Tait, of Cawker & Tait, Bowmanville, Ont., was married recently. Mr. Tait is an ex-mayor of the lake town.

New Boat Service Between Montreal and Halifax—Cereals to be Charged by Measurement.

During the past week shipping business has been very good all round. Considerable quantities of butter and cheese have been sent across on outgoing boats, while there has been more or less interest in the export meat shipping trade. Since the canned meat exposures shipments of this nature have fallen off remarkably. Provisions of all kinds are moving out quite freely. Hams and bacon have been shipped in good sized lots on several boats, while lard has received a good share of the attention on the part of shippers.

Hay merchants in some sections complain of the difficulty in obtaining shipping space for hay. Some of the vessels going out the past couple of weeks have had some hay aboard, but the quantity has not been very large.

Quotations this week do not show any change except in the rates on rolled oats or other cereals (papered) to Bristol. Heretofore it has been the custom to charge weight rate, but now measurement rate will be charged.

Steamship Turcoman, of the Dominion line, cleared June 12 with a general cargo for Avonmouth.

On June 13 the Mount Royal, of the C.P.R. line, sailed for London with a general cargo. The Numidian, of the Allan line, cleared for Glasgow with a general cargo on the same day.

Holliday Bros., of Quebec, have inaugurated a steamship service between Montreal and Halifax. The Arranmore left Montreal for Halifax on the first trip June 15. Sailings will be fortnightly. Boats will take in all the north shore points to Sydney and Halifax. J. G. Brock & Co. are Montreal agents for the new line.

Marina, of the Thomson line, the first vessel to enter the port this year, sailed June 14 for Glasgow, carrying a general cargo.

The Allan liner Tunisian also sailed on June 14 with a general cargo for Liverpool.

On June 15, the Manchester Trader cleared for Manchester with a general cargo, including 280 head of cattle, three loads of wheat, two loads of barley, seventy-five tons of hay, 1,500 boxes of cheese, 12 cars of provisions, and 400 packages of butter. The provisions carried consisted chiefly of Canadian and American hams, bacon, lard, fresh meats and a limited quantity of canned goods.

Two Reford boats left June 15. These were the Jacona and the Iona. Former sailed for Leith via Newcastle with a general cargo of cattle, grain, cheese, flour and oatmeal. The Iona was destined for London with cattle and a general cargo.

Southwark, of the Dominion line, left for Liverpool with general cargo June 15.

These rates are for general information only, and are subject to change at any time without notice; it is therefore important that all contracts must be reported by wire and confirmation obtained before closing with shippers, and unless specifically stated to be prompt shipment, or shipped within ten days after date of contract from the west.

The above rates are exchanged on basis of $4.80 to £1 Stg., excepting that when freight is prepaid, the ocean proportion of the through rate must be collected on basis of $4.86 to the pound sterling.

If freight is offered other than specified above, on which steamship connections are accustomed to quote a weight or measurement rate at their option, prompt replies will be facilitated by giving, when applying for rate, the relative weight and measurement of the merchandise.

It is understood that when reporting Sack Flour engagements, a carload is considered 28,000 lbs.

It is also important that shipper's name be given for every engagement made.

CREATING DEMAND FOR TEA

Indian and Ceylon Merchants— More C. P. R. Boats—The Fruit Crops in the Pacific Province.

(By Our Special Corre p ndent)

Vancouver, B.C., June 17, 1906.

An interesting and interested visitor to Canada is Mr. H. M. Haywood, of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, India, who arrived on the Empress of Japan and is making a leisurely trip eastward en route to England on a holiday and business trip combined. Discusing matters in India, Mr. Haywood speaks of the tea-producing industry as being in very good condition, though the production is very large. Last year of Indian tea the total production was 203,000,000 lbs. while of Ceylon tea the production was between 160,000,000 and 170,000,000 lbs. This vast quantity of tea is very nearly the limit of the present demand.

To meet the situation, and so promote the use of Indian and Ceylon teas, the chambers of commerce, in Bengal and in Ceylon, are spending annually large sums of money in advertising the merits of the tea. The large sum of £17,000 is being expended this year alone, by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce of Calcutta, of which Mr. Haywood is secretary. The Ceylon Chamber is expending some £15,000, the two bodies being separate. To provide the funds for such a campaign of advertising, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce has at its command a fund raised by a small export tax on tea, similar means being adopted in Ceylon.

Economic conditions in India are on an easy basis at the present time, no serious distress existing in any of the provinces. The vast productive capability of the soil of India, where it is fertile, is illustrated by Mr. Haywood when he says that ordinarily three crops per year of wheat, rice and other cereals are produced. Just now the coming of the northeast simoon, which brings the Summer rains, is anticipated. This usually comes on about the middle of June and the success or failure of the crop rests with the rain following the simoon.

C. P. R. Adding Boats.

The departure of the new C. P. R. steamer Monteagle on Monday on her first voyage from Vancouver to the Orient, adds the sixth vessel to the company's trans-Pacific fleet. The three Empresses, still the favorites for passenger travel, owing to their superb accommodation and service, added to their speed, also carry full cargoes of freight in and out-bound and the steamers Tartar and Athenian are also constantly on the route. The addition of a seventh vessel is to be marked in a short time. Out-bound, the vessels are constantly increasing the quantity of Canadian flour which is carried to Japan and China. Homeward, the Empresses bring the bulk of the silk, which has long been the exclusive perquisite of the Canadian steamer and rail route, owing to the fast service, cutting off several days from China to New York, where most of it is delivered. The other steamers carry largely tea, rice, matting and Chinese and Japanese merchandize.

Grocery Situation.

Wholesale grocers are preparing for the busy season in northern shipment, following the opening of the Yukon. In fact, they have had a busy time in the warehouses for weeks past, as the up-coast cannery trade, the logging camp supply trade, and early orders for advance shipment to the north have been taking their attention. Local trade, and trade with interior points is keeping fully up to expectations. Prices in most staple lines remain steady, no changes of note being reported.

Small Fruit Crop.

The great small fruit crop of the agricultural districts of B. C. will be fairly started to market next week with the strawberry shipments, which are expected to be liberal by that time. The cool and wet weather of May has held back the ripening of the crop and in some cases probably a shortage will be the result. Okanagan, the Salmon Arm district on the main line, and the Nelson district of South Kootenay, will this year ship immense quantities. The lower Fraser Valley always has a considerable market at Vancouver, while the Vancouver Island growers dispose of the major part of their crop in Victoria, sending the surplus on to Vancouver.

Hood River, Oregon, has for the past week been supplying the local market, the price to the trade having remained high until recently. They are now being quoted at $3.50 and $4 for the crate of 24 1-lb. boxes. The price when the local crop comes in liberally is more than likely to be as low as $2 per crate. Of other small fruits, gooseberries are in considerable supply already. The crop of currants, raspberries and cherries promises to be very heavy this Summer. The cherries will be in towards the last of the month and the first of next month.

AN ABSENT-MINDED GROCER.

The other day the Toronto branch of T. H. Estabrooks' tea house received a postal card from a prominent dealer in a Western Ontario town giving a detailed statement of a tea invoice and a similar statement of the shipment received to show that there was a shortage of two 1-2 lb. packages. He concluded with the assurance that he had checked the shipment himself. Some baskets went with the tea. At the bottom of the card was the following: "P. S. Have just found tea in basket."

It is told of Horace Greeley that he was so absent minded that once he went out and left a card in the door stating he would be back at a certain hour and that returning half an hour earlier he read the card and sat down on the step to await his own return. But Horace couldn't out-do the Ontario grocer.

TRAVELER'S FISHING TROPHY.

W. H. Maxwell, a grocery traveler, for John Sloan & Co., Toronto, went to Oshawa last Friday evening to a reunion of the Oshawa Fishing and Rowing Club, of which he is an honorary member. He took with him the finest thing he could find in the form of a steel fishing rod as a trophy to be competed fod during the club's annual fishing outing this year to Lake Temagami from July 10 to 15. Mr. Maxwell is an Oshawa Old Boy and very much enjoyed his evening. Saturday morning he and F. M. Tait, another Sloan Co. traveler, returned to Toronto in an automobile. Of course they kept the law—in spots.

PRETTY GOOD FISHING.

There is said to be great trout fishing up Markdale way. E. G. Bingham, traveler for Thos. Kinnear, lives at Markdale and he was one of a party on May 1 that caught 102 fish. The party was just large enough to make the catch legal. They took 101 of them out of one hole. Since the first of May Mr. Bingham himself has taken 267 fish. If Mr. Bingham were not a traveler this might be doubted.

It reminded Mr. Keys, of the same house, of the time years ago when trout fishing was good in Ontario. When he wanted trout for breakfast he would go to the creek with a patent pail and just dip them out.

WALL PAPER.

At the present time the manufacturers are very busy with their samples for the next season. The season, according to what can be gleaned at this date, will be replete with novelties of every description. It is promised that the lines placed on the market this coming season will be better and of greater range than any seen heretofore. It is as yet a little too early to go into the matter of samples for the next season, that is to speak authoritatively on them, inasmuch as the manufacturers themselves have not yet completed their plans as to colorings; final decisions as to patterns and other matters still occupy the attention of many. A record season is anticipated on all sides, however, and steps are being taken which will place the trade in a position to fill all demands.

Possibly the outstanding feature of the new samples will be the brighter colorings. A richer coloring scheme is demanded and the mills have turned out already many neat designs. One large manufacturer stated he was convinced that red was a past favorite. Red, which has had such a run in the past, apparently has given way to greens, browns, and greys, which are expected to be excellent sellers. Greens and greys are held to be the favored shades by a great many, while others give preference to browns in place of greens.

Flat effects are prophesied for next season, many being of the opinion that they will be largely used. For the high-class trade German characters in fine coloring effects are being shown, among other lines.

The staple cheap lines do not show any great changes for the coming season. There are the usual number of new patterns and some good designs rather out of the usual will be shown.

THE FLAT PRICE.

Some years ago a number of the American wall paper manufacturers formed themselves into a trust known as the National Wall Paper Company. This was followed by the establishment of a second combine, the Continental. The two united in a working agreement to steady prices. In course of time both were dissolved, and the factories again came under independent control. As a natural consequence very strong competition sprang up, with the inevitable cutting of prices. The purchase of some lines very cheap suggested a new idea to a jobber. It was that of selling border at the same price as side-wall and ceiling. Other jobbers took it up, and the operations of their book men forced the retailer to fall in line. Then the manufacturer had to accede to a general demand that he adopt the flat basis. This is, in brief, the history of the new selling method, originating across the line, and only becoming general in Canada this season.

Selling "flat" means that the manufacturer takes his prices on border, ceiling and sidewall and equalizes them, so that he is able to sell all at one price and make the same profit as before. It is simply a re-apportionment of profits, in which the original figure accruing from the individual prices is to remain undisturbed.

OWEN SOUND PICNIC.

The Owen Sound grocers held their annual picnic yesterday. Wholesalers from Toronto and Hamilton, and representatives of the sugar refiners, were present. A report of the proceedings will appear next week.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Ontario Strawberry Season is Gathering Strength—Supplies of Vegetables Still too Light for Very Large Business.

The fruit season is on, but the fruit has not arrived. Vegetables, too, are backward. A large crop of strawberries is not expected; about three-quarters is the estimate of the commission men. The prospects for other crops are, however, fair to first-rate. That hardly applies to peaches in the Niagara District. There will be a good crop of the commoner sorts, but Crawfords are regarded by some authorities at least as likely to be short.

The importation of pines continues heavy and helps to eke out the berry supply.

CALIFORNIAN FRUIT SOLD.

On June 18 the first car of the season of Californian fruit was sold in Montreal. The sale was a record one. Apricots brought $2.20 to $2.50 a crate, while plums sold at prices ranging from $2.50 to $3.75 per box. Pears were also old and brought from $2.10 to $2.25 a box.

SUMMER PINES BETTER.

A New York importer of Singapore pineapples whose receipts this year are 9,578 cases and considerably more than last year, says: "The bulk of the business is done for late Summer and Fall delivery, as goods of the Summer packing which are received for this delivery are of somewhat better quality than the Winter pack."

ONIONS FROM FLORIDA.

During the last week of May the first solid carload of Bermuda onions was shipped from the Florida east coast. It marks the development of a new field industry. Despite bad weather, the grower got about 500 bushels to the acre.

FINNAN HADDIE SANDWICHES.

Have ready some of the cooked fish, skinned, boned and flaked and mixed to a paste with salad dressing. Place a small leaf of lettuce on one slice of buttered bread, spread with the fish and cover with another buttered slice. Press gently together and cut sandwich in two.

SPICE FIRMS UNITE.

Two Montreal spice firms have amalgamated, Herron & Co. and Marrotte, Leblanc & Co. The members of the new firm will be J. Leblanc, R. S. Herron and W. H. Johnston. They will erect an up-to-date building.

WHERE THEY GROW CELERY.

Wellington Boulter, who recently returned from a five months' holiday in California, told The Canadian Grocer that last season 2,280 cars of celery were shipped from one point in that state, Huntington Beach. There is located the big new canning factory of which his son, Frank, is manager.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—During the week fruit merchants have transacted a very good trade in general lines. Inquiries for the fruits particularly required at this season have been numerous, and sales have been of good number also. Oranges are still selling at figures quoted. A good demand for lemons prevails and it is becoming greater as the warm season advances. Strawberries are now selling from twelve to fourteen cents a basket and good business is being done at these figures.

VEGETABLES—Weather conditions being favorable, one would think that business in all lines of vegetables would be excellent. This, however, does not seem to be the opinion of vegetable dealers. Business, according to them, is fair, and sometimes very good, but they claim that they should have better. Perhaps the rather high price of the new vegetables holds down the trade to a certain extent. As receipts of these increase, however, this objection will be overcome and better trade will no doubt result. Carrots are now selling from 75c. to $1.25 a bag. Cucumbers are in good demand at prices quoted. Cabbage and tomatoes present no new features.

FISH—New stock in skinless cod is now arriving in Montreal and is selling quite freely at $6 per hundred pound case. This is the only movement in salt fish. In fresh, demand continues strong and prices are fairly steady. Fresh halibut is still sold in great quantities. Gaspe salmon is now in full season and good business is being transacted in this line. This week the live lobster season closes as far as Canada is concerned. From now until the opening of the next season Canadians will have to depend upon the United States for live lobsters. Fresh mackerel are not so much in demand this week.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GREEN FRUITS—Oranges are higher this week and not so plentiful. With the exception of late Valencias, all oranges are getting pretty well cleaned up and the indications are that Summer oranges will be held high. Canadian strawberries are coming in in large quantities and selling at from 7c. to 12c. a quart, but owing to so much rain the quality is not up to the standard. Some Canadian cherries are on the market and might be considered a fair sample for this time of year. From $1 to $1.25 per basket is asked for them. Melons have been on the market for a few days but no great quantities have arrived yet. They look good and bring from 45c. to 50c. A good supply of Cuban pines is still on the market, but Indian Rivers (Florida) will soon take their place, and will cost more.

VEGETABLES— Old potatoes are firmer and getting scarcer; $1.25 is now the ruling price for Delawares, and $1.15 for Ontarios. The ordinary staple vegetables—beets, radish, lettuce, etc.— are easing a little in price as the season advances and a better quality is brought in. This is particularly noticable in cauliflower, which, although the same in price, are half as big again as last week's. New potatoes are not on the market in large quantities yet, and the same price as last week prevails. Carrots are practically off the market at present. Cabbage are down a little.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

Big Business Run on Pennies— Large Factory Addition—Glazed Fruits and Their Making — All Candy Should be Pure.

Change is ever the order of the procession in the confectionery business. One of the largest candy manufacturers in Canada sends out at least one new line of candy every week. That's for the boys and girls; the confectioner calls them "penny goods." Of the more expensive lines the same firm calculates to put a new line on the market at least once in three weeks.

Shouldn't that suggest to the grocer who has a candy department that his goods should be pretty rapidly on the move? Don't let stuff get old. If you can't sell it eat it or give it away, but get rid of it.

Don't let candies stand in the sun. They were never made for it.

A prominent candy maker said to The Grocer the other day that 90 per cent. of the bulk and 75 per cent. of the value of candies sold in Canada were bought by children. The factories, acres in extent, are working for the coppers of the boys and girls.

NEW FACTORY FOR CHOCOLATE.

Robertson Bros., confectionery manufacturers, Toronto, have erected a new chocolate department and are now installing the machinery. It will be ready for occupation in about two months. It is a handsome pressed brick and stone building of five storeys and a basement facing Richmond street east, and adjoins the present factory, which is on Queen street. The new building is about 100 feet square, so will be a considerable addition to the existing factory, which has in the neighborhood of three acres of floor space. When they get into the new factory the company will add breakfast cocoa to their list of products.

CRYSTALLIZED FRUIT.

The art of preserving fruits by what is known as the crystallizing process originated in France, and the business is still confined mostly to that country. It is carried on extensively in some of the departments where the materials adapted to that purpose are most abundant and cheap. The process of preparation itself is so expensive, and calls for so much skill and care, that cheapness of material is, of course, an essential element of success in the business. This accounts for the manufacturing of "fruits glaces and fruits crystallises" being limited to a few of the many fruit-growing regions of France.

The kinds of fruits preserved by this process are mainly the following: Pears, cherries, apricots, pineapples, plums, figs, citrons, oranges, melons, and a dwarf orange known as "chinois" which grows to some extent in the district of Nice, but mostly imported from Italy and Corsica. The crystallizing process of all fruits named differs but little, but it requires a certain skill and delicacy of manipulation which can only be acquired by experience. Glazed and crystallized fruits are generally confounded, the only difference consisting in the exterior coating of sugar which forms the final stage of the process. Until that final stage is reached the method of preparing them is identical, the value of each being the same.

The most important aim of the manufacturer is to extract the juice of the fruit and replace it in the pulp with liquid sugar, which, in hardening, preserves the fruit from fermentation and decay, whilst retaining its original form and consistency. To secure these results the fruit must be fresh, free from blemish and in a perfect condition of ripeness. The latter requisite is all important, whilst difficult, as the ripeness differs with the fruit, thus rendering a fine discrimination in the gathering, assorting and transporting of the different varieties before the process of crystallization is entered upon.

ROBERTSON BROS.' EXCURSION.

Robertson Bros., manufacturing confectioners, of Toronto, held their annual excursion to Niagara Falls on Saturday last. The factory was closed for the day and nearly the whole of the company's staff, including some two hundred and fifty girls, took advantage of the outing, which is given each year by Robertson Bros. as a treat for the employes. At the Falls everyone followed his or her own bent in the matter of amusement. It was a thoroughly enjoyable holiday.

For over thirty years Robertson Bros. have given their employes an annual outing.

CANDY SHOULD BE PURE.

There is no good reason for adulterating candy, says the Baker and Confectioner. With sugar and glucose so cheap and so many harmless and low-priced flavorings and colorings available there ought to be no occasion for tampering with quality. There are some people, however, who are naturally crooked and who would sooner tinker with their product and make less money than sell it straight. In some of the cheap and trashy stuff that one meets occasionally there is every reason to believe that there is truth in the statement that questionable expedients are resorted to in order to make money out of innocent children, especially of the poorer class. The confectioner who allows himself thus to traffic in human life is a good deal less than a man. The ordinary purchaser has the chance to discriminate. When the child enters a store to purchase penny goods he has to take what is given him. The storekeeper who sells trash is no better than the man who makes it.

When you sell the Summer Camper his grocery outfit, sell him a box of PHARAOH or PEBBLE, because next Summer he will buy everything from you just because the cigars were so good. It gives him a good impression of you and your store because he knows you keep the best of everything. Heretofore the cheap "give away cigar" gave him a poor opinion of your whole outfit. You will make as much profit on the box of cigars as on $5.00 worth of groceries. I will send you 500 Assorted, some Pharaoh (10c.), some Pebble (5c.) eps. pd., because I know your next order will be for 1,000. Money back at end of 3 months if you don't catch the Summer Camper.

TOBACCO AND CIGARS

Prices Still Soaring—More Tobacco Being Grown in United States and Ontario.

There seems to be no going back in the cost of raw tobacco, especially cigar wrappers. Indeed, reports are all the other way. At the recent Sumatra sales in Rotterdam and Amsterdam prices were unprecedented. The question will soon be: How are the manufacturers going to make ends meet? Everything else is costing more, so probably the smoker will have to go a little deeper into his silver mine for his favorite brand of cigar.

If you keep tobacco, keep it well. Have a nice stand for it. Keep everything clean about it. Have it where every customer can see it, and have it looking so attractive that people will enjoy seeing it even if they don't use the weed.

STATES GROWING MORE TOBACCO.

A New England Estimate—Prices Were Good Last Year.

Generally the acreage devoted to cigar leaf tobacco throughout the United States this year, says the New England Homestead, June 9, shows some increase over last season. The main incentive to encourage farmers in more extensive production is the satisfactory manner in which the last crop was cleaned up by buyers.

With transplanting still in progress throughout the most of the leading cigar leaf tobacco states, it is not possible at this time to give definite figures regarding the increase in acreage. The enlargement is most pronounced in Pennsylvania and New York; to a somewhat lesser degree in Wisconsin, the New England States and Ohio. Many correspondents in Lancaster County, Pa., the main factor in the Keystone State crop, claim the acreage increase there promises to run as high as 10 to 25 per cent. Operations in Georgia and Florida this year are on a somewhat greater scale than last season. Normal attention is being given the crop in Texas. Many Wisconsin correspondents report increases ranging 10 to 25 per cent.; others report no, or smaller, increases. In summing up cigar leaf tobacco acreage prospects for 1906 it must be borne in mind that growers in many instances will not be able to put out the full acreage they had intended; this is due in various localities to such deterrants as high priced lumber for increasing shed capacity, lateness of the season, scarcity of plants, paucity of labor, etc.

The average price received for the last crop in Wisconsin proved the highest in some years, ranging 8 to 11 cents per pound. In nearly all other cigar producing states, with the exception, perhaps, of New England, where pole sweat and a weakening in the broad leaf market resulted in some losses, the 1905 cigar leaf tobacco crop brought growers considerably more money than did that of the preceding year.

TOBACCO MAN ASSIGNS.

John Ward, who came to Toronto six months ago and opened up tobacco stores at 37 and 139 Yonge street, and a manufacturing plant on Church street, has assigned with liabilities exceeding assets by $9,000. Three months ago he furnished mercantile agencies with a statement which placed his assets at $38,685.85, and liabilities at $15,770.34, but at a meeting of the creditors it was found that liabilities are now $30,000 and assets $20,000.

TOBACCO INDUSTRY IN MISSOURI.

Concerns Decreasing, Business Increasing Last Four Years.

The United States Census Bureau in a report on the tobacco industry in Missouri for the years 1900 and 1904 shows a large increase in capital but a decrease in the number of factories.

In 1900 there were 22 chewing and smoking tobacco and snuff factories, and in 1904, 17. In 1900 there were 580 cigar and cigarette factories and in 1904 544. The tobacco industry was third in importance in the state, and the state ranked first in the union in the product of chewing and smoking tobacco and snuff. The value of the entire tobacco product of the state was $30,884,182, and formed 7 per cent. of the total value of all products of Missouri. The miscellaneous expenses decreased by $4,525,759 or 35.1 per cent. The remaining items show increases as follows: Capital, $14,809,387, or 559.3 per cent.; number of wage earners, 28, or two-fifths of 1 per cent.; wages, $208,264, or 9.9 per cent.; cost of materials used, $2,678,991, or 28.9 per cent. and value of products, $3,036,750, or 10.9 per cent.

OPPORTUNITIES

MANUFACTURERS and WHOLESALERS

LOOKING FOR OPENINGS WOULD DO WELL TO INVESTIGATE THE ADVANTAGES OFFERED AT

EDMONTON, ALBERTA

ALL THE ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF SUCCESS ARE PRESENT

Cheap Power

Edmonton is the centre of enormous coal deposits and will shortly be supplying a large portion of two or three provinces with coal. The electric light and power plant is operated as a civic enterprise, and the city is prepared to offer very attractive rates for power to approved industries.

Raw Material

for many industries is available in the immediate neighborhood. In many other lines it is cheaper to bring in raw material than to pay freight on the finished article.

A Practical Monopoly

Even at the present time over 700 retail stores look to Edmonton wholesale and industrial establishments as their source of supply. The number will double in the next three years. When railways now under construction are completed, over 150 railway towns and villages will look to Edmonton as their commercial metropolis. Eastern manufacturers have to pay freight for 2000 miles to reach this territory.

Ample Transportation Facilities

All the great transcontinental systems meet in Edmonton, ensuring favorable rates and efficient service to all parts of the world, permitting the assembling of raw material and the distribution of products.

HOW LONG do you suppose Western enterprise will be content to send Raw Material 2000 miles east, and pay freight back on the finished product?

Industries at Edmonton could put Eastern Manufacturers out of business in Western Territory.

THESE INDUSTRIES ARE NEEDED and would meet with phenomenal success:

Meat Packing Plant Soap Works Tannery
Foundry and Machine Shop Biscuit Factory

THERE ARE OTHERS for which there are also excellent openings.

AS A WHOLESALE CENTRE Edmonton offers opportunities second only to those afforded for industrial expansion.

The Secretary, Board of Trade, Edmonton, Alberta, invites correspondence.

IT IS

that one grocer makes a success and builds up a substantial business, while another fails.

It is not by chance that CEYLON TEA has eclipsed all competitors and stands easily first—yes without a rival within hailing distance—in the favor of Canadian Tea drinkers.

The grocer who succeeds deserves success, because of his sterling qualities.

CEYLON TEA has deserved success because in fragrance flavor, style and price, it is incomparably the best value offered the Canadian trade.

Don't be led away. Make CEYLON TEA the foundation and coping stone of your tea department and its success is assured.

Isn't it reasonable? Look at the great package tea firms: their success in every case is built on CEYLON TEA.

NO SECRET COMMISSIONS

You know just where you are at when you buy Red Rose Tea.——There are no secret commissions. Everything is wide open. Your neighbor pays the same price you pay.

You know what this means.——————————Only one kind of goods can be sold this way, viz., those of recognized and undoubted quality.

This is why the salesman who offers an extra discount with his brand of tea runs against a stone wall, when he strikes merchants who push Red Rose Tea.

Quality vs. Discount is an easy case to settle for the merchant who expects to stay in business for years to come and hopes to see his trade grow year by year.

Quality brings back the customers you are most anxious to keep.———Price catches the bargain hunters.

If you push Red Rose tea you will gain the reputation of selling good tea—a reputation which will be worth money to you.

Windsor Table Salt

You must look into the by-ways and hedges of the past for convincing proof that "quality" tells in the long run—there are financial wrecks there without number. And the figure of the grocer who was tempted to buy doubtful goods for a little saving on price looms up like a lighthouse in a dense fog. It pays to buy standard goods like

Pure, White, Crystaline

Windsor Table Salt, because it is all salt every single time. No impurity in it, because it is sifted, not ground. No "caking," because every drop of moisture is dried out of it. Remember the wrecks of the past when tempted to buy salt said to be "just as good as Windsor."

Greig's White Swan Flaked Wheat is the large, thin flakey flakes that make it so vastly different from any other wheat produced in Canada.

No attempt is made to compete in price with ordinary kinds of rolled wheat, as there is no comparison in quality. It stands in a class by itself and readily commands its price from particular people.

All barrels are attractively lined with crinkled tissue paper, thus ensuring freshness and cleanliness at all times.

Samples and quotations will be cheerfully furnished.

After all is said and done

There's no plea that will sell Tea like a captivating "Cup Draw," the sole outcome of superior quality. The enormous sale of "SALADA" testifies to its worth more strongly and convincingly than the most lavish advertising argument.

You may recognize this fact in a kind of a—perhaps so—half hearted sort of a way, but a "Tea Pot" infusion at your own table will prove a pleasant revelation to you, and an eye-opener as to why the demand is so general.

"Salada" Ceylon Green Teas are displacing Japans, sure as Fate.

Remember "SALADA" Ceylon Teas are sold in Sealed Lead Packets only.

EATING OF CHEESE IN CANADA

Why Consumption is Small and How the Retail Grocer May Increase it—Get Early Cheese and Keep it Properly.

(By J. A. Ruddick, Dairy Commissioner.)

Good cheese, properly ripened, is a very nutritious and easily digested food. One pound of it is said to contain as much nutriment as 2½ pounds of beef. Many of those who read the foregoing statement will be inclined to dispute the assertion that cheese is easily digested. That is because their experience has been with cheese only a few weeks old, which in reality is nothing more than insoluble and therefore indigestible curd. A well made cheese should not be eaten before it is six months old, and if kept under proper conditions it will be better when twelve months old.

Another thing which has prevented the taste for cheese from being cultivated and which has caused many people to give up the idea of eating cheese at all, is the practice on the part of cheese makers of selling their "culls" to the local grocer. They do so because they can thus get full price for cheese which the exporter would reject.

Hard to Get it Good.

I have traveled somewhat extensively in Canada for many years and I must say that it is the exception to find a piece of good cheese on any table. When one does find a choice sample it is astonishing to see how much of it is eaten, for it is a fact that there is naturally a strong liking for cheese in this country. Many grocers make the mistake of buying late Fall made cheese, which is then offered for sale during the Winter. Those who understand handling cheese secure a stock of June or July cheese and keep them at a low temperature—50 or 60 degrees—during the hot weather. By the beginning of Winter these cheese are in good condition. Purchasing early made cheese and holding them for some months has in the past involved some loss in the shrinkage, but that can now be entirely overcome by having the cheese coated with paraffine wax.

It is very important also to buy the cheese from a factory where the temperature is controlled so that it never goes above 60 degrees in the curing room, for "cool cured" cheese do not develop strong flavors so readily as those cured at ordinary temperatures, and they may be stored with greater safety in an ordinary cool, dry cellar.

Look for Cool Curing Rooms.

There are many factories which have provided cool curing rooms during the past two or three years, and it is from such factories that grocers should endeavor to get their supply of cheese, providing they have a reputation for making a good article.

It is an advantage to have the cheese made in small sizes. There is a big demand for cheese weighing about 10 lbs. each. These can be handled without cutting, and thus all waste is avoided. The "flat" or half cheese is a convenient size for cutting. Factories do not make these sizes unless specially ordered, as they are not in demand for export.

If grocers would study this question a little more and guard against having inferior cheese palmed off on them, the consumption of cheese in Canada would be very materially increased.

If grocers can suggest any way in which we can co-operate on this question I shall be very glad to hear from them.

IN YE OLDEN DAYS

When There Were no Altogether Wholesale Grocers in Toronto.

One of the oldest grocers on Queen street west, Toronto, talking with a representative of The Canadian Grocer the other day, grew reminiscent and interesting. For thirty years or more he has been a purveyor of foodstuffs to people in the western section of Toronto. At one time he was pretty near the limits, and though he has moved west the city has moved faster, and he is now miles from the boundary.

"When I started," he said, "The business section extended as far as Denison avenue in the west, Gerrard street in the north and as far east as Parliament street.

"Grocers in the vicinity of St. Lawrence market did the largest trade, as this was where the farmers deposited their produce and where retailers in other parts of the city would come to buy butter, eggs, etc. A strictly wholesale business was unheard of, and as for a city traveler, they were never thought of. If a grocer wished some goods he would come down to the merchants around Jarvis and Front streets, and from these he could generally get what he wanted. Travelers from outside points visited them about every three months, now they come every two weeks, and city travelers every other day. The population of the city at that time was between 63,000 and 65,000. St. John's ward, which is now considered about the least desirable part of the city, was at that time a leading section, especially for first-class boarding houses, and the trade was splendid."

RETAIL GROCERS KICK.

Wholesaler Took Three of His Best Customers—Wants a "White List."

A good deal of dissatisfaction is being expressed by some of the retail grocers of Toronto because of the persistence on the part of some wholesalers in selling to hotels, boarding houses, boats and other large consumers of foodstuffs. A King street grocer enjoying a large trade said to a Canadian Grocer representative the other day:

"Some wholesalers are not using us right and are not giving us a fair show. I had two large restaurants and a hotel dealing with me. Suddenly the owner of the hotel stopped, and later on the restaurant keepers failed to give me their usual trade. I called on them and they informed me that a representative of a well known wholesale house had been round and quoted them much lower prices than I could. Naturally they went where they could get the best value for their money. The wholesaler delivers their goods by a hired express, hoping by this means to escape detection by the retailers who are their customers. What I want to know is why there isn't a law to stop this kind of work. If he advertises himself as a wholesaler, let him conduct a strictly wholesale trade, and not try to take the bread out of our mouths by selling direct to the consumer at the same price as he sells to us.

"I remember about fifteen or eighteen years ago 'white lists' of all firms who did a strictly wholesale trade were hung in the different retail stores, consequently the wholesalers who persisted in doing a retail business also lost their wholesale trade. Why isn't there something like that done now? That's what I'd like to know."

BUSINESS NOTES.

John Waldschmidt has opened a grocery and confectionery store in Berlin, Ont.

Mr. Johns has purchased the grocery business of J. J. Burton, 824 College street, Toronto. He is making extensive alterations and improvements.

The Sterling Bank has opened a branch in Wellandport, Ont., and the manager, Mark Wallis, reports good business and says the merchants are appreciative.

Woollings & Woollings, provision and produce dealers, Yonge street, Toronto, are giving up business in the city, and will shortly start in one of the promising towns of New Ontario.

"The Imperial" is the name of a new grocery that has started on the corner of Gerrard and Parliament streets, Toronto. The people behind it say they will open other stores in various parts of the city.

In the report of the reorganization of the James Turner Co., of Hamilton, appearing in the issue of June 15, the name of the head of the firm was given as James Turner. It should have been Alexander Turner.

The Canadian Transit Co. has been chartered to manufacture and deal in petroleum and other oils, natural gas and salt. The head office will be at Toronto. The share capital is $50,000, and the provisional directors are J. F. Holliss, T. H. Wilson, and S. J. Marchalleck.

Bishop Bros., Niagara-on-the-Lake, are grocers in the up-to-date class. They have recently replaced one of the old-fashioned counters with one of plate glass and are gradually refitting the store to make it one of the best in the province. The new counter was built by Peter Bishop, one of the partners.

The South Hill grocery and hardware business, Moose Jaw, Sask., has been purchased by MacGregor Ropelje, Jos. Thompson, Jas. Thompson, and J. Heaton. The new firm is known as Ropelje, Thompson & Co., and the business will be managed by Messrs. Heaton and Jos. Thompson, the others remaining on their ranches.

GUILD OFFICERS' DEFENCE

Manufacturers Fixed Prices and They Were not Unduly Advanced—Selling Staples at Less Than Cost of Doing Business— Committed for Trial.

The concluding sessions of the magistrate's preliminary investigation into the conspiracy charges against last year's officers of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild were concluded and the seven gentlemen named in the indictment were sent for trial. They are: H. C. Beckett, Hamilton; Geo. E. Bristol, Hamilton; Lieut.-Col. John I. Davidson, Toronto; Thos. B. Escott, London; W. G. Craig, Kingston; J. F. Eby, Toronto; and Thos. Kinnear, Toronto. The case will come on before the higher court in the Fall.

A portion of the report was held over from last week. It continues, Geo. Robertson, of Kingston, being in the box and Crown Attorney Washington at the bat:

"If the sugar refiners and the tobacco men sold to the retailers at the same price as they sell you, that is, give them the rebate, what would you do?"

"Guess I would have to go out of business."

"Have you any right as a wholesaler to dictate as to what price the refiners shall sell sugar?"

"No."

"Who fixes the sugar prices?"

"The refiners."

"Have you any knowledge of any wholesalers getting the refiners to increase prices? Have you ever heard of such a thing?"

"No."

"Has it not been a continual struggle on the part of the guild to get sugar as low as possible?"

"Certainly."

"Then the refiners make the prices and not the guild, and if the guild manage to get the price down a little you all get the advantage?"

"Yes."

The Distributors.

"You wholesalers consider yourselves distributors for the refiners?"

"Yes."

"You know that as a wholesaler you sell sugar as part of a general stock of groceries and that a refiner would have to put on travelers to sell one article if he sold to retailers?"

"I believe so."

"That would make sugar higher to the consumer?"

"Yes."

"Then by going direct to the retailers and doing away with the medium of wholesalers the consumer would pay more for his goods?"

"In some cases."

Could Always Buy.

"Was there ever a time when you could not buy starch at list prices?"

"No."

"Were you ever refused anything at list prices? Never mind the rebate just now."

"No."

"Any bargain you made with the refiners was made irrespective of the guild?"

"Yes."

"These letters that have been produced don't mention the guild as having anything to do with the agreement?"

"No."

"And the refiners deal with you although you are not a member of the guild?"

"Yes."

"And any wholesaler outside the guild could get the rebate if he agreed to keep prices?"

"I suppose so."

"These declarations say nothing about a guild; they simply make the terms and say you must abide by them?"

"Yes."

As to Profits.

"Are you getting more than a legitimate profit?"

"No, only a fair profit."

"Is it not a fact that there is no money in sugar and tobacco?"

"Yes."

"What margin have you on tobacco?"

"About 7 per cent."

"I am told there is only 4 per cent."

"That's about right when you deduct freight and expenses."

"Is that a decent profit?"

"No."

"Do you make anything on sugar?"

"No."

"Do you know of any agreement on sugar, tobacco, or anything else except what you have yourself?"

"No."

Cannot Fix Prices.

"Would it be possible for a wholesaler to fix prices with a manufacturer?"

"I don't think so."

"Then the only one who can fix the price is the manufacturer?"

"Yes."

"The manufacturer having fixed prices, he says, 'I will appoint the wholesalers as agents.' Is that not the only agreement you have with him?"

"Yes."

"Is it not understood that Macdonald sells only to wholesalers and that he fixes the prices?"

"I believe so."

"And he will not sell to those who cut prices?"

"He told me I must sell at fixed prices."

"And you could not sell his tobacco if you cut?"

"No."

Cheaper Sugar.

"At one time you bought American sugar. Why did you discontinue that?"

"I could not successfully compete with Canadian make."

"Did not the Canadian refiners cut under you?"

"Yes."

"Then they were able to dictate terms to you?"

"Yes."

Will not Sell Everybody.

"Do you sell to retailers and then to their customers too?"

"No. Only to retailers."

"Would you sell a man, not a retailer, a barrel of sugar?"

"No."

"Is this not the same principle the manufacturers adopted?"

"I suppose so."

The Crown Attorney asked the witness if, prior to the guild days, any one interfered with his right to bargain with the refiner. Witness replied "No."

"Did the refiners first start this way of doing business?"

"I don't know."

"But before this sugar agreement you had a right to negotiate as to price?"

"Yes."

"Did the starch men fix your selling price before the guild was formed?"

"We had no trouble that way."

Broken Agreements.

"It appears that some have broken these agreements. Does that not mean that they could sell under them and still make money?"

"I suppose so."

"We have evidence that the Hudson's Bay Co. sell below agreement prices. Do they not make money?"

"No doubt they do."

Mr. Johnston: "The Hudson's Bay Co. are wealthy and do not depend on a plug of tobacco to make money."

"Who notifies the grocers about changes and determines prices?"

"The refiners."

"Then the wholesalers do not determine prices at all?"

"No."

This closed the case for the Crown, and Mr. Washington asked that the charge be amended to include conspiracy in an attempt to injure Andrew McLean and George Robertson & Co., of Kingston. Mr. Johnston argued that no salient points had been proven and that the evidence did not sufficiently establish any grounds for such charge. The court ruled against the Crown Attorney.

Nothing in it.

Hugh Blain, of Eby, Blain & Co., Toronto, was then called. To Mr. Johnston he stated he had been in business 26 years.

"Tell us about sugar, tobacco and so forth," said Mr. Johnston.

"Staples we sold practically at cost. Tobacco cost us 37 cents and we sold it for 37¼ cents. Sugar was also sold close to cost."

"Who fixed the prices?"

"The manufacturer fixed the prices to the wholesaler, but there was no fixed price to the retailer."

"Did you know of any movement to put the prices on a proper basis?"

"Colonel Davidson and I were the first to discuss the situation, and pointed out to others the folly of selling goods below cost, and we decided among ourselves that we would sell tobacco at 2 cents advance."

"Was that unlawful or unreasonable?"

"No."

"What then?"

"We then agreed to sell sugar at ⅛ of a cent advance."

"If it had not been a necessity would you have handled sugar?"

"No. We had to handle it."

"If you had the same conditions in all lines as in sugar and tobacco, what would happen?"

"We would have to go out of business."

The Improved Conditions.

"How did your organization improve trade conditions?"

"We reduced sugar to a 60-day basis and other goods to a three-months basis and kept working that way until we got nearly everything down to a 30-day basis."

"What is the price of sugar as compared with 15 years ago ?"

"It is about one-half now."

"Did the guild ever undertake to fix prices on anything ?"

"No."

"Who did ?"

"The producer."

"Did you make an effort to get lower prices ?"

"We were always trying to do that."

"What is the result—to the consumer ?"

"With our machinery we can distribute cheaper than can the manufacturers."

"Would it cost more if the manufacturers had to sell it themselves ?"

"They could not sell it at less than 5 per cent. through travelers, while we, having travelers for our general lines, can sell it for about 4 per cent."

"Did your price committee fix prices?"

"No. The name is a misnomer. They simply discussed the situations with the manufacturers and endeavored to get a living profit."

All Benefit.

"Are there any wholesalers outside the guild who get the same terms as the guild members ?"

"Yes. They have the advantages of the guild's work without paying to keep it up."

Crown Attorney Washington then questioned the witness.

Things Bad.

"Were conditions in the wholesale trade bad prior to 1898 ?"

"Yes, they are still bad."

"Do you know any Hamilton wholesalers who have failed ?"

"Yes, Brown, Balfour & Co., and John Stewart & Co."

"Do you believe in the right of every man to purchase where he can purchase best ?"

"So long as it does not injure the general public."

"Do you think it is right for any body of men to try to prevent me from buying where and how I like ?"

"If it is not in the interest of the public I do."

"If you had not gone to the refiners would there have been any fixed prices?"

"Yes. There would have been ultimately."

"Why do some wholesalers cut prices ?"

"Because they cannot do honest business."

"Then they cut out of pure cussedness," commented the Crown Attorney. "Is it not the object of the guild to prevent the manufacturers from selling direct to the consumers ?"

"No, but if he wishes to avail himself of our medium of distribution he must allow us a living profit."

"One of the objects of your association is to prevent the retailer from getting goods unless at your prices ?"

"No, but the manufacturer must allow us a profit if he wishes to use us as distributors."

"If prices were open then the consumer would get the benefit, would he not ?"

"He might temporarily, but the public would finally suffer."

"Then the object of your association is to benefit the public ?"

"That is a result. But if we can do so why should it not be an object ? I have never gone into any organization that was unfair or unjust, and what we have done has been in the interests of the public."

"Your profits were nothing at one time ?"

"Yes."

"They are something now. Upon whom does the extra cost fall ?"

Witness contended that no matter whom it fell on, it was only a just profit.

"If the manufacturer did not come to your terms he could not sell goods, could he ?"

"He could, but at a greater cost."

"Did the price committee ask the manufacturers to make an agreement ?"

"Yes, but not to fix prices."

Manufacturers Lose.

Mr. Johnston : "If you get a rebate of two cents on something and want three, whose pocket does the extra cent come out of ?"

"The manufacturer's."

"And not the consumer's."

"No."

H. N. Kittson, of Hamilton, took the stand and was asked by Mr. Johnston if he knew of any better medium of putting goods on the market than through the wholesaler.

"I know of no better way."

"Who fixes prices ?"

"The manufacturers invariably."

"Has the wholesaler anything to do with fixing the price on sugar ?"

"No. If they did they would make a profit."

"If you make no profit on staples then you must have a profit on other things ?"

"Yes."

"Then the public have to pay more on these things because there is nothing in sugar ?"

"Yes."

"Was there any interference with McLean, of Kingston ?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"The whole question was simply that he was a retailer and not entitled to the rebate ?"

"Yes."

"Do you know of any article that has been increased in price on account of the guild ?"

"No."

No Other Way.

"Do you know of any better system of bringing goods on the market than we have now in Canada ?"

"I know of none."

"Could you give me an idea how an honest man could start in business without the assistance of wholesalers ?"

"I could not. He could not buy goods in foreign markets in small quantities."

What is a Wholesaler?

The Crown Attorney asked witness, "What is a wholesaler ?"

"A wholesaler is a man who sells to retail merchants to sell again."

"Do not the Grocers' Wholesale Co. do that ?"

"They are an association of retailers who sell to themselves."

"They sell to storekeepers ?"

"No. They sell to themselves."

"If they buy to sell to retailers they must be wholesalers," said Mr. Washington.

Who Changes it?

Mr. Johnston asked if the price list on canned goods changes from time to time, and who changes it.

"The canners."

"Why do you say the manufacturer can reach the consumer cheaper through the wholesaler than through the retailer ?"

"Well, suppose the retailer wanted salmon. He buys only a few cases at a time and therefore would not get carload rates or discounts for large amounts. Suppose he wanted five pounds of pepper, could he send to India for it ? If the manufacturer had to call on every grocer in Canada he would have to call on 32,000 people with one line."

With the exception of one more witness to be examined by the defence this concluded the evidence. The witness being absent court was adjourned till Thursday morning to take his testimony and hear the arguments of counsel.

On Thursday, the 21st, the last witness, Charles Bremner, a shareholder of the Grocers' Wholesale Company, was called. He failed to identify one of the company's circulars. He did a wholesale as well as a retail business.

To the Crown Attorney witness said his company were unable to buy goods. Asked if it was because he did not belong to the guild, witness answered, "I suppose so."

Witness also said the price of sugar and tomatoes had been increased, his evidence being similar to those who preceded him.

To Mr. Johnston he stated that the individual members of the Grocers' Wholesale Company were retailers, and that they got dividends from capital stock and on purchases, and that a dividend on the former was paid two years ago.

Mr. Johnston Reviews the Case.

This concluded the evidence, and in rising to address the court E. F. B. Johnston gave a resume of the case, which he said was of unusual importance, not so much because it involved the rights and privileges of four or five defendants, or that it gave delight to certain persons who liked to cast aspersions on the characters of those who were brought before the magistrates, but because it concerned the honor and integrity of men who were above reproach, who had been conducting as honorable business as distributors of merchandise for many years, and who were never charged with a dishonest or dishonorable action until the present time. He said it was altogether different from the plumbers' case, which he thought was the incentive of the prosecution of the grocers. It was not a matter involving three or four defendants, but a body of nearly 200 men, who were respectable members of the community.

Monopolies Legal.

In outlining the case, he said the law relating to conspiracy was erroneously supposed to strike at a monopoly of trade. That was wrong. The Provincial and Dominion Parliaments both granted monopolies in issuing patents for proprietary articles, and hotel licenses.

One of the things the act aimed at was combinations to enhance prices. It had not been shown that the Grocers' Guild had done this. Neither was it shown that the competition had been limited. Every manufacturer was at liberty to sell to whom he pleased so far as the guild was concerned, and there was no attempt on their part to fix the prices at which manufacturers were to sell.

No Pools or Restrictions.

It was not shown that there were any pools or false contracts in its transactions, as there were in the plumbers' case, or that competition had been lessened, trade restricted or prices enhanced, as charged.

Mr. Johnston said that if a contract were broken between two parties by the action of a third party, and it was not done wilfully, it was not criminal, even though it might injure some one. No evidence was before the court to show that the guild was formed to accomplish any of the things spoken of in the conspiracy clause. The guild was formed simply to prevent the wholesale trade from going to ruin.

Said There was no Evidence.

The Crown had no right to put in a bundle of letters, many of which had been written by men who were now dead, and try to convict the defendants of conspiracy with the writers. Facts must be proven instead of inferences drawn. If a prosecution of this kind before the court succeeded, it would practically put the wholesale trade out of business. He styled the system of manufacturers selling to such a firm as Eaton's as a cut-throat system, and said it was responsible for the present condition of the retail trade. He stated there was not sufficient evidence against the defendants to commit them for trial and asked that the case be dismissed.

Committed for Trial.

His Worship said he was trying this case as justice of the peace and it was his duty to commit the defendants for trial if there was sufficient evidence. He thought the evidence was quite sufficient for committal. The more argument the defence counsel put up, the more it appeared to him that the disputed points should be settled by a higher court.

TRAVELERS' PICNIC.

The Hamilton commercial travelers are arranging for the annual reunion and picnic of travelers at Oakville, Ont., on July 14. The 13th Battalion Band has been engaged.

THE GREAT WEST.

Dixon Bros., merchants and bankers, of Maple Creek, Sask., in renewing their subscription to The Canadian Grocer, say: "This great country is moving fast. Immigration is pouring in at a tremendous rate. Crop prospects never looked better."

WHITEFISH SCARCE.

U. S. Consul H. A. Conant, at Windsor, has reported to Washington that the Canadian fishermen on the Detroit River and Lake St. Clair were not doing business enough this season to pay expenses because of the scarcity of whitefish and perch. Fishermen claim that the supply of 25,000,000 fry of whitefish sent out by the Sandwich hatchery to replenish the Great Lakes is not near the amount necessary to meet the depletion. Millions of mullets, suckers, carp, and other varieties feed upon the whitefish fry, and it is estimated that only one whitefish minnow out of a thousand reaches maturity. The fishermen think the Government should spend more money for the propagation of inland fisheries.

FIFTY YEARS OF OWEN SOUND

Celebration and Merchants' Annual Picnic Make a Joint Gala Day of Unprecedented Merriment—Corner Stone of New Bridge Laid—Programme of Sports.

The celebration of the 50th anniversary of the incorporation of Owen Sound, Ont., combined with the Retail Merchants' Association's annual picnic, made of Thursday last week a day of pleasant memory and brave achievement in the flourishing bay port. There were quite a few visitors present from Toronto and Hamilton, but with little assistance from the country round the go-ahead town turned out a crowd of five or six thousand people to participate in the day's events and sports.

First in order was the laying of the corner stone of a handsome new bridge on Poulett street by David Creighton, assistant receiver general, Toronto, and for many years as editor of the Times a leader in public affairs. He did the trick with a silver trowel and though local option is in force Miss Georgina Creighton christened the bridge by breaking a bottle of wine over the newly laid stone.

When Indians Prevailed.

Mr. Creighton entertained his audience by drawing word pictures of Owen Sound's early days—the days when Indians far outnumbered the white settlers, and when the man who owned a top buggy instead of an oxcart was looked on as an aristocrat. Owen Sound was ambitious then as now, he told them, and it was that spirit of ambition that was largely responsible for the mighty change wrought in the past fifty years. Many incidents of the stirring and exciting times of pioneer life were recalled; of the first steamers to ply between Collingwood and Owen Sound; of the first election when there were no ballot boxes and consequently no ballot stuffing; when open voting was in vogue and when Richard Carney was elected as first mayor; of the excitement occasioned by the news of the Fenian Raid when the sturdy pioneers took off their Sunday clothes and donned the red coat and went to the front; of the fight to secure a railway—even the old narrow gauge.

Grocer at the Head.

Mayor J. T. Joyce, a leading grocer, was master of ceremonies. Addresses were delivered also by Ben Allen and Christopher Eaton.

This ceremony occupied the forenoon, and the afternoon festivities at the park were preceded by a trade procession that for fine display and unique effects has seldom been surpassed. It was five blocks long. It met the C.P.R. train from Toronto and added "Marathon" Sherring to its triumphal attractions. Thereafter Mayor Joyce and the world's champion headed the procession, not running but in a very handsome carriage. The prizes in the humorous class were taken by Geo. Sargeant with an outfit drawn by a cow, the cow being led by a milkmaid and her attendant. The second prize went to D. B. McColl, grocer and confectioner, for a combination wheelbarrow and buggy top propelled by an ancient horse. The cart before the horse and its two drivers, the Dutchman and the Chinaman, were the cause of much merriment.

Sports of Interest.

The sports began interestingly with a ladies' champion lacrosse match between the Boston Champions and the Wikwemikong Warriors, in which the latter were victorious by a score of two goals to one.

The farmers' race was a hot hoe-down. The watermelon contest was a mouth-watering event in which several youths lined up before the grand stand displayed rare gastronomic ability. Walking the greasy pole was mirth-provoking for the spectators. The gentlemen sometimes on the pole and sometimes off have not recorded their impressions.

In the travelers' 100 yards team race Frank Oke and C. N. Cherries were first and S. Walters and C. Smith second.

A similar stunt for merchants was won by Alex. Currie and D. B. McColl, with George Brignell and D. McClean, second.

A Fast Heavyweight.

As usual John W. Charles, traveler for H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, won the fat men's race. An Owen Sound grocer telling The Grocer reporter about is as the victor walked off with the prize, said: "He's so bashful he's going to get the paper to put in his name as Wilson, but don't you make any mistake. John's one of the best fellows that hits this town and he can sell goods better than he can run. This is the fifth time for him to win this event. We've had police and doctors try it, but we haven't a policeman or a doctor can catch John, and he doesn't need either."

Policeman John Thompson was second in the race.

The boys' 100 yards race, the button-sewing contest and the push ball contest won by Owen Sound against Toronto by two goals to one, passed in rapid succession.

The baseball game between the clothiers and the drygoodsmen was won by the latter with a score of ten runs to nine.

The steeplechase over hurdles and into a large tank of water was won by A. Couch, H. Holmes and W. Lewis in the order named.

In the travelers' early call race the prizes were won by Messrs. E. G. Bingman, A. G. Hewton and J. Donohue.

Champion Did a Turn.

Champion Sherring gave an exhibition of long distance running that was loudly cheered at the finish.

The boys' hobby horse race was won by A. Neving, W. Young and S. Alexander.

The wild and wicked calf was captured after a long and exciting race by Thos. Godfrey.

Comfort soap provided an attractive line of prizes for a women's race, for which there were thirteen entries, who finished in the following order: Miss McColl, Miss Shultz, Miss Squires, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Brown, Miss Downs, Miss Parfrey, Miss Dobson, Miss N. Squires, Miss Schwan, Miss Taylor, Miss White and Miss Brough.

CONSULS KEEN ON TRADE

British Representatives in the United States Anxious to Assist Canadian Merchants—Enterprising Move by Supt. O'Hara, of Canadian Commercial Agencies.

A very interesting departure, and one that should show large beneficial results for Canadian mercantile interests, was recently made by the Commercial Agencies Branch of the Trade and Commerce Department, Ottawa.

Among the manufacturers and exporters of the Dominion, Supt. F. C. T. O'Hara explains in last week's issue of the Weekly Report, the impression prevails that the commercial agency service should be extended. There is a general impression, too, that British consuls do not interest themselves in Canadian trade. Canada has not a commercial representative in the United States. These facts and a request from British Consul-General Alex. Finn, at Chicago, that his office be considered a commercial agency for the Dominion, suggested to Supt. O'Hara that he issue a circular letter and he did to each of 42 British consuls and vice-consuls throughout the Union, embodying these three questions:

Questions Asked.

(a) What suggestions can you offer seeking to bring about more intimate commercial relations with Canadian business men?

(b) Have you had much correspondence with Canadian firms? If so, has it resulted satisfactorily or otherwise?

(c) Do you think you can assist Canadians to extend their market in this district?

"The result," says the superintendent, "has been a splendid testimony to the efficiency of the British consular service in the United States, many of whom replied at considerable length, offering excellent suggestions, and in general terms stating that the facilities of their respective offices were at the service of Canadian business men."

Some excerpts from replies are published. Here are a few of the more suggestive:

At the Service of All.

Consul-General Finn, Chicago: "* * * I have always considered myself as representing the whole Empire and at the service of any and every British subject from wheresoever he might come. I think that all parts of the British Empire and all departments of the Government and its different parts should treat the British consul as their representative. * * * All merchants should be encouraged to write to me on all occasions.

"I should like all portions of the Empire to supply the consulates with the fullest information as to the resources, manufactures, openings for capital, etc., so as to make them a place where information can be obtained immediately. Most of the correspondence we have had with Canadians on business has been with persons seeking agencies in Canada for American goods."

For Boston's 150,000.

Wm. Wyndham, consul, Boston: "I have never had, during my consular experience of nine years, any inquiries from a Canadian merchant, and on the other hand, from the other colonies, from Australia and India, such inquiries are often received and are as promptly attended to as similar inquiries from Great Britain.

"Such assistance as is in my power I will gladly give to any Canadian firm seeking markets for their goods in my consular district. I shall be pleased to receive from your office any official publication you may desire to send me, which will be filed here for the use of Canadians in this district. I believe there are resident in Boston and its vicinity about 150,000 Canadians."

No Greater Pleasure.

Horace D. Nugent, consul, Galveston, Texas: "His Majesty's consular officers are the public servants not alone of Great Britain, but of the Empire at large, and further, it should be not only our duty but also our privilege and pleasure to do our part in aiding to build up and enlarge the trade and commerce of the Empire by holding ourselves ready at all times to assist in any way possible the commercial interests of our fellow Britons, whether in the United Kingdom or the colonies. Personally speaking, I have always taken this view, and nothing would give me greater pleasure and pride than to feel that I had in my small way helped to extend the trade of the Dominion."

He suggests publicity of the fact that the British consular officers are ready to answer Canadian trade inquiries. He promises to ascertain more specifically in what articles of Canadian origin business might be done.

Correspond Direct.

Sir Percy Sanderson, K.C.M.G., consul-general, New York, saw no reason why Canadians should not avail themselves of the services of British consular offices. His answers to the superintendent's three questions were:

(a) Canadian merchants should correspond direct, stating their requirements.

(b) Very little.

(c) Assistance could be given to Canadians to extend their market in this country if they would state their requirements.

Glad of Information.

Consul James Laidlaw, Portland, Ore., replied in part as follows: "It is not the province of a British consul to encourage the trade of Americans to the detriment of British trade, but by British trade I mean the trade of the British Empire, and not solely that of the United Kingdom. I have never looked upon myself as merely the representative of a section of the Empire.

"I can only suggest that if Canadian business men would make their desires known we would assist in every way practicable. A consul cannot make business or work up business, but he can make suggestions and answer inquiries which might lead to this, and I am sure not only would be glad to do so, but it is also his duty.

"I have had exceedingly little correspondence with Canadian firms. I regret that none of the departments of the Canadian Government have ever thought of sending their reports to this office unless specially inquired for. Not even changes in tariff are notified, and I certainly value very highly your offer to send all official publications issued by your department."

Will Send Information.

Consul Fraser, Baltimore: "Should any opportunity offer in this district of which Canadian merchants might avail themselves, I will gladly furnish full particulars of it to you for publication in your weekly report."

Consul C. W. Bennett, San Francisco: "As regards the special interests of Canada in this consular district, it is no doubt within your knowledge that a large trade between British Columbia and San Francisco already exists. It is presumably in the hands of business men to see the opportunity offered and seize it. Any assistance asked for I will be most happy to give whenever possible."

Give Details.

Consul Wilfrid Powell, Philadelphia: "Firms in Canada should address their requirements to the consul, taking care that the inquiry is made in fullest detail in order that the consul may be able to obtain if possible equally full information. We have had a considerable amount of correspondence on commercial matters with Canadian firms and business men, in some cases evidently with satisfactory results, judging from the letters received."

Consul Carew-Hunt, New Orleans: "I am always ready to do anything in my power to assist Canadian commercial interests in my district. I would suggest that a list of the British consular officers in the United States should be sent to the various boards of trade and chambers of commerce throughout the Dominion, with the information that the services of such officers are at the disposal of Canadian merchants to promote Canadian trade interests. Similar lists might with advantage be sent to other institutions. I have had little if any correspondence with Canadian firms."

Get Canadian Goods.

Acting Consul Harkness, at Savannah, Ga., suggests the usual method of communicating with commercial agencies, and continues: "At the present time there is some export trade, annually, from the ports of this district to Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, mostly in the way of shipments of yellow pine lumber, rosin, turpentine, etc., but comparatively little business is done in direct Canadian imports, as such goods of Canadian origin as are consumed here come, as a general rule, by way of New York and Boston. It appears to me quite possible that a reasonable improvement in the present trade conditions might be hoped for in the near future if a proper effort is made in the right direction."

MORE CALIFORNIA FRUIT SOLD.

At a fruit auction held in Montreal June 25, three cars of California fruit were sold. The market was brisk and good prices were obtained. Peaches sold from $1 to $1.30, plums from $1.50 to $2.80, and apricots at $2.50. A car of pineapples was also sold. Prices ranged from $3.10 to $3.25.

BRITISH CONSULS AND CANADIAN TRADE.

The enterprise of Supt. F. C. T. O'Hara, of Canadian commercial agencies, Ottawa, in enlisting the active support of the hundred and sixty odd British consuls throughout the United States in favor of Canadian trade extension, should be highly appreciated, and marks Mr. O'Hara as a man for his job. During the month of March, according to official figures just issued, Canada imported from the United States fifteen million dollars worth of goods, a million and a quarter more than in March last year. In the same time Canada sold to the States a little less than six and a half millions worth, just a million and a half more than in March, 1905. This shows in the first place that Canada's sales to her big neighbor are capable of expansion, and that is the main issue here. Taking the figures for the nine months ending March 31 the increase is even more notable. For three years they are: 1904, $52,000,000; 1905, $55,000,000; 1906, $67,000,000.

In another article some excerpts from replies of the consuls to Mr. O'Hara's circular letter are given. They are all enthusiastic in tone. All of them recognize that in increasing the trade of any part of the Empire they are serving the whole. It is broad ground and as sound as it is roomy. It now remains for Canadian enterprise to take advantage of the way prepared for it.

GROCERS SHOULD ORGANIZE.

In a multitude of counsellors there is wisdom, said the Hebrew wise man, and his descendants have since been noted for success in business. This is a text for a dissertation on the advantage of a wide-reaching and strong organization of the retail grocery trade in Canada, but if the progressive and ambitious grocers would give the subject a little serious consideration the dissertation would give place to a report of the new organization. The advantage of organization is as plain as a barrel of sugar. Not to fix prices, or eliminate competition, or chase legislators—that game has been tried and it's no good to the grocer; what is wanted is an organization to bring the grocers together for the discussion of trade methods, for the advantages of social intercourse, for the spread of ideas, for the fostering and development of the spirit of progress. The retail grocery trade feeds the nation. It is a good business to push along. It's a business a man may well be proud of and a business the best men in it are proud of. A sparkling satellite of the sacred desk once said, "Born a man and died a grocer," and the saying has passed into a proverb of disrespect. There would have been quite as much point to his illustration if he had said, "Born a man and died a cleric." There is no more useful and necessary business than the grocer's, and none that for the health and enjoyment of the whole community is more susceptible of development and improvement. There should be a provincial and Dominion organization. Who'll be first to start it?

AMERICAN GOODS IN COMPETITION.

U. S. Consul Geo. N. West, writing from Sydney, N.S., to the Daily Consular and Trade Reports, published by the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, and distributed in great numbers throughout the States, after telling of a marked revival of trade in that district, says:

"The value of having personal representatives of American manufacturers visit merchants here has been shown in a strong manner by a statement made to me by a representative of an American firm visiting here lately, when he was successful in opening up six new accounts, whereas during the past two years he had difficulty in retaining former customers, owing to the depression.

"In visiting the different merchants I note in almost every instance the display of American goods in their stores, which have been, with few exceptions, purchased through Canadian wholesale houses, in some instances coming in direct competition with goods of the same class manufactured in Canada. If representatives of American firms visited here, they could no doubt largely increase their sales.

"Within a radius of 20 miles of Sydney there is disbursed for wages to employes of the coal, iron and steel companies, and other manufacturing enterprises, about $500,000 monthly, and this sum will rather be increased than decreased in the future."

This is the way the American consular service is working for the extension of trade in United States manufactured products. Canadian manufacturers and wholesalers should be able to so supply the Cape Breton merchants and miners that they would have no room for American products.

NEW ARRIVALS IN CANADA.

The situation in regard to Canadian immigration is presented in the following statement for 10 months of the current and last fiscal years, July 1 to April 30, contained in the Labor Gazette for June:

	1904-5	1905-6	Increase
From Europe.....	67,340	74,350	7,010
From United States..	31,309	43,237	11,928
Total.....	98,649	117,587	18,938

The proportion of immigrants from Europe who are of British origin may be gathered from the fact that for the first four months of this year, January to April, the immigrants of British origin numbered 34,869, and for the corresponding months of last year 28,-859.

During March there were 4,018 homestead entries in the west. Of these 1,080 were Canadians from other provinces, 1,271 were Americans, 71 were Canadians returned from the States, 9 were Newfoundlanders, 635 English, 147 Scotch, 59 Irish, and the rest were foreign, the largest number being Austro-Hungarians, 212.

REWARD OF ENTERPRISE.

Conclusive evidence of the monetary advantage of progressive methods is often hard to lay hands on quickly, but here is an instance—it happens to be in the dairying industry—that is a good deal clearer than the proverbial pikestaff. In a report of the Brockville Cow Testing Association, issued by Dairy Commissioner Ruddick on June 16, is a record of a herd of twelve cows that produced in 30 days 7,176 lbs. of milk and another herd of five cows that yielded 6,285 lbs. The cost per cow for feed and labor would be practically the same for both herds. If the 12 cows had been of the quality of the five they would have yielded 15,084 lbs. of milk. The owner therefore lost by keeping an inferior grade of cow, 7,908 lbs. of milk in a month. At 80 cents per 100 lbs., a fair average value, his money loss was $63.20.

THE VALUE OF WINDOW TICKETS.

There isn't a merchant who will contest this proposition: "Show windows are valuable to attract trade." You display your goods and if they are attractive, you will do some business. How much more you could do with price tickets properly displayed is perhaps a question, but there is no question but what your trade would be increased, and materially.

There are many people who are backward in the matter of pricing goods. They feel some little compunctions against asking questions and then going away without buying. You will find this trait much more highly developed in the man than in the woman. The latter leans a little too much the other way.

If you have a good location, there are people passing your store every minute in the business day. The prices plainly shown talk to them as they pass, and they strike home. The average man knows little about bargains. He may think an article looks too high-priced for his pocketbook, but the actual price may be within his reach.

Use the tags and the cards with prices in plain figures throughout your entire establishment, and they will increase your sales. New goods are going on the shelves and tables. Plain marking helps the customer and it helps the salesmen.

Plain marking is taken to mean one-price, and in this day and age of sharp competition, no merchant can afford to play favoritism with his trade. One price is the surest safeguard. If you have sliding scales you run the risk, and a big one at that, of offending your good customers.

Women talk and they gossip on trade matters as well as on social. Overcharge one and let her find it out and your competitor will control her trade hereafter. Use price cards. They may be had cheap. Use home-made cards and learn to make them neat and attractive. If you are a failure at it, your print shop will gladly accept the order, or you can send to the city for samples. Tag everything. If you have not been following this practice, try it and you will find your returns for the next year better by a material percentage.

THE AMERICAN THIRST.

The American people spent last year for drink—alcoholic, and tea, cocoa and coffee—$1,548,708,307. The per capita cost of tea, coffee and cocoa combined, was $2.68, and for alcoholic drinks alone $15.95. The total drink bill is equal to one-eighth the entire expenditure for food. The consumption per capita of tea was 1.23 pounds, aggregating 101,237,084 pounds, costing $52,698,000. That means about 8½c. per gallon of the liquor, making it the cheapest of all prepared beverages.

The United States leads all other nations as a consumer of coffee, using about one billion pounds of raw coffee every year. The imports in 1905 were 46,390,481 pounds more than in 1904. It is conservative to take the average annual net import for three years as better representing the quantity consumed, and that was 945,177,833 pounds, having an average import value for 1905 of 8.1 cents per pound against 7.0 cents in 1904. Coffee loses from 12 to 16 per cent. in roasting, with the average about 14 per cent., and allowing for this shrinkage there remains a net yearly consumption for three years, 1903-05, of 812,852,937 pounds of roasted coffee, costing the consumer an average of about 20c. per pound. On the basis that one pound of coffee makes two gallons of infusion, we have as the measure of the year's consumption 1,625,705,874 gallons used as drink at a cost of $162,570,589.

INSPIRE YOUR CLERKS.

It is a rare gift for a man to be able to inspire in others the spirit of enthusiasm which invariably carries all before it. But it is one of the most necessary gifts for the retail merchant who would make a real success of his business.

In too many cases clerks are left to work up their own enthusiasm, to learn about the goods they handle from their own research, and to adopt their own selling methods. And it generally happens that this enthusiasm soon dies out, killing also the desire to learn. Apathy in the employer is followed by apathy in the clerk, and necessarily sales are not so large as they should be.

In a great many stores the clerks are actually afraid of "the boss." There is no spirit of fellowship between them, and in such circumstances clerks who are accustomed to work hard in the presence of their employers will shirk as much as possible once they are away from his watchful eye.

Every store should have a definite business policy which can only be adhered to when the proprietor takes the clerks more or less into his confidence, and endeavors to inspire them with his own enthusiasm in selling goods.

Are your clerks afraid of you? Do you notice a scramble when you come among them? Then fraternize with them, and do not be afraid of teaching them something valuable.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A Toronto gentleman who recently bought a farm in Cuba brought back with him a couple of cases of pineapples and showed them to the various newspapers, apparently as illustrative of a new trade possibility. About 50 carloads of Cuban pines have been brought into Toronto this season!

* * *

Did it ever occur to you, asks the London (Eng.) Grocer, that the grocer has it in his power to exert a wonderful influence in his community; to be a "molder of public opinion?" The retail grocer has a wonderful power for doing good and for molding public opinion. He has access to the homes of the entire community and the knowledge of how to use his influence is all he needs.

* * *

A Philadelphia wholesale grocer, named Murgatroyd, doing, he says, a million dollars of business a year, has devised a plan of incorporation on the co-operative principle. He proposes a hundred thousand dollar company, ten thousand ten-dollar shares, and promises to every purchaser of one or more shares that he can thereafter purchase his groceries at wholesale prices.

In a circular, Murgatroyd says of the business that it "is entirly too large and too valuable to be at the mercy of one individual." The "individual" being himself, he probably is right.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Fluctuations.

Fish—Revised.
Coffee—Mocha advanced 3c.
Valencia raisins—Advanced 1-2c.

Montreal, June 28, 1906.

Orders during the week have been very good, speaking generally. While no particular grocery line has experienced any special call, there has been a fair trade passing all round. Sugar is stronger this week and it is probable that there will shortly be an advance, considering existing conditions. Better business in this line is reported on all sides. Some further reports on California fruits have reached Montreal regarding the outlook for the coming season. These advices are of about the same tenor as advices previously received. There is a firmer feeling in the tea market, but there are no new features of interest. Old Japans are now practically cleaned up. Molasses is moving along steadily, the market this week being not so strong as it has been. Considerable information regarding fruit crop prospects is to be found under the dried fruit heading. Mocha coffee has been advanced on account of disturabnces in the coffee growing districts of Arabia. Spices are rather firmer this week. Dealers report a very active business in maple products for this time of year.

Collections are very poor; jobbers report being able to get no satisfactory returns from their customers.

CANNED GOODS— Canned goods have been moving out steadily. Business throughout the country, according to jobbers, has been about normal. Merchants appear to be buying more for immediate consumption than otherwise. Tomatoes are still sold at $1.30, despite the talk of possible reduced prices through the heavy holdings of certain parties having to be disposed of at any figure obtainable. Corn is moving freely enough, and peas continue about as usual. Fruits are not in very good request owing to the increasing quantity of fresh stock arriving on the market. According to reports received, apricots this year will be very high in price. Peaches also will be higher, but it is expected that pears will be somewhat lower.

SUGAR— There is a stronger feeling in sugar this week and it is within the range of possibilities that there will be an advance shortly. The raw market has been advanced in New York and there is talk of putting up the price of the refined article. Should this advance be made, the local market will in all probability also be advanced. Jobbers report quite an increase in orders lately, merchants apparently preparing for the Summer business.

TEA—Teas generally are inclined to be a little firmer this week than they were last. Some inquiry is reported for cheap China greens, Young Hysons and gunpowders, the former especially. Ceylon blacks are a farthing up, although the prices here are not affected. Orders at cable quotations received here ten days ago are now refused. There has been practically no change in Indian blacks. With the exception of a few offerings of fancy Indian greens at fancy prices, there have been no new stock greens put on the market. Old Japans, in first hands, are now cleaned up, while there are very few lots in second hands. Very little Japan tea is to be consigned this year, according to advices from Japan.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES— There has been little change in the state of the molasses market since last report. It is a little weaker if anything, but prices locally are not affected. Stocks are pretty well sold up. Cargoes are arriving occasionally, but, as a rule, these are contracted for, so that the market is not affected by the arrival of such lots.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — The market is almost entirely bare of most grades. Some inquiry has been made for new fruits and confidential orders have already been transmitted in considerable quantities. The report of damage to crops by frost is now confirmed by the out-turn. Sultanas and Valencia raisins and nuts of all kinds are estimated to be considerably under last year's volume, consequently high prices in comparison with last season are a certainty. Figs also are reported to be a much smaller crop than last year and it is understood opening prices are from 1s. 6d to 2s. higher than last season. The 1905 crop of shelled walnuts is now being rapidly exhausted by U. S. buyers for cracking and shipment in September, and there is great doubt as to whether there will be sufficient stock in shell remaining to supply requirements until the new fruit is dry enough to ship. Prices have accordingly advanced and further advances are looked for. The new crop of currents will be shipped about the 28th of August via Liverpool at about the same price as last year's opening. Reports of crop are fairly favorable, and unless unforeseen contingencies occur, prices are likely to remain steady during the season. The chief elements which disturb this article are the violent fluctuations of exchange. Spot stocks are practically nil and considerable orders have been sent forward for prompt shipment of last year's stock to supply current requirements. The first direct steamer with dates from Bussorahis is expected to reach New York by the end of October, somewhat earlier than usual, and favorable prices have been made and considerable quantities sold in Canada. Present stocks of Valencia raisins are pretty well cleaned up. Prices have been advanced locally. Prunes are firm at figures quoted.

COFFEE—Coffee has been in fairly good demand since last report. Orders received do not call for any particular line, business being of a sorting nature. Prices have been rather firm. Advices from Arabia state that owing to rebellion in the Yemen district the crop has been materially damaged, and as a consequence, higher prices for Mocha are expected. It is difficult to say yet just what effect this will have upon the local market eventually, taking it for granted that this statement is correct. As it is, prices have been advanced considerably.

Toronto, June 28.

Trade is brisk throughout Ontario but quiet in the city and without special feature. Collections, it is said, are very satisfactory for the season of the year. The week has shown few quotable fluctuations in prices, but the markets are firm in all lines. There is a very bullish feeling in canned salmon. The demand for canned fruits is giving place to the fresh crop and the consumption of sugar is heavy. There is a very firm feeling in molasses, especially New Orleans, and the reason assigned on the primary market is the passage of the American alcohol bill. The market is about bare of California dried fruits and currants and raisins continue to work upward to a basis commensurate with the importing cost. Tapioca has firmed up again and is predicted to be firmly fixed for some months.

CANNED GOODS—The new fruit has somewhat curtailed demand for the canned variety, but vegetables moving steadily. Anyway, the fruits are getting pretty well cleaned up. Strawberries have been off for some time, apples are in very small compass, and stocks of cherries, pears and some varieties of plums are getting low. Salmon is engaging a good deal of attention. Stocks of Fraser River Sockeye are melting rapidly and single case orders are much preferred. For 1-lb. talls the price has been advanced by some to $1.75 and for flats $1.85. The announcement by the British Columbia packers of the prices on this year's pack expected Saturday has not yet materialized.

SUGAR—The market for cane raws is very firm and the probability of an advance in refined in New York was being canvassed there early in the week. The European beet market is a weather market, last week fluctuating between 8s. 2¼d. and 8s. 3d., closing the week at 8s. 1½d., and Monday's cable gave it as 8s. 3d. again. Details are gradually leaking out regarding the business, which was rumored to have been done last week at 2 3-16c., cost and freight, basis 95 degrees. It is now generally believed that the American and Howell secured between 150,000 and 200,000 bags Cuban sugars for July shipment at this price, which is equivalent to 3.57½c., duty paid, basis 96 degrees. Yesterday morning there were on offer 6,000 bags Porto Rican sugars in port, at 3 9-16c., landed, basis 96 degrees, but these were withdrawn and offered later at 3⅝c. The lot was finally sold to Arbuckle Bros. at 3 17-32c., which establishes a higher spot valuation. At the close there were some nearby Porto Ricans on offer at 3⅝c., basis 96 degrees, and some Cubans for last half July shipment, at 2¼c., cost and freight, basis 95 degrees, equal to 3.64c., duty paid, basis 96 degrees. The offerings keep within the requirements of refiners, as to limited quantities, and hence meet with ready sale at the current fluctuations. With Cuba quotations still .20c. below the parity of European beet sugar, refiners show no hesitancy in accepting all parcels which sellers place before them. This is a condition on both sides which conduces to a firm, steady, and very healthy attitude to the entire trade, both in raws and refined. American refiners, it is said, will require a million tons to the end of the year and a quarter of it will have to come from Europe or Java.

COFFEE—The week has developed no changes of importance. Brazil reported to New York that the new crop would be of small bean. That may mean a smaller crop than was anticipated. The tone of the market is somewhat firmer. The world's visible supply was 185,000 bags less on June 1 than on May 1, and 1,511,000 bags less than in 1905.

TEA—Ceylon greens for fine liquors have advanced from ½d to 1d for the various grades, and Ceylon blacks have advanced ¼d in the low grades, and ½d to 1d on fine grades. Locally the situation is normal. Japans are firmer.

MOLASSES AND SYRUPS—Reports from New Orleans state that the passing of the free alcohol bill in Congress has enhanced the price of low grade molasses by causing the manufacturers of the United States to look for increased supplies, as they produce a milder spirit than corn products. Contracts for next season are being made at much higher prices than last year.

DRIED FRUITS—The market is getting very bare. Prunes, apricots and peaches are about done. About all the sizes of prunes left are 50's to 60's, 40's to 50's, and 120's. One house has been refusing business at 8c. Apricots are completely done. The crop this year, it is said, would not exceed 2,500 tons, as against a normal crop of four times that. Peaches are said to be a crop of 9,000 tons, about a third of an average. About 6¼c. uncleaned is about the lowest quotation on Filiatra currants. Valencia raisins are crowding 6c. One advice received this week states that the crop of valencias will be short, judging by the present condition of the vines. There has been bad weather for the sultana crop in Asia Minor. The bad weather extended to Greece, and about 40,000 tons as compared with 58,000 tons last year.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS

Halifax, N.S., June 25.

The grocery trade is in a healthy condition and jobbers are satisfied with the outlook. The orders from outside points are fully up to the average, and collections continue good. Large shipments of potatoes continue to arrive here from Prince Edward Island, notwithstanding the lateness of the season. The island is also sending heavy shipments of oats, eggs and potatoes to the Cape Breton markets, which now require large quantities of produce. Dried fruits are becoming very scarce on this market. Prices are fairly steady in all lines. Sugar is quoted here as follows:

XXX granulated	$4.30
Austrian granulated (bags)	4.20
Cut loaf (barrels)	5.05
Bright yellow	4.10
No. 1 yellow	3.80
Unbranded yellow	3.65

Provisions continue very firm, an advance of one dollar to one dollar and a half having been made recently on American pork. American fat back is now quoted at $22.50 and Prince Edward Island mess at $22. Lard is firm at 12½c. to 13c. for pails, and 13c. to 13½c. for cases. The best American beef is quoted at $15.

EGGS—The demand for eggs is only fair. Jobbers here have good stocks on hand, but it is thought that the high price is keeping back sales. The season is now advancing and there is no intimation of any break.

BUTTER—With the increased receipts the butter market is becoming a little easier, but the price drops very slowly. Jobbers say that the farmers are sending in a good supply of fresh made butter. The prices are about 23c. for creamery prints, 21c. to 22c. for solids, and 20c. for dairy.

FRUIT—An active business is reported in fruit, and some of the jobbers find difficulty in securing first-class stock, particularly bananas and oranges, the former at the close of the week running very short. Prices are about as follows: Oranges, California navels, from $5 to $5.50; Jamaicas, $7 per barrel, and Valencias, 420's, at $7.50. Lemons are very scarce and high, from $5 to $6 per case being asked. Bananas, $1.75 to $2.50. Pines, $3.50 a case. Cukes, $4.50, and tomatoes, $1.50 a crate. Bermuda onions are lower, $1.50 being asked. Egyptian are selling at 1¾c. per pound. California cherries and plums are quoted at $3, and peaches at $2.50.

FISH—Good catches of mackerel continue along the coast. During the week the traps at Lunenburg took 600 barrels and at Lambro Prospect and Dover about 300 barrels were taken. These fish are of a smaller run than earlier in the season, but there is good money in catching them. Cod and haddock are also fairly plentiful and the catches of salmon continue large. During the week the first meeting of the Island Cheese Board was held at Charlottetown, with President Lochiel McDonald in the chair. The officers elected were: President, L. McDonald, East Point; vice-president, Charles Waye, St. Peter's; secretary-treasurer and salesman, Robert Jenkins, Mount Albion. R. E. Spillett bought all the boarded cheese at 11¼c. 200 flats were not sold. The following cheese boarded: Kensington, 150; New Perth, 50; Lakeville, 33; Dundas, 25 flats, 30 whole; Union, 140 flats; Ponnall, 50; New Glasgow, 50.

A resolution was passed asking that all the factories join the board and contribute toward its support.

Reports received here from various parts of Prince Edward Island districts give good prospects this season of an abundant fruit crop. Grain and also hay are reported as being good on the island.

The steamer City of Bombay, from London, landed here this week three thousand bags of Scotch potatoes, which will be transhipped by the steamer Beta for Jamaica.

N. B. MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., June 25, 1906.

Business is good. There has been splendid weather for some weeks and the farmer who was behind is making up for lost time. The tourist is becoming a factor and there is certainly reason, as while other points are having extreme hot weather, one in St. John is able to enjoy the fine days in comfort. Prices show no very marked changes, but the market is generally firm. Ginger continues very high. New rice is rather late arriving. Rather higher prices rule.

OIL—In burning oil prices are held firm. The chief business is in booking orders for Fall. Lubricating oils move rather less freely. Paint oils are held firm. Some cod oil is beginning to arrive.

SALT—Business has been very active in Liverpool coarse salt. Arrivals have been large. Prices well maintained. In fine salt there is a good steady business. Canadian is chiefly sold.

CANNED GOODS—Just fair spot business. As the trade now have an agreement of selling price, rather higher figures are quoted. Fruits are all firmly held. Gallon apples are firm at the advance. In meats, American goods show a falling off in demand. Oysters are higher. There is improved interest in salmon, and higher values are expected. In domestic fish, new haddies are offered.

GREEN FRUIT—Oranges are high; some Valencias are offered. There is a fair sale for Jamaicas. Californias, even at the high prices, have a good sale. Lemons are high. Bananas are firm at quite full figures. Pines sell quite freely. Strawberries are now becoming a more active factor. California peaches, cherries, apricots and plums are offered.

DRIED FRUIT—A car of Bosnia prunes were received this week. They come on a somewhat bare market, and full prices were asked. Spot seeded raisins are firmer. Other grades unchanged. Stocks not large. New Malaga layers are quoted higher than last year. Future California prunes and raisins unchanged. Peaches and apricots very high. Dates firmer. Spot currants firmly held. Peels bring full figures. Evaporated apples almost out of the market. Egyptian onions about gone. Little change in price. Peanuts keep low this season.

SUGAR—Prices are firm at the late advance. Values are still low. Good sales reported.

MOLASSES—Market quite well stocked, particularly in fancy Barbadoes. Prices are firm. Stock of Porto Rico smaller than for some few years at this season.

FISH—Salmon, a steady sale. Prices are somewhat lower than usual at this season. This is governed by the Boston market. There has been a good catch. In dry fish, new cod and pollock received. Prices are easier. Pickled herring light inquiry. Prices still high. Smoked dull.

On July 26 and 27 the regular semi-annual meeting of the Western Retail Association will be held in Winnipeg in the board room adjoining the secretary's office. A circular letter inviting the retailers of the west to attend this meeting will be issued very shortly by Secretary Coulson and President J. F. Hunter. It should be distinctly understood that the invitation is extended not only to those who are members of the association but to all retailers in the west, whether members or not. Many important matters will come up for discussion affecting the interests of all western retailers and it is desirable that there should be a large attendance.

The convention is being held during the week of the exhibition and consequently all who attend will have the advantage of the cheap railroad fares that always prevail at that time. There will certainly be a large attendance of Manitoba merchants and it is hoped that many dealers from Saskatchewan and Alberta will also arrange to be present.

Secretary Coulson returned to Winnipeg on Monday from an extended trip to different country points. Meetings were held at Melita, Carnduff, Alameda and Estevan, and sections were organized at all those points to include the surrounding towns. All the meetings were well attended, showing that the interest in the association is keen throughout the west. The credit evil was the subject most discussed and it was agreed to close books from Nov 1 to April 1, so far as possible; also to charge 10 per cent. interest during the closed months on all accounts standing for 30 days or more and 8 per cent. from April to November.

At Hamiota, Man., a meeting was held to straighten out some trouble over the selling price of tobacco. The trouble was satisfactorily arranged and the affairs of this big section will now run smoothly.

INTERESTING FIG MERCHANT.

Asia Minor Crop About 100,000 Camel Loads—Bolton Armao.

The most interesting traveler to reach Toronto in recent months with something to sell—and who hasn't ? — was Bolton Armao, a young fig merchant of Smyrna. He knows the business on the practical side and as for selling—well, he gives the impression that he lives to sell figs ; yet a few moments' conversation with him convinced The Canadian Grocer representative that the vanishing point of his perspective was a long way beyond the confines of the fig industry.

Mr. Armao is of mixed nationality, tall, slight of build, a little stooped, dark. He speaks eight languages. This is his first visit to America. He once spent three days in London and he speaks English fluently, adding emphasis with a large vocabulary of gestures.

The selling agents for his firm in Canada are the McLaren Imperial Cheese Co., and his stay of a day or two in Toronto was passed largely in the company of Mr. Marshall, and of whose selling capabilities he quickly acquired a high opinion.

Mr. Armao was frankly disappointed at the size of the orders placed by Toronto jobbers. "But," he concluded, after telling how he and Mr. Marshall had stayed with one firm till near midnight for their small order, and several hours with another, "there's a proverb, 'When in the dance, you must dance.' I'm in the dance so I must dance."

To get the best Mr. Armao knows of word or gesture it is only necessary to suggest a comparison between Smyrna figs and Italian, Californian, Portuguese or African. Asia Minor's crop this year will probably be about 100,000 camel loads (about 300 lbs.) which was about the crop last year. The consumption of figs, Mr. Armao avers, is rapidly increasing.

He put forward also the curious assertion that figs were a cure for tuberculosis even in the secondary stage. He would have the patient be continually where the aroma of the fig is and live upon the fruit.

MERCHANT IN COUNCIL.

Joseph Ward, of Joseph Ward & Co., Montreal, has been re-elected alderman for seat No. 2, St. Andrew's ward. Mr. Ward resigned from the council a few weeks ago on account of his company having a claim against the city. It seems that no alderman can retain his seat in the council if any firm to which he belongs makes a claim against the city. Action was taken in the courts against Mr. Ward to have him unseated, but he did not await the outcome of the case, resigning at once. The citizens showed their confidence in him by re-electing him by acclamation. Mr. Ward is head of the wholesale firm of Joseph Ward & Co., importers of sugars, molasses and grocers' specialties.

QUEBEC GROCERS' GUILD.

At Quebec, on June 21, a provincial meeting of the Grocers' Guild was held under the presidency of L. E. Geoffrion, Montreal. No information was given out regarding the questions discussed, which were chiefly regarding sugar, molasses and tobacco, and freight rates. Those present at the meeting from Montreal were: J. A. Robitaille, A. Desroches, L. O. Demers, Mr. Gendreau, Albert Hebert, P. C. Messervey, Alex. Orsali, H. Laporte, and S. J. Carter. R. H. Beaulieu, of Chicoutimi, and J. R. Gardner, of Ottawa, were also present. Quebec merchants at the meeting included Alex. Turcotte, Ledroit & Freres; J. B. E. Latellier, A. Miller, of Whitehead & Turner; P. J. Bazin, Chas. Pettigrew, of N. Rioux & Co., L. A. Carrier, J. Buchanan and Thos. Beattie, of Davidson & Co.

J. Stanley Cook, assistant secretary of the Montreal Board of Trade, acted as secretary.

FRUIT EXHIBIT IN HALIFAX.

G. Bigelow, superintendent of the horticultural department of the Dominion Exhibition, which is to be held in Halifax this coming Autumn, has sent out a circular from Wolfville, N.S. Every effort is being made to make the exhibition the largest and most instructive fruit exhibit ever made in Canada. All exhibits must arrive at Halifax before September 28.

FRUIT BROKER MARRIED.

J. Joseph McCabe, of W. B. Stringer & Co., was married on Tuesday morning at St. Michael's Cathedral. The hearty good wishes of the trade accompanied the happy couple on their wedding trip to Muskoka, where they will spend a couple of weeks.

THIS WILL BE A BIG ONE.

The grocers and butchers of Brantford will hold their annual picnic in conjunction with the Grocers' Association of Hamilton, on July 18 to Niagara Falls.

The name of the Dominion Wine & Spirit Co. has been changed to F. Edwards & Co.

COFFEE MARKET CYCLES

History Worth Studying—Safe Now to Carry Full Stocks—Increase in Consumption—Rise in Price About Due.

The history of the coffee market, says the American Grocer, is worth studying, as production moves in cycles, being stimulated by an era of high valuation and depressed by a period of low prices. During the last cycle of high cost—1887-1897—when Rio No. 7 touched 18 3-8c. New York, and never sold below 12 7-8c., a great stimulus was given to production in the Province of Sao Paulo, Brazil. The production in Brazil rose from an annual average crop of 5,500,000 bags (1893-96), to a yearly average of 12,897,000 bags (1900-03), with the result that No. 7 Rio sold down to 5 1-4c., the ruling price in 1902-03. During the past three years the average yearly crop has decreased over 2,500,000 bags, or about 20 per cent. decrease.

A change must come about, due to decreasing production, increasing consumption, which has already brought about a decrease in the world's reserve stock to barely enough to cover seven months' requirements, based on an annual consumption of 17,000,000 bags. The recovery in prices from 5 1-4c. in 1893 has been slow, and at this time the present spot cost shows an advance of only 5 5-8c.

The low prices have made coffee-growing an unproductive industry. Planters have suffered, as we attempted to demonstrate in our last and previous issues.

The only remedy for the planter's trouble is in a higher level of values, and while this should come naturally when consumption is so much ahead of production, conditions in Brazil in respect of labor, mortgage burdens, interest on mortgages (in many cases as high as ten to twelve per cent.), cost of transportation and living expenses, all to be paid in the currency, i.e., milreis money, the return to a higher level of prices to the planter must be rapid to avert his ruin. With Brazil exchange high and currency prices low, the planter only gets an average of about twenty-four milreis per bag (this equals only 5 1-2c. to 6c. per pound gross to the planter), and this is where it hurts. It is simple enough to understand why the planter is imploring his congressman to favor a plan for Government aid, which the Brazil Congress is likely to wisely develop. If only the attempt is made the coffee world would be very likely to quickly second the efforts. It is more than probable the markets would jump up immediately and kill the sapping pessimism that is unjustly plaguing the coffee business.

There is probably no more intelligent tradesman in the wholesale or retail trade of the world than the American grocer. He deals in products brought from all parts of the world, and he keeps informed about the production and commerce, and surely he will be in sympathy with the live-and-let-live spirit for the coffee planter.

The consumption of coffee in the world for the current season is nearly 17,000,000 bags, taking the known deliveries from seaports to the interior. A great deal more is consumed of which no figures are kept. The world's production of coffee is not more than 14,500,000 bags this season.

As a safeguard against a small crop next season a good reserve of such a prime staple ought to be kept, and yet the world's visible supply has shrunk 4,000,000 bags since October, 1904, and the present seaport stocks are only equal to seven months' consumption.

It is safe and prudent policy for all distributors of coffee to carry a full stock, for there is no indication that the crops of the world will be within 2,000,000 bags of its requirements for two years or more. And if there is no relief to the planters the production must fall so far behind consumption that a return to the high prices of 1887-1897 seems inevitable.

The coffee trade is the spinal column of a retail grocery business, and is the only prominent staple which affords the retailers a good profit. The retailers have educated the public to an appreciation of quality, and nearly all have favorite blends, the demand for which rests in no small degree upon cost. To insure the maintenance of a popular retail price, a full stock of coffee on the present basis of cost bids fair to be a paying investment. The facts are plain, and force themselves upon every careful observer, and justify the most conservative in being liberal carriers of the world's most famous bean.

Daniel MacLachlan, grocery, crockery and seed merchant, of Woodville, has gone on a two months trip to the Pacific coast. During his absence the business is in the capable hands of his stalwart son, William, a student in Toronto University, and the makings of as good a business man as his father.

John E. Waterhouse, Whitby, who commenced business there three years ago, has so developed his trade that more commodious premises are necessary and about July 1 he will move into the large store formerly occupied by J. Gibson. He has had it thoroughly refitted and fixed up in first-class style.

Considerable damage was done to the building occupied by George Hossack, grocer, corner of St. Anne and Garden streets, Quebec, through a fire which occurred June 25. Most of the damage to the stock was caused by smoke and water. The loss is nearly covered by insurance.

H. Crozier, grocer, Cobourg, has been a busy man lately and that just suits him. He had the contract for supplying the military camp where 3,000 men are under canvas. In addition he erected a marquee on the grounds and dispensed refreshments to the perspiring soldiery and the numerous visitors. Five freezers of ice cream went in a day and the net profits will be something worth counting. Mr. Crozier is one of the most progressive grocers in Ontario and has a very fine class of trade.

MR. COWAN TAKES EXCEPTION.

Editor of Canadian Grocer: In your issue of the 22nd inst. we notice an advertisement of Tobler's chocolate, signed by McClure & Langley as agents. There is considerable latitude allowed advertisers in praising the merits of their own goods, but we do not think any advertisers should make lying statements in regard to the goods of a competitor. This advertisement is utterly untruthful. We would not notice this only there seems to be some concert of action between the agents of these foreign chocolate firms, here and in Montreal.

There is a letter in the Pharmaceutical Journal of February, 1906, signed by one Henry Miles, which is a tissue of falsehoods from beginning to end. This is an unpleasant duty for us, but were we to keep silent many people might think we were afraid to answer these statements, and some of them, we do not think many, might consider that there was a grain of truth in them, but we wish to assert in the strongest terms that there is not one grain of truth either in the McClure & Langley advertisement or in the Henry Miles letter to the Tariff Commission.

THE COWAN COMPANY, Limited.
Jno. W. Cowan, President.
Toronto, June 25, 1906.

PEPPER AND ITS VALUE.

Few of those who daily handle pepper realize its importance as an article of diet. Medical experts testify that the finest peppers have a warming and stimulating effect upon the mucous membrane of the stomach and intestines, and by their use the arterial supply of blood to the mucous membrane is increased, thus supplying a most valuable aid to digestion. It is, in fact, a natural and effective stimulant on the entire digestive tract. The statement of medical authorities that many of the cases of appendicitis and allied inflammatory diseases are caused by defective digestion, together with the report of recent examinations and analyses of household peppers, has caused a certain suspicion and distrust of this necessary and useful condiment.

In some bulk goods such adulterants as cocoanut shells, clay, mustard cake, ground olive stones, and even chalk and lead chromate have been found. The demand for a pure branded article has led an English pepper expert to form a company for its preparation with the result that the Antitis pepper is now well established on the English market. This is a perfectly pure brand, prepared by secret process of a scientific nature, and being of good flavor, pungent and aromatic, it is quickly taking the place of ordinary ground peppers in many of the best hotels and culinary establishments in the Old Country. Comparison of this brand with the ordinary pepper can alone demonstrate its merit, and the Antitis Pepper Co., 40 Botolph Lane, E.C., London, England, are ready to send samples to any of the readers of The Canadian Grocer who apply for them. The pepper is put up for export in 2-oz., 4-oz., 8-oz., 1-lb. and 7-lb. tins.

A DRIVING HOLIDAY.

N. McGillivray, general merchant, Port Elgin, Ont., took a drive for pleasure through a very prosperous portion of the province. From home he went to Tara, and thence his itinerary was Owen Sound, Markdale, Flesherton, Dundalk, Shelburne, Alliston, Barrie, Orillia and Paisley, then by train home. He found things looking well everywhere. The country was at its best and he greatly enjoyed the 10 days holiday.

CHARTER FOR WARREN BROS. & CO.

A provincial charter has been granted to Warren Bros. & Co., wholesale grocers, Toronto. The capital stock is $100,000, and the provisional directors are Robt. Wells, C. A. R. Warren, E. G. Williams, F. C. Armstrong and Wm. Dack.

COLD STORAGE INFORMATION.

Grocers who desire information about small cold storages, suitable for carrying a stock of butter and eggs, should write J. A. Ruddick, dairy commissioner, Ottawa, for his latest publication, Bulletin No. 10, entitled "Creamery Cold Storage." It contains complete plans and specifications and will be sent free of cost.

TOO MUCH FOR HIM.

She was newly married, and did not know a little bit about either housekeeping or shopping, and she was giving her first order. It was a crusher; but the grocer was a clever man, and was used to all kinds of orders, and could interpret them easily.

"I want 10 lbs. of paralyzed sugar," she began, with a business-like air.

"Yes'm. Anything else?"

"Two tins of condemned milk."

"Yes'm."

He set down pulverized sugar and condensed milk.

"Anything more, ma'am?"

"A bag of fresh salt. Be sure it is fresh."

"Yes'm. What next?"

"A pound of desecrated codfish."

He wrote glibly, "desiccated cod."

"Nothing more, ma'am? We have some nice horse-radish just in."

"No," she said, "it would be of no use to us; we don't keep a horse."

Then the grocer sat down and fanned himself with a patent washboard.

DAMAGED BY SMOKE.

A small fire occurred on June 15 in the rear of the retail tea and coffee store of John Stroud, 151 St. Lawrence street, Montreal. As the building burned contained much straw, smoke was plentiful, and this drifted into Stroud's store, in this way causing considerable damage to the stock.

W. A. Warren, of Warren Bros., has just returned from New York, where he spent a week. He went partly for business, partly for pleasure.

HOW MATCHES ARE MADE

At the Factories of the Improved Match Co. at Drummondville, Que.—Wonderful Machines—Business Increasing Rapidly.

The Canadian Grocer in its desire to supply its readers with interesting and useful knowledge of articles dealt in by the trade has from time to time visited some of the leading industries and presented without technical elaboration the principal features of special lines of manufacture. One of the most novel, instructive and entertaining of these visits was made last week to the works of the Improved Match Co., at Drummondville, P.Q., through the courtesy of H. D. Metcalfe, president of the company, and accompanied by C. A. Morin, secretary-treasurer.

On the way visions of boiling sulphur vats, tales of nauseating and unhealthful odors, and a thousand and one stories of the horrors of a place usually credited with being a miniature hell, floated through the reporter's brain, but were quickly dispelled by a view of the buildings; large, bright, clean and in perfect order, and with an atmosphere as free from sulphur fumes as it is possible for modern ventilation to make it. From the viewpoint of healthy working surroundings, scores of manufacturing establishments could not compare with this one. The prepossessing appearance of the workmen themselves was an indication of the general order and cleanliness of the factory, and the modernness of machinery and operating facilities.

Match Making Machinery.

The Factories.

The main building is 150 feet by 45 feet, and three storeys high with a one-storey addition for the match-making machines. This addition is 50 x 60 feet. The entire structures are of brick and are well lighted and ventilated, and isolated. The laboratory and engine room are adjacent to the main building and protected by fire walls and doors. Besides these buildings there is a large dry kiln in which some 65,000 feet of lumber is constantly being prepared. Connected with the main building by an overhead bridge is the large warehouse for the storage of the prepared matches, sulphur and other requisites. There are also stables and coach houses, as well as a residence for the manager, on the grounds.

Interesting Machines.

Every modern convenience and appliance for the proper and expeditious handling of materials has been supplied. The latest improved match-making machines, made by the Woodbridge Machine Co., of Detroit, Mich., have been installed. During the writer's visit a new and larger match machine was being installed by this company under the superintendence of John S. Woodbridge, head of the Detroit company. Mr. Woodbridge, by the way, is a Canadian whose home was at Kingsville,

CANADA NEEDS HOG MARKET

Prominent Packer Says Present Situation is Ruinous to the Industry— Competition in Every Village

A leading packer, interviewed yesterday by The Canadian Grocer, stated that the industry in Canada was suffering from the lack of a market. At present there was no market in Canada in any way comparable with Chicago, where the great bulk of hogs were delivered and there was open competition in buying, the best hogs bringing the best prices.

"Here," said the packer, "wherever there's a drover with a deck of hogs there's a market and we're in competition with other packers merely by telephone and on the word of the drover. In that way there is competitive buying in every village in the country and there is no fixed price anywhere.

"A spirit of ill will has grown up that is new in my experience. Here we are with a big force of men and comparatively no work for them. The industry is assuredly in a bad situation.

"What's the cure? Why the formation of a great central market for the hogs of the country, where the packing houses would be located. Unfortunately the packing houses are now scattered here and there and in the estimation of the owners at least, cannot be moved. I don't know what the outcome will be.

"The growers? They're the immediate gainers, and very decidedly so. The Canadian hog raisers are getting more for their product than hog raisers in any other part of the world. But taking the industry over a term of years they are not gainers by the situation that has grown up here. The normal, rational situation is always best in the long run for every branch of an industry. At present we're killing the goose that is laying the golden eggs in the farmer's yard. Canadian bacon is costing shillings more to lay down in London than Danish bacon is costing to place on the same market. The result is our output is greatly curtailed, not over 40 per cent. of what it was, and Canada is losing the market just now, when of all times in a generation it should have been in a position to take advantage of the sentiment in its favor caused by the revelations in connection with the packing industry at Chicago."

Another packer's view was that there were too many packing houses, and he thought the result of the present situation would be the demise of some of these. "Survival of the fittest," said he; but he readily agreed with the other view that for all branches of the industry permanent success lay along the line of normal conditions, and he agreed, too, that a central market would be the best means of placing the industry upon a staple basis.

Prices for live hogs are about back to where they were. The packers quote $7.25 f.o.b. country, but at points where competition springs up they will pay more "before we will lie down," as one of them put it significantly to The Grocer. Nominally, the price is $7.50, watered and fed at Toronto cattle market, and $7.75 at the factories. But at the market the quotation is $7.50 to $7.60. The receipts at the Toronto market last week were 2,200, compared with 2,500 the week previous. And the early half of this week 600 arrived, compared with 500 the week before. Practically the situation is unchanged. "We tried to hammer the prices down," said one packer, "but they wouldn't stay."

The domestic demand continues unabated and sustains every advance in price.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

Late country cheese markets seemed unreasonably high as regards prices paid, yet there must be reason for it, and different theories are advanced to account for this condition.

It does not seem probable that speculation is responsible for this advance in prices, as nobody in the business, either here or in Great Britain, would think of stocking up at present high prices; it is therefore likely that the goods are wanted for actual consumption, or because sales of June cheese, made speculatively some time ago, have to be covered regardless of cost.

One thing seems certain from all advices from British markets, that present ruling prices on this side of the Atlantic leave no margin of profit to the legitimate trader. In spite of all that has been said of a phenomenal make the goods are not coming forward in any unusual quantity and as there is a steady demand for them we can only surmise that they are being consumed about as fast as they are being produced.

Last week's receipts in Montreal were 87,677 boxes of cheese and 26,658 packages of butter, against 104,158 boxes of cheese and 34,208 packages of butter for the same week last year, or a total since May 1 of 438,789 boxes of cheese and 142,696 packages of butter as compared with 419,210 boxes of cheese and 158,048 packages of butter for the corresponding period of last year.

The exports from Montreal last week were 81,100 boxes of cheese and 14,900 packages of butter, against 86,322 boxes of cheese and 11,810 packages of butter for the same week last year, or a total since May 1 of 442,855 boxes of cheese and 65,120 packages of butter, as compared with 391,331 boxes of cheese and 64,032 packages of butter for the same period of last year.

According to these figures our receipts of cheese show an increase of about 19,000 boxes and our exports show an increase of about 51,000 boxes; in butter our receipts are about 16,000 packages less and the exports are about 1,000 packages more than last year.

Prices last year were considerably lower for both cheese and butter and dealers therefore commenced to hold some goods in cold storage for an advance in market values, but present prices offer no such inducements and the goods are sent forward to the consuming markets about as fast as they are received here, and, as the consumption in Great Britain seems to absorb all goods arriving there, there is no accumulation of stocks on either side of the Atlantic, and as long as there is no accumulation of stocks it is difficult to get prices down to a lower level.

Prices are undoubtedly too high for speculative purposes, but for the legitimate trade, houses who have to supply their customers with goods to hold their trade, the difference of one penny or even one penny and a half per pound in retail is not a great deal to the consumer who goes to a shop to buy a pound of cheese. He buys what he wants and he pays the price the retailer asks him; he may grumble a little, but he buys it and especially this year when he has lost confidence in canned meats. Cheese is absolutely pure and everybody knows it, and the consumer buys it with all confidence, even if he has to pay a small advance in price over what he has been accustomed to paying.

A result of present high prices is the shipping out by the factories of very green, or uncured, cheese. Mr. G. G. Publow, the chief instructor of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, made a strong point of this again at the last meeting of the Brockville board, and he is strong in condemning this practice. Cheese, not properly cured, should be kept on the factory shelves; they are unfit to be cut up for consumption and they might injure the reputation of our Canadian cheese.

Butter has been forced up in price so that it is a long way above export value and, while it has been exported, it is more than doubtful that this has been done at a profit to the exporters. Our butter business in Great Britain is a trifle to the consumption of butter there; we may rule the cheese market there, but in butter we are only "a drop in the bucket"; our butter is wanted at a price, but we cannot dictate this price. Denmark is making the price and we must follow suit; it is therefore folly for us to put the price beyond export value, as we produce more than we can consume and we cannot control prices in Great Britain. However, butter is still relatively the cheaper product of the milk as compared with cheese, and the production of cheese should therefore increase and the production of butter decrease.

MONTREALER IN NEW COMPANY.

A ranching company is now being formed which will be known as the Craig Cattle Ranching Company, with a capital stock of from $125,000 to $150,000, headquarters to be in Montreal. Steps are being taken to have the company incorporated. The ranch will cover in all 97,000 acres, divided into two sections, one of 90,000 acres, situated in the south-western part of Saskatchewan, and another of 7,000 acres near Meadow Creek, Alberta. It is the intention of the company to raise cattle for sale to exporters. Mr. Craig, who will be the manager of the new company, is a man of experience in cattle raising, and is a successful business man. Joseph Ward, of Montreal, is one of the shareholders of the new company.

LIKES THE EMBARGO.

Cattle Exporter says it's Good for Preservation of Soil Fertility.

Canadians are not all in favor of the removal by Great Britain of the cattle embargo. J. T. Gordon, head of the firm of Gordon, Ironsides & Fares, large cattle exporters, in a recent interview upon his return from Europe, after speaking optimistically of the market outlook, said:

"I think the Britsh Government did a wise thing when they disallowed the act to remove the embargo on Canadian cattle. As you know, I have always maintained that it would be a most serious matter for producers of cattle in Manitoba and Ontario if the embargo were removed. Our cattle can be fed just as well and much cheaper at home than they can in Great Britain. No sane man can believe that our farmers can continue to take everything out of the soil and put nothing back without ultimate disaster, and the cheapest, easiest, and most natural way of returning fertility to the soil is by feeding stock and growing crops suitable for feeding. I am quite satisfied the British Government have no idea of removing the embargo, and those most interested in the trade, outside of the commision men, are in favor of the embargo remaining."

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Stocks in general provision lines are becoming lighter, and although there has been no change in quotations, higher prices are expected shortly. Lard is moving out quite freely. Very little export business is passing owing to the difficulty in obtaining suitable prices on the other side. Hams and bacon are being sold locally in fair quantity, considering the prices.

BUTTER—Business in butter has been rather slow during the past few days, there being very little demand from England. Country prices, speaking generally, have been above an export basis. The big demand for saltless butter, which is bringing a high price at present, has caused stocks to accumulate to a certain extent locally.

CHEESE—Prices have again been advanced, due probably to manipulation and short stocks, quite a lot of cheese having been sold for future delivery at less than the ruling prices. The filling of the orders combined with the undoubtedly light orders has stiffened up the market.

EGGS—Receipts of eggs during the week were fairly heavy for this time of year. Prices have been very well maintained, 19c. to 19 1-2c. being asked for selects, strictly fresh laid, while for straights 17c. was obtainable during the week.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The firm and advancing tendency continues on this market for the domestic trade. The week shows slight advances in long clear, and hams. Last week's highest quotation for roll bacon, 13c., is said not to be obtainable. A good active demand is reported.

BUTTER—The market is practically unchanged from last week. No one seems ready to predict what the course of prices will be in the near future. The supply of creamery is large, but dairy butter is not so plentiful. The tendency to turn milk into cheese owing to the high price of that product is said to have affected dairy supplies more than creamery. A good deal of butter here is going into storage. The commission men got used to taking chances when they stored eggs at the high prices prevailing this Spring. Bakers' butter is quoted a cent higher here.

CHEESE—The local maeket is higher again and 12c. and 12¼c. are asked of retailers. Cheese is just 2c. above last year. A year ago Monday of this week 10,000 boxes sold on the Brockville board at 9⅜c. Over 11,000 boxes sold last Monday at 11⅜c. The quotation on old cheese, 14c. to 14½c., is omitted as it is merely nominal, there being practically none on the market.

EGGS—The market is somewhat firmer here because of increased shrinkage. The farmers are not getting any more. The supply is decreasing and the demand also is less brisk. Perhaps a flat 18c. would about represent the market. For choice candled eggs 19c. is being obtained and for selects jobbers are asking as high as 21c. Eggs in Toronto are retailing as high as 25c., but that is for a favored trade.

COW TESTS.

Brockville Association Report Shows Interesting Comparison.

The report issued by the Dominion dairy commissioner, J. A. Ruddick, of the Brockville, Ont., Cow Testing Association, for the 30 days ending May 30, shows very interesting results. There were 146 cows, and the average yield per cow was: Milk, 819 lbs.; fat, 30.2 lbs.; test 3.3. Thirty-four cows gave over 1,000 lbs. of milk, all but five of them testing over 3.0 per cent. fat. The average yield of fat per cow is again the highest of any association. One herd of five cows averaged 1,275 lbs. of milk and 38.6 lbs. of fat each, the highest and lowest individual averages in the herd being 1,403 and 1,066 lbs. of milk. That was the best of the 12 herds. The poorest showing was by a herd of 12 cows whose average yield was 598 lbs. of milk and 18.8 lbs. of fat. The highest and lowest individual averages in this herd was 770 and 330 lbs. of milk.

SOLDIER TRAVELER MARRIED.

C. F. Pooley, a traveling flour salesman of Nova Scotia, was married this month at Truro. Mr. Pooley, who stands six feet six inches in his stockings, was a sergeant of Company "H," first Canadian contingent to South Africa, and was in sixteen engagements during the war, including Paardeburg.

WESTERN FISH FOR EUROPE.

J. H. Davis, of Winnipeg, early this month sold four carloads of large pickerel, or yellow pike, caught in Lake Manitoba and Lake Winnipeg, for distribution on the European markets. One of the largest fish dealers in Germany came especially to this country from Hamburg to make the purchase. He assured Mr. Davis that pickerel caught in the lakes of Western Canada would ere long be a toothsome delicacy throughout Europe. The fish will be shipped to New York and thence by refrigerator to Hamburg. The purchaser also told Mr. Davis that he intends pushing the sale of Canadian fish on the European markets.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Manitoba Grain Market a Little Easier, but not Low Enough to Suit Millers—Flour a Bit Firmer—Good Demand for Package Cereals.

Canadian grain markets have not been active for a week past and prices have shown a slight decline with the approach of settlement day for July. Oats continue firm. Flour is firmer and cereals are in good demand at the recent advance.

The outlook in the west is for another record crop. Last year's wheat production is now placed by the secretary of the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association at 85,576,000 bushels, of which 65,662,000 bushels have been marketed and 2,412,000 bushels are estimated to be still in farmers' hands. The rest goes to local millers and for seed. There are estimated to be a couple of million bushels at Fort William. The wheat acreage of Manitoba alone is increased by half a million acres and the total increase for the west is 11.8 per cent. The increase for oats is 6.6 per cent., for barley 3.2 per cent., and for flax 10 per cent. In Alberta, in addition, 50,000 acres have been sown to Winter wheat. Crop conditions continue good throughout the west.

GOOD BUSINESS DOING.

On May 24 the Peterboro Cereal Co. shipped 644 cases of Canada Flakes to a firm in England. In less than three weeks after its arrival they received a cable for a second shipment of the same kind. The same firm report another wire this week from Winnipeg for a car, totalling orders for 2,000 cases to be shipped in the next few days.

NEW ELEVATOR COMPANY.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Terminal Elevator Company, Limited, has just been incorporated. The incorporators are C. M. Hays, president of the G. T. P. Railway; W. Wainwright, second vice-president of the G.T.P. Railway; Nicholas Bawlf, of Winnipeg, president of the Northern Elevator Company; A. P. Stuart, of the R. D. Martin Company, and W. H. Biggar, solicitor for the G.T.P. Railway. Powers granted the new company include the building and operation of mills, elevators, steamships and warehouses.

MONTREAL.

GRAIN—Corn has advanced a cent and a half since last quotations. Dealers are now asking 60c. Stocks are not as large as they might be considering the present demand. Peas are unchanged. Although there is a good demand for export, other lines are about the same as last week.

FLOUR—Very good trade is passing in flour at present. Local demand is very good in all lines and there is a good export inquiry. Several good round lots have been shipped to various points. Prices remain unchanged, although millers complain of its being too low, considering the state of the wheat market.

TORONTO.

GRAIN—The market here has eased off a little, having got tired following Chicago; but as the market has been a speculative one the approach of settlement day for July has also had its effect. There is no export business doing. Millers are buying Manitoba wheat just from hand to mouth hoping for a decline. One man, who took 4,000 bushels to keep going on, said if the price dropped 3c. he wanted 60,000 or 70,000 bushels. It is felt that there is plenty of wheat to go round till the new crop is ready to grind, but the feeling as to prices is in no way definite.

WINNIPEG CATERERS' PICNIC.

Jolly Time Despite a Damp Day—Travelers Play Ball.

In spite of the heavy rain the twenty-first annual picnic of the Winnipeg caterers, held at Winnipeg Beach, on Thursday of last week, was a pronounced success. That such large numbers attended in spite of the heavy rain is the best possible evidence of the popularity of this annual event.

The committees in charge of the picnic were as follows: Printing, Mr. Rubble; music, J. Gowler, Frank Scott, Harry Pewin, Mat Richardson, S. W. Johns; transportation, A. S. Lock, Harper Wilson, Mr. Bartram, Mr. Hollman; sports, Donald Gunn, C. R. Gibson; sports starter, Frank Marples; judge in baby show, Mr. Aldridge, manager of the J. Y. Griffin Co.; judges in sports, W. A. Bartram, J. R. Gowler; clerks of the course, D. A. Gunn, Chas. Gibson. Officers of the association, J. H. Treleaven, president; T. H. Coyle, vice-president; W. A. Bartram, treasurer; W. G. Lock, secretary.

Athletic Contests.

Owing to the unfavorable weather the aquatic contests were all cancelled, but the athletic contests attracted the enthusiastic attention of the crowd.

The 100 yards race for retail grocers was won by J. H. Treleaven. The prize was a gold watch. The grocery clerks' race, similar prize, was won by Mr. Pitts. The walking race for grocers was won by C. B. Rosenblat.

In the tug-of-war the grocers were the strongest team, vanquishing the butchers' team in the final pull. In the preliminary competitions the bakers were defeated by the butchers and the grocers defeated the travelers. The teams were:

Baseball.

The baseball tournament furnished merriment to all and was finally won by the travelers' nine, who played a really fine article. The ground was soft and slippery but this was counteracted by the enthusiasm of the players who counterbalanced their errors by their sensational plays. Three games were played and were won as follows:

Butchers vs. Bakers—Won by the butchers. Score, 7—6.

Grocers vs. Travelers—Won by the travelers. Score, 12—4.

In the final the travelers defeated the butchers by 8 runs to 2. This latter game created wide interest and was witnessed by a larger crowd than either of the previous matches. Congalton was the king pin for the victors, being in the box, and engineered their play in fine style. The teams were:

COMMERCIAL BASEBALL.

A commercial baseball league has been formed in Vancouver, B.C. The grocers were first. On a recent half holiday they were walloped by the men's furnishers, a new team, by 8 to 5, and the fun began. A prominent clothing store manager has donated a fine cup to be competed for by the league.

WHAT OTHERS ARE THINKING OF.

Subjects Discussed by U.S. Retail Grocers' Associations.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Texas met in annual convention in Denniston, June 12, and the subjects discussed were: relations between grocer and clerks, railroad rates, legislation, organization and benefits of a trade paper. One of the most important features of the entire convention, runs the official report, was the five minute talks on progress, home troubles, and successes, by the representatives of the different associations throughout the state.

At the North Carolina convention in Morehead City, June 20 and 21, the subjects discussed were: unjust freight rates, interchangeable collection systems, parcels post, pure food, store management, co-operation and organization.

EVAPORATED POTATOES.

A Favorite Dish in the Yukon—Nearly as Good as Fresh Vegetable.

A principal output of one of the large canning factories of New Westminster, B.C., is evaporated potatoes.

The potatoes are carefully peeled and cleaned, and then are put through an automatic cutter before going into the large drying kiln, from which they are turned out crisp and dry all ready for packing in fifteen-pound cans in which they can be kept sweet and fresh for an unlimited time. The product is much in demand in the Yukon. The desirable feature of it is that it remains a clear white in color, and firm and crisp in quality. When the potato is soaked overnight and cooked, it can hardly be recognized from the fresh vegetable. An immediate shipment is to be forwarded, embracing eighteen hundred fifty-pound boxes. About two hundred tons will be required to complete the orders already booked.

CANADA A BUSY PLACE.

Labor Gazette's Review of the Situation at the End of May.

The Labor Gazette, issued by the Department of Labor, Ottawa, says of the situation at the beginning of the present month :

General employment was exceedingly active in Canada during May, and the outlook at the close of the month was for a season of exceptional prosperity. Seeding operations were completed in the agricultural industry, and a keen demand for labor was reported in the several provinces. In the lumbering industry, work in connection with the drives gave employment to several thousands of men in Eastern Canada, and in British Columbia the camps and mills were working to full capacity. In the mining industry conditions of exceptional activity prevailed, and the outlook was most favorable. Several thousands of men were already actively employed in connection with the extensive railway construction operations projected for the present year, and large numbers in addition will be given employment in the near future. The manufacturing industry was busier than at any previous time in Canada, and the amount of building during 1906 promises to exceed that of any preceding year. The volume of the immigration movement was very heavy and the progress of settlement in Western Canada exceptionally rapid. From the standpoint of unrest in the labor market, which is usually an important factor in industrial conditions at this season, the record of the month was on the whole favorable, notwithstanding the large number of strikes reported in existence, the great majority of the disputes not affecting conditions outside of the establishments and persons immediately concerned. An index to the prevailing prosperity was the general upward tendency in the price of real estate, marked advances being reported from many sections of the country. Assessment returns published by a number of Ontario municipalities during May showed heavy increases in valuation and population.

GROCER GOT FOUR MONTHS.

(The Grocer, London, Eng.)

On Thursday week, at Middlesbrough-on-Tees, John Mardon, a well known Tees-side provision merchant, and an ex-councillor of the borough, was sentenced to four months' imprisonment for selling, in Middlesbrough market, margarine as best Danish butter. The prosecution was instituted by the Danish Government. Three previous convictions for similar offences were proved against Mardon.

TEA MAN OF RENOWN.

Wm. Hutchins, Montreal, Becomes Manager for Carter-Macy, Chicago.

To the majority of the jobbing tea and grocery trade of Canada the above portrait will not be unknown, as Mr. William Hutchins has for more than a quarter of a century been in the eye of tea merchants and a recognized authority in his trade. His recent appointment as manager of Carter, Macy & Co.'s Chicago business gives The Grocer occasion for a presentation to its readers of a sketch of the career of a tea authority. It is an especial pleasure for The Grocer to do this as a personal acquaintanceship of twenty-eight years allowed of ample opportunities for gauging his work and worth, and now that he has received such a responsible appointment with one of the largest tea houses, if not the largest tea people in the world, a few friendly words in departing are his due.

Mr. William Hutchins is of English descent, his father being rector of Horton, Northamptonshire. At an early age he came to Canada, securing employment in the tea importing house of Duncan & Forster, Montreal, then just commenced. By hard work, close attention to business and in the possession of a special aptitude for the tea trade, he worked his way up to the top and at the death of the late John Duncan he became senior partner of the firm of John Duncan & Co., one of Canada's largest tea houses, with a branch in Yokohama, large capital and unlimited credit. Mr. Hutchins is a tea man through and through and acquired a close knowledge of the business by several years' experience in the tea trade in China and Japan.

In 1896 Mr. Hutchins sold out to his partner, Mr. John Patterson, the present proprietor of John Duncan & Co., Montreal, and removed to London, Ont., where he had purchased the London Daily News. This venture after a hard struggle of eight years had to be given up and Mr. Hutchins "went broke," despite conscientious and hard work. On the winding up of the Daily News Mr. Hutchins took a position in Toronto looking after the tea department of one of the largest houses in the trade. His star, however, pointed to the tea brokerage line and after bettering himself in this branch in Hamilton he removed to his old and familiar field in Montreal. Here his work proved eminently successful and his familiar figure was welcomed by buyers. His appointment as manager of Carter, Macy & Co.'s Chicago house is a tangible appreciation by competent men of the merits of an authority.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Canadian Strawberry Crop in Full Swing—Vegetable Prices Declining to a Basis that makes Business—Fish Markets Busy—Good Supplies.

In all markets fruit is coming to its own and the harvest in Canada is well under way. The domestic vegetable season is starting in earnest and large shipments from the south continue to arrive, tending to put prices on a basis for much larger business. New potatoes declined noticeably within the week. The strawberry crop in Ontario is still said to be light, but raspberries, which will commence to arrive in a week or ten days, promise a big crop. In British Columbia the berries are a large crop, but have been injured by rain. California fruits are arriving on the Canadian markets in considerable quantities. California plums and peaches are a large crop but apricots are very scarce.

There is a good demand for fish and supplies seem equal to the occasion. Unusual heavy consumption is reported from the States and that market absorbs most of Canada's fresh fish.

WINNIPEG WANTS GOOD FRUIT.

W. C. Baker left Hamilton five years ago to push Ontario fruit on the Winnipeg market and in a letter from the Manitoba capital, dated June 5, to the Hamilton Spectator, he says:

Each year has shown an increased demand for our fruits, provided the quality and condition are good on arrival. Ontario growers must not get the idea that because no fruits are grown here, anything in the shape of fruit will sell. We have as fine a selection and continuous supply in this market as you will find in many of the Ontario cities, and I think sometimes better. We draw supplies from California, Oregon and other Southern States, together with British Columbia and Ontario. The Ontario fruits are preferred to the others for preserving purposes.

In selecting fruits for shipment care should be taken that they are of a uniform grade, and no rubbish, as it does not pay to pay heavy transportation charges on fruits of inferior quality. All baskets should be filled to a uniform weight, with a good face. Understand me by that I do not mean big ones on top and little ones at the bottom, which I am forced to admit is sometimes the case, but to be evenly placed in the basket so they do not crush, showing an even surface. I do not advise shipping on a commission basis, as that is usually done when there is an overplus on the home market, and the fruit probably reaches this market when not wanted, or may arrive in an off condition. Forced sales leave but little for shippers, often not paying transportation charges. Occasionally they may strike a good market, but doubt if the shipper is ahead at the end of the season by following that method. Would recommend selling on a quotation price, and to ship nothing but first-class fruit, carefully put up.

TOMATOES IN CUBA.

The growing of tomatoes for exportation to the United States is becoming the leading industry in Cuba for the Winter months. Some good varieties have been introduced, and wherever grown on a commercial scale, have proved profitable. Seed should be sown early in September if the tomatoes are wanted for the Christmas market.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GREEN FRUIT—Good demand prevails in the green fruit market. Orders received are becoming larger as the Summer advances. Prices in some lines have reached a basis on which better trade can be done. VEGETABLES—Vegetables are in fairly good request. No special line is in particular demand, but there is a good trade generally. New potatoes have declined considerably since last week, and are now selling at $4. New beets are easier, and obtainable at $1.25 per dozen. Sales of cucumbers are numerous, although the price is still rather high. Tomatoes are selling quite freely in many quarters, while lettuce also controls a share of the trade.

FISH—Dealers report a very good general business in fish at present. Gaspe salmon is worthy of note, owing to the very low prices at which it is selling—ten cents. Large quantities are arriving from the Gulf ports daily, but all is easily disposed of as the demand is good. Fresh halibut continues to arrive and an active trade is passing. Haddock and steak cod are plentiful, while the quality is all that could be desired. Although the weather is very warm for shipment of finnan haddies, dealers re- er. Texas and Mississippi tomatoes are arriving in large quantities but the consumption is heavy.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GREEN FRUIT—The Ontario strawberry harvest is not yet at high tide, but there will be good supplies for two weeks. The crop is light and the demand is heavy even at the high prices. On Tuesday prices at the auctions were as low as 6c., but that is usual on account of Monday's extra picking. The raspberries will be in in a fortnight or ten days and will be a large crop. A very large crop of cherries is also expected. Plums are scarce. Melon prices are firm. California fruits, plums, apricots, cherries and peaches are arriving in large quantities for the first of July trade. Oranges are a little easier this week. Pines are not changed. Gooseberries are arriving.

VEGETABLES—Heavy arrivals of southern vegetables and considerable supplies of Ontario products are keeping things active and getting prices down to a basis that largely increases consumption. During the week new potatoes dropped from $5 to $3.75 a barrel. Old potatoes remain firm at slightly advanced prices. There are still a few Delawares at $1.25, but they are practically off the market. Prince Edward Island Chenangoes are arriving and the price is $1.10. When cut they present a blue mottled appearance at one end but they cook well and are quoted in New York at $1 a bushel. Cabbage, peas, beans, beets and tomatoes are all cheap-

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

Cold Storage for Chocolates—A Wonderfully Profitable Tree—High-Priced Candies a Luxury and Should be Well Displayed.

The Summer trade is now under way. Every up-to-date candy factory is equipped with cold storage which enables business in such perishable goods as chocolates to continue unabated.

If you keep these goods, make a specialty of it. Specializing is the way to success nowadays. Candies are a luxury, especially the higher priced goods, and must be shown attractively to get the trade.

HISTORY OF COCOA.

The term "cocoa," a corruption of Cacao, is almost universally used in English-speaking countries to designate the seeds of the small tropical tree known to botanists as theobroma cacao, from which a great variety of preparations under the name of cocoa and chocolate for eating and drinking are made. The name "chocolate" is nearly the same in most European languages, and is taken from the Mexican name of the drink "chocolatl" or "cacahuatl."

The Spaniards found chocolate in common use among the Mexicans at the time of the invasion under Cortez, in 1519, and it was introduced into Spain immediately after. The Mexicans not only used chocolate as a staple article of food, but they used the seeds of the cacao tree as a medium of exchange.

The manner of preparing it for drinking was long kept a secret by the Spaniards, who sold it at a high price to the wealthy classes. The first notice of its use in England appears in the Public Advertiser of June 16, 1657, which stated that "In Bishops street, in Queen's Head Alley, at a Frenchman's house, is an excellent West India drink, called chocolate, to be sold, where you may have it ready at any time; and also unmade, at reasonable rates." In the time of Charles II. the price of chocolate was 6s. 8d a pound—equivalent to $6 of purchasing power to-day. Had it not been for the monopoly Spain long possessed, which kept the price at a point where only the rich could afford to use it cocoa would probably have come into as general use as tea and coffee did later.

Cocoa and chocolate were first made in the United States in Dorchester, Mass., in 1765; and it is an interesting fact that the manufacture has been continued in the same place ever since and that it now represents one of the largest industries in the country.

An estimate of the world's production of crude cocoa in 1903 was 1,267,951,074 kilograms, or 279,532,420 lbs. The estimated consumption of crude cocoa in Europe and the United States in 1903 was 127,452,366 kilograms, or 280,981,486 lbs. The consumption in the United States in 1860 was only about three-fifths of an ounce for each inhabitant. In 1903 the consumption was over 12 ounces for each inhabitant. In 1903 the countries from which the main supplies of crude cocoa were drawn took rank as follows: Ecuador, San Thome, Brazil, Trinidad, Venezuela, San Domingo.

The countries consuming the largest amount of crude cocoa in 1903 took rank as follows: The United States, Germany, France, Great Britain, Holland, Spain. In 1893 the United States stood fifth in the list of consumers, and France had the first place.

The various kinds of cocoa may be placed in about the following order of merit: Finest caracas (called chaou) of Venezuela; the finest maracaibo (of which very little, if any, is produced of late years); the finest magdalena, of New Granada, of which the production is small and rarely exported; soconusco, from the state of that name in Mexico; Java, from the island of that name; the finest Guayaquils from Ecuador. The cocoas from Trinidad, Surinam, Granada, Para, Bahia and Africa, are classed as "good ordinaries."

A TREE OF MANY PRODUCTS.

The cocoanut palm is one of the most important economic trees of the world. Its fruit is a staple food either ripe or unripe, raw or prepared in various ways in many tropical countries. It is exported in large quantities to temperate climates, where the nuts are used in confectionery and for cake and dessert making. The oil, of which there is about 70 per cent. in the nuts, from which it is obtained by expression or heating in water, is largely used for making soap and candles and for food. It is white as lard and somewhat firmer. The central part of the stems of young cocoanut plants is used for food, as is also the terminal bud or "cabbage." A drink and a kind of sugar are made from the sap of the young spathes. The dried leaves are used for thatching, making baskets, mats, etc., and the petioles for oars. The wood in the lower portions of the trunks of old trees is commercially important under the name of "porcupine wood," which is used in cabinet-making, etc. The fibrous centres of old stems are used for cordage making and so also is the fibrous husk of the nuts, weighing often from one to two pounds when stripped off. This latter is widely used for making cocoanut matting. It is exceedingly durable. The cocoanut shell is used for drinking cups, bottles, etc., and for ornament when carved and polished. The fibre of the husks is used by florists as a moisture retaining medium in which to plunge potted plants and in which to propagate various seedlings and cuttings.

SUGAR CONSUMPTION.

The consumption of sugar in the British Isles has increased from 3 lbs. per head per year in 1705 to 90 lbs. in 1905. Australia holds the world's record with a per capita consumption of 105 lbs.

"Directed"
vs
"Misdirected" Biscuits

There's no room in your store for "misdirected" goods, and that doesn't mean so much sent to the wrong place as sent from the wrong place.

Some makers play with the oven and the biscuits are dried up. Others "pet" the oven and it allows too much moisture to stay in the biscuits.

The Mooney Men are trained "oven men." They are on good terms with the fire. They understand its every move. They never guess at anything.

500

I have found a great many grocers who bought two or three hundred cigars from their wholesale grocer, confectioner or biscuit man, not standard lines, but anything that the house happened to have. Oh yes, they kept cigars, but they dried up on the shelf over the camphor drawer and they only handled perhaps 500 a year. No, they could not take Payne's offer because his minimum quantity was 1000—and their trade would never grow to that.

I want to get you started with my cigars, hence will send 500 assorted (some Pharaoh and some Pebble) express paid and money back at end of 3 months if cigars not satisfactory. I know if you get started with 500 your trade will grow, likewise your profits, and your next order will be for the 1000. Start now and get the summer trade.

TOBACCO AND CIGARS

Change in the World's Tobacco Markets—Germans Come to the Front—Progress With Canadian Product—U. S. Consul's Comments.

The Empire Tobacco Co. have distributed $700 in prizes among the last season tobacco growers of Essex and Kent in amounts varying from $5 to $20. There were 52 winners. The company bought 2,000 odd crops last year, and in their letter to the winners say: "The quality and handling of the past crop was by far the best ever bought by this company and we feel that the prizes which we have given from time to time have been an important factor in bringing about such marked improvement."

GERMANS BOOST SUMATRA.

Take the American Lead in Rotterdam Sales.

A leading tobacco importer of America recently returned from Amsterdam and Rotterdam, said:

"As everyone knows, it is in Amsterdam and Rotterdam that almost the entire tobacco yield of the Island of Sumatra is sold, and at the bi-annual sales —or 'inscriptions,' as our Dutch friends style them—the buyers of the world congregate and bid for such lots as may take their fancy. This tobacco is serviceable only as a wrapper for cigars, but owing to its thinness and wonderfully elastic nature it is in great demand—especially in this country, where the duty on it is $1.85 per pound. Ever since its adoption by American cigar manufacturers American buyers have figured as the potent factor at the inscriptions; they practically fixed values and bought pretty well all that took their fancy. At the recent sales, in both Amsterdam and Rotterdam, which I attended, that condition of affairs was quite reversed. The continental buyers, the Germans in particular, were everywhere in evidence and purchased just what they wanted. So pronounced was American influence in previous years that the offerings were classified under two general heads—American goods and European goods. This classification has now been altogether discarded, and American buyers have to take their chances with their rivals, who are not so easily frightened by high prices as in former years.

"The immense demand that exists among German smokers—and of necessity among German cigar manufacturers as well—for light-colored cigars, has brought about this change. The cigar manufacturing industry has assumed enormous proportions in that country, and the demand being for light goods it, of course, has to be supplied irrespective of the cost of the raw material. It is now not uncommon to see German buyers paying even for second lengths of Sumatra as much as $2.80 per pound—a price that American importers never dreamed of offering. That one fact fully illustrates the great change that has come over those world-famous markets.

"Another element that contributes to the excessively high prices that have now to be paid is the relatively small quantities of light tobacco coming from Sumatra. It is for such goods that the great demand exists, and German competition for the high grades makes it impossible for American buyers to get the proportion which in past years was recognized almost as being theirs by right—that is, by right of their ability to pay higher prices than their continental rivals. That, however, is a thing of the past.

"The prices which Americans had to pay this year were enormously high and comparable only with those that ruled at the sales of 1893, the record year for high values. The new crop tobacco, however, is of better quality and color than any offered during the past five or six years, but its extra cost will certainly mean to the manufacturers of the country an extra 50 cents per thousand cigars. The average importations of Sumatra leaf during the past eight or ten years have been in the neighborhood of 35,000 bales for home and Canadian consumption, but this year it is safe to say the total will be from 5,000 to 10,000 bales more. So even if our continental rivals now claim their full share of the light grades which came our way they certainly have not deterred us from buying the quantity that we required."

TOBACCO GROWING POPULAR.

United States Consul Ifft, writing from Chatham, says:

"The farmers of Kent and Essex Counties are this year planting more tobacco than ever before in the history of tobacco raising in this section. This is due to several causes. The crop last year was very profitable. Many farmers who last year raised sugar beets for the Marine City, Mich., sugar factory, but who lost that market with the failure of the sugar company, are planting tobacco instead of beets. The Government's announcement of the establishment of an experimental tobacco farm in Essex has also stimulated interest. The growers themselves have been carrying on experimental operations for years, and believe themselves able to grow better tobacco this year than ever before."

Total Australia	746,000
Grand total	2,205,174,000

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

Shipping Business not Active—Two New Turbiners for the Allans—New Navigation Company for the St. Lawrence—Lachine Canal Blocked Two Days.

Export shipping business lately has not been very good. Trade is dull owing to existing market conditions. Hogs being so scarce renders impossible the profitable export of meat. Prices here better than those obtainable elsewhere and packers are holding their products for sale in this country. Butter and cheese are not being shipped in large quantities. Market prices are too high for the carrying on of a good export business.

Since last week there has been one change in the freight quotations. This is a reduction in flour to Glasgow.

Export trade has been considerably retarded through the blocking of traffic in the Lachine Canal. A coal barge sank on June 21 and lay at the bottom of the canal until the next evening, blocking all traffic for the two days. The trade was much disturbed as considerable cargo, such as grain, for the regular boats is shipped to Montreal by this route.

A report reached Montreal from Glasgow to the effect that the Allan line is about to develop the American trade and with this end in view has placed contracts in Glasgow for the building of two new turbiners larger than the Virginian and the Victorian. This report has not been confirmed in Montreal, and nothing will be stated until the return of Mr. Hugh Allan from Liverpool. It is generally thought, however, that there is something in the rumor.

On June 22 the Melville, of the Elder-Dempster South African line, reached Montreal. She came from South African ports by way of the Barbadoes. Her cargo, some of which was discharged at Quebec, consisted of sugar and molasses. After discharging this cargo, the boat loaded with general lines, including considerable flour, and left for South African ports.

The Athenia, of the Donaldson line, sailed June 21 for Glasgow, carrying a general cargo.

The Devona, of the Thompson line, arrived in Montreal with a cargo from Shields the same day.

In shipping circles there is a report current to the effect that a new navigation company with a capital of $500,000 is about to be formed to carry on a passenger and freight trade along the upper St. Lawrence. Nothing definite has yet been announced.

The Carthagenian, of the Allan line, sailed on June 23 for Havre and London, carrying a cargo of wheat. This is the first trip of this boat on the Havre-London service. The Allan line is paying particular attention to the development of trade at present, and it is not improbable that next year such boats as the Ionian and Tunisian will call at Havre.

The Empress of Britain sailed from Quebec for Liverpool June 23.

With a cargo of butter and cheese, the Manxman, of the Dominion line, left Montreal for Avonmouth June 23.

The Elder-Dempster liner Dahomey sailed June 22 with a general cargo for Nassau and Cuban and Mexican ports.

ADVICE ABOUT FERTILIZERS.

The Inland Revenue Department's bulletin for 1906 on fertilizers states that samples of 153 fertilizers to be offered for sale in Canada have according to the law been sent for analysis. Last year the number was 120 and the year before 111.

Chief Analyst Thos. Macfarlane says: "There seem to be good grounds for believing that the number of fertilizers of low price is on the increase, and it would appear necessary to call the attention of the farmer to the consideration that the fertilizing constituents in these are likely to cost him more than in fertilizers of a higher grade. He should be also advised to avoid those brands which have less that 2 per cent. of ammonia or potash. These percentages are too low in cases where such ingredients are required, and where they are not needed it is useless to purchase them. It is a waste of money to buy nitrogen or potash in fertilizers containing less than one per cent. of these ingredients."

Copies of the bulletin may be had upon application to the department at Ottawa.

GOOD STOREKEEPING

When you hand out Royal Baking Powder to a customer

You know that customer will be satisfied with his or her purchase;

You know that your reputation for selling reliable goods is maintained; and

You know that customer will come again to buy Royal Baking Powder and make other purchases.

It is good storekeeping to sell only goods which you know to be reliable and to keep only such goods on your shelves.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Make it YOUR Leader

There are some products that r· ·ire constant pushing to make them go, but there are other· that move so fast they almost pull the dealer after them. Every wide-awake grocer likes to handle goods of this last-named class because they mean sure profits with little or no effort. A leader in this class is

Quaker Rice
(Puffed)

It very nearly sells itself. All that we have said about Quaker Rice as a trade winner, all that we have predicted about its great and continued popularity, is more than confirmed by our sale· record. Quaker Rice is a substantial food which can be easily made into many delightful confections. Once the people taste it they can't resist eating it. This is the only product of its kind; therefore, will soon be the fastest selling of all cereal foods.

Order from your jobber.

WARNING!

Crescent BM&Co. Brand
TRADE MARK.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.
